Hint New Treaty Possible Election Issue

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—(CP)—With Prime Minister Mackenzie King back in the capital from his Washington trip, political interest continued to centre today on the effect of the New Trade Pacts and on the European refugee problem.

There is considerable speculation concerning the possibility that the New Canada-United States Trade Agreement, signed in the U. S. capital last Thursday at the same time as the Anglo-American Pact, will emerge as the main issue for a general election which might be called late next summer or early fall.

While first reactions to the Canada-U. S. pact have generally been favorable from the Canadian point of view, the whole agreement will be debated early in the next session of Parliament, expected to start the first or second week in January. Strong opposition might be voiced by the Conservatives and an election issue joined.

The regular weekly cabinet meeting will take place tomorrow and the Prime Minister probably will report to his colleagues concerning his Washington visit and his private conversations with President Roosevelt.

Refugee Discussion.

Some observers anticipate that the refugee question and the protests being voiced in many parts of Canada against persecution of Jews in Germany will be considered by the Cabinet Council. It is understood Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Roosevelt discussed the problem of immigration of German Jews to North America when the Prime Minister stayed overnight at the White Hopse. At present Canadian immigration regulations prevent large-scale entry of persons from central Europe.

The Prime Minister told newsmen here yesterday on his return from Washington that he was delighted that the trade agreements have been concluded.

"What impresses me most as I think of it now is the extreme friendliness I found in Washington, not only between Canada and the United States but the atmosphere of friendliness in which Anglo-American relations are carried on. There seems to be a community of interest and a wholesome atmosphere in Washington that should be a source of general rejoicing at this particular time."

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former National Conservative leader, returned to Ottawa last night after a vacation in England extending several months. He declined to comment on the new trade agreements.

Bartlett Elected

Running as an Independent-Progressive, Vernon Bartlett, well-known British newspaperman, startled the adherents of Prime Minister Chamberlain, when he won the House of Commons Bridgewater seat, traditionally a Conservative stronghold. Mr. Bartlett's campaign platform was against "the dangers of Prime Minister Chamberlain's foreign policy."

Premier King Welcomed To Canadian Legation

Lima Parley Vital To Americas With Dictators Grabbing Marts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—(AP).—Since the totalitarian states of Europe and Asia are looking to Latin America as their ripest field for economic expansion, the Pan-American conference next month at Lima, Peru, may write one of the most important chapters in the history of the western hemisphere.

Before it will be proposals for a League of American Nations, for an inter-American code of peace, for an American court of International justice, for a declaration refusing recognition of conquered territory, and the like.

It was the remote predecessor of Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State—Secretary of State James G. Blaine—who started the Pan-American movement with a conference here in 1889.

What Blaine had in mind, primarily, was an extension of United States exports in Latin America, in view of the fact that in 1889 the United States imported from the American republics $142,000,000 more in goods than she exported to them. But the Pan-American customs union he visualized failed, largely through the opposition of Argentina.

Peace Mapped Out.

The conference at Lima will be the eighth. At these meetings a groundwork has been laid for peace among the American nations and for possible common action in case of aggression from outside.

The Pan-American states have arrived at agreements guaranteeing one another's independence and territory, providing for arbitration and conciliation, refraining from intervening in one another's affairs, condemning wars of aggression, refusing to recognize territory taken by force, and arranging cultural exchanges.

Under the auspices of the Pan-American conference other meetings have been held for the advancement of banking exchanges and regulations, building of railroads and motor roads, including a Pan-American highway which one day may run from Alaska to Patagonia, protection of women's rights and similar mattters.

It is significant that in the 50 years of Pan-Americanism great wars have ravaged Europe and Asia but the States of the Western Hemisphere, as among themselves, have been mostly at peace. Isolated conflicts, such as that between Bolivia and Paraguay have been exceptions.

Gale Gives Day's Stay To 738 Convicts Devil's Island Bound

St. Martin-de-re, France, Nov. 22

A VIOLENT TEMPEST today gave a short reprieve to 738 prisoners due to sail aboard the prison ship Le Martiniere for Devil's Island and other French Guiana penal colonies.

High seas and a strong wind dashed the small motor launches used for loading the convict cargo against the prison ship's sides so that authorities postponed the sailing.

Under the fixed bayonets of Sengalese troops, who quelled rioting among the convicts last night and during the previous weeks, the prisoners filed back to their cells in Ile de re prison to await new orders for departure, probably tomorrow.

They are the first shipment to the Guiana prisons since the Daladier government reversed the decision of the former Premier Leon Blum, to abandon the prisons.

LAKEFIELD

High School "Lit" Planning Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 22.—The Lakefield High School Dramatic Society is planning something new this year in the field of entertainment. Instead of presenting its annual production at the Conversat as in previous years, it is making arrangements for an evening of plays and music to be held in the Memorial Hall here on Friday evening, December 9.

The program for the evening will include the presentation, under the direction of Miss Bessie Dunn, of the one-act comedy entitled "Nellie McNabb," and in addition there will be a French play presented by the pupils of Grades IX and X under Miss Dunn's direction.

The Glee Club conducted by Chas. Renaud, will provide music, and a chorus of High School boys will sing.

The play, "Nellie McNabb" won first prize in the recent Hart House Theatre Drama Festival for the best one-act comedy, and has been successfully presented in Midland, Barrie and Orillia.

The presentation of a French play is something new and different to the people of Lakefield. Whether or not the idea will prove popular remains to be seen. A great real will depend upon the acting of those in the production since most of us who will be watching will not know what the words "are all about."

GILMOUR

The Young People of Gilmour Church were invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mann on Friday night. The evening was well arranged and pleasantly spent in games and contests. A delightful lunch was served by the hostess.

Messrs. Gordon Mann, Clarence Man, Earl Rosborough, Marcus Fowler, and Braden Mann attended the Royal last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Archer of Lindsay Highway spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Christopher of Toronto.

A quilting was held at the home of Mrs. Gratten Telford when she entertained the girls and friends of her Sunday School class. At dark, a delicious pot-luck supper was served to those present, who were: Mrs. Telford, Mrs. B. Irwin and Donald, Mrs. Harry Archer and Nancy, Misses Lillian McGregor, Mabel Paul, Helen Moore, Dorothy Clarke, Phyllis Moore, Hazel Telford, Mrs. Roland Scott and Maryln, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Bell and Doris, Mrs. Chamberlain of Norwood, Mrs. Sanderson, Leila and Frank.

The many friends of T. E. McMullen are pleased to hear that he is able to be home.

Rebel Drive Nets 1,200 Loyalists

HENDAYE, France, Nov. 22 — (AP). — Spanish Insurgent armies hammered to-day at Government lines on the Segre River's west bank, in Northeast Spain, and claimed to have captured ground in the Seros sector.

Insurgent communiques from the Segre front, only active battleground in Spain, reported the capture of 1,200 prisoners, but the extent of territorial gains was not mentioned.

Winter Fair Enters Final Three Days

TORONTO, Nov. 22—(CP).—Official visit of Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, to the Royal Winter Fair here to-day topped anticipated attractions as the great show swung into the final three days of its week-long exhibition.

Saturday saw many events concluded with championships awarded in various agricultural divisions. Swine and fox judging was finished and the annual horseshoe contests began at night. To-day final awards will be made in some cattle and horse events and mink adjudicating will start.

Sheep results announced late Saturday showed one Ontario exhibitor, Welland Securities Limited, of Niagara Falls, won every section of Oxford Down sheep, taking the championships as well.

Welland Securities won the award for champion ram and also were runners-up. The ewe championship also went to them. In all the firm collected six first prizes, one fourth, one fifth, one sixth and one seventh.

John D. Larkin, Queenston, Ont., also gathered several awards, including the championship for a Southdown ewe. Larkin ran up one first, two seconds, one third, one sixth and two sevenths.

Committed For Trial

TORONTO, Nov. 22—(CP).—Dr. Warren Snyder, Mimico coroner, was committed for trial today on a charge of manslaughter by Magistrate Robert Browne. Snyder's counsel, R. H. Greer, K.C., agreed to waive preliminary hearing.

The coroner, former University of Toronto football star, was arrested October 2 after he allegedly drove his motor car into Reginald Clements, killing him almost instantly. Dr. Snyder is free on bail of $5,000.

Premier Chamberlain's Shirt Goes to U.S. So British W.I. Does Without for Quilt

London, Nov. 22 (CP-Havas)

MRS. Neville Chamberlain revealed today that one of the Prime Minister's old shirts has been sent to the United States at the request of an unnamed applicant.

Visiting an exhibition at the Agricultural Hall, Westminster, of home crafts made by members of Women's Institutes, she was told that members on the Burrington Women's Institute were anxious to make a patchwork quilt out of shirts belonging to cabinet ministers.

Asked if there was any hope of obtaining an old shirt from the prime minister, she laughed and replied:—

"I don't know about that. You see he has already received a request from an American for one of his shirts, and if it gets about that I am giving away his clothes there would be no end of it. Why he would very soon have no clothes left!"

Madoc Annual Commencement Proves One Of Year's Highlights

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, Nov. 22—Madoc High School Annual Commencement Exercises were held on Friday evening in the High School Auditorium with the Principal G. L. Thain, B.A., in charge. Mr. P. C. Nayler, chairman of the High School Board presided as chairman of the High School Board, presided as chairman. Other members of the High School Board are Dr. R. S. Beatty, Dr. S. Eagleson and Messrs T. E. Burnside, W. E. Connor, J. A. Watson and C. N. Whytock.

Members of the High School staff are G. L. Thain, B.A., principal, teaching science and agriculture; R. C. R. Cummings, B.A. professor of Latin and History; Miss Edith MacDermid, B.A., teacher of mathematics; Miss Frances Phelan, B.A., teaching French and Art; and Miss Lamoine West, B.A., teaching English and History.

The first number on the program was the presentation by the chairman of the proficiency trophies. In Form V the Charles Johnston Trophy was awarded to Miss Jean Whytock now a nurse in training in Kingston General Hospital and unable to be present.

In Form IV the Grant Fraser Trophy was won by Ruth Empey and in Form III, the George West Trophy was awarded to Gladys Aylsworth. The Mel Caverly Trophy for boys' athletics was won this year by Fred Stewart.

Proficiency prizes were then awarded: Middle School Algebra donated by Dr. Beatty to Gladys Aylsworth; M. S. Canadian History, donated by G. S. White, won by Keith McCoy; M. S. Chemistry donated by G. L. Thain, awarded to Wellington Munro; M. S. English donated by Miss L. West to Pearl Vanderwater; M. S. French donated by F. C. Nayler to Ruth Empey; M.S. Latin donated by R. C. R. Cummings, won by Margaret Leslie; L. S. Arithmetic, donated by W. E. Connor won by Marjorie Abbott; L. S. Art, donated by Miss F. Phelan, won by William Hawthorne; L.S. English donated by C. N. Whytock won by Eric Dafoe; L.S. French, donated by T. E. Burnside won by Ruby Parks; L.S. Geometry, donated by Miss E. MacDermid, awarded to Fay Fleming; L.S. Mathematics, donated by J. A. Watson, won by Doris Broad; L.S. Physiography donated by Dr. S. Eagleson, awarded to Wm. McBain and for highest aggregate in Form II donated by T. H. Rupert won by Laura Storring. Graduation diplomas were presented to Violet Akey, Marian Hunter, Burton Downey, Lila Leedy, Ruth Empey, Edith Miller, Russel Foster, Wellington Munro and Helen Whytock.

A Lively Comedy.

Following the presentation of trophies, prizes and diplomas was the presentation of a three act comedy by the students most ably directed by Miss Edith MacDermid, B.A. This comedy "Come Outof the Kitchen" by A. E. Thomas, based on the story by the same name by Alice Diver Miller and produced by special arrangement with Samuel French, Ltd.

Cast of characters in order of their appearance were: Elizabeth Daingerfield (alias Araminta), Helen Blue, Charles Daingerfield (alias Brindlebury), Edward Demill; Paul Daingerfield (alias Smithfield), Gordon Moon; Olivia Daingerfield (alias Jane Ellen), Betty Nichol; Amanda (Olivia's Black Mammy), Doris Broad; Randolph Weeks (agent of Daingerfield's), Tom Hawthorne; Burton Crane (from the north), Russel Foster; Mrs. Faulkner (Tucker's sister), Margaret White; Cora Faulkner (her daughter), Leona Blakely; Solon Tucker (Crane's attorney and guest), Malcolm Bassett; Thomas Lafferts (statistical poet) Walter Brett.

The play is supposed to be in the old Southern home of the Daingerfields in Virginia and the action of the play depends largely on the renting of the Daingerfield home to a millionaire from the north and his insistence on white servants and the banishment of the old Negro family servants. The white servants fail to appear and the two daughters and two sons resolve to act as the household staff until domestics can be obtained. Olivia Daingerfield carries the play as cook and later as waiter, but the Kitchen becomes far too popular a resort for the guests until finally the host, Burton Crane solves the difficult situation by falling in love with the cook after discovering that she is the popular Miss Daingerfield and proposes marriage.

Prompert was Evelyn Moore and the property committee was Audrey Smith and Jean Phillips. In charge of lights were Douglas Blue and Robert Bristol and the carpentry work was in charge of Tom Ros sand Newton Kincaid. At the close of the play the cast assembled on the platform and Miss MacDermid was presented by Walter Brett in behalf of the actors with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums and roses which she very gracefully acknowledged.

Two Deer Bagged In Three Minutes

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 22.—Many are the stories told by deer hunters returning from the hunt Saturday and Sunday but Chief Constable William Wellman told one that tops them all.

He claims to have brought down two deer in less than three minutes Saturday morning about ten o'clock. They had followed each other on a runway, he explained. The constable and his party of ten, including a guide, brought down nine deer.

Henry Scriver and party of seventeen including thirteen United States hunters, returned to this village with fourteen deer. All the Americans in the party were successful.

Experts See U.S. Gain On U.K. Marts At Expense Of Canadian Trade

By R. K. Carnegie
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, November 22.—(C.P.).— Although it is too early to get an accurate survey of the reaction to the United Kingdom-United States and Canada-United States trade agreements signed here last week, trade and tariff experts who have been studying the details for months seem to be generally in agreements that United States trade will gain in the United Kingdom markets, particularly at the expense of Canadian business there.

These experts figure United States will cut somewhat into the United Kingdom business in Canada, particularly in textiles, machinery and chemicals. However Britain's predominant position in the Canadian woollen trade has been carefully left intact in the new schedules.

It is believed the United Kingdom and Canada will gain much more in the United States market than they will lose in each other's markets. However, much depends on world economic conditions whether these forecasts materialize.

In their official analysis of the effect of the tariff concessions by the United Kingdom, United States government experts listed many commodities in which the concessions would improve the United States' position in competition against Canada and other countries for United Kingdom trade. They expected the free entry of United States wheat would improve the export business in that commodity.

Wants Apple Trade.

The United States analysis expressed the hope that country would get back some of its apple market in the United Kingdom. Before the Ottawa agreements shifted much of this business to Canada and New Zealand, United States had a big share of the market.

Canadian expert opinion however is that the preference remaining on Empire apples of from 80 to 90 cents a barrel will be sufficient to hold the apple business they have gained.

The American analysis expects a bigger United Kingdom market for chilled salmon. In the lumber section they expect to gain against Canadian competition particularly on hardwood flooring and doors.

Lower imports on office machinery and appliances should stop the trend away from the United States.

Lower duties on typewriters should increase United States hold on the United Kingdom market against the Canadian competition. The same applies to electric heating and cooking apparatus, glass working machinery, files, bolts, nuts, screws.

Lower patent leather duties should improve United States exports to the United Kingdom but in this commodity it is possible both Canada and the United States will gain at the expense of the British producer.

Gains are expected in United States canned fruits but they pretty well dominate the United Kingdom market already despite preference The same applies to canned corn and asparagus. Canada will hold its growing business in canned corn and asparagus. Canada will hold its growing business in canned tomatoes as the preference has not been disturbed.

Morocco has placed the making or importation of gas masks under Government control.

Haven't Felt So Good Since The Great War Says C. N. R. Officer

C. N. R. Police Officer Suffered Twenty Years With Stomach Trouble. Syntona Brought Relief After All Other Treatments Failed.

Here is good news for suffers from stomach trouble. No matter what medicine you have tried before and no matter how long you have suffered, do not give up hope until you have enjoyed the grand relief that Syntona can bring.

The following experience of Mr. Harry Garvin, of 430 King street west, Hamilton, well-known police officer at the Canadian National Railways, is verified in a letter just received.

For twenty years I suffered from stomach trouble, which originated during my overseas service in the Great War. First, I suffered with gas, acid risings, heartburn and dizziness when I ate pastry, fried meats and many other foods. Then I went on a diet. I took all sorts of medicines that were prescribed for me—spent weeks in the hospital—had my stomach cleaned out and nothing seemed to do me much good until I took Syntona. The first bottle gave me relief and after taking three bottles I was able to eat anything and everything without fear of suffering afterwards. THANKS TO SYNTONA, I NOW FEEL BETTER THAN I HAVE FELT IN TWENTY YEARS!"

Syntona is now for sale in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store. Ask about special introductory offer.

Quints' Night Cop Gets Dog As Assistant And Girls May Get a New Pet

Callander, Ont., Nov. 22 (CP)

THE police constable on night duty before the home of the Dionne quintuplets is to have company during his lonely watch. And maybe, Cecile, Yvonne, Marie, Annette and Emilie will have a pet all their own to play with this winter.

A great dane watchdog was purchased in North Bay Saturday by the guardians of the famous little girls. Not quite a year old, the dog is to be trained strictly as a watchdog and will make the nightly rounds with the constable on guard at the Dafoe hospital.

The quintuplets aren't allowed to have pet dogs and it was believed they wouldn't be allowed to play with the great dane. But how the five vivacious youngsters are to be kept from the big animal has yet to be worked out. They were allowed to play for a few minutes with small dogs during the filming of a movie last summer, but the dogs were scrubbed thoroughly before coming in contact with the four-year-old girls.

Noted Jurist Rowell Resigns Post

Victim Of Ill-Health; Dr. Sirois Will Head Commission

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP). — Hon. Newton W. Rowel, 71-year-old jurist, who was appointed Chief Justice of Ontario in 1936 and chairman of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations in August, 1937, has been forced to resign from both posts due to ill health.

After a Cabinet meeting last night, Prime Minister Mackenzie King told newspapermen that the government received the resignation "with the greatest regret" and "his retirement will be a permanent loss to the courts of Canada."

The four remaining members of the Royal Commission will conclude its hearings and make the report without appointment of another member to take Mr. Rowell's place. Dr. Joseph Sirois of Laval University, who has presided over the commission since Mr. Rowell became ill, will be chairman for the remainder of the work.

Mr. Mackenzie King said the commission's report will be submitted to parliament and all provincial governments. Then the government will invite the provinces to take part in a Dominion-Provincial conference on problems which the commission considered.

After a brilliant career in politics and at the bar, Mr. Rowell was appointed Chief Justice in 1936, succeeding Sir William Mulock. A year later he assumed the onerous duties connected with the chairmanship of the Royal Commission. Although not in the best of health, he travelled back and forth across the continent preparing for the commission sittings and then conducting the hearings.

Civilian Flying Corps Mooted

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(AP). — The United States Congress may be asked to lend financial aid to a plan for creating a large army of civilian fliers to bolster any air rearmament program advanced by President Roosevelt.

Organized efforts to build up such a flier reserve, like those in Germany and Italy and to a lesser extent in Great Britain, to insure an adequate number of pilots in a national emergency, have been given impetus by the President's hint November 15, that the air forces might be expanded.

The Army Air Corps has surveyed the possibility of increasing its pilot-power by instituting aeronautical courses at land grant colleges.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority, which supplanted the old Bureau of Air Commerce last August, apparently is developing its own plan to encourage private flying.

"We have no mandate to militarize civil aviation," Edward Noble, Authority chairman, said in a recent address. "Turning the aim of the airplane from economic to military use is a matter for military experts. But we can at least give them the material to be expert with."

He advocated such an increase in private flying that the United States would have 250,000 civilian airplanes in daily use. Currently it has about 10,000.

Nothing Against Inglis Or Hahn Counsel Argues

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (C.P.). — Because no charges had been made against John Inglis Co. Limited or its president, Major James E. Hahn, at the Bren gun inquiry no finding could be made against them, Aime Geoffrion, counsel for the company, argued to-day.

He told Mr. Justice H. H. Davis, he was not now a Supreme Court Judge, but a glorified civil servant, whose powers as a Royal Commissioner were limited by the Inquiries Act. The Act expressly stated no finding could be made by a Royal Commissioner against any person except when charges were made against that person and he were given opportunity to answer them.

Blame for this situation he placed on Lieut.-Colonel George Drew, author of the Maclean's Magazine article which gave rise to the inquiry. Col. Drew was the only person in a position to make charges and either could not make them or did not dare, the Inglis counsel said.

Mr. Geoffrion also challenged the Commissioner's right to make any finding which directly or by implication reflected on the contract between the British Government and the Inglis Company.

An undertaking had been given the British Government to that effect. The British contract was the same as the Canadian and the two were so inseparably linked that any finding on the Canadian contract was a finding on the British contract.

Not Much To Do?

Mr. Justice Davis said if these arguments were sound there was not much left for him to do. Mr. Geoffrion agreed but said it was not his fault. The arguments were based on the statute and the undertaking given the British authorities.

"You have a perfect right to argue that and I will give it most careful consideration," said the Judge.

Incorporation of Investment Reserves Limited served to keep the names of Herbert A. W. Plaxton and Gordon G. Plaxton, Toronto lawyers, out of transactions in connection with incorporation of John Inglis Co., Limited, although they held shares in the Inglis Company, L. A. Forsyth, associate Government and Commission counsel said at the Bren gun inquiry to-day.

Mr. Forsyth said as legal rights existed between the company and the Government which might require later interpretation he would not deal with the conduct of others than Government officers. As Government counsel he would not comment on the conduct of Major Hahn, although he believed some letters written by Hahn were proper subjects for mention in the Commission's report. Beyond the brief reference to Investment Reserves Limited he had nothing to say about the Plaxton brothers.

Fortunes Under $2,000 Escape Fine For Rath's Murder

BERLIN, Nov. 23—(AP).—The German government ordered a levy of 20 per cent of Jewish fortunes exceeding $2,000 today to pay the $400,000,000 fine imposed for the assassination of Ernst Von Rath, Paris embassy secretary, by a Jewish boy.

The decree defining the means of collecting the fine in four instalments, was published in the official gazette as the German propaganda machine went into full swing with a warning no mercy would be accorded in writing "the last chapter of the Jewish question in Germany."

The levy is to be imposed on German Jews and those who live in Germany but arewithout citizenship in other countries. Foreign Jewish citizens are exempt.

Finance minister Lutz Schwerin-Krosigk signed the decree which stipulates:

"A contribution of 1,000,000,000 reichsmarks ($400,000,000) will be collected from German Jews and those Jews without nationality in the form of a tax levy on their fortune.

"Foreign Jews are expemted from the levy.

"The levy will not be imposed if the entire fortune, after deduction of all liabilities, does not exceed 5,000 reichsmarks ($2,000)."

Payments are to be made to the state treasury. Payments by insurance companies to Jews for damage done their shops and synagogues during the Nov. 10 violence, after Von Rath's death, are to be turned over to the government.

Seizing All Insurance

These amounts will be accepted as partial payment of the levy. If the insurance payments exceed the 20 per cent levy, however, the entire amount will be confiscated by the government.

Opening a winter long series of anti-semitic demonstrations, propaganda minister Goebbels told 2,000 colleagues at Kroll opera house last night that the Nazis would persevere until the "Jewish problem" is solved —until the Hebrew is driven from German life.

Hubbell Switches Abduction Plea

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 23.—(CP).—Albert J. Hubbell, granted permission by Magistrate Frank Ebbs to change his plea of guilty to a charge of abduction to one of not guilty, was remanded until Nov. 30 when he appeared in police court here today.

Hubbell at previous hearings has pleaded guilty to a charge of false pretenses and is awaiting sentence. It was charged he posed here as Dr. J. J. Hubbell of Timmins, Ont., and under that name obtained an automobile by issuing a worthless cheque.

He was taken into custody at Portland, Ore., three weeks ago following a six-week search by police of Canada and the United States. With him was Elizabeth Symes, a nurse. The charge of abduction was laid in connection with Miss Symes' disappearance from her home.

Deadly Snake Venom May Save Lad's Life

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 23 (AP).—Venom from the cottonmouth water moccasin, long one of man's deadliest foes, today was serving as an agency to restore the health of three-year-old Donald Richardson.

Donald is suffering from a rare ailment that causes hemorrhages among the blood capillaries but doctors foresee a cure with injections of water moccasin venom.

The first dose of poison, three drops, went into the tissues of Donald's right arm yesterday. Doctors said the cheerful but shy lad was showing definite signs of improvement today.

The venom—in small doses—loses its accustomed deadliness and, instead, acts to tone up and strengthen the walls of the capillaries, according to Dr. Hugh Swaney, one of the doctors studying the malady.

Nazi Guards' Camp Fun "Run The Gauntlet" Kills 12 Jews As 62 Take Clubbing

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(CP-Havas) —The News-Chronicle (Liberal) today said it had learned "from sources the veracity of which it is impossible to doubt" that 12 Jews had been killed while "running the gauntlet" in a German concentration camp Nov. 11.

Sixty-two Jews, including two Rabbis, well-to-do landlords, engineers and business men were forced through two long lines of Hitler elite guards using clubs and spades as weapons, the newspaper said, and after it was over 12 of them were dead and others unconscious.

"The eyes of some had been knocked out, their faces flattened and shapeless," the paper said in an eye witness account. "As they fell the Jews were beaten further. The orgy lasted a half hour. Then other prisoners were ordered to carry them away."

Bette Davis Fails As Wife To Be Film Star, Neglects Spouse, So He Wants Divorce

Los Angeles, Nov. 23 (AP)

In a divorce suit on file today Harmon O. (Ham) Nelson, erstwhile band leader, recited his mental suffering during his six-year marriage to the actress.

Nelson, informally, indicated he felt no bitterness toward his wife. "I think that Bette is a pretty grand actress — the best on the screen. But she has become the best to the detriment of her home life," he said.

His legal complaint alleged: Miss Davis, 1935 film academy prize-winner, became so engrossed in her profession that she failed to perform her marital duties, being distant to her husband "to the point of rudeness and embarrassment."

When asked to exhibit some evidence of conjugal friendliness and affection, she became "enraged and indulged in a blatant array of epithets and derision."

Horror Of Modern Warfare Brings Popular Peace Desire Hoover Tells York Bible Class

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (CP)—Out of the horror of modern warfare has come a popular desire for peace, a Toronto audience was told last night by Herbert Hoover, former United States president. Mr. Hoover spoke at the 15th annual dinner of the York Bible Class.

After describing "insensate barbarism" in many parts of the world, Mr. Hoover said that in Spain "thousands of women and children have been bombed to death for no military purpose but to create horror.

"Perhaps the world has gained something lately, for under the terror of the air popular emotions for war no longer sweep the common people. But the nations in dumb fright are arming as never before in history for some unknown conflict."

The "four horsemen of war, famine, pestilence and death" were marching through the world and the former president spoke of "the fifth horseman, intolerant ideologies." The democracies were being drugged "with the illusions of economic security."

"We have also all the benefits and troubles from the advance in physical science and tecynology. We invented a few social complications. For instance, as we grew from the village shop to mass production we were slow to carry the moral relations between the employer and the employee from the shop to the factory.

"We set up the admirable idea that people shall be rewarded according to economic merit. But we

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 23 (AP)

A PAIR of tiny "incubator" babies drank "eyedropper" meals today and gained strength in their 1,000 to one fight to live.

Just a week old, the babies are twins, a boy and a girl, born three months prematurely to Mrs. James Wylde by a caesarian operation.

Fed with eyedroppers and a formula simulating mother's milk, the twins have gained in strength. The boy has gained two ounces and now weighs a "robust" two pounds 10 ounces. The girl has lost a few ounces but still tips the scales at an ounce more than her twin brother.

18 Gamblers Pay $712 In Fines Result Of Raid

BRANTFORD, Ont., Nov. 23. — (CP).—Fines totalling $550, with costs amounting to $162, were imposed by Magistrate S. A. Jones to-day as the sequel to the provincial raid on the "Valley Inn" on the Brantford-Paris highway No. 12. The heaviest individual fines were $100, imposed on four men charged with unlawfully keeping a common gaming house.

Pleas of guilty were entered for the 18 men accused as "keepers" and "found-ins."

Magistrate Jones also issued an order for confiscation of $227.50 and the gambling equipment, including dice, table covers, aprons, chalk and croupiers rakes.

William Haines, Brantford, Salvatore Sansone, (470 Ridout St., London); James Brown, and Elwood Oles, both of Brantford, pleaded guilty to the charges of "keeping."

Crown Attorney F. E. D. Wallace said these four men had been actually "running" the game which was in progress when the police carried out the raid. He said the maximum penalty was one year in prison, but he suggested that a fine of $100 and costs in each case should suffice.

John McMillan, Brantford, also pleaded guilty to a "keeping" charge. Crown Attorney Wallace explained McMillan had not been in charge at the time of the raid, but arrived two hours later. He was fined $20 and costs.

Two other charges of "keeping" were amended to "found-in" and $10 and costs were imposed on the case of 13 men charged thus. A. H. Boddy, K.C., appearing for all the accused men, entered pleas of guilty on behalf of the "found-ins," who were not called. The alternative to the $10 fine was one month. Costs in each case amounted to $9.

Child Neglect Is Increasing

"Never in the memory of anyone connected with the work were the conditions under which unfortunate children are being brought up as disquieting as they are today," said Mr. Mills in his report.

Only 64 children were made wards of the society in 1938, compared to 73 in 1937. The decrease, the secretary said, was due to pressure from the city to avoid financial commitments.

Creating Business

DETROIT, Nov. 23.—(CP).—Two owners of a glass company and an employee are in jail here to-day charged with breaking windows in an effort to stimulate business. Police said Elmer Lacross, 29, confessed he broke the windows because his employers, W. H. May and J. O. Peterson paid him $10 to increase their business.

May and Peterson denied complicity in the case. They will appear in court late this month.

Jews Fear Colony Idea Means Delay Kill Thousands In Nazi Camps

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP).—Jewish assistance organizations, insisting speed is the prime necessity in transferring refugees from Germany, today were critical of British proposals for emigration to colonies.

While the united Palestine appeal organization in Washington described the plan as a "miracle," Rev. M. L. Perlzweig, leader of British section of the World Jewish Congress, said in London:

"Tens of thousands of Jews under arrest or in concentration camps cannot hope to survive while immigration schemes are maturing...we need possibilities of emigration today, not tomorrow."

A statement issued by an American Jewish delegation now in London said the plans for refugee settlement in sections of Africa and British Guiana, "inspired little hope of immediate relief."

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons Monday surveys first should be made to determine the feasibility of the colonization he proposed.

Jews who would comment here, however, held that Palestine was the most practical place for settlement.

The National Council of Palestine Jewry assisted by other groups, they argue, is prepared to finance and organize immediate absorption of practically the whole German Jewish younger generation of suitable age—about 100,000 persons.

All Can't Go to Palestine.

But while they favored Palestine, spokesmen here granted that the huge number of refugees from Germany which might total 500,000 could not be dumped there. The other suggestion they offered was that friendly countries—members of the 32-nation refugee committee at Evian-Les-Bains—permit refugees to enter, only temporarily.

With Arab disturbances in Palestine, Great Britain has opposed the risk of greater trouble—presumably until after the Arab-Jew-

Chinese 'Mata Hari'

Peiping Lily Lee, party girl and one-time "queen of the night clubs" has been arrested by Chinese secret service agents as she was about to board a plane for Hong Kong with two men. In her baggage were photographs of military significance. She is being detained under suspicion of being a "Chinese Mata Hari."

Minister Denies He Favors Route Of No. 7

In an interview with A. L. Elliott, M.L.A., on Wednesday afternoon, Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, denied that he had told a deputation on Tuesday that he was in favor of the No. 7 route for the proposed highway across the province from Sarnia. He said he had told the deputation that a primary consideration in laying out a route was the fact of large populations at bot hends. The new bridge at Sarnia gave access to an important section of the United States, and at the east end there was Ottawa and entry into the Province of Quebec.

The shortest route was always the most acceptable, Mr. McQuesten said without referring to the definite course it should take along the way.

Represented Western End.

Alderman James Dutton attended from Peterborough. He said the deputation represented the western division of the Central Ontario Highway Association who are hoping the Department will undertake a road building between Sarnia and Ottawa even if it took from three to five years for completion.

Uxbridge and Newmarket delegates urged the claims of that section of the province for inclusion of the strip from Schomberg to Port Perry.

The deputation declared there was no intention of embarrassing the government in the decision which has yet to be made regarding the road west of Peterborough. Alderman Dutton said today he gained an impression from the Minister's remarks that perhaps there would have to be some compromise here and there before the route is finally determined. No reference was made on Tuesday to the proposed diagonal route from Peterborough to Brooklin.

10,000 Jap Casualties In Shansi Fighting

SHANGHAI, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Chinese reported today they had halted the Japanese drive on Changsha, Hunan province capital and the next goal on the Central China front, and had repulsed a Japanese attack on Sitang, 60 miles north of Changsha.

They also reported launching a counter-attack along the North Hupeh front, north of Hankow, and were continuing their activity in southern and western Shansi province. They said more than 30 engagements had been fought in Shansi in the past two weeks with the Japanese suffering 10,000 casualties.

Foreign travellers reaching Hong Kong reported Chinese village militiamen and guerrilla bands were fighting near Canton, but the nearest regulars were 40 miles to the west.

Storekeeper Hides Threat Letter Till His Shop Robbed Twice, Son Held Up, All In Week

ALTON, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)— Police today investigated a threatening letter received by J. W. Wilson, whose store here has been broken into twice and whose son Douglas was held up and robbed of $4.50 in the store last week.

"We're just waiting to see what happens," Mr. Wilson said t oday. "The way the letter reads we can't tell whether these people are going to burn us out or blow the store up or what. They certainly have us scared. We received the letter before these break-ins and holdups started."

According to Mr. Wilson the threatening letter ordered him to "get out of business." It was unsigned.

"I don't know of any enemies who would do this," said Mr. Wilson.

Humanitarian Principles To Guide Cabinet On Refugees Says King

No Requests From Britain To Take Action, Nor Discussion With U.S.; Consider Visas Of Jews Now In Canada

OTTAWA, Nov. 23 (CP).—The government will be guided by humanitarian principles in its consideration of the Jewish refugee problem, Prime Minister Mackenzie King stated last night as he discussed a variety of questions with newspapermen after a Cabinet meeting.

Careful consideration is being given to the status of Jews now in Canada who would suffer great hardship if forced to return to Europe when their temporary visas expire, he said. General communications had been received from the British Government on the refugee problem but Canada had not been requested to take any course of action. No communications had been received from the United States Government concerning Jewish refugees from Germany.

Questioned concerning the possibility of the British Government establishing facilities in Canada for training pilots for the Royal Air Force, the Prime Minister said the matter will be considered at the next session of parliament as part of the general defence program.

At the last session it was disclosed that Britain had made some inquiries concerning such training and the Canadian Government's policy would be to allow the R.A.F. to train pilots in schools which were under the jurisdiction of the National Defence Department.

Extend Governor's Terms.

The royal visit early next spring came within the scope of Mr. Mackenzie King's comment and he said the terms of Lieutenant-Governor George DeBlois of Prince Edward Island and Lieutenant-Governor E. L. Patenaude of Quebec would be extended until after Their Majesties leave Canada about next June 10.

He said the government thought it appropriate that these officials who have represented the King for several years should retain their positions while the King and Queen were in Canada. Mr. DeBlois' term would have expired next January 2 and Mr. Patenaude's on May 3.

The Prime Minister paid warm tribute to Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, his political rival, for so many years, who is leaving Canada to take up residence at a country home in England.

"I appreciate the great service Mr. Bennett has rendered his country and will watch his career in the new sphere he has adopted with the greatest interest," he said.

Charges Pile Up After Wild Car Theft Case

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 23.—(CP).— Charges to-day started to pile up against a 21-year-old Chatham youth, identified by police as one of a pair who led them yesterday on one of the wildest man hunts Western Ontario has known in years.

After eluding police through a day-long search, the youth was captured last night when a car he was driving crashed into the dining room of the Longwood Inn, at Lambeth, at the culmination of an 85-mile-an hour highway chase, in which shots were fired.

The captured youth told police he was William Besant, 22, 44 Centre street, Chatham. When he came before County Magistrate Hawkshaw to be remanded one week he was confronted with two charges, one of theft of eight gallons of gasoline from Malcolm McDonald's service station near Wardsville, and the other of possessing a revolver.

Authorities said they expected other charges concerning allegd theft of automobiles from Bothwell and Chatham during the day, and disappearance of three guns from a Chatham store would be laid in Kent county.

Besant denied the charges of stealing the gasoline, and intimated he might deny the charge of possessing a revolver by asking for trial by a higher court.

Meanwhile, a police hunt centres in the Chatham district for another young man, as the second of a pair who escaped from arresting officer and dogged through rough timber country pursued by a posse of 50.

Britain Battered By November Gales

LONDON, Nov. 23 (AP). — Wild November gales battered shipping today and smashed at the shores of the British Isles. While lifeboats went to the aid of small craft, the liner Queen Mary, which left New York November 18, was unable to land 200 passengers and 1,500 bags of mail at Plymouth and was forced to proceed to Southampton.

The gale caused postponement of the battleship Royal Oak's departure from Portsmouth for Norway to carry home the body of Queen Maud.

Three persons were killed by falling walls at Taunton and Stroud. Sixty-foot waves broke down a new sea wall at Aberystwyth, Wales. A coastal steamer with five aboard was driven ashore at Stranraer, Scotland.

Inquest Adjourned

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 23.—(CP).—Preliminary inquest into the death of Thomas Wesley Cronkwright, 24, Trenton, last night was adjourned one week while police summon witnesses.

Cronkwright and John O'Brien, 19, Marmora, were returning home from a trip to the woods yesterday, when O'Brien's shotgun discharged the pellets hitting Cronkwright in the leg. O'Brien carried the wounded man a mile to a settlement 10 miles north of Marmora. Cronkwright succumbed to loss of blood.

Dope Brings Jail

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP).—Cyril Vandreuil yesterday was convicted of having marihuana in his possession and was fined $200 and given a six-month prison sentence. If he does not pay the fine, the court ruled, he will serve an additional six months.

Champion Steer Brings $380

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (CP)—University of Alberta's grand champion Shorthorn steer, Killearn Lord Rothes sold on the auction block today to the T. Eaton Company of Toronto for 40 cents a pound.

The Hereford runner up for the title, also owned by University of Alberta, brought 23 cents a pound going to Canada Packers, Limited in the usual last day cattle sales at the Royal Winter Fair. The grand champion weighed 950 pounds and the runner up, 970.

Farmers were getting an average of 11 cents a pound for 200 steers, three and a half cents better than the market price.

False Press Reports Injure Relations

LONDON, Nov. 23 (CP Cable)— The German government "must be well aware" of the injury to Anglo-German relations caused by false press reports, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today.

Attention of the government was drawn to German press reports of looting, rape, murder, and torture by British soldiers in Palestine. Sir John said the reports were a complete fabrication but did not reply when asked if a formal protest would be made to the German government.

Last Minute News Flashes

TORONTO.—Manny Britstone, 22, was found guilty in court today of robbing Miss Bessie Otis of a $1,011 payroll and was remanded a week for sentence. Britstone allegedly snatched the payroll from Miss Otis as she entered the building where her employers' offices were located. She was employed by the William Gluckin and Company, Canada, Limited. Three citizens caught Britstone as he ran away.

PARIS.—Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax, accompanied by their wives, arrived in Paris at 5:50 p.m. (12:50 p.m. EST) for a three-day visit.

Chased Youth Crashes Car Into Inn

Skunk's Misery Saves Fugitives Once In Long Hot Pursuit

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 22—(CP).—Provincial Police scoured Western Ontario to-day for the companion of 22-year-old William Besant of Chatham, arrested when he crashed into the dining-room of the Longwoods Inn at Lambeth in a stolen automobile after an 85-mile-an-hour pursuit.

Known to police as "John Jones," the other youth was believed also to be from Chatham. The pair led Provincial Police and farmers a wild chase over highways and through bush country yesterday after escaping from custody, then separated as the trail became hotter.

The search for Besant ended late last night when, with bullets singing from a pursuing automobile, he failed to make a turn at Lambeth five miles west of here. The car skidded for 100 feet after he applied the brakes, scattered the cement foundation as it ploughed into the verandah of the hotel and battered down a one-foot wall before stopping with its nose in the dining-room.

The high-powered car which police had commandeered to chase the youth pulled up and officers piled out expecting to find the driver dead. But Besant leaped out and took to his heels. He was arrested as he tried to run down a side street of the village.

One Shot in Machine

Provincial Constable Robert Witts, who made the arrest, turned Besant over to Inspector T. G. P. Lucas of Provincial Police, who brought Besant here to face a charge of automobile theft. He suffered shock but no injuries. A single bullet was found in the body of the automobile.

Police allege Besant and his companion stole a car at Chatham early yesterday, changed its license plates for stolen ones and drove to Wardsville, where they drove off without paying for obtaining eight gallons of gasoline.

Provincial Constable Donald Coles, mounted on a motorcycle, caught up with the youths on No. 2 highway and took a loaded .32 calibre revolver from them. He ordered them to drive west back to Wardsville, while he followed closely. As they reached Woodgreen, three miles from Wardsville, the youths swung south ish round table discussions next year.

MORE ABOUT—
Jews Fears

There was hope at first that South America would offer a settling place for German Jews, but many countries there intimated they could not absorb a mass immigration.

Britain then approached Australia and New Zealand, who opposed a block influx but agreed to an infiltration by normal immigration.

It was reported during the visit to London by King Carol of Rumania that he suggested the refugees be sent to Northern Rhodesia. This was given consideration.

Prime Minister Chamberlain then announced the government was willing to devote a part of British Guiana to solution of the problem. He also announced plans for settlements in Tanganyika and on a small scale in parts of North Rhodesia and Kenya colony.

Since Tanganyika is a British mandate territory, formerly German, a storm of protest arose from the German press. Chamberlain ignored this.

Meanwhile, the idea of establishing centres in England to teach agriculture to young German Jews before sending them to the colonies is being advocated.

Britain is to accept some children and the Netherlands has taken large numbers of youthful refugees.

So far no government decision has been made to stabilize them. Private sources say United States groups may and to the extent of $100,000,000.

Havens, Fertile Lands.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Proposed havens for Jewish refugees in Africa and South America were described today by the National Geographic Society as generally productive and fertile lands awaiting economic development.

British Guiana, one of the principal territories mentioned as a possible new home for Jews driven from central Europe, is larger than England, Scotland and Wales combined. It has a population of only about two persons per square mile.

Sugar is the principal export of this South American colony, but aluminum ore virtually has equalled sugar in value in recent years.

Although more than 2,000,000 ounces of gold and 2,000,000 carats of Diamonds have been brought out of British Guiana's jungle hinterland, the Georgraphic Society said, reported deposits of manganese, oil and mica have been almost untouched because river traffic is difficult.

Recently an ancient gold mine of the Inca Indians of Peru has been reopened because airplanes made the site accessible.

The former German colony of Tanganyika in East Africa, now governed by Great Britain, has also been suggested as a refuge for European Jews.

Tanganyika's 366,000 square miles of territory support profitable lumber and agricultural operations. Sisal, cotton, coffee, nuts and grain are among the country's major products.

The open areas of the colony support 5,000,000 cattle, about 2,500,000 sheep and 300,000 goats.

Kenya, north of Tanganyika, also offere dopportunities for settlers. It is larger than France, contains thousands of square miles of excellent farm lands, and the gradual slope of the land back from the coastal plain carries up to 4,000 feet where there is a comfortable climate.

Among Kenya's principal products are cotton, sugar, coconuts, wheat, corn, coffee and tea. Its capital, Nairobi, is one of the big-game hunting centres of the world.

Northern Rhodesia, mentioned as another possible refuge, occupies most of the central plateau of Africa. Most of it is 3,000 feet or more above sea level, the Geographic Society said.

Dunsford Mare Wins At Royal

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—Awarding of Clydesdale special prizes and female championships closed the judging of heavy horses at the Royal Winter Fair yesterday. Townhead Anne, a 6-year-old mare, from the Windsweet Farms Ltd., Dunsford, owned by Robert Fennell, Toronto, won the grand championship and the Clydesdale Horse Association's special ribobn.

Reserve grand champion was Lady Lonsdale of Don Alda Farms, Todmorden. R. Ray McLaughlin, Elmcroft Farm, Oshawa, added another win to that of his stallion, Windlaw Marcellus, who won the grand championship, when his mare, Windlaw Hearts Desire, won the junior mare championship.

Too Hospitable

NEWTON, N.C., Nov. 23—(AP)—A witness in a trial took the stand, pulled a bottle from his pocket and took a swig. Then he turned to Judge Wilson Warlick:

"Judge," he said, "have a drink."

"Thirty days for contempt," the judge ordered. He also remanded the witness to city court on a charge of possessing and transporting whisky.

55 Registered At Opening Of Keene School

The Ontario Department of Agriculture's school of elementary agriculture and home economics opened at Keene Tuesday morning with a registration of twenty-five girls and thirty young men, a total of fifty-five which is likely to be increased to sixty within a week. Most of these young students taking the intensive short course which will continue until February 24 are residents of Otonabee with a few from Asphodel.

The class was welcomed by Frank G. Paterson, county representative of the Department who introduced his assistants for the first week of study, Miss Jean Scott of Port Elgin, Miss Florence Wright of Toronto, R. S. McKercher, B.S.A., Dublin, Ontario, and Donald A. Bell, B.S.A., of Barrie. The method of enrollment ensured an immediate acquaintance of the members of both classes, and the boys' work in the afternoon was a practical demonstration in splicing rope and making halters. Each boy was given thirteen feet of rope, and the first production of his handiwork becomes his own property.

Some of the young people are boarding at Keene, but the others have arranged for transportation which takes them home at the close of the school day.

The first feature event of the course, Mr. Paterson told the Examiner, will be two special addresses by I. C. Marritt, B. Sc. F., of the Forestry Branch, Toronto, who will discuss questions of reforestation. The public generally is invited to attend the lecture by Mr. Marritt in the afternoon of his day's visit, Wednesday, November 30.

Mr. Paterson said he was highly pleased with the response and co-operation shown by the young people who registered Tuesday.

"An attendance of sixty young people for this course is just about the right number," he said. "If we get more than thirty girls, for instance, it is not so easy to give each of them the personal instruction which they should have, and if we get a few more enrolled within the opening week that is just about the right number. Of course, we will be glad to take all who come."

Part of the equipment for the girls' work includes a new electric stove, and a new projecting lantern is also on the way for illustrated lectures such as Mr. Marritt's forestry address, and other work for which pictures will be available.

Hockey Player Is Found Dead In Bed

SYRACUSE, N.Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—Jerry Connell, 21, Syracuse hockey player, died today a short time after he was found ill in his hotel room.

Physicians said that Connell, a member of the Syracuse team in the International-American League, apparently suffered a heart attack. Connell played last night in a league game here against Providence Reds.

Connell died a short time after police hastened to the hotel with a pulmotor in response to an emergency call from his room-mate, "Red" Heron, also a member of the Syracuse team.

Heron told police he was unable to rouse Connell this morning and immediately called for assistance. Connell broke his leg in a lacrosse game eight weeks ago, and had only recently returned to the hockey lineup.

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (CP).—Amateur sports circles in Toronto were shocked to learn today of the death of Jerry Connell, hockey and lacrosse star, at Syracuse. He was a rookie defenceman on the Syracuse Stars of the International-American Hockey League.

Connell was signed this fall by Manager Conny Smythe of the Toronto Maple Leafs, who sent the youngster to Syracuse for seasoning. He regarded Connell as an outstanding defence prospect.

Connell was born at Kincardine, Ont., but for the last few years had lived at Hespeler, Ont. Last season he played hockey for Port Colborne Sailors in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series. In the summer he played lacrosse for the famous Orillia Terriers, former Canadian champions.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 23 (C.P.). — Winnipeg wheat futures advanced today for the second successive session due to moderate Canadian wheat export sales which stimulated local and southern buying. At the final bell values were ½ to ¼ higher. November 58¼, December 58½, May 61⅝ to ½, and July 62½.

Export sales were estimated as high as 500,000 bushels for the second day.

Firmness at Liverpool and failure of overseas markets to react on large Argentine wheat crop estimates were favorable factors here.

Cheese Makers Meet Next Week

Patrons of Peterborough district cheese factories are reminded by W. J. Moore, dairy instructor, of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' convention to be held in Belleville, next week, November 28-30. A feature of the convention is the Empire cheese exhibition. The committee in charge of the double event met at Belleville on Monday and completed arrangements for the display of cheese from all parts of Canada and the Empire, and also for the competition for which more than $1,600 is offered in prize money. Mr. Moore suggested that the officers of each factory should attend the convention, especially for the cheese makers' banquet in the city hall auditorium Tuesday at 6.30 p.m. All the cheese makers of the district are expected to attend the convention at which addresses on problems of the industry will be given each day.

MORE ABOUT—
Germans Lay

Both Goebbels and Das Schwarz Korps took note of British and United States sentiment.

Annihilation by "fire and sword" of Germany's Jews if they sink to criminality was predicted by Das Scharwz Korps, organ of the black-uniformed elite guard.

The weekly paper said Jews soon would become impoverished in Germany and in that status might become a "communtiy of hundreds of thousands of criminals." Should that occur, it said, Germany would root out "the Jewish underworld just as we used to root our criminal elements in our land of order, with fire and sword."

Referring to criticism of the anti-Jewish drive of the British House of Commons, Gobbels said pointedly:

"If the English want to conclude a binding friendship with the German people, they should not make this friendship dependent on inner political German circumstances."

Naming Britain and the United States, however, in reference to the proposal for colonial refugees, including the former German East Africa, now British Tanganyika, Daschwarz said that:

"In our colonies alone the Jews should not be settled because that wouldn't be in their interest, for they are certain at some time to be chased out of there just as out of Germany."

The weekly paper declared they would be eliminated from German influence "because it is necessary, because we no longer listen to world outcries and finally because no power in the world can stop us."

Danzig Falls In Line.

DANZIG, Nov. 23.—(AP).— The Nazi principle of "purity of blood" was applied to the free city of Danzig to-day with the publication of a decree patterned after Chancellor Hitler's Nuremberg racial laws of 1935.

The government announcement said the decree was necessary to "eliminate Jewish influence and maintain the purity of German and kindred blood."

"The Danzig political administration," the announcement said, "has only fulfilled the natural demand of the people of Danzig to establish legal unity with the German motherland on the basis of the National Socialist Weltanaschauung (world outlook)."

The decree, effective to-day, eliminates all Jews from public office; permits the retention of citizenship but deprives them of the right to vote on matters of state administration; and forbids Jews to display enther the Danz State flag or the Nazi Swastika. Approximately 10,000 Jews were expected to be affected.

As far as foreigners residing in Danzig were concerned, newspapers commenting on the decree expressed the opinion it would be applied to Polish Jews, but did not mention Jews of other nationality.

Snooty Mount

CLEVELAND, Nov. 23 (AP)—The horse of Mounted Policeman Wilbur Nelson won't take "whoa" for an answer. Highly educated, the animal stops only at the order "cease." And he won't "giddy-ap" until Nelson says—"proceed."

Interne Charged

OTTAWA, November 23—(CP).—Magistrate Glenn Strike reserved decision until Wednesday when Dr. Joseph Giardine, 24-year-old interne appeared in court yesterday for preliminary hearing on a charge of causing grevious bodily injury to Mrs. Edna Azar who died in hospital here Oct. 21. The charge alleges he negligently administered a drug to Mrs. Azar while attending her in hospital.

Meters On Demand

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 23.—(CP).—City Commissioners to-day called for bids to supply 500 parking meters here after receiving reports from Grand Rapids, Mich., that meters installed there effected a marked improvement in clearing up downtown parking congestion.

Grand Rapids installed 300 meters early this fall, charging five cents for 30-minute or 60-minute parking in various downtown sections. Revenue from the machines is used for a traffic safety program.

Tea and Bazaar Attracts Many Shoppers

Ferns, and the bronze and yellow of chrysanthemums against a background of rust-wine alcove hangings presented a charming setting for the chrysanthemums tea and bazaar which the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian church held Tuesday afternoon in the Sunday School Hall.

Tea was poured by Mrs. H. E. Stenson, Mrs. T. McArthur, Mrs. McGregor, and Mrs. R. Ross, and the tea table was lovely with a graceful centrepiece of bronze-yellow chrysanthemums in a crystal bowl, and matching tapers in crystal holders. The tea room was convened by Mrs. Chas. Lacheur and Mrs. W. S. Hill, and assistant tea hostesses were Mrs. Dodds, Mrs. Burrell, Mrs. R. C. Prophet ,and Miss Dorothy Turner.

Small tea tables, centred with vases of baby 'mums, were under the direction of Mrs. W. J. Gordon, Mrs. W. Brown, Mrs. L. Mitchell, Mrs. H. Everett, Mrs. J. P. Pulkinghorne, Mrs. W. McKee, Mrs. W. G. Metherell, and Mrs. O. A. Moore.

A delightful musical program arranged by Mrs. Martin Chenhall included solos by Miss Helen Clarkson and Mrs. Bertha Mitchell, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Adam Sands.

Green, yellow and deep gold streamers decorated the white tables in the attractive booths, where baking, fancy-work, fruits, and many other products were available to the large number of buyers who visited the bazaar during the afternoon.

Miss B. Brealey was convener of the homecooking table, and her assistants were Mrs. M. Morgan and Mrs. Thos. Hendry. Delicious goodies ranging from toothsome tarts, cakes and doughnuts to delicately browned rolls and muffins, found a ready sale here.

New and sparkling gift suggestions for the Christmas shopper were found at the novelty table, where outstanding in an interesting display were blue and pink bedjackets, babies' bootees, minature etchings with round wooden frames, and flower bulbs in lovely little pottery bowls. Mrs. Andrew Jack and Mrs. H. McKenzie were conveners, assisted by Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. J. Stevenson and Mrs. Leach.

Resembling a colorful eastern market place in its variety of vegetables and fruits, the "Country Store" booth drew much favorable comment. The bright orange of bittersweet, the yellows, greens and browns of garden produce, the rows of jam, pickle and jelly jars, as well as homemade butter, eggs and even dressed fowl, made this a popular shopping centre. Mrs. C. Fairbairn, convener, was assisted by Mrs. J. A. Middleton.

Because of illness, Mrs. W. C. Steinkrauss, president of the Society, was unable to be present.

Queen Alexandra Circle Entertains

The officers and companions of Queen Alexandra Circle A.O.F. entertained their friends at a pleasant social evening and euchre party Tuesday evening after the regular meeting of the Circle, which was held in the Business and Professional Women's Club rooms. Piano music during the evening was played by companion Mrs. R. Bugg.

Euchre prizes were won by Mrs. H. Howell, Mrs. J. Bacon, Mrs. W. Terrace, and Mrs. J. Black. An interesting feature of the evening were two draws, on which tickets had been sold. The draws were made by Mrs. G. Tremain. Ticket No. 400 for a half ton of coal, was won by Mrs. Edwards, 38 Billings Avenue, Toronto, and ticket No. 553 won half a cord of wood for Mrs. Little of 276½ Wolfe street, Peterborough.

Tea was served by the refreshment conveners, companions Mrs. J. Pearse, Mrs. E. Freeman and Mrs. B. Reid.

Boys and Girls Should Have Plenty of Different Dates, For Only in This Way Will They Learn True Character and How to Cope With Different Personalities.

IT IS announced that a movement has been started in one of our large coeducational institutions to do away with the provincial custom known as "keeping steady company." Let us hope and pray that this social innovation will take and spread, and that soon the boys and girls everywhere will go collegiate, and it will be just as much the thing to have many dates as it is to wear sloppy socks or ride in a jalopy.

Especially should the girls get behind this reform and push it along, because they have been the victims of the asinine keeping-steady-company custom which gives the man all the advantages and leaves the woman to suffer the penalties.

Under the rules of this near-love game a man has the right to monopolize a girl's society during all the years when she is at the height of her good looks and attractiveness and keep all other men away from her, but he commits himself to nothing. He is not engaged to her. He has filed no declaration of his intentions of marrying her, and when he gets tired of her, or some other girl hits his fancy, all he has to do is just fade out of the picture. And that's that as far as he is concerned.

But it leaves the girl ditched. She is a leftover, with little to do except to climb up on the old-maid shelf. She has missed her chance at a husband. She has been known so long as Jimmy's girl or Tom's girl that she has been as much out of the matrimonial running as if she had been married, and it is almost impossible for her to get into circulation again. There are millions of disgruntled spinsters who would have been happy wives and mothers if they had not been so tied up during the heyday of their youth and beauty with some lad with whom they were keeping steady company that they had no chance of meeting eligible men who meant business.

While it is true that women are the chief sufferers from the keeping-steady-company racket, it is also true that men do not get off scot-free. It is always easier to enter into a sentimental relationship than it is to get out of it. Many a youth who intended only a casual acquaintance with a girl finds that she has pre-empted him for her own; that she has announced to all and sundry that he is her private property, and that she demands that he should drag her around to whatsoever place of amusement she desires to go.

Once one of these feminine highbinders gets her clutches on a youth, he never escapes unless he is possessed of unusual courage and daring. She always has him dated up so that he has no choice but to go with her. And she fends off every attractive girl so that he never has a chance of making new acquaintances. No matter how tired he gets of her, he is tied to her by the laws and customs of a creed he lacks the nerve to break.

That a lot of the unhappy and uncongenial marriages that we see all about us are due to this senseless custom of keeping steady company, no one can doubt. For one thing, it narrows the choice that men and women should have in picking their mates and binds them down to the boys and girls who are their tastes in their teens, but who are not at all what they want or like in their maturity. In reality, the man and woman who have kept steady company with the same individual since they were a school boy and girl and who have never gone out with any one else know absolutely nothing about how interesting and fascinating other men and women can be. That is why so many married people are swept off of their feet by the first charmer they meet.

Also the man and woman who have kept steady company for years are virtually forced into marriage by public opinion, no matter how tired they get of each other. Sally and John have been linked together in the minds of all of their friends so long and everybody has so confidently expected them to marry that they simply lack the hardihood to refuse to do it, no matter how much they realize that their romance has grown stale.

Instead of keeping steady company, every youth and maiden should go about as much as possible with different lads and lassies. They should know as many of the opposite sex as possible. For only by experience can they learn to judge people and to find out what qualities they really like and admire in people.

We shall have better and more lasting marriages when boys and girls have a different date with a different sweetie every night.

Shower in Honor of Bride of This Week

A delightful miscellaneous shower complimenting Miss Dorothy MacDonald, whose marriage to Mr. David H. Crowe of Niagara Falls is arranged for Friday of this week, was given Tuesday evening by Mrs. Gordon Webb of 555 Sherbrooke street.

A well-laden box of gifts decked with streamers of pink and white, was presented to the guest of honor by Bobbie Webb, the small son of the hostess, Miss Maxine MacDonald and Miss Jean McIntyre. After a pleasant social evening, tea was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. D. Moore and Mrs. Howard.

Guests included: Mrs. C. Mills, Mrs. R. Webb, Mrs. A. Beardsmore, Mrs. D. Moore, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. W. Northcott, Mrs. H. Wilson, Mrs. C. Clarke, Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. C. Gardiner, Mrs. H. Frost, Mrs. F. Frost, Mrs. C. MacDonald, and the Misses Jean Hair, Gladys Green, Jean and Zaida Harvey, Gwen Fisher, Jean McIntyre, Isobel Beardsmore, and Maxine MacDonald.

Mrs. Mesley Gives Inspiring Talk

A thought-provoking and inspiring talk on the subject of meditation and prayer was given by Mrs. E. Mesley at the meeting of Group F of the W.M.S. of George Street Church, which was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. R. Ferguson of Dickson street.

Mrs. F. Lane, the leader, presided at the meeting, which was opend with a hymn, followed by the Lord's Prayer and the roll call, which was answered by a verse of Scripture. A Scripture reading was given by Mrs. J. Spencer.

Plans were completed for the play "All in the Family," the members of St. James' Church are presenting on December 2nd, under the auspices of the group. Arrangements were also made for a Purity Bread demonstration, to be held December 12, 13, and 14.

Of interest to the members was an account of the work done by the W.M.S. in Moosejaw, Sask., told by Mrs. S. Powers, who had made her home there before coming to live in Peterborough.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Lane, and refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Ferguson, and her assistants.

Rev. Sutcliffe Addresses Y.P.U. Meeting

"The World Needs Men," was the subject of an address given by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe Tuesday evening at the Christian Fellowship meeting of the Young People's Union of St. Andrew's church. He told of Diogones in Athens, who took with him a lighted lantern in the day time, and when people laughed at him and asked what it meant, he said, "I am looking for a man." It is hard to define what makes true manhood and womanhood, we need people with a purpose.

Carey carried the gospel to Indian; Florence Nightingale nursed the soldiers in the Crimean war; Francis Willard fought the liquor traffic; Paul the Apostle never faltered in his life's purpose to preach Christ crucified. The world needs people who pray. Prayer is an attitude of the soul towards God. There is a difference between saying our prayers and praying.

We need people with the art of appreciation, which is one of the greatest gifts of life, said Rev. Sutcliffe. Young people should have pluck and courage to stand firm in the day of danger, and not to run away from the challenge of life. The world needs people with perseverence. A professor in Greek told a class of forty students that only fifteen would be there by the end of the year, and the prophecy turned out to be literally true.

Miss Frances Clark, vice-president presided at the meeting, Miss Corinne McArthur read the scripture; Miss Jean Stewart a story, and Miss Helen Weston a poem.

At the close of the meeting the nomination committee met to prepare a slate of officers for the coming year. The other members enjoyed carpet bowling, led by James Harvey.

This way of cooking veal cutlets is a little unusual—although it is not new you probably will welcome it—it makes a nice company or Sunday dinner.

Veal Cutlets En Casserole.

Cut 2 lbs. veal from cutlet (corresponding to round in steak) in 2-inch pieces and brown quickly in hot fat. Turn into casserole. Make a smooth paste of 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper and paprika mixed with a little of the stock. Stir in 1 cup thick sour cream, and stir until slightly thick. Add 1 tablespoon onion juice and 1-3 cup chopped mushrooms (canned or fresh). Pour over the meat in casserole, cover and bake in oven of 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour.

This is delicious served with Duchess potatoes (scooped out baked potatoes, mixed with cream and egg yolk and returned to oven to heat through and brown.)

Fashions

Here's a dirndl-minded home frock that becomes any figure. It's a simple one-piece affair with smart yokes across the back and the front. A snug belt, gives it an all-around gathered dirndl effect....leaves the slim, length-giving panel front, nice and flat. It is so attractive to wear of crisp cotton percale in wine background with multi-colored print . . . smart enough to wear 'neath your coat to market. You'll simply have to use the pattern again for general day wear in the collared long sleeved version of spun rayon challis print.

Style No. 2713 is designed for sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material.

Do You Know?

A good method for ironing napkins is to dip every third napkin in warm water, place it between two dry napkins, then fold and roll? Allow them to stand for about an hour before ironing.

◇ ◇ ◇

Brown marks on dishes, which are caused by baking in the oven, can be removed by rubbing the spots well with damp salt? Wash off, and repeat the treatment if necessary.

◇ ◇ ◇

If you wish to decorate your rolls with poppy seed, a good idea is to spread just a little unbeaten egg white on the tops of the rolls before sprinkling the seeds? After baking, the seeds will remain on the buns.

Living Link Mission Circle

The monthly meeting of the Living Link Mission Circle of Trinity Church was held Monday evening in the ladies' parlors. During the business period a toy shower for the firemen's Christmas toy fund was discussed, and it was decided that each member would contribute a toy toward this fund at the December meeting.

Devotional exercises conducted by groups under the leadership of Mrs. Malby and Miss Joyce Harris included an item on Christian Stewardship by Mrs. George Taylor; a Bible reading by Mrs. Blanchard, and prayer by Miss Margaret Wolstenholme. The first chapter of the study book was reviewed in an interesting manner by Mrs. M. Latimer, and a splendid reading was given by Mrs. C. Huffman.

Refreshments were served at the end of the meeting, which closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Branch Notes

ALL SAINTS' BRANCH

A gaily-decked hall with blue and white the predominating colors, greeted nearly 125 members and former members of All Saints' A.Y.P.A., on the occasion of the 25th anniversary celebration in the Parish Hall Monday evening.

With the president, Doug. Weir, as chairman, a very interesting program was offered.

Mrs. E. Foster gave two delightful violin selections, followed by a vocal solo by Jack Gibson, and a piano solo by Miss E. Glover. Little Shirley Garner and Kenny Simons presented delightful song and tap dance numbers. A vocal solo by Mrs. L. Groombridge added considerably to the delight of the audience. Miss Doreen Larry also contributed a song and dance number. Mrs. J. Cairns, Mrs. Davies, Mr. Kirkaldy and J. Cairns rendered several numbers in vocal quartette style, after which the program was drawn to a close by the song and tap dance team of Miss C. Buller and Miss P. Liddell.

During the course of the evening greetings were received from the Archbishop of Toronto, the Archdeacon of Peterborough diocese, the Dominion, Provincial and Local Councils of the A.Y.P.A., and various of the past presidents of All Saints' A.Y.P.A.

The birthday cake bedecked with 25 candles, symbolical of 25 years of work "For Christ and the Church" was cut by Hanlan Sisson, the first president of the organization.

Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the evening by the members of the branch.

With the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem, the gathering broke up.

Hitler And Our Indians

Chancellor Hitler has a newspaper, the Voelkisher Boebachter, and that paper talks just as Herr Hitler does, which is often enough on something about which he does not possess information. Recently it had occasion to say: "If Canadians want to see real atrocities they need only go to the Indian reservations of their own country."

Neither Hitler nor the editor of his newspaper has ever been on an Indian reservation. This paper does not boast an extensive knowledge of such places, but we have reserves in our own district and it is not far off to visit them.

On occasion we go out to Curve Lake Reserve and when there it is right enough to call and have a chat with Chief Dan Whetung who selected for a wife a very capable white woman. The Chief may on occasion refer to his own three sons who have gone out into the world to take honorable places in various fields. One can find no evidence of the atrocities of which Hitler's paper speaks. The folk on the Reserve live in their own little cabins and attend to their own business. Their children go to school and are a healthy looking lot.

There are days when we see more Indians passing the office here, because the office of the Indian agent is just across the street. If the bounty Indians have any business to transact or anything they want adjusted they feel free to come.

Whether the habits of the white man have been a good thing for the Indians to copy in their entirety is something which we have always doubted, and it is a fact that a good many Indians, like a large number of white folk, could stand to have greater incomes and more comforts. But there are no atrocities; the Indians are free to come and go as they please; they pay no taxes on the Reserve; they trap and fish, take out wood and work the ground. There is more actual freedom on the Curve Lake reserve for instance than there is in Germany in its entirety.

No Sense Of Humor

Apparently there is not a widespread sense of humor in existence. When Huron County Council was in session recently one of the members mentioned in a facetious way that it would be well to ban the wearing of anything which looked like a Hitler moustache, and it was also mentioned that one of the county officials might have the job of enforcing such a law. The whole thing was a joke and nothing else.

But Huron's joke became the serious affair of other people. Toronto papers had reporters asking people what they thought about the idea; the news got on the wire and went to papers the world over. And now letters are starting to arrive in Goderich telling the county councillors what a brave thing they did. The mayor of one United States city wrote four closely lined pages, and New York Jewish papers make it appear it is actually an offence to wear in Huron county anything that looks like a Hitler moustache. So the council's joke has grown a flock of serious aftermath.

Any person who stopped for a moment to think the thing out would know an individual living in Huron county or elsewhere in this land could grow any kind of a moustache Hitler style or walrus, close-cropped or cow-horn kind, and no person could tell him to change his style. So the next time Huron county councillors indulge in a moment of levity it might be well for them to explain that nothing serious is intended. A sense of humor is evidently not widely distributed.

To The Nearest Farm House

There was an automobile accident on a road in the country three weeks ago, and we have since heard from one of the gentlemen who assisted in removing the injured people something of what actually took place.

The accident occurred about 7 in the evening when it was dark. The nearest place where one could go to use a telephone was a farm house about 100 yards back from the road. There was no telephone there, but the suggestion was made to the farmer that the injured should be brought to his house, and to that he gladly agreed, offering to get a lantern and assist in such effort himself.

A call was put through from another farm house for a doctor and other officials who investigate accidents. There were three injured people, two adults and a child, and they had all received cuts. The woman who was injured was placed on a couch in the front room and a quilt was placed beneath her and a blanket on top. For the child there were two chairs pulled together and coverings and a pillow provided. The injured man was cut badly about the hands.

When the doctor arrived he used what towels he had with him and then the supply in the farm home were called for, after which the farm car was used to take two of the patients to the hospital. The gentleman from whom this paper secured its information said he remained a while afterward to try and help clean up the house, as the farm wife had grown rather faint from the excitement and from seeing so much blood on everything. He seemed to be uncertain whether it would have been possible to remove all the stains from the quilt and blanket and from the covering of the couch.

Undoubtedly there had been two things in that farm home (1) needed service gladly given and (2) actual damage done to the home furnishings and equipment. Our informant said the farmer would never think of sending a bill for the damages in the home, and if there were other injured people to be cared for they would receive the best the house could give, but he could not help remarking that the garage man who took the cars away would get paid; the doctor would collect for his services, and the hospital to which the injured went would also collect, but although the injured people had gone home from the hospital some time ago the farmer had not received as much as a post card saying "thank you" for all the services provided in the home. It is not an isolated case as one reads frequently of injured people being taken to the nearest farm home, and possibly the owners of the homes never receive anything at all for their services or the damage done to their house furnishings. Whether any of them receive a letter of appreciation we do not know.

Is It Not Perjury?

During the hearing of a liquor case in magistrate's court in this city Magistrate E. A. Gee after listening to the evidence of the defendant, said "I am not accepting your story," after which he registered a conviction calling for a fine of $100 and costs.

That was a perfectly proper thing for the magistrate to say. In this case he had a good deal of evidence placed before him and much of it was contradictory. The story told by the officers was at variance with the one offered under oath by the defendant, and the magistrate decided to accept the word of the officers and discard that of the defendant.

And that of course is another way of saying that the bench did not believe the story which was offered by the accused person because it was not the truth.

That being the case it suggests the plain question — should the matter rest there? If a person does not tell "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," then does it not come within the meaning of perjury? And perjury in our courts is something which can be and often is prosecuted. If there is to be less of it then there should be more prosecutions for perjury.

Some Nonsense In It

In London, Ont., on the day set for civic nominations there were 130 names put forward for 20 elective positions, and that of course might look as though the people of London were taking a keen interest in civic business.

We are moved to doubt a good deal that it indicates any such thing. There were 21 persons nominated for mayor, and certainly there would be at least 17 in that list who never had any intention of running, who never signified willingness to enter the contest and who were probably surprised to find they had been nominated.

The entire nomination list looks like a couple of pages torn from the voters' list so great is it in length. Perhaps it is taken for granted that a citizen should be pleased to have it publicly stated he was nominated for mayor or board of education or something else. It may be something the children or even the grandchildren will refer to some day with pleasure and pomp. But for all practical purposes it looks like a lot of nonsense.

Corrigan In The Movies

Douglas Corrigan who started to fly from New York to California and landed in Ireland, is now in the movies. They call him Wrong Way Corrigan and he carries the spirit of that name into his new business venture.

To begin with he has no business manager, and such a thing is unheard of in Hollywood. He has no secretary and no agents of any kind.

Like others in the picture business Corrigan gets fan mail from people who want his picture or his autograph. He sits down and attends to such business himself. Harder still on Hollywood tradition he tells the truth about the number of letters. At one week-end the count was exactly 132, and that is the figure he used while any publicity man worth his salt knows that the figure given out for publication should have been raised to at least 2,650.

Corrigan has not faced a flash-light when walking into a restaurant with a gay little lady on his arm; the only concession he has made to appearance is the securing of a new leather coat. He flatly denies he has received $100,000 in advance, and says he did get $50,000 and considers that a great deal more than he is worth. He walked out of the colony when a contract of 24 pages was placed before him and it was necessary to follow him half way across the continent to get his name on a contract of four simple pages. He eats only one square meal a day and refuses to change from the custom, and admits openly he had to start that habit during the years when he couldn't find a job. What's more Corrigan does not want his pictures in the papers and he does not want to be interviewed. Judged by the standards of Hollywood he must be considered hopeless, but by the standards of other people he'd probably be regarded as rather sensible.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The government of Egypt has decided it must spend $12,500,000 on defence and have a standing army of 50,000, even if it has to borrow the money to do it.

In 1914 one shot is said to have started the world war, and another shot fired in Paris a few days ago has done the same thing as far as the Jews are concerned.

We are told often enough there is no unemployment in Italy but what do they call it when the government causes 15,000 Jews to lose their jobs there in one day?

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson says Canada is a plum for some greedy and avaricious nation. But not if such nation were forced to take our debts as well as our lands.

We do not imagine there was anyone surprised to read that the new Congress of Industrial Organization had elected John L. Lewis president. That is just the same thing as the Dutch taking Holland.

Deputy-Minister of Education says a boy must remain at school beyond his 14th year to have a chance at a job. Thousands of youngsters say Dr. McArthur might have raised the age limit a lot and still have been right.

Kingston man was arrested when leaving a Toronto church and the charge is theft of an overcoat. Perhaps he was one of those who had complained he was never able to get anything out of a church service.

Young man appearing in court at Guelph to answer to a charge in company with another young man, made this significant statement: "If we had been sober it never would have happened." That is so complete in itself that we hesitate to comment on it.

A man who applied for naturalization papers in London, Ont., said he came to this country in 1888 and his name had been on the voters' list for years. Surely that is enough to cause some person to make one of those "I view with alarm . . . " speeches.

Russia gives notice it is going to build 45,000-ton warships, and announces the reason to be that Japan is building larger vessels. The big ones cost more and appear more formidable, but we understand they sink in the same direction as the lesser ones.

We have not the least desire to interfere with the sport of other people, but we still contend that a deer out in the open, full of graceful movement, is more beautiful than when dead and strapped to some portion of a car as token of the hunt.

In the deer hunting season in New York state there were 21 persons killed and 99 injured. It might be possible to crack a joke or mold a smart paragraph about such a record, but probably it does not look that way to those who attended the 21 funerals and others who have since been caring for the wounded.

Some young fellow has started organizing hitchhiking clubs among United States colleges and he furnishes them with badges so motorists can identify them. That is fine, but it fails to explain why motorists should be called upon to provide cars and gas to give rides to those who can afford to attend college.

TROUBLE

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Cousin Ezra's wrong again, he leads I think unlucky men, and he is full of woe; and I'm not guessing as I write, for Ezra dropped in late last night, himself he told me so.

¶ The dainty widow just next door, was trying to hang her winter door, she tried to drive a nail; she struggled there as best she could, but wasn't getting on too good, she seems a trifle frail.

¶ So Ezra in his kindly way, just stepped across to have his say, he lent a helping hand; the little widow lady beamed, the thing was simpler than it seemed, and Ezra was just grand.

¶ When Ezra got the thing all through, there was another job to do, he couldn't just run free; she'd show her thanks the way she should, by means so easy understood, she brewed two cups of tea.

¶ His wife saw Ezra sitting there, reclining in an easy chair, and gulping tea and cake; she peeked again in her surprise, for she could scarce believe her eyes, but she'd made no mistake.

¶ When Cousin Ezra reached his home, his wife's sweet face had turned to stone, not easy to forget; for she'd told him ten times before, about their own cold weather door—it hadn't gone on yet.

The Jews Do Not Work the Land

GREAT BRITAIN and the United States are trying to work out plans for the settlement of Jews driven out of Germany and Czechoslovakia by increasing persecution. One difficulty is that these people are deprived by the Nazi government of their property, and funds will be needed not only for their transportation but their re-establishment, hence the reported discussion of a $100,000,000 financing scheme on the part of the United States.

The British Dominions will have to reach their own decisions in the matter, says the Woodstock Sentinel-Review, and Canada for the past seven years has restricted immigration to persons with sufficient means to establish themselves. There is evidence, however, of much sympathy with German Hebrews in their plight, and in several Canadian cities yesterday meetings were held to protest against Nazi persecution. Resolutions on the subject of making Canada a haven were somewhat cautiously worded, and members of Parliament are not listed as among those present.

Dr. C. E. Silcox, general secretary of the Social Service Council of Canada, recently delivered an address advocating that Canada provide sanctuary for European refugees. Those whom Nazi Germany is rejecting, he said, "will help to build a new and more prosperous Canada, and to make more solid the broad basis of the justice and freedom of the British Commonwealth of Nations.... No truly Christian nation can look upon these victims of ruthless persecution and refuse the demands of humanity, especially when it is well within its power to help."

Dr. Silcox points out that Canada is under-populated and over-capitalized; that with greater population it could better arrange the reorganization of its economic life. It is not necessarily true, he contends, that these people from Germany will never become agriculturalists or domestic servants; but in any event Canadian agriculture is already producing too much, and the Dominion's future is more likely to lie in her mines and the great industries which may be established to make use of mineral production.

THERE CAN be no argument as to the disinclination of Hebrews for farming. Of 61,900 wage-earners over 10 years of age, listed at the last census in Canada, only 784 persons were engaged in agriculture — including 577 in mixed farming and 71 in dairy farming. In domestic service there were 628 engaged. The census showed 20,905 employed in manufacturing industries, and 13,905 of these were in textile industries, principally the manufacture of men's and women's clothing. In services, 10,260 were listed, and in finance and insurance 1,555. Trade accounted for 24,152. Manufacturing, trade and services represented 90 per cent of all Hebrew wage-earners. Dr. Silcox alludes to mining, but the number of Hebrews under that head is negligible; in fact, certain branches of the mining industry are the only classifications throughout the long list of occupations in which no Jews whatever were found.

Canadian wage-earners of this racial origin were 3.01 per cent of the total at the 1931 census, which is high, because the Hebrew population of 156,726 then was only 1.5 per cent of the total. Only 5,559 were classified as rural residents. All the Jews in Canada living elsewhere than in cities and towns would only approximate the population of Ingersoll.

Of this 156,726 Jewish population, in 1931, only 68,703 persons were born in Canada. Easily the second largest group, in respect of nativity, was the Russian-born, at 40,486, and Poland was next with 24,988. Jews born in Rumania numbered 7,627, and those born in the United States 4,346.

* * *

SEVERAL hundred thousands of the refugees to be exiled from the Reich are only partly of Hebrew blood, and are Protestant or Roman Catholic in religion. In Canada, the number of persons of Jewish religion, as shown at last census, was 155,614, almost equal to the whole Hebrew population of 156,726. There were 238 Hebrew Roman Catholics, 205 Anglicans, 100 Presbyterians and 101 reporting no religion.

In respect of language spoken, the Hebrew group in Canada also seems to occupy a unique position. According to the census, Yiddish was the mother tongue of 149,179. Of 130,223 persons 10 years of age and over, 4,215 spoke only that language; 102,970 spoke the mother tongue and English; 20,426 spoke Yiddish, English and French; only 2,284 spoke English and no other tongue. Obviously, even those born and educated in this country continue to use Yiddish. But only 3.34 per cent of Hebrews in Canada, over 10 years of age at last census, were unable to speak English, and this ratio compared with 50.56 per cent for those of French racial origin; 17.72 per cent for Finns, 17.31 per cent for Hungarians, 14.28 for Czechoslovaks and 13.20 per cent for those of Russian origin.

There are relatively few German Jews in Canada, even allowing for immigration in recent years. It may be, as Dr. Silcox says, that refugees from the Reich would identify themselves as fully with our national destiny as they have done with Germany's. Whether or not their participation would be chiefly in vocations already highly competitive is something for the government to determine. It might be better to have them here, assisting at least to share our administrative overhead, than competing elsewhere without that contribution.

THE GAIN.

(Vancouver Province)

THE IMPORTANT THING is that there is a breathing space. For ourselves, we believe Europe and the British Empire may again face a supreme crisis. The danger is not all ended. But if another year or two years of preparation can make Britain so well prepared that nobody will dare to attack her—is not Mr. Chamberlain's "shameful peace" then fully justified?

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

EATING ON SUNDAY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Please allow me a little space in your splendid paper to express the views of an ordinary citizen on the Sunday closing of refreshment booths.

I am sure it should make no difference to the members of our council whether the young people of the city go into a hot-dog stand for a lunch on Sunday, and get enough to eat for 20c, or go to a restaurant and spend 40c to get a meal.

The main difference is of course, that the money spent at the booths remains in our town, providing a living for the owners.

Another angle I am afraid Aldermen Stocker and Dutton overlooked, is that if these people whose every penny is necessary to keep themselves in business fail, they would have to fire the help and all go on relief. So who pays anyway? Or have they forgotten that the higher the relief the higher their taxes? I wonder!

It wouldn't surprise me if Mr. Dutton's next move were to try to stop the peanut venders and gasoline stations from operating on Sunday, or does he figure the competition isn't keen enough?

It may be alright for these worthy aldermen, or perhaps I should say City Fathers, (aldermen might be a bit too ultra-modern for the gentlemen who so kindly voted themselves $5.00 a night to decide matters of such importance for us) to eat in restaurants, but I am sure they quite forget that after paying a week's board five dollars is the entire balance of a week's earnings for more than 60 per cent of the young people of Peterborough.

Then again it was wise to be tolerant, as I am sure that it would be more than a little embarrassing to let our summer tourists know that we are in the "Birdseye Centre" class.

I can just picture the howls of glee in the cities we visit when they learn that you can't buy a hamburger or a hot-dog in Peterborough, after midnight or at all on Sunday. We might even have hamburger bootleggers and smart lawyers to defend them.

It does seem a shame that our very modern newspaper and Businessmen's Association have spent so much money and energy to advertise how cosmopolitan our fair city is, only to have their efforts made to look so ridiculous.

Apparently Mr. Gordon's pet hobby is trying to close something in town, and it seems to me that the five dollars a night we pay these gentlemen would be better used if they spent their time trying to make employment for our people, not trying to force an honest man out of an honest living.

What do you think friends?

MRS. M. JOHNSTON.

OUR TAXATION MUDDLE

Editor Examiner:

Sir.—If the rising tide of rebellion against excessive taxation compels drastic reforms, much good will result. The problem of politics is to discover the laws which should regulate men in the matter of interference. When these laws are discovered political truth is discovered, and when put into practical operation, equity will regulate all social relations. These laws are as much within the reach of the human intellect as are the laws which should regulate the merchant in carrying on his commercial transactions. Correct knowledge is the only means whereby correct action can be performed.

In all this our present system is the direct antithesis. If we elect to continue it we must accept the fact that high taxation, relief and unemployment are not temporary accidents. They are varying but fixed charges of the system itself. These charges will inevitably become heavier with each succeeding year. The only possible cure is to abolish the system producing them.

• Canadian Germans Horrified

TO THE EDITOR: Statement issued by the executive committee of the German-Canadian People's Society (Kitchener Branch):

In common with all democratic Canadians, we are horrified at the bestiality rampant in Nazi Germany, the brunt of which is borne by innocent Jews and Catholics. Perhaps even more than other Canadians we feel ashamed and indignant for this latest blot on humanity. The fine traditions of Germany, which we revere second only to those of our Canadian homeland, have been dragged through the mire by the present rulers of Germany.

We are of the unshakable opinion that the crimes being committed in Germany are not the fault of the masses of German people. The German people as a whole are too cultured and civilized to participate in or even sympathize with torture of human beings because of race or religion. The masses of people in Germany are sufficiently intelligent to know that if Jews were persecuted yesterday and Catholics oppressed today, then no faith or opinion is safe tomorrow. The people of Germany are kept in ignorance of the officially-sponsored gangsterism rife in their land. If they but knew the whole story of the sadness throughout their land, they would never condone the present rulers of Germany.

We believe that the opinions herein expressed are shared by the German-Canadians at large. We are holding a public indignation meeting on this subject.

We warn that there are among the Canadian people, certain German Nazis who have not ceased their efforts to arouse sympathy for Adolf Hitler. The activities of these people are tantamount to espionage and sedition against the welfare of the German-Canadians and the Canadian people generally.

Our organization will not be dissuaded from nor intimidated in our efforts to help the German-Canadians more rapidly assimilate Canadian democratic traditions in which there is no room for racial or religious intolerance. We are confident that all German-Canadians, encouraged by their fellow Canadians will unite to chase the agents of the Nazi government from their midst.

GEORGE IMHOF,
Secretary.

SOVIET FRANKNESS.

(Brandon Sun)

RUSSIAN COMMUNISTS differ from ours. They do not hide nor camouflage their beliefs or intentions. The Sovietist over there is absolutely frank about what the administration is trying to do and the sort of national life they intend to build. The Moscow organ of the commissariat of education, the Teachers Gazette, complains of a revival of religious manifestation among children and says: "Teaching must be so conducted that by the end of his schooling the pupil has a clear understanding that, though religions differ in form, they all in essence lead to the same end, all are ideologies of slavery, all implacably contradict science and all are directed against the interests of toilers."

IN ALBERTA, TOO.

(Edmonton Journal)

OCTOBER, 1938, will go down in Alberta's weather history as a most unusual month. With only a few hours to go, it looks as though it will have the distinction of being a month with no snow. But stranger things than that must be recorded. New grass is sprouting. The Viking News tells of crocuses, the flower of Spring, blooming on October 20. Strawberries and raspberries were reported by Drumheller newspapers. The High River Times quotes Senator Dan Riley as insisting that he enjoyed just such autumns when he came to Alberta 55 years ago. "He has been hanging around ever since," says the Times, "to see if a repeat performance would be staged ever again."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

BEWARE lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power. In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ....

Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.

Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility and worshipping of angels, intruding into those things which he hath not seen, vainly puffed up by his fleshy mind, and not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.—Col. ii, 8-11, 16-19.

* * *

A God, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and thirsty land, where water is.—Ps. lxiii, 1.

A Bit of Nonsense

Might Be So.

A man was notorious for his lack of cleanliness. One evening he asked his neighbor if he could recommend a good cure for a cold.

"Yes," said the neighbor. "Buy some bran, and get a tub full of scalding water. Put in the bran, and mix it well. Then strip, get in, use a large piece of soap, and give yourself a good scrub."

"But," said the other, "that sounds like a prescription for washing."

"I admit," replied the neighbor, "that it is open to that objection."

FIRST THINGS FIRST

An executor's duties start with applying for probate: they continue through advertising for and paying debts, getting in the assets, realizing them, paying Succession Duties, setting up trusts, making distribution to the beneficiaries, up to the final passing of accounts before the Courts. It is a lengthy process, replete with formalities, full of traps for the inexperienced. ¶ When you entrust your estate to a private executor you entrust it to one who, in a great majority of cases, will act in this capacity for the first time, and who will necessarily find it difficult, having his own business and family, to give your affairs his best attention. ¶ By appointing the Toronto General Trusts your executor, you will be employing a Corporation whose business it has been for fifty-six years to administer estates. Its knowledge, gained from wide experience with every type of estate and estate problem, will be concentrated on the efficient fulfilment of your Will. We invite your inquiries.

Wife And Friend Suspected In "Gas" Death

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Nov. 23 (AP) — Renewed examinations moved Westchester County authorities last night to withdraw a tentative verdict of suicide and intensify investigation into the "automobile gas" death of Eugene Burckhalter, 47, in which his wife is accused of aiding.

Meanwhile, Melvin Kittel, 34, dapper salesman, and Mrs. Burckhalter's friend of long standing, was held in $2,000 bail as a material witness.

"This case is wide open," said Assistant District Attorney Elbert Gallagher, after the greying, 44-year-old widow, Marie, was formally charged with first-degree manslaughter and held in $10,000 bail. (Aiding a suicide constitutes manslaughter under New York law.)

Police Question Woman

Dr. Amos O. Squire, Westchester County medical examiner, said that the case was carried on his record as "death by carbon monoxide poisoning," and that any reference to suicide would be left to the filing of a supplementary death certificate.

Cremation of the body, which Gallagher said was ordered by the widow to be done "as quickly as possible and without publicity," after the body was found in the Burckhalter garage last Saturday, was delayed while vital organs were taken for analysis.

Dr. Squire said they showed about 39 per cent carbon monoxide in the blood and some alcohol; indications of "intemperance" because of an oversize liver; various other serious ailments, and the presence of a hypnotic drug that induces sleep.

Mrs. Burckhalter was subjected to prolonged questioning and Gallagher expressed doubt as to some of the details she told of helping her husband rig up a vacuum cleaner hose to the exhaust of a car in their garage to make a lethal chamber of the interior, where he was found dead.

Gallagher said local police were in possession of a glass from which she told him she served Burckhalter an eggnog just before he fumblingly pushed the starter of the car to start the flow of exhaust gas.

Gallagher questioned Kittel concerning his presence in the Burckhalter's suburban New York home four hours before police were summoned to find the body.

"I am going to help her all I can," Kittel told Gallagher.

Woman Loses Aplomb.

Mrs. Burckhalter's icy, wise-cracking calm—the lack of emotion that first aroused Prosecutor Gallagher's suspicions—broke late yesterday, when she was held in $10,000 bail on a formal charge of first degree manslaughter.

Gallagher said the slight, spectacled housewife admitted she "thought up" the method of death and helped her husband locate the starter button in the darkened garage when he faltered.

Shaking so violently she had to clutch a rail for support, Mrs. Burckhalter, who was named sole beneficiary in her husband's $10,000 life insurance policy, was ordered to the county jail at Eastview, pending arraignment next Tuesday.

She remained silent and trembling while her attorney, B. R. Burdick, argued she could not raise $500 in cash toward her bail.

Later, she was taken to Gallagher's office for further questioning in the presence of Matthew Maher, an undertaker. Gallagher said Maher told him Mrs. Burckhalter ordered her husband's body cremated "as quickly as possible." It was done yesterday after the vital organs were sent to a laboratory for analysis.

London-B.C. Flight For King's Visit?

VANCOUVER, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Vancouver may become the end of a non- stop flight of 6,400 miles during the visit here next year of King George and Queen Elizabeth if an invitation to be issued by Mayor G. C. Miller on behalf of the city is favorably received by the British Air Ministry.

Harbors, Utilities and Airport committee decided yesterday on motion of Ald. J. W. Cornett to empower Mayor Miller to suggest the visit of their Majesties be commemorated by a non-stop flight of Royal Air Force fighting craft from London to Vancouver.

The matter came up for discussion following receipt of a letter from William Templeton, civic airport manager, suggesting the flight would focus attention upon Vancouver and at the same time make it plain Great Britain could swiftly spread wings of defence over the Pacific coast if need arose.

BONARLAW

Parking Space Is Levelled By Men

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, Nov. 23. — A number of men of St. Mark's Church congregation held a bee and levelled the ground immediately south of the church, making that area a splendid parking ground for autos.

On Saturday last the Routly Construction Company's large shovel, which has been parked here for some days undergoing repairs, again went into action and removed the stone fence along the west side of Highway No. 14 between Byron Heath's and the store of Bell & Barlow. Three trucks carried the huge boulders to the quarry near Harold, and dumped them there as fast as workmen fastened chains around them, and the powerful crane lifted them from their long resting-place. The work took little over half a day to complete.

Blaze Of Color Winds Up Royal Tonight

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—(CP).—The 17th annual Royal Winter Fair — larger than ever before—closes tonight in a blaze of color and with much ceremony after eight days in which championship awards have been distributed throughout Canada and the United States.

The curtain will ring down in the main coliseum ring following the horse show while brilliantly-uniformed trumpeter sound "lights out" and a huge Union Jack unfurls before a gathering of six International military equestrian teams, military bands and horse-drawn floats.

Preparations were under way today to move the 7,000 head of livestock and 8,000 birds, and dogs, cats, agriculture and other exhibits that made up the Exposition.

A feature of to-day's program will be a parade of all grand champions and first-prize winners in heavy horses. Approximately 350 of the finest work horses in Canada will take part.

Cattle and horse judging finished yesterday and an auction sale of market cattle goes on to-day. Finals of the Canadian horseshoe pitching championship and the International dog show take place to-night.

For the fourth time since its inauguration 13 years ago, a team from Eire won the International officers' challenge trophy from five other International military teams at last night's horse show. The United States' team was second and the Chilean army team third.

The Ferguson Trophy

Leader of the Eire team, Captain Dan Corry received the trophy from its donor, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Ontario premier. The Eire team won similar honors at the New York Horse Show.

Showing the way to victory in the event was Gallant Blarney Castle, one-eyed veteran jumper, with Lieut. J. Stack up. Blarney Castle, an aged gelding, made no faults over the treacherous course.

F. G. Todd and son, Lucknow, Ont., showed the reserve grand and junior champion in Aberdeen-Angus female cattle. Junior female title in dual purpose shorthorns went to D. Gibson and son, Caledonia.

Wellington and Waterloo county exhibitors gained many prizes in poultry competitions. Among the winners were C. A. Tilt, Doon, Ont.; Leslie Ridler, Guelph, and Russel Klein, Guelph.

Western Ontario exhibitors scored wins in turkey, geese and duck competitions. Winners included George Douglass, Mitchell; Mrs. C. Horsfall, Galt; M. Shantz, Ayr; Mrs. George Coursey, Lucan, and Mrs. George Timmins, St. Marys.

"Looking Back" On This Date

Those who have read the various references in this column to the zealous efforts of John Young of Montreal, to counteract the effects of the annexation manifesto of October, 1849, will be amused to be told that 20 years later the same John Young was accused by no less a person than Hugh Allan (afterwards Sir Hugh) of being an annexationist, simply because he was endeavoring to secure a renewal of the reciprocity treaty.

Writing Nov. 23, 1869, Allan told Sir John Macdonald: "I think it is well you should know that John Young is in New York distributing broadcast printed copies in pamphlet form of his and Huntington's (M. P. for Shefford) speeches, with other documents, and is assuring people there that a large portion, if not a majority, of the people of Canada are for independence and annexation. He is to go to Boston where people believe that he is a very influential man in Canada.... They believe in him and I think we will not get reciprocity at present."

Allan was right in the latter sentence, but he was wrong in his attack on John Young who, as an advocate of freer trade with the United States, had to suffer the same treatment as Blake, Charlton, Cartwright, Davis and others of a later generation for the same reason that they too wanted better trade. Indeed the elections of 1887 and 1891 were run by the Conservatives upon the argument that the liberals were disloyal, just as the same campaign was waged against Laurier and Fielding in 1911. Sir John Macdonald's "A British subject I was born; a British subject I will die," with its flag-waving, had its sequence in the campaign of 1911. But few people think that any revival of the annexation taunt or flag-waving would sweep Canada now, if we were to have a campaign upon the trade issue.

High costs are slowing down the Mukden, Manchukuo, building boom.

ROMANCE INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

Read This Frist:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, with the aid of her mother-m-law, rents a cottage near the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, in preparation for the launching of a unique business venture. Bob Towne, football end and campus hero, and some of the other students, are arrested by the new sign in front of the Davis cottage announcing a "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Sara Sue explains her Cottage Plan to a group of students and finds them greatly interested. Bob Towne even asks HER for a date. Against her better judgment, Sara Sue goes dancing with Senior Towne. She enjoys the evening, but as he leaves her he kisses her impetuously. When an insignificant-looking freshman, Worthington Gurley, enrolls in her club, Sara Sue is amused and interested. That evening a girl in a car stops in front of her house and insults the pretty widow. The caller proves to be Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who has been accepted as Bob Towne's girl the previous college year. After 99 students had joined her Plan, Sara Sue routed from her bath one night to find another caller on her door-step in the pouring rain.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 7

SHE CLOSED and locked her dask then, and undressed for her bath. The storm would break soon, she knew, and there would be parties to arrange, groups to chaperone, all manner of duties. She must get her rest, never neglect health.

Now it was good to be quite and alone for the remainder of the night.

She was just stepping one foot tentatively into her tub of hot bath water when her front door chimes rang.

"Oh, goodness!" she muttered.

She thought to ignore it. But the chimes sounded again, and then again. Some insistent student; a thoughtless freshman, likely.

She threw a pretty blue-and-lace negligee around herself—a heay silken thing—stepped into mules with pom poms on them, and went down stairs.

First, though, she turned on th porch light, and peeped through her tiny door glass. It revealed a man's legts, definitely bowed, protruding from under a green umbrella.

When Sara Sue Davis slipped on her negligee at 11 p.m. to answer her front door bell, she had no intention of admitting anyone. She imagined it might be an emergency call. Possibly a telegram Or — or — anything. She peeped through her tiny window to see the bow-legged man standing in the rain. Then she unlatched the door and opened it a crack.

"The cottage is closed for the night," she told him.

"Oh, please—"

She did not know him. But he held out his hand in supplication.

He was well dressed. He was youngish, but the horn-rimmed glasses he wore made him appear older; they and his strained expression. He seemed to be in some sort of trouble. He spoke haltingly at first. Almost a whisper.

"Please, I beg of you—I must see you! You are Mrs. Davis?"

Sara Sue had a normal curiosity. This obviously was no student.

"Yes, I am Mrs. Davis?"

"Mrs.—ah—Sara Sue Davis? Ah —Incorporated?"

"Incorporated," noddod Sara Sue. It was interesting her more and more.

"I realize it is quite late, but please do not take umbrage, I am Dr. Holgate."

"Oh yes, Dr. Holgate."

He looked it. One of the new professors. That classified him, all right. Sara Sue smiled a trifle.

"I—ah, I must—I came to avail myself of your confidential services, madam. You have no idea how urgent—"

"Oh, but Dr. Holgate, it is late. The cottage is closed for the night. In fact, I was just retiring when you rang. And besides—"

"Oh, please! I beg of you!"

"—besides, my memberships are for students and are all taken and—"

"Oh, my dear Mrs. Davis! All? Am I, then, too late?"

Sara Sue studied the man closely. Was this some sort of gag? Was Bob Towne behind this? She opened the door an inch wider to inspect him.

He could be nothing but sincere. She restrained an urge to laugh at him, for he did look comical there in the rain. All at once it dawned on her that she was being rather ungracious, inhospitable. The rain and wind were cold.

"Please step in for a moment, anyway," she replied. "No, not quite all my memberships are taken. But Dr. Holgate, I had no idea that any of the faculty would be interested. I mean—"

"It is most irregular, madam. I can readily understand your astonishment. But—when one is in dire need, one searches for any panacea. And I—I—"

"Yes?"

"Frankly, Mrs. Davis, I am a somewhat lonely man. That is I am not wholly gregarious. But I have—I have—well, I am in need of such counsel as you advertise."

If the man had not been so intent, so obviously straining for his confession, Sara Sue should surely have laughed out loud at him. But Sara Sue had been reared a lady.

"If you mean that you wish to meet some friendly, companionable people, Mr. Holgate, I am sure that is just splendid. And I should be glad to introduce—"

"Oh, no! No, no! Or maybe, yes. But immediately, madam, the need is much more urgent. The fact is, Mrs. Davis, I wish guidance in romance. I am—ha ha, myself in love!"

The sigh of relief was so comical, the confession so obviously an embarrassment, that Sara Sue did laugh at him then. But she promptly apologized.

"Please come in, Dr. Holgate! I should not have kept you standing here in the entrance way. But you realize it really is rather late, and I was hardly expecting such a call!"

"To be sure. Thank you, indeed."

She left him then, and went to her kitchen. She had a hunch that Cleopatra and Calculus might have left some hot coffee, and in that she was right. Dr. Holgate, chilled by the storm, accepted his cup gratefully. He advised Mrs. Davis from a somewhat pompous height, which did not frighten Sara Sue, that she was a most gracious hostess. She smiled her thanks.

Any man will expand spiritually when his stomach is warmed. Sara Sue Davis is just one of a billion or so observing girls who know it. A cup of coffee and a dish of cookies have worked many a miracle since time began.

Dr. Holgate welcomed the food as something for his nervous hands to attend to while he tried to approach the details of his call.

"So you are in love, Dr. Holgate," Sara Sue resumed presently. "I think that is wonderful, sir! May I congratulate you. And I am honored that you think I may help."

"Then I may join your—your Plan?"

He paused, cup in mid-air, for her answer.

"Well—" she hadn't meant exactly that.

"Please—I will pay anything. My fee. I have quite a good salary, my dear Mrs. Davis. I could pay double, or triple, or—"

She laughed again.

After all, why not, she asked herself. She was serving Rice. She had expected to chaperone and guide the students only, but if a faculty man really needed and wanted her help, couldn't he be accepted, too? Also, she thought, cannily, faculty approval should not harm her in a business way; the faculty controls a school.

"I see no reason why not, Dr. Holgate. But the fee will be just the same. Three dollars a month, in advance. Remember that I promise little. I do promise to give members private advice if they ask it, but I do not operate a matrimonial bureau or anything of the sort. In fact, I hadn't expected—"

"No I daresay not, Mrs. Davis. But as I indicated, I am a lonely man. I have several degrees. A doctorate. I am well schooled. I have had no time for love, nor thought of it. But now—it has come! May I speak quite frankly?"

"Please do. It shall be in strict confidence."

"Oh! Yes. Yes, by all means. Well, then I was asked to an entertainment, a reception or something. It seemed advisable to go—this is my first faculty position anywhere, you realize—and she was there! She paid quite deliberate attention to me!"

He turned towards Sara Sue in his enthusiasm. She nodded.

"She was tastefully attired. She wore—I am told you ladies are interested in such things—she wore a black, ah—" He paused to swallow, and think.

"I know," Sara Sue said, quitely. "Black. With a touch of gold."

"Yes! You know her?"

"No, sir, but it's a good guess, always," she smiled again.

"Oh! Doubtless. And she was quite interested—"

"In you and your work," supplied Sara Sue.

"Yes! My dear madam, you are a woman of remarkable acumen!"

"Please proceed, Dr. Holgate."

"There is no more. Except that—that—well, frankly I am deeply smitten of her. I have experienced no such sensations since my youth. I am now well along toward 30, I fear. And I am convinced that human destiny includes pairing. In short, marriage, Mrs. Davis. Of course I dared not speak to her of this. I am not of her station. I mean to say, she moves in quite a different sphere, I dare say. She was so utterly at ease. So beautiful. So charming. But. Mrs. Davis —I must impress her somehow! I must!"

Sara Sue could tell that he was desperately in earnest, and she felt a quick surge of sympathy. She herself had known poignant love. She understood.

"I promise to help you in every way I can, Dr. Holgate," she assured him, quietly, earnestly. "Love is—is the grandest thing in the world!"

"Yes! Oh, yes. And thank you!"

"Don't you think," suggested Sara Sue quietly, her curiosity mounting along with her interest, "that it is about time to mention her name?"

"By all means," agreed Professor Holgate. "In strict confidence, of course. I place myself utterly in your hands. Her name is Miss Pomeroy, Miss Geraldine Pomeroy, nicknamed, I believe, Peaches."

For Thursday, November 24.

The affairs of this day are under very propitious planetary influences. They should prosper and bring much happiness if they are restricted to the pursuits and avocations of a strictly holiday occasion. These are encouraged by tokens of a high degree of merriment and social festivity, but there is a menace of strange, irregular and unconventional adventures. Shun all crafty, suspicious and intriguing persons and proposals.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year in which discretion, high principle, sound sense and vigilance may turn the balance to worthy accomplishments. But beware of plots, shun loans and financial irregularities, and keep the mentality clear of sinister influences and personal eccentricities.

A child born on this day may have a rather contradictory makeup, with a fine nature and much versatility. But it may have certain mental slants that might be lured into sinister, suspicious, or questionable activities or subtle dangers.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Hanid, the two shadow-children, were talking to their good friend, Mr. Punch, who lived in the playroom. It was late at night, but Mr. Punch was sitting up telling the two shadows about his travels.

"Now take Holland, for instance," he went on. "There's a lovely country if ever there was one. Do you know what Holland is famous for?"

"Wooden shoes." Knarf answered quickly, just to show how clever he was.

Mr. Punch smiled. "Both of you are right. But the real reason Holland is famous is because of the ocean."

"The ocean! What do you mean, Mr. Punch?"

Higher in Holland.

"Well," he said, "in every other country that I can think of, and I may be wrong," he added with a twinkle, "the ocean is always lower than the land. But in Holland it's higher than the land. Yes, my dears, it's a good deal higher."

"You mean it's on top of the land?" Hanid exclaimed.

"It would be if the people who live in Holland, the Dutch, weren't so clever. They've kept it from coming on top of the land."

"What did they do? Tell us, please!" both shadows begged.

"I'm coming to that. Now the Dutch, as I said before, are a very clever folk. This is what they did: They built walls to keep the water out—enormous, strong, high walls, higher than the water. And those walls are dikes."

"Dikes?"

Mr. Punch nodded. "If it weren't for them, Holland would be under water and all the Dutchmen would be fish. There wouldn't be any wooden shoes, for they'd all float off. And the tulips would have so much water they'd melt."

We're Smart, Too.

The two shadows weer silent for a while. Finally Knarf said: "The Dutch aren't the only smart people. We're pretty smart, too."

"H'mm. What do you mean?"

"Well, we often have the water over our heads, too—lots of water. But we don't bother about building walls. We just open up an umbrella."

Mr. Punch laughed heartily. "It's not quite the same thing," he said, still laughing, "but I see what you mean. Yes, indeed! I see what you mean."

Air Crash Victim Body Lost In Train Fire

VANCOUVER, Nov. 23—(CP).—A westbound Canadian National Railways train was derailed in the Fraser Canyon to-day and the body of Jack Herald, Trans-Canada Air Lines pilot killed in a plane crash near Regina, was consumed in the flames that destroyed an express car.

Herald, whose body was being brought to Vancouver for burial, died in the plane crash early last Friday with Captain David Imrie, 29. Their plane broke into flames shortly after its takeoff, and plunged to earth a mile or so west of Regina.

At about 6.30 a.m. the train crashed into a rock slide near Hope, B.C., 80 miles east of here in the Fraser Canyon.

Railway officials said they could not account for the flames. They said it was "assumed" a stove in the car probably was responsible.

Best Family Pioneer Presbyterians

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Nov. 23.—St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church which celebrated its 103rd anniversary on Sunday has had a very notable history. The special preacher on Sunday, was the Rev. J. B. Rhodes, M.A., of St. Andrew's church, Cobourg, who delivered two very forceful and inspiring sermons.

The guest soloist was Miss Helen Pellow, also of Cobourg, who sang as her solos, "Open the Gates of the Temple," and "No Night There." In the evening the United church withdrew their service and the Rev. Mr. McTavish and his congregation joined with St. Andrew's.

Congregation's History

Presbyterian services were conducted about 1830 when the Rev. James Douglas from the Presbytery of New York conducted religious services in the homes. Among the first Presbyterians were Mr. David Best, Sr., and his nephew Mr. David Best, who had come out from Ireland and settled in Mt. Pleasant.

In 1835 Mr. Wm. Thornton whose farm was 2 miles west of Omemee gave a site for the erection of the first Presbyterian building in this district. This building was also used for school purposes during the week.

For a time the little flock was without a sttled pastor until 1842 when James Dick, a licentiate from Edinburgh, was ordained and inducted into this charge. He preached every Sunday at Mount Pleasant and every second Sunday at Lee's Corner's and every other Sunday at the log church on the Thornton farm. He was succeeded by the Rev. John Ewing, who was called here in 1849.

This pastoral charge was the only one in which Mr. Ewing ministered from 1849 to 1893. During his long ministry, two new church buildings were erected.

The first of these buildings was dedicated for worship in the fall of 1859. A grant of land was secured from the Midland R R. This site was in the village and therefore considered more central than the log church.

Built New Church

Some thirty years later as this church building needed considerable repairs, it was decided to build a new church on a new site and the present location was chosen and dedicated to the worship of God in 1889. It may be of interest to know that the new roof that was put on the church this fall, was replacing the shingles that had been on the roof when it was first built in 1889.

The Rev. Mr. Ewing gave a splendid contribution to the religious and moral life of this community, during his ministry found young men were called to the ministry.

The Rev. Mr. Ewing was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Tanner who labored here for six years.

In 1899 Dr. Kannawin, a recent graduate of Queen's Theological College, was called to this charge. It was during his pastorate that the present manse was bought and remodelled. Previously, the minister lived at Mount Pleasant. At this time, too, the balance of the debt was paid amounting to $400.

In 1910, during the ministry of the Rev. Donald Currie, the 75th anniversary was observed and a special historical statement was printed and it was from this historical sketch that the above information was secured.

In 1935, the 100th anniversary of this congregation was fittingly observed with the Rev. S. M. Scott, now of Kincardine, preaching the anniversary services. Mr. Scott had served this field as student minister some years previously.

Indian Sees Nazis Stirring Trouble

MONTREAL, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Chief Delisle of the Chaughnawaga Indian reservation, near here, said yesterday German propaganda was endeavoring to stir up trouble among the Indians, as he answered charges in the German press that "real atrocities" were taking place on Canadian Indian reservations.

He said there was an attempt to stir up trouble among United States Indians, adding "as far as I know they have not attempted anything in Canada as yet."

He said the Nazis had taken as their emblem the Swastika which had been part of Indian lore for many generations, but "that's all they are going to get."

Chief Delisle also announced provincial assessors and Indian representatives had reached an agreement over a discussion about the provincial meal tax levy in restaurants. He said it was agreed Indians were not liable for the tax when on their reservation.

Delay Jail Wedding

CAYUGA, Ont., Nov. 23—(CP)—Postponment was ordered last night in the planned jail wedding of Joseph Taylor, convicted shopbreaker, and Anne Brown, 23, Toronto. The marriage was planned for today and the license was obtained yesterday—but the young couple learned from officials that three days must elapse before the marriage. J. B. Smith, Cayuga jailer, said the wedding might take place Thursday or Friday. Taylor has yet to be sentenced for participation in the breaking and entering of Caledonia Creamery a few days ago.

As Camera Saw Premier King At Washington

The candid camera caught Prime Minister Mackenzie King in four characteristic closeups as he arrived at the Union Station, Washington, en route to the White House for the opening of the United States-Canadian trade treaty. Jovial in three of these pictures, the fourth gives us a somewhat intense and glowering Prime Minister.

Study New "Cure" For Spanish War

PARIS, Nov. 23—(AP).—Quarters close to the government reported to-day that a plan for settlement of the Spanish civil war would be studied by Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain during the talks which begin tomorrow.

The plan was said to have been drawn up already in a rough outline through diplomatic exchanges. It was understood the proposal would be submitted to Germany and Italy for their approval as soon as International tension has sufficiently eased.

Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet conferred yesterday with Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, Spanish foreign minister, and was said to have received the Spanish government's views regarding the plan.

Bonnet was hoped to have his projected German-French friendship declaration ready in time for Mr. Chamberlain's visit, but it was said to be delayed by German demands.

These were understood to include that the trial of Herschel Grynszpan, young Jew who shot Ernst Vom Rath, German Legation secretary, be held in secret and that France adopt measures to stop press criticism of Chancellor Hitler.

Decrees to meet these demands have been prepared by the Cabinet and even announced publicly, but Justice Minister Paul Marchandeau has refused to sign them.

Order New Pleading In McIntosh Case

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP).—Mr. Justice Middleton to-day set aside the order of claim by Angus McIntosh, former Montreal importer, and ordered that new pleading be submitted in McIntosh's $1,500,000 damage action against the Homewood sanitarium of Guelph, Ont., and Dr. Harvey Clarke, Homewood superintendent.

The Judge sat in Chambers to hear an appeal by McIntosh's counsel against an order b ythe Assistant Master of the Supreme Court, striking out certain clauses in the statement of claim.

Mr. Justice Middleton said he disliked "patched-up" statements of claim in ordering the submission of new pleadings.

After going 150 yards down the road, they stopped, got out, leaped the fence and disappeared into the bush. Coles summoned other officers and district farmers and the posse swarmed over the swampy bush country known as "Skunk's Misery"—where the hermit Orval Shaw hid from police several years ago when he was sought for a long list of thefts.

Steal Another Machine.

Somehow the youths evaded the searchers, crossed the highway and headed north to Bothwell. There they allegedly stole a car belonging to Fred Beamish, the machine in which Besant crashed into the hotel.

They were reported to have headed for Dresden, 14 miles north of Chatham, and the missing youth is believed to have been dropped off in that district. Besant evaded the net that spread over Western Ontario, until about 9.20 p.m., Traffic Officers Floyd Haight and Witts saw a car on No. 3 highway at Talbotville answering to the description of the one missing at Bothwell.

They were chatting with Inspector J. W. Rogerson, of the Public Commercial Vehicles Branch of the Ontario Highways Department. Rogerson offered to take the officers in his car in pursuit of the other machine, as it swung to No. 4 highway.

Witts said the driver of the stolen car saw him as it went around the corner and sped away.

"We were going 80 miles an hour all the way to Lambeth and sometimes 85," the officer said. "The car ahead swung to the centre of the road, and, when we got up to pass, crowded so we would have been ditched had we gone by."

Warning shots were fired, then Witts aimed four directly at the car and Haight fired three just before the 12 mile chase ended. At Lambeth, the stolen car was 50 yards ahead of Rogerson's.

The centre pillar of the hotel's big main window was hurled 15 feet into the room. Occupants of the building said it shook on its foundations. The brick wall beside the window shifted back a foot. Masonry fell into the dining room.

Police doubt that the name of the missing youth is Jones, the name he gave to Coles when apprehended near Wardsville. He is described as of fair complexion, about five feet nine inches tall, wearing blue overall trousers, a blue shirt, dark windbreaker and light Fedora hat. He is about 20.

Roosevelt Jewish Says Rome Press

ROME, Nov. 23—(CP-Havas). — The newspaper Tribuna last night charged President Roosevelt was of Jewish origin, and his humanitarianism in reality masked a campaign to frighten the Latin American countries into buying United States' munitions.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative editorial spokesman, said Great Britain, the United States, France, the British dominions, the Netherlands and Switzerland had all taken steps to close the doors to Jewish refugees.

Writing in the Giornale D'Italia, Gayda asked why none of these countries was willing to give sanctuary to the emigres, "to whom they make a pretense of devoting so much verbal pity and so much civic charity."

The Tribuna attacked Roosevelt personally as of Semitic blood and accusing him of "dollar diplomacy" masquerading behind the guise of altruism.

Negligence Charged

BRANTFORD, Oct., Nov. 23 (CP). —George Manson, who was dismantling a flywheel at the Hawley Products, Limited, plant November 12, when John Todd suffered fatal injuries, today was charged with causing grievous bodily injury. Manson is alleged to have been negligent in his task of directing the three men at work on the dismantling project.

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP). — Health officials to-day re-opened a school at nearby Harmony after it had been closed because of a suspected case of meningitis.

Meanwhile, the condition of 11-year-old Lois Melly, suffering since Thursday with a severe case of the disease, remained critical.

14 Waterworks Inspectors Are Suspended

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—Found guilty of eating their breakfast during business hours, fourteen City Hall employees yesterday were suspended without salary until the end of the month. All were inspectors employed in the waterworks branch of the City Treasury Department.

Mayor Ralph C. Day announced that the Board of Control would today conduct a thorough investigation into the apparently loose departmental management. Disciplinary action would also be taken against any official found responsible for such laxity in the civic service, he warned.

Ex-Employee Tells.

And the fourteen inspectors would be fired, His Worship added, if the Board of Control found that such laxity were possible due to the retention of too many employees in this branch of the municipal administration.

"The information which led to the suspension of these civic employees came from an ex-employee of the waterworks department who had been fired for just cause," Mayor Day explained. "A check was made and his charges were found to be true. It was thus discovered that the fourteen inspectors reported at the City Hall early in the morning and then, instead of going out to do their work, had been spending considerable time eating their breakfasts when they were supposed to be on the job."

May Lose Jobs.

If it were found that a considerable amount of time had been lost through such breakfast - eating habits, His Worship continued, it would indicate that there were now too many civic employees in the City Hall waterworks branch. The board would investigate this angle, he added, and would make any adjustments deemed desirable.

Asked if such a statement meant that the 14 inspectors would be fired, Mayor Day replied: "Certainly. If we find we don't need them, then these men will be let out altogether." His Worship then recalled that last year, on the complaint of a citizen, an employee in another City Hall department had been fired for not putting in full time on the job.

"The citizens may feel sure that the board will not tolerate such laxity," he declared. "If the public make any further complaints of this nature against any civic employee, male or female, a thorough investigation will immediately follow and every employee found guilty will be strictly dealt with by the board."

Moral Rearming.

Mr. Hoover appealed for "moral rearmament; something far more than inhibitions, prohibitions and laws" as a means of world peace. He said the world is waiting for some spiritual or ethical control of material powers "and it cannot wait for long."

Surveying the world scene, he noted in Germany "the most hideous persecution of the Jews since the expulsion from Spain in the middle ages." In Russia, "under Communist control we see continued execution of political opponents by the thousands." Moral standards of 160,000,000 people had been swept away.

In Japan a military autocracy pushed a war of aggression against China "as horrible as that of Genghis Khan." The lives of millions of innocent people were being sacrificed for imperialistic and trade purposes.

Von Rath Given Hero's Burial

The body of Nazi Germany's newest martyr, Ernest von Rath, was carried on a flag-draped gun carriage as it passed through the streets of Dusseldorf, while crowds lined the streets to pay homage to Germany's latest hero. The assassination of Von Rath by a Jewish youth in Paris was the spark that set off the latest anti-Jewish demonstration which shocked the world.

Red Cross Aids Settlers Start Again In North

Burnt out settlers in the Rainy River district who on Thanksgiving Day, October 10 found themselves in the midst of the greatest fire in that district, are being rapidly rehabilitated according to N. R. Vinton, Field Secretary of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society, who is in Peterborough to-day. Mr. Vinton has just returned from Fort Frances headquarters for the rehabilitation scheme and is most enthusiastic in his reports on the situation.

"Red Cross has to build about 60 cabin homes for these good people," states Mr. Vinton, "and there will be about 40 barns." Mr. Vinton also stated that large quantities of feed for stock was burned so the Red Cross will also be buying feed for animals this winter and until the stock are able to go out and graze. About 300 people were rendered homeless according to Mr. Vinton, but by this week end it is expected all these settlers will be housed in new houses. Complete furnishings have been supplied by the Red Cross for these homes and while no luxuries are being provided all the essentials for decent living will be included.

It is pointed out by Mrs. R. H. Turner, president of the Peterborough Red Cross, that no special appeal for the fire sufferers in Rainy River has been made to the residents of this city. Mrs. Turner does, however, express the hope that all those who can afford to do so will be extra generous this year in the Red Cross appeal about to be launched, in order that the branch may make some contribution toward the rehabilitation work among these Northern Ontario fire sufferers. "We ask each and every giver to add a little more to their regular subscription to help these fellow Canadians of ours who have lost all they possessed, states Mrs. Turner, and I am confident the call will not fall on deaf ears. The campaign for $2,500 opens on Monday next.

Peacetime Army?

LONDON, Nov. 23—(CP-Havas)—The British government has good reason to believe the German army is now on a peacetime footing and that all reservists called up last August and September have been demobilized, Richard Butler, undersercetary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons today in reply to a question.

He refused to specify the source of his information, but drew laughter from the opposition benches when he said "the government's information is always reliable."

Foreign Subjects Barred Relief In Guelph's Order

Guelph, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP).

A RULING of the relief committee to the effect that only British subjects, by birth or naturalized, could receive relief was revealed at a city council meeting here last night. The committee it was stated, made the regulation at its last meeting. Alderman Harry Mahoney said the relief committee had no power to bring in such a ruling, and said that a report should be laid before council to be acted on.

ROME, Nov. 23—(AP). — Frank Smothers, Rome correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, was ordered to leave Italy today because of the "unfriendly" tone of his dispatches. Kingston Judge Dies

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 23—(CP). —Judge Harry Anson Lavell, 71, Judge of the County Court, died early to-day. He had been in hospital for the past few days, having undergone an operation, but his condition had not been considered as critical.

Judge Lavell was born in Kingston in 1867 and was educated at Queen's University, where he graduated in 1888. He read law with Britton & Whiting in Kingston, and was a solicitor in Vancouver in 1893.

Ontario, Quebec Together On Fish, Game

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP).—Close co-operation between Quebec and Ontario governments on fish and game matters was decided upon today at a joint meeting between Fish and Game Associations of the two provinces in the Ottawa district and officials of both governments.

The conference, attended by Charles Fremont, superintendent of Game and Fisheries Branch of the Quebec Department of Mines and Fisheries, and D. J. Taylor, Ontario Deputy Minister of Fish and Game, developed into a general discussion of Conservation of fish and game in the district.

Both governmental delegates promised the further interprovincial cooperation as far as possible. It was important, it was pointed out, that uniform legislation respecting fish and game be adopted by the two provinces, and that, as far as possible, open seasons on certain classes of games in contiguous parts of Quebec and Ontario should coincide.

Speakers urged the two governments should maintain a joint patrol of the Ottawa River to provide adequate protection for fish fry and fingerlings used to re-stock the river.

The value of fishing and hunting as a tourist attraction was stressed. Fish and game must be carefully conserved, it was argued, to maintain good fishing and hunting, and money so spent would make excellent returns in tourist trade.

Granted $5000 a Month

WINDSOR.—Mrs. Laurine MacDonald Dodge said today she did not know where she would make her permanent home. Michigan courts yesterday approved an agreement giving her $5,000 a month from the estate of Daniel Dodge, who was drowned 13 days after their marriage.

No Federal Grant

GUELPH.—Relief Officer Norris Ryde said today if Guelph civic officials refused to grant relief to unnaturalized aliens, the city would immediately cease to get Federal assistance for its relief expenditures. "No municipality is allowed to refuse relief to aliens. None have been cut off the lists and none will be," he said.

Bed Of Balsam Declined By Reporter

"And you can sleep on a bed of balsam boughs," he said by way of gilding his invitation to visit the county's reforestation project and property beyond the Dummer boundary of Methuen, where the crows fly backwards.

At that time, the weather was fine and the Feeleys and the Hurtubises were Tarzaning in the wilderness, and the air had a tang of heman zip to it, and it seemed that only all the sissies weren't out in the woods chasing harmless fawns and bucks and bears, and so the answer to Reeve W. A. Anderson's bid was in the affirmative.

The Reeve of Otonabee is one of the municipal servants who are properly described in the rough phrase as "a bear for punishment." Late in the year you might find him with a sheaf of tax bills in his pocket, extra specials that require, perhaps, a little pep talk; and when he had the routine work of his own township to look after he also took on the woes of Chandos, Reeve Wellington Caldwell's northeastern corner of the county that is reported to be back on sild ground again, or thereabouts.

Determining Boundaries.

Of late he has been trying to put the spotlight on to the county's 3,000 acres for reforestration, for the purpose of determining its boundaries, and eventually letting trespassers know that the county knows they are trespassing. And so, it was arranged by the committee of which Reeve Anderson is chairman, to have John Pierce go into Methuen and identify the property that is being purchased from the province. All that has been got under way, and Mr. Anderson has made several trips over the impossible tag ends of roads on the far border of Dummer. Because days are shortening and motoring is a painful snail's pace, it seemed that this week's trip was likely to extend overnight; for when you got away over in the nepheline country you'd have to search the bush to flush up John Pierce and his rod and chain men, and at the end of the day you could bunk down on balsam boughs.

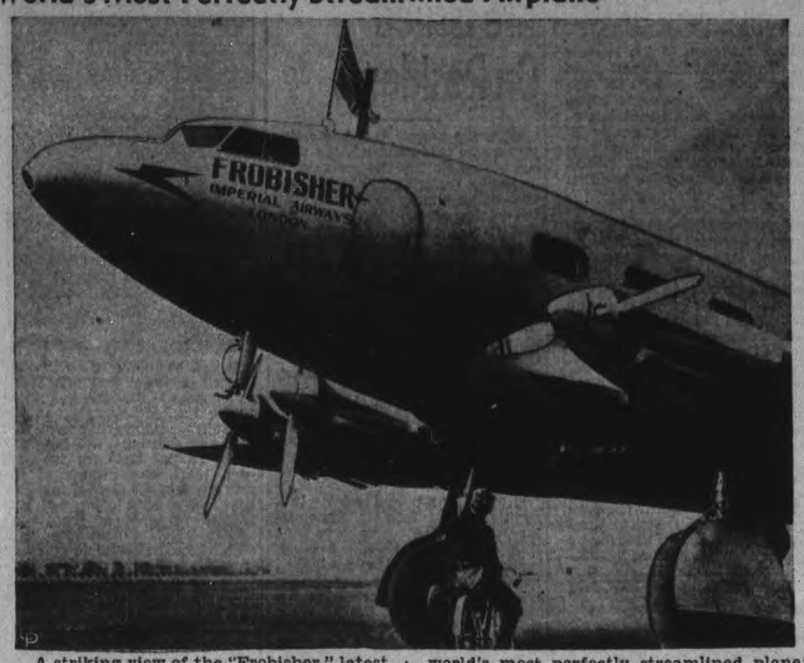
And if bears and bucks were just a lot of pushovers, you might get a first-hand story right from within the ringside to add another heroic chapter to the season's bulky volume of homeric deeds. Then, after all was set for this Anderson expedition the news came from Sudbury that winter was raging and rampaging along the northern frontier, and would likely blow in here before the week was out.

That information called for reconsideration of that he-man decision made in the face of Orion, and so it came about that ultimately and reluctantly a reporter abandoned that balsam bed in the Belmont bush, or wherever it is, and to-day's dip in temperature may chill off Reeve Anderson's intention of getting a last once over of the reforestation acreage on which he is likely to make a report to the county council next week.

If one had those elongated knee boots, breeches, lamb-lined coats, five or six of those big red, white and blue blankets, and then one of those red wool coats to turn aside the blasts, that may or may not come, this jaunt into the woodlands of East Peterborough might possibly be a safe undertaking for one night, but what if Anderson got stalled in there for a week under canvas and over balsams? For a while it was an attractive outing from the balmier levels of a week ago, but with ice on the ponds this morning a reportorial gazing at the Methuen timber has to be put off perhaps until another Spring when the black flies are on the wing and the surviving bear cubs have taken on some weight during their sleep in winter quarters.

World's Most Perfectly Streamlined Airplane



A striking view of the "Frobisher," latest addition to the Imperial Airways European fleet, as it was being prepared for a flight at Croydon airport. It is said to be the world's most perfectly streamlined plane; has accommodation for 22 passengers, wing span of 105 feet, overall length of 71 1-2 feet and weighs 13 tons.

Hawk Caught Killing Young Pullet Is Killed By Farmer With Hockey Stick

A hockey stick was the weapon that ended the life of a plundering hawk in the farm-yard of Fred. Hawkins, near Hiawatha, this morning.

The hawk has been taking steady toll of the hens in the district, and to-day swooped after a large Plymouth Rock pullet which sought shelter beneath a covered runway. The marauder, evidently quite hungry, followed the hen under the wooden cover, and caught it, but had difficulty pulling the hen out. Hawkins, attracted by the commotion, spied the hawk, and not wishing to risk injuring any other fowl, reached for a hockey stick instead of his gun. The hawk was laboring to pull the chicken ffrom beneath the cover when he arrived and its head was covered. One mighty clout and the hawk was dead, its neck broken, and the pullet minus a few feathers escaped with its life.

A week ago, Hawkins killed another large hawk with his shotgun, and it is believed now that this bird killed to-day is the mate to it.

Parent Problem Is Neglected In Intelligent Discussion

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 23. — "To look at some person and say to ourselves, 'I am just as good as that person is' is not a real challenge to ourselves," Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College, Belleville, said in a talk before members of St. John's Y.P.U. Addressing himself particularly to the parents, for it was Parents' Night at the meeting, Dr. Howard said that to-day "we are continually referring to such national problems as the railway problem, the labor problem, and the youth problem, but the real problem is neglected." The parent problem is the most difficult one confronting us at present. The boy would not be a problem if it were not for the indifference and selfishness of his parents. The reason most parents flunk at their job is because they don't trust themselves, and incidentally the parents are generally more selfish than they care to admit.

All Depends on Homes.

"The youth of to-day is really not as bad as we think they are," continued the speaker. "And there is one kind of adult that to me is a pain in the neck. It is the parent who walks around with that painful expression on their face before they come out with that time-worn expression, 'Now when I was a girl.' One of the most successful youth workers in the world has said that boys and girls are as good as the homes they come from. The parent controls the body and mind of the child not so much by what their ancestors were, but by what they themselves think. However, the young person of to-day is not solely the product of the home for a bit of reflection will show that a comparatively small amount of time is spent in the home. About two hours a day was the time allotted by the speaker for what he termed "home interests."

Good Environment Needed.

"Young people have a right to a good environment, and I wonder how much the parents really care about the environment they are creating for the youth to live in. If we took our jobs seriously there would be a far different attitude among the children of the next generation."

In closing, Dr. Howard urged parents to remember that every child had a right to his own individuality, and warned them not to try to rubber stamp their own on it. "It's a tragedy when we compel boys and girls to be other than themselves."

The president of the organization, Ruth Palliser, extended a hearty welcome to the visiting parents and also welcomed the guest speaker, who was introduced by Rev. Harold B. Neal. The program was in charge of the Citizenship convener, Harolde Kitney. Others assisting on the program were Earl Nelson, violin solo; Evelyn and Helen Barnum, vocal duet; and Current Events by Dorothy Henson.

1,000 Served At Knox Annual Supper

Fifty turkeys with a combined weight of 880 pounds were required to serve the one thousand people who sat in at the annual fowl supper held last night in the Knox United Church.

A record in efficient service was set up when the corps of eighty cooks and waitresses fed the entire crowd, including themselves, between ten minutes past five and 8.15. Arrangements this year permitted three hundred people to be seated at the tables at one time, one hundred of these being accommodated in the primary department in the basement and the remainder in the Sunday school proper.

The supper is put on by the Women's Association and each year it has grown in popularity until it is the largest fowl supper held in the district. The affair this year was an outstanding success from every angle.

During the supper Roy Romes orchestra played several numbers which were enjoyed, and other artists who assisted were Miss Trucie Pearson, who sang, and Arthur Pitchford singing the "Bells of St. Marys," with W. R. Potter accompanying him on the chimes and organ, and Mrs. Alex. Wedlock played the piano accompaniment.

England Plans To Complete Bomb Shelters

England will complete the bomb proof shelters in its parks and on private properties despite the Munich pact, Pete King, manager of King's Hotel said today following a one month visit to the British Isles and Europe. This information was obtained in London where sandbagged building fronts and hundreds of men working on the underground shelters is a common sight.

The buildings in London which were entered by the party of 25 men representing Canadian Hoteliers Association were all found to have special windows and door frames in convenient places ready for instant use in the event of an air raid and gas bombs. These frames are covered with rubber or with a fabric specially treated to keep poison gas out.

Studied Hotel Management

The party went to Europe to pay a return visit to the Scottish and English Hoteliers Associations both of which sent delegations to Canada in 1937. The Canadians also planned to study hotel management as practised in the other lands. While in Scotland two of the delegates attended a convention at Glen Eagles of the International Hotel Alliance, where delegates from all nations were in conclave.

"People in Scotland and England still feel that war in imminent and inevitable," said Mr. King. "Their talk indicates they feel it is only a question of a short time before war will come between Britain and some European power." The shelters are being completed and any sand bags that have been removed from in front of buildings are only a short distance away and ready for use again.

"In France there is an entirely different feeling towards war, the people do not feel that it will come but on the other hand are confident that if it does the country is ready for it," he said. Talking with many of the assistant managers of hotels in Paris, Mr. King learned that the majority had been called out during the recent crisis and spent several weeks in uniform, many being located behind the Maginot line. "The only conclusion I can arrive at to account for the nonchalant attitude of the French is that they are supremely confident that their army and air force is at the peak of efficiency and always ready to defend the country," he added.

Placed Wreath On Vimy

On November 8th the party placed a wreath on the Vimy Memorial and later in the month on the 11th stood on the upper balcony of a hotel in Paris and watched 50,000 French soldiers observe Remembrance Day in the greatest peace celebration in the nation's history. Every unit of the army was represented in the monster parade even to a fully equipped fire fighting unit, which is part of the standard fighting equipment under the French military regulations. Soldiers watching the parade with the Canadians said it was without any doubt the greatest celebration Paris had witnessed since the war closed.

France observed Armistice Day to the letter, Mr. King said, every store, shop and factory being shut down during the whole day.

Hotel Staffs Called Out

Calling of reserves to the colors in France during the Czechoslovak trouble crippled the hotels of the country, according to hotel managers in Paris. Almost the complete staffs of many establishments walked out at once as the different classes were called up.

At Arras, scene of much bitter fighting during the World War, the party inspected an modern underground hospital and shelter which had been enlarged and fitted to accommodate 30,000 people. The shelter is hewed out of solid rock, the place once being a rock quarry. An incline railway runs into it, and it is equipped with electric lights, running water and all other modern conveniences.

Making a comparison between the hotels of Canada and those of the British Isles, Mr. King says the standard of service is superior in the foreign countries. In Scotland even the small hotels having about 12 rooms are as modern as the largest ones. One feature to is that they give more complete service because more are employed on the staffs.

The party visited Scotland, England, Belgium, Holland and France and arrived back in Canada two days ago.

Safety First Slogan Not Believed

W. L. Ferguson returned today after attending a directors meeting of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto. Mr. Ferguson reported to the directors on the activities of the organization for Central Ontario division for the past two months.

"It's about time people discarded 'Safety First' as a slogan," said J. H. Vernor, of Peterborough," because nobody believes it and nobody ever did believe it, and I think a concerted effort should be made to bury this antiquated slogan."

A competition to secure illustrations and photographs for the promotion of accident prevention, open to anyone in industry was announced at the director's meeting.

H. Ross Robertson was appointed chairman of a committee to work out details of the program. Further details will be announced in due course from the head of the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations.

Play Commenced By Checker Club

Peter McArthur had the satisfaction of defeating John Buck in one of the games played at the first meeting of the Peterborough Checker Club in the Y.M.C.A. last night. Twenty-five players were present, and it is expected the membership may reach fifty before the club settles down for the season. Some chess players are interested, and there is a prospect of some of the postal employees joining up. The youngest member is Eddie Nicholls, twelve years old, who came with his father last night and won his first game. G. H. Roper, secretary of the "Y" is providing twelve new boards and sets of "men," the room used by the club is large and pleasant, and any other men wishing to join are urged to report Thursday evening.

CHRISTMAS COLORS.

Packages of tobacco and cigarettes wrapped in bright colored papers are already making their appearance on the counters of local stores, a warning to the wise that Christmas shopping might be started at any time now.

DIAMOND JUBILEE.

Ernest Lee, Post Office employee, sent a cable of congratulations and good wishes to his parents in Isleworth, Middlesex County, England, to-day. They are celebrating the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding and both are 89 years of age.

BIG DOG KILLED

A big St. Bernard dog was fatally injured on Highway No. 7 near the Central Smith Cheese Factory Tuesday afternoon when struck by an automobile. The driver of the machine callously drove on after hitting the dog and no one obtained the number of his car.

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

Charles Lacheur, postmaster, evidently shares with the business men of the city, the idea that winter is long overdue. To-day workmen were noticed placing the wooden treads on the Post Office steps, used to prevent customers from slipping on any ice or snow that might accumulate.

TRAFFIC CASES

Minor traffic cases, in most of which a written plea of guilty was entered, formed a somewhat meagre menu for Magistrate E. A. Gee in traffic court today. Charges against George E. Whipp and George Bolton, laid under the city traffic bylaw, were adjourned for a week. F. C. McBride, R. Mills and L. E. Killoran were fined $2 and 75 cents costs for illegal parking and Thomas Leahy was assessed $3 and $2.50 costs for failure to produce a license.

LEVELLING BOULEVARDS

Employees of the board of works are busy in Ashburnham levelling and grading the boulevards on both sides of Hunter street east in preparation for seeding next spring. The boulevards were patchy and uneven, and the men removed all of the high sod and weeds. This is expected to facilitate drainage this winter and in the spring. Previously many residents in that section had complained of water lying on the sidewalks.

BICYCLE STOLEN

A bicycle belonging to A. S. Brown, 704 Water street, was stolen from in front of the Public Library Tuesday evening. Mr. Brown was inside the building only a short time and wen he came out his wheel had vanished.

SNOWPLOWS READY.

Suburban Road Commission and the County Road Committee are well equipped to remove the snow from the suburban and county roads during the winter. Two grader plows and a truck plow have been put in shape. Besides these the Department of Highways plows will operate on Highways 7 and 28. Last year there was only one grader plow and truck.

FOOTWEAR SALES DOWN.

Shoe stores in the city report that to date sales of rubbers and goloshes have been very slow. The average person taking advantage of the good weather has failed to provide himself with suitable footwear for wet or slushy pavements. It is feared now that the wave of buying will come with the first Christmas shopping stampede.

SEED MEN'S CONVENTION.

The annual meeting of the Quinte Seed Growers' Association will be held at Belleville Monday, November 28. Gordon Hancock of Smith is president of the association, and Peterborough directors are W. W. Dawson, Alex Huston, Ralph Drummond, W. G. Waterman, Howard Quinn and C. E. Moore.

CAR DAMAGED

Mrs. Louise O'Neill, New Romaine street, reported to the police department Tuesday that as she was driving east on Romaine street she had slowed down and pulled into the curb just as a C.N.R. express truck backed out of the driveway to the Poolman factory and collided with her machine, damaging the radiator, fender and headlight on the right side.

AN OLD HOCKEY DATE

Recalling a memorable colder fall, Eddie Wright remarked this morning that it was on October 28, 1925, Bert McLeod and Irvin Bailey turned out with the intermediate hockey team on the canal. Gasoline flares were used, and quite a crowd was out to see the newcomers. The team went on into the S.P.A. series, won it, and were promoted into the senior series by the O.H.A. executive.

COMFORTABLE SIDE CAR

Ross Hutchinson of Toronto arrived in Peterborough today with a totally enclosed side car attached to his motorcycle. The layout suggested warmth and comfort for the passenger in the sidecar while the driver himself was amply protected with a wind shield that extended well up in front of him and around both sides. The set also showed several other refinements which greatly increased the comfort of driving on such a machine in the cold months. The machine was an Indian and the outfit was painted a pleasing maroon shade.

Packard's Strike Threat Settled

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (A.P.).—M. M. Gilman, vice-president and general manager of the Packard Motor Car Company, announced to-day after an all-night conference with officials of the United Auto Workers' Union that difficulties which had led to a strike threat had been settled.

Members of the Packard Local voted last Sunday to strike to-day if grievances were not dealt with to their satisfaction.

Gilman did not amplify his announcement. The Packard Company currently is employing 8,600 workers.

New Zealand boasts that it now has the lowest death rate of any country in the world.

CAMPBELLFORD

Peace Is Subject Institute Address

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 23. — A talk on peace and the various means of bringing it about and of establishing better relations between the various races in the world was featured in an address given by the Rev. Harold B. Neal before members of the Seymour West Women's Institute at their monthly meeting held at the home of Mrs. Fred Hendy. Fifty-nine members answered the roll-call, "A Peace Slogan." Mrs. Fred McCulloch, the president, presided. Following some discussion of the matter of holding an oyster supper or banquet, the general feeling tended toward postponing the affair until after Christmas. Mrs. Frank McKelvie reported on the Music Festival, and Albert Hazel, district music supervisor, will give instruction in the matter to all members at the next meeting, which all were requested to make a special effort to attend. Mrs. Harold Clark continued her interesting series of lectures on the Buymanship course, and during the program Mrs. Fred McCulloch took the chair. Following Rev. Neal's address Mrs. McCulloch moved a hearty vote of thanks to which Mr. Neal replied suggesting that the Institute sponsor a series of contests for children on peace essays. Mrs. Fred McCulloch played the Old Refrain, and the National Anthem closed the meeting.

Driver Is Injured In Avoiding Crash

George Walsh, 185 Mary street, Oshawa, well known to ex-service men here by reason of his singing of "The Sergeant-Major" and other military songs at Red Patch Club dinners, was slightly injured and his car badly damaged Tuesday afternoon when in swerving to avert a collision at the intersection of Reid and McDonnel streets his automobile mounted the curb and crashed into T. J. Brooks' store at the northwest corner.

Walsh sustained a sprained back and injured knee in the accident, while the frame of his car was broken, an axle twisted and the bumper broken.

The Oshawa man reported to the police that he was unfamiliar with the locality and failed to notice the "stop" sign until he was on the intersection. Another car, driven by J. H. Panter, 172½ Hunter street, was moving north on Reid street, and when Walsh turned his machine sharply to the north to prevent colliding with the north-bound automobile, it ran up on the sidewalk and came into contact with the building. No damage was done to the latter.

HITLER YOUTH MEMORIAL

A memorial erected by the Hitler Youth to the five London boys who perished in a Black Forest blizzard in 1936 has been unveiled on Mount Schauinsland, near Freiburg.

Owned In Brantford Car Found Abandoned

Abandoned by the thieves after the supply of gasoline in the machine had been exhausted, a stolen automobile was found Tuesday morning on Highway No. 7, eight miles east of Peterborough.

The car, Provincial Traffic Officer E. Broughton discovered after investigating the affair, belongs to Kenneth McLean, Brantford, and was stolen on Sunday in Toronto.

Two young men had been seen in the machine shortly before it was left on the highway, and they are described as having been between 20 and 25 years of age, bareheaded and wearing mackinaws.

Youth Disappears From His Home

A Peterborough boy disappeared from his home here Tuesday and was reported missing today. The boy is Thomas Rose, 18 year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Rose, 505 Bolivar street.

Rose left his home on Bolivar street at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and when he failed to return the police were notified late in the afternoon. It is thought that he may have left town in search of work. His clothing included grey trousers, white pullover sweater and a blue overcoat.

Father Sanctions Bride 14, Quitting Rich Mate Thinks She Did Better For Self Than Mother

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 23—(AP).—Farmer Edgar Robinson, a corncob pipe clenched in his teeth, said today he wouldn't interfere if his 14-year-old daughter wants to leave her 60-year-old husband and go home to Tallula, Ill.

The child bride, Velma, already had told juvenile authorities that married life with elderly and wealthy Jones Greene didn't appeal to her.

"It's up to Velma," said Father Robinson, "I gave her permission to marry Mr. Greene and I think she did all right for herself. In fact, I think she did better than her mother did."

"I only got $5, and that, I guess was because I had lost a coupla days' work on the farm and Mr. Greene thought he might compensate me for taking time to witness the wedding."

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES

Canzoneri Takes 8-Round Win Over Scott

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(CP).—Fortunes shift swiftly in the boxing business and because they do, Tony Canzoneri struggled along the comeback path today, talking of fighting sometime against Henry Armstrong, the champ who was a tramp when Canzoneri was a master of the trade.

Tony scored the third straight win of his current campaign last night, an eight-round decision over Howard Scott of Washington and, though it may have been wishful thinking, Tony said he was anxious to meet Armstrong sometime for the welterweight crown.

"I'm not an old man, unless one considers 29 years old," declared Canzoneri. "And when I'm ready, I'll take on Armstrong."

Of Friday night's welter title fight between Armstrong and Ceferino Garcia, the former feather and light weight champion said: "Garcia is bigger and stronger. Henry's fight with Lou Ambers is the answer. The fellow is not a great fighter."

Few have been so outspoken about Henry, the Negro who rose from the obscurity of small amateur bouts in California to become welter, feather, and lightweight ruler while Tony's star faded. And Friday night Armstrong will share with Garcia, another fighter who came up while Tony went down, a gate of about $100,000.

Canzoneri knew that sort of cash when he strode boxing's main street and picked off the fat purses until Jimmy McLarnin of Vancouver started him downgrade in 1936. Tony won his first session with the Canadian clouter. Then he lost to Lou Ambers the lightweight crown he had won from Al Singer, lost to Barney Ross and regained from Ambers. But Tony took too much punishment in another session with McLarnin.

In 13 years of campaigning Canzoneri coined close to $1,000,000 and spent it the way he made it—fast. He bought a couple of farms and followed the horses. He tried the restaurant trade and the haberdashery business and was clipped for more dollars buying and selling furs.

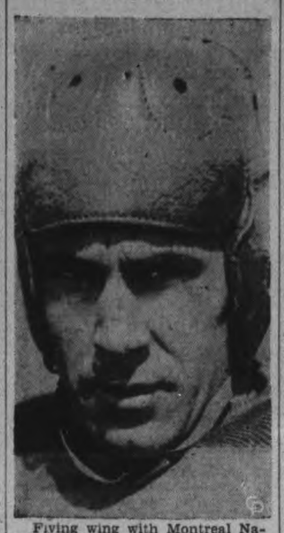
Grid Star Hurt



Flying wing with Montreal Nationals and one of the best players in the O.R.F.U. this season, Ernie Hempey, ABOVE, was seriously injured in the first of the two-game playoff series against Sarnia Imperials for the Union crown. He suffered a concussion and will be out of the game for the rest of the season. It is feared he may have a fractured skull.

McDiarmid Rated Best 1938 Netter

TORONTO, Nov. 23.—Donald McDiamid of Ottawa is given top-ranking in the tennis list released by the Ranking Committee, to be submitted to the Ontario Lawn Tennis Association for its approval at the general meeting in February.

It was a toss-up between Gordon Robinson of Stamford, and the Ottawa lad, and because the Ranking Committee is opposed to bracketing players, McDiarmid was given the call. The fact that McDiarmid, although defeated by Duff, reached the finals of the Ontario championship, while Robinson went out in the semi-finals, was the deciding factor in the placings.

Ross Wilson, No. 2 Canadian of last year, was not ranked on account of not having played in enough Ontario tournaments this year, being unavoidably absent because of playing on the Canadian Davis Cup team.

1, Donald McDiarmid, Ottawa; 2, Gordon Robinson, Stamford; 3, William Pigott, Hamilton; 4, Bruce Hall, Toronto; 5, J. Grant McLean, Toronto; 6, Vladimir Havilcheck, Toronto; 7, E. Macintyre, Ottawa; 8, B. Villeneuve, Ottawa; 9, E. Margesson, Toronto; 10, F. Smye, Hamilton.

Ladies, 1938.

1, Mrs. Ruby Fisher, Toronto and Montreal; 2, Miss Claire Walsh, Toronto; 3, Miss Ora Davis, Ottawa; 4, Mrs. G. Lewis, Ottawa.

Local Players Shy On Votes For All-Star Team

While none of the Peterborough Orfuns were selected on the 1938 Senior O.R.F.U. all-star squad—with coaches and writers doing the voting—a number of local players received some votes. Possibly the fact that Montreal and Toronto had many more writers entitled to vote than did Peterborough and Sarnia accounted for the fact that 10 of the 12 positions named had Toronto and Montreal players in them.

Following is the voting in detail as listed by the Canadian Press, which yearly sponsors the selection of this mythical team:

Halves (2) — Ferraro, Nationals, 10; Stirling, Sarnia, 6; Thompson, Beaches, 4; Atcheson, Nationals, 2; Hedgewick, Sarnia, 2; Manorek, Beaches, 1; Loucks, Peterborough, 1; Mullins, Nationals, 1; Box, Beaches, 1.

Half (secondary defence) — Stirling, Sarnia, 8; Box, Beaches, 3; Ferraro, Nationals, 1; Atcheson, Nationals, 1; Sward, Beaches, 1.

Insides (2) — Reid, Beaches, 6; Fleming, Nationals, 6; Trepanier, Sarnia, 4; Butler, Sarnia, 3; McGarry, Beaches, 2; Pulkinghorn, Peterborough, 1; Hempey, Nationals, 1; Worman, Beaches, 1; Davies, Montreal, 1; Irwin, Peterborough, 1; Casson, Beaches, 1; Ryan, Nationals, 1.

Middles (2) — Clawson, Sarnia, 8; Burns, Montreal, 6; Davies, Montreal, 5; Casson, Beaches, 4. Hempey, Nationals, 3; Curtin, Peterborough, 1; Shields, Peterborough, 1.

Outsides (2) — Reynolds, Beaches, 10; Burton, Montreal, 8; Norris, Sarnia, 3; Hutton, Nationals, 3; Haigh, Beaches, 1; Stevenson, Sarnia, 1; Brocklehurst, Nationals, 1; Deadey, Peterborough, 1.

Goal Line Kick Rule May Be Tried By U.S.

DETROIT, Nov. 23 (CP). — The United States Professional Football League should adopt the Canadian rules governing kicks behind the goal line to further pep up the United States game, Bud Shaver, vice-president of the Detroit Lions, said today in an interview.

Shaver, a former newspaperman, said he saw one Canadian football final ("I don't think I was ever so cold in my life") and the biggest thrill of the game was to watch players run the ball out from behind the goal line. The professional League, always on the lookout to increase crowd thrills, might make the change, he said.

Excessive summer heat is now blamed for the death of fish in some rivers of Germany.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

COMES AN INVITE from Mayor James Hamilton to the lacrosse feed Tuesday eve. Hizzoner writes: "You are invited to be a guest at the dinner to be tendered by the Mayor and City Council at the Empress Hotel at seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, Nov. 29, 1938. The purpose of the dinner is to recognize and suitably honour the achievement of the Peterborough lacrosse team in winning the Senior 'B' championship of Ontario. I will be pleased with your attendance at this gathering of good sportsmen." Well, sir, we will be quite tickled to sit down and break bread with the gallant gutted-stick brethren known as the Petes.

• • • • • •

BALLOTS of 14 sports scribes and grid coaches picked this 1938 all-star senior O.R.F.U. outfit: Flying wing, Hempey; halves, Ferraro, Thompson and Stirling; quarter, Box; snap, Ryan; insides, Fleming, Reid; middles, Clawson, Burns; outsides, Burton, Reynolds. Coach Bill Irwin of the Orfuns had an edge on us in selecting the backfield, but we shaded him on naming the linemen. We missed but two spots on the line, giving Butler the nod over Reid and Hendrie our vote for centre. Box at quarter and Stirling and Ferraro were oke, also, but why Thompson in the backfield? Why not Crowe or Loucks?

• • • • • •

Did The Beaches Win?

VOTES GAVE Thompson a slight edge over Loucks, but for snap Hi Living was next in line to Dave Ryan. How could they overlook the work of Herb Hendrie of Orfuns? Why, he practically held together the inexperienced local line, did some grand blocking and never missed a snap all season. We recall Ryan's bad snap in the Montreal game here when Orfuns dribbled over a disputed touchdown. And Living would never have had a tumble but for the publicity he got over the O.R.F.U. investigation of his case. Two or three of the Orfuns would have been named to the mythical squad were they playing with a better club—too many critics being prone to overlook the outstanding work of a guy on a losing team. Beaches won just two tilts more than Orfuns, and finished third, yet they have four guys picked. 'Tis most odd.

PADDED up like a brewery agent's expense sheet, the hockey goalie nevertheless has a tough time of it. He gets more raps than a bootlegger's back door, and very few cheers. He must stop all sorts of shots from all angles, with the puck-carrier frequently banging him back into his hempen wigwam a mile a minute. He slides, dives, jumps and blocks—not only having to stop the flying disc but also keeping it from rebounding. And as if the poor keeper of the cord citadel hadn't enough grief, a new rule this year calls for a smaller crease, thus letter rival snipers tear in that much closer on him—right up to where they can tramp on his toes!

They Wanta Eat Rubber

BUT THE THANKLESS task of deflecting rubber from the goal isn't going begging here this semester. Nossuh, five gees, no less, will be battling for that berth when the Petes take to the ice shortly. Ray Harding of last year's squad will be on deck, and so will Gord Clarke of the 1938 intermediate Bees. And ditto Earl McNabb, classy junior netter with our Colts last winter. Also Whitey Dann, former senior guardian from Toronto. And one Bill Hoar, ex-goalie on a senior western team some seasons ago. Goodness knows, there might be several more popping up to pester the coach yet. Let it be understood, none of these goalies were imported by the Petes—though McNabb was brought in over a year ago as a junior cage custodian. We can use a good goaltender, and there have been times when our defence wobbled so bad that we could have used the whole five goalies at the same time!

GRAPPLE FANS at the Brock St. arena this Friday p.m. should see three lively rasslin' matches, starting at 8:30 o'clock. Exceeded only by his colorful ring action, we are informed, is the bright-hued apparel of The Mask—Winnipeg mystery man—who tackles Buck Moffatt, 180, of Mount Denis. It seems the hooded husky wears hip-length red trunks and a maroon mask, so this mat matador will be all lit up like a Christmas tree and ought to brighten up the card considerably. Promoter Kumpf of Toronto says he uses a short tackle with deadly efficiency and has a self-strangle grip which heaps hisses on his head in every bout. Moffatt is rated one of the strongest grapplers in Canada, using a body slam and a drop kick as choice weapons. Rene Labelle and Ren Gazelley play a return engagement in the semi-final, while Tiger Jack Cox and Scotty McKenzie open the show.

Biscuits And Bouquets

A GOODLY GANG of gals and officials sat themselves down to a spread at the Kawartha Club and later danced to officially wind up the Girls' Softball League season last e'en. Winning Westclox softballers received the Bond Cup, and in turn gifted Manager Ab Delahaye and his aide, Harry Cordery. Among the speakers, donors and recipients were: Ald. Robert Cotton, H. A. Cranfield, Mr. Stephenson of Lindsay, Ivan Fletcher of Keene, O. A. DeGraw, Russ Kitchen, Marie Ferguson, Dot Merrett, Ab Delahaye and others. With President Ev. Thomas in the chair. Prospects are good for another successful girls' softball season in 1939.

SCRIBE WILSON of Sarnia doesn't think much of the O.R.F.U. all-star selections, either, pointing out that Toronto and Montreal—who have far more votes than Sarnia or Peterborough—picked 10 of the 12 places for their squads. He says of the backfield, aside from Stirling and Ferraro: "Ford Loucks and Don Crowe of Peterborough will stand up with either of the other two selections." And as for centre, Wilson writes: "The pickers overlooked Hendrie altogether." Several locals got a mention in the Canadian Press voting, as an article in to night's paper shows, but they weren't chosen. Incidentally, Sarnia Imps haven't yet paid the $50 fine to the O.R.F.U. and doubt if they will — as they can't find anything in the constitution which compells them to do so. So that half a C is liable to continue merely as an imaginary dab of salve for wounded O.R.F.U. feelings.

O.H.A. Rules Are Issued On Residents

With the annual O.H.A. meeting in Toronto this Saturday, the various hockey clubs of the province are preparing for groupings and schedules—those already not lined up for the coming winter. Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association, in order to clear up some disputable points, has issued the following bulletin:

Notices have been sent to O.H.A. clubs enclosing copies of the proposed amendments to be discussed at the annual convention of the O.H.A., which is to be held at the Royal York Hotel next Saturday morning.

An amendment proposed by the O.H.A. subcommittee that will affect quite a few clubs and players throughout the province is in regard to the residence rule and reads as follows:

"In case of a player residing in a rural district, village or police village, or in a town where there is no rink, or in which the rink does not meet the requirements of the O.H.A., he must play for the O.H.A. club nearest to his residence having a team entered in the series for which he is eligible to play, except where such player's services are waived by such club and every other club in the same series nearer his place of residence than the club for which he wishes to play, by January 1, and all such waivers filed with the Secretary of the O.H.A. Such waivers must be renewed annually, and shall not be construed as having altered the original residence of the player. It is understood that a junior player has the privilege of playing in the nearest place to his residence which has an O.H.A. junior team.

VIA OPEN ROAD

"The manner of the determination of the distance is to be computed by the mileage over a road which is at all time maintained for motor traffic."

It is proposed that the necessary changes be made in the constitution, regulations, rule sof competition and rules of the game of the O.H.A. to correspond with the constitution, by-laws and regulations of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. The most important amendment is to be the residence rule, in which it was decided that players in certain classifications would be considered exceptions to both the branch to branch and within the branch residence rule (that is permitted to change even after the 15th of October).

Another proposed amendment is that no O.H.A. club shall be permitted to sign or play any Ontario Rural Hockey Association player without the sanction of the O.R.H.A. Secretary after January 25 in any season.

It is proposed to drop the Intermediate A champions from the Allan Cup competition because of the inability to complete the schedules in time.

The O.H.A. subcommittee proposed that the terms of affiliation between the O.H.A. and the N.O.H.A. be amended in regard to the number of games to be played and in the method of appointing officials, the suggestion being that neutral officials should be appointed by the O.H.A. instead of a referee appointed by each organization; also that six months' notice must be given in case either party wishes to withdraw from the agreement. Otherwise the agrement to be the same as heretofore, with the N.O.H.A. winners first playing the Senior "B" O.H.A. champions in Allan Cup competition. The N.O.H.A. executive has put in an amendment to the effect that the N.O.H.A. winner will not be required to play the Senior "B" O.H.A. winners, which has been the rule ever since the N.O.H.A. came into existence.

A new clause is proposed to clear up situations that arose in last year's playoffs. It reads as follows:

"In any playoffs, for group or otherwise, if a winner shall not have been declared when the original series of games has been completed, owing to a game or games resulting in a tie, the original arrangement shall be considered at an end, and a new series arranged on the same basis as if such teams were meeting as group winners, unless time will not permit, in which event the teams shall play a sudden-death game on neutral ice."

Automobiles Recovered

COBOURG, Ont., Nov. 23—(CP)—Leslie Nash and John Clifford of Hamilton to-day were held by police after they were arrested while in possession of an automobile said to be owned by Robert Adamson of Toronto.

Police also recovered an automobile here said to have been stolen from C. M. Ogden of Port Hope.

A Help To Those Past Middle Age

When men and women get past middle age their energy and activity, in many instances, begin to decline, and their general vitality is on the wane.

Little sicknesses and ailments seem harder to shake off than formerly, and, here and there, evidences of a breakdown begin to appear.

Now is the time when those who wish to maintain their health and vigor, and retain their energy unimpaired should take a course of Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills.

New President

It will be passes to choice seats instead of passes that may result in touchdowns that will be bothering Ab Box, ABOVE, when another gridiron season rolls aound. One of the brightest stars of the Canadian football field for the past nine years, Box announced his retirement at the close of this season and shortly after was appointed president of the Balmy Beach O.R.F.U. club, the team with which he shone in so many campaigns. He also put in a short time with Toronto Argonauts, leading them to the Canadian title in 1933.

Westclox Girls Receive Trophy

The J. P. Bond Trophy, emblematic of the Girls' Softball League championship for 1938, was presented last night to the Westclox team at the annual banquet held in the Kawartha Club. The enjoyable gathering included officers, Westclox players, and managers and representatives of the other clubs in the circuit. President Ev. Thomas was master of ceremonies. Following the banquet and speeches, a dance was held.

Ald. R. S. Cotton stated, in his address, that the city hoped to keep the Ashburnham Bowl in shape for softball next year and that further improvements to this fine sports centre might be made. H. A. Cranfield of the C.G.E. team said his team would be back again and, while congratulating the champions, pointed out that he believed Westclox provided a mental hazard to other teams and consequently soared to victory regularly. Geo. Stephenson of Lindsay, regretted that he had to withdraw his team from the league ere the season ended but hoped to return next year with a worthy squad. Ivan Fletcher of Keene, informed that he was given credit for keeping the league operating, claimed he just couldn't stay out of the circuit. O. A. DeGraw of Westclox pointed out that a win for Westclox next year would give them permanent possession of the Bond Cup, but he added he knew where another trophy could be obtained, if needed.

Russ Kitchen, past president of the Girls' League, presented the trophy and cheque to the Westclox team, with Marie Ferguson responding. Dot Merrett, on behalf of the team, presented Manager Ab Delahaye with a white gold cigarette case and his assistant, Harry Cordery, with a leather wallet. Both thanked the team for their kindness. Mr. Thomas was grateful to all who had helped make 1938 a successful season, stating there was a small balance on hand to start off next year. Frank Wood of C.G.E. was on hand as well as Umpires Bob Batley and Bill Bennett.

Armstrong Tilt Appears A "Sell-Out"

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (AP).—The little group of serious thinkers that gathers in Mike Jacobs' parlor each day to swap guesses on the outcome of Friday night's welterweight championship fight between Henry Armstrong and Ceferino Garcia is making almost no progress.

The main difficulty seems to be that each is asking the other: "Who do you like?" and invariably is getting the same answer: "I dunno. Who do you like?"

Business in that sense does not mean the ticket sale. It's almost assured sell-out of more than $100,000 and wonder is over the more delicate type of "business" sometimes indulged in between rival managers.

Pilots of champions have, for instance, been known to turn up later with half-shares in new champions, the very ones that whipped their former bread-winners. Happily, there is no reason to believe that the boys have cooked up anything like that for Friday night, even though Armstrong could lose his welterweight toga to Garcia and still be champion of all the lightweights.

The better guess is that Henry and Ceferino will be in there firing both barrels for 15 rounds, or until one of them drops. Both are in the peak of condition, on the words of their trainers. Armstrong looks much better than he did before he incurred the back injury that forced postponement of the scrap from its original date of November 2.

Falls Tie Sailors In 7-7 Session While Oshawa Seniors Trounce Brants 9-1 For Lead

(By the Canadian Press.)

Amateur hockey players come and go and are forgotten, but Muir (Goney) McGowan who may have the secret of perpetual youth stored away somewhere, seems to go on and go on.

Old Goney isn't as spry as he was 10 years or so ago, but he's helped make up for that by adding craft and skill to his centre-ice play. This season may be one of his best in the Senior "A" division of the Ontario Hockey Association.

They used to say Goney played for Hamilton Tigers so long the black stripes stayed on his legs when he removed his tiger-striped stockings. Now he's starting his second season with Port Colborne Sailors and more than keeping pace with the youngsters.

The veteran centre scored three goals and an assist last night in Port Colborne as the Sailors scudded through to a 7-7 overtime tie with Niagara Falls Brights. Both teams have yet to win in the two-game-old season.

Oshawa G-Men took the lead with two straight victories by trouncing Brantford 9-1 in the only other scheduled tilt. The powerful easterners, who, like the Ports were making their home debut, showed class a-plenty to smother the Brants. It was Brantford's second straight defeat.

All this high-scoring occurred while Toronto Goodyears, league champions last season, staged a 3-3 overtime tie with Hershey Cubs of the Eastern Amateur United States Hockey League in an exhibition game in the Pennsylvania city. Goodyears play two more exhibition tilts before returning to clash with Brantford in a league game Tuesday. Goodyears defeated Port Colborne to open the Toronto season Friday.

Some Timely Fights

Four major penalties were handed out for fisticuff displays in the Ports-Falls battle. Tied 5-5 at the end of regulation time, each team counted twice in the 10-minute overtime session. Players picked up a total of 25 scoring points in the tilt.

Besides McGowan, Art Thompson with two goals, and Lloyd Fitzgerald and Jack Hinchcliffe, each with one, were the scorers for the Ports. Falls' netters were Swat Mason, former Guelph junior, with two, and George Grigor, a Toronto performer last season. Chet Steele, Bill Short, Eteak Morrison and Swanson, each with one.

The Oshawa stalwarts, each one wearing a helmet after Bill Morrison, a forward, suffered head injuries in an exhibition game several days ago, owe much of their success to the great playmaking of Lex Chisholm, who counted five assists.

Goal-getters for the winners were Cliff Maundrell with three, Jack "Regina" Tisdall two, Winkie Smith with two, and Doc Rowden and Hastie, each with one. Ray Krieger, Brant Winger, counted his team's singleton with less than two minutes of play remaining.

Ted Beatty, Brant netminder, had little chance on any of the nine goal-marked shots. Tony Torti was a standout of the game with his defensive efforts for the leaders.

Brantford travel to Niagara Falls, when each team will be seeking its first win. St. Catharines, idle last night, journey to Port Colborne the same night in an effort to take their second seasonal victory. Ports will be trying just as hard for a win in front of the home folks.

American League To Deaden Ball —Chalk Up Win For the Nationals

(By Central Press Canadian.)

While the American league still calls the National "the other league," and vice-versa, activities this off-season have indicated a marked break-down of the barriers that have existed between the two circuits. Each is borrowing successful innovations from the other, though not without embarrassment.

The American league is expected this winter to pass upon a new baseball to conform with that used last season in the National league. It will have raised stitches and a slightly thicker cover.

Solace For Frick.

This gives President Ford Frick of the National league some solace. He has at least won the battle of the pellet. When he announced a year ago a plan to increase the efficiency of the league's pitchers, without removing or even mitigating the threat of the home run, he was scoffed at on many sides. But his new ball did just that for the league. It helped the pitchers — there were about twice as many shutouts in the National as in the American—and batters found that they could hit it for as much distance as in other seasons.

So the American league is ready to adopt the same ball. Uniformity of the spheres will simplify the task of comparing players in the two leagues. It will be hailed as a move in the right direction by the pitchers who are employed in the American league.

Of equal importance and equally popular with the pitchers is the suggestion to be put into effect next season to umpires giving them more authority in denying batters the privilege of having balls put out of play at the first sign of a scuff or a stain on the leather.

It was this frequent change in ball — an estimated three dozen were used in each nine-inning game —that is generally held responsible for the alarming epidemic of lame pitching arms.

Balls Won't Do Tricks.

Ed. Frcelich, who trains the Dodgers, was first out with this lame arm angle:

"The job of pitching a nine-inning game," he said, "has grown two and three times as severe as it was 20 years ago. Pitchers now have to throw every ball under their own power. The ball won't do tricks for them, as it did many years ago. If balls keep going out of play at the same frequency, this lame arm epidemic will never cease."

Well, the majors have come around to recognize this evil, and as a measure of protection for the pitchers they are not going to call ball dead until they are thoroughly convinced the spheres are breaking beyond the normal effect of human propulsion.

New Irish Play Of Sport Trend Arrives

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(CP)—Canadian audiences will see Gladys Cooper's English company do the Irish play "Spring Meeting." That's top theatre news for Canadians. (The play opened in Montreal Nov. 21 and will continue in Toronto Nov. 28, going afterwards to New York.)

A lot of theatrical bigwigs have said an Englishman hates a serious play and doesn't understand tragic beauty. Max Beerbohm wrote a bit about it in 1903 and critics claim it's still true. They say an English theatre-goer judges a play only by its association with pleasant or unpleasant events. If the events are unpleasant he doesn't like it, if they are pleasant he thinks it's jolly.

Tragedy as a rule doesn't last long on the boards of Londons theatre, but "Spring Meeting" has run 200 performances. It's no tragedy but a farce that shakes the diaphragm.

When Miss Cooper took the play away from the tiny Ambassadors Theatre it was still packing them in. Audiences the last few nights called for speeches and shouted "Good Luck" after Miss Cooper told them she had enjoyed playing in the piece.

Family Stuff

"Spring Meeting" is one of those rare Irish plays that doesn't deal with peasants. Its story concerns the carryings-on of the family and friends of Sir Richard Furze, well-off but stingy Irish hunting and racing man.

It was written by M. J. Farrell and John Perry. Miss Farrell, novelist, is the daughter of a former master of the Wexford hunt and Perry is not only an actor but joint master of the Tipperary Hunt. That makes the sporting background authentic.

The action concerns what Sir Richard considers his money troubles, the man-trouble of his daughters and the woman-trouble of the lads who want to marry them. The play has a cast that includes besides Miss Cooper: A. E. Matthews as Sir Richard and Jean Cadell as his crabbed sister, James Woodburn as the butler and Robert Flemyng as one of the young suitors. The daughters are played by Shelah Richards and Aideen O'Connor.

Matthews, Miss Cadell and Flemyng are widely-known in Canada and the United States, mainly through motion pictures. Arthur Shields who has the minor part of a handy-man has directed and acted for the Abbey Players on their Canadian tours. The play was directed here by John Gielgud.

Playwright In Action

J. B. Priestley's expedition onto the stage was not an unqualified success. He decided to take the part of News Photographer Henry Ormonroyd in "When We Are Married" after its regular incumbent, Frank Pettingell was hurt. With little time to rehearse Priestley gave a performance the critics refused to criticize. They said it wouldn't be fair, but they admitted guardedly that Priestley was no Pettingell.

Priestley was cheered for his courage more than his skill. He had no previous stage experience, not even as an amateur. He has two plays running here: "When We Are Married" at St. Martin's and "Dangerous Corner" at the Westminster. He is busy and he had only 24 hours' notice to step into a part which he wrote but did not know well enough to act.

AL HOSTAK

Barnyard Golf Experts Shine Tonight

TORONTO, Nov. 23 (CP).—Barnyard golf, the game that started out behind the stable when the day's chores were done, gets its annual full-dress showing tonight in the Dominion horseshoe singles championships at the Royal Winter Fair.

This is the game that has managed to stay democratic even while becoming scientific. It takes only horseshoes and stakes to play, even if they do fashion smooth cast-iron shoes and import blue clay for tournament competition. And it sets no age limits.

Eleven-year-old George Sluman, who nearly takes off every time he casts a 2½-pound shoe, will match throw with men in their 60's. Right up in a class, the top division of three, are William Wood, 67, and Thomas Spillett, 65, both of Toronto. Mart McDonald, who doesn't even wear glasses when tossing ringers, is 70 but good enough for B class.

It's a long haul for the oldsters. To get to the semi-finals, for instance, you hurl an average of 18 games, or about 108 casts. The experts usually warm up between rounds, with about 230 casts during the evening. To win, you have to throw about 1,250 pounds of cast-iron during the night.

The main idea, of course, is to have your shoe come up to the stake "open." That is, the two caulks should close around the stake and if the shoe hits backwards you haven't perfected your throw.

Your shoe can make 1¼ turns, 1½ turns, 1¾ turns, double turns or even triple turns, depending on how you grip the shoe and what wrist movement you use. Some just grip the shoe by the heel and let it go end over end. It's all the same as long as it gets to the stake "open."

GOOD RECORD

Boston Bruins End Rangers Reign Trouncing Patrickmen 4-2; Canadiens Tumble To Amerks 7-3

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Astute Lester Patrick, who talks in terms of five-man rushes and thinks nothing of putting a right-hand shot on left wing, still hasn't developed the perfect attacking system for hockey.

A mighty defensive team, Boston Bruins, let Lester's New York Rangers turn on all their attacking magic last night before a crowd of 14,000 at Boston. But Bruins never were headed and they won 4-2, to end Rangers' reign as the only unbeaten team in the National League.

Rangers carried about three-quarters of the play with their stylish offensive, built around forward lines made up entirely of lefthand or righthand shots. The system, far from being infallible, left openings for quick Boston sorties.

The imemdiate result was a general jamimng in the league race. Bruins gained a first-place tie with Chicago. New York Americans, by defeating the tragic Canadiens 7-3 at Montreal, drew level in second position with Rangers and Toronto. Detroit with a single victory, is sixth and the winless Canadiens trail.

Roy Conacher and Gordon Pettinger picked up a goal and an assist each within 20 seconds as the third period drew to a close at Boston. Clint Smith whipped in a last New York goal as the five-man offensive gained momentum with only 14 seconds to play, but the game was gone beyond recall then.

Sands Starts It.

Bill Sands put Bruins ahead in the first period after a clean, mild session, scoring with the aid of Ray Getliffe and Bill Cowley. Alex. Shibicky evened the count in the second, but the Sands-Cowley-Getliffe line returned to the ice to make a play for Defenceman Jack Portland as Boston went into the lead again.

A battle of systems more than of personalities, the contest brought only two penalties. The first was to Dutch Hiller in the second period for playing with a broken stick and the second to Portland in the third, resulting in Smith's score.

Canadiens' defeat was their seventh straight and Rookie Claude Bourque looked nervous in their goal behind a shaky defence. It was a set-up for Sweeney Schriner, Americans' ace left winger and the league's greatest opportunist. He scored three times.

Schriner's first goal gave Americans a lead after eight minutes and his second put them ahead 2-1 after Jimmy Ward had scored for Canadiens. Tommy Anderson tallied twice for Americans in the second and Schriner split Anderson's two scores with his third.

The flashing Canadien front lines showed scoring punch in the final period when, after Eddie Wiseman got New York's sixth goal, Toe Blake and George Mantha tallied for the Habitants. But Nels Stewart finished off the thorough beating five minutes from the finish with Wiseman and Anderson figuring in the play.

C.I.O. Strike Threatens To Cripple Huge Chicago Packing Industry

CHICAGO, Nov. 23 (AP) — A threat to paralyze operations in the huge Chicago meat packing plants developed today from the labor dispute which has halted trading in the world's largest livestock market.

A union chief said attempts to move meat animals through the stockyards before settlement of the dispute would be countered with a strike call to some 20,000 packing house workers.

The labor leader, President Benjamin Brown of the Congress of Industrial Organizations stock handlers union, said such a strike would cripple 90 per cent of the packing plants' activities.

At present the dispute involves an estimated 575 stock handlers and the union stockyard and transit company. The firm manages the stockyards which serve as a market independent of the packing plants. Handlers unload and feed livestock in the pens and drive the animals to the slaughter houses.

Approximately 60,000 head of cattle, hogs and sheep stranded by the strike were moved through the yards yesterday by white collared commission men before expiration of a truce. The C.I.O. handlers have banned further operations pending settlement of the dispute.

The schedule arrival of 10,000 head of livestock from farms, coupled with an announcement by the stockyards management that it would "continue to operate," promised to precipitate a crisis.

There was a possibility, too, that a rival A.F.L. group of stock handlers might go to work despite the C.I.O. edict.

Thomas Devero, business agent of the A.F.L. stock handlers local 517, said members of the organization would go into the pens if the police guard were withdrawn. He said "our men don't want to stand under the eyes of policemen."

Hastings Y.P.S. Meets

HASTINGS, Nov. 24.—Rev. Wm. Stocks of St. George's Anglican Church was guest speaker on Monday evening at Trinity United Young People's meeting when he gave a talk on "Christian Community" which is to be discussed at the Youth's Conference at Amsterdam.

Mrs. F. W. Newell presided over the meeting which opened with the devotional period in charge of Miss Helen Collins. Mrs. Robert Collins read the scripture and Miss Helen Collins gave an explanatory talk on the passage read. Misses Frances and Claudine Hoard rendered a duet.

Warkworth Y.P.S. Elects Officers

WARKWORTH, Nov. 23. — The Young People's Society of St. Paul's United Church held the first meeting of the season in the Sunday School room of the church Monday evening, November twenty-first.

The officers elected are as follows: President, Jack Allen; vice-president, Mrs. H. C. Kelly; secretary, Clifford Hopkins; assistant secretary, Douglas Edgar; treasurer, Gerald Tully; assistant pianist, Mrs. W. Grant Allen; committee, Sara McComb and Mrs. F. L. Boyce.

To Meet Weekly

It was decided to hold the meetings each Monday night and the programs to be arranged for the entire season as soon as possible.

A. A. Martin, I.P.S. Brighton gave a fine address based on "Responsibilities" and this was dealt with under three institutions, the Home, the Church and the School, comparing each as they were found in a country where there is dictatorship and in a country where there is democracy.

Two accordion selections were given by Bruce Sweet and a vocal duet was rendered by Jack Allen and James McCleary.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation
OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up flat, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why fierce purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water surges through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of hard, poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, naturally, and passed out of your body. Then do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your druggist now—but if you're wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight! (Advt.)

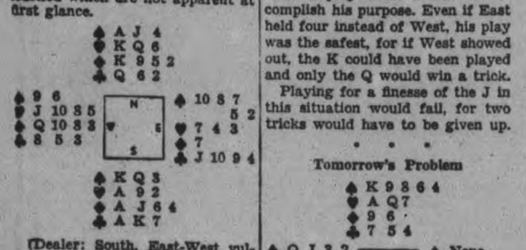
STUDY COMBINATIONS

A PLAYER WHO really cares to improve can learn a lot by studying the various finessing combinations. If he will get out all the cards of a suit, arrange them in different ways and then figure out the best results from various methods of playing them, many facts can be learned which are not apparent at first glance.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable)

South bid 1-Diamond on this deal. North responded with 2-No Trump. South's next call was 4-No Trump, to which North replied with a bid of 5-Diamonds. After 5-No Trump by South, North went to 6-No Trump.

The club J was led by East and won with dummy's K. Declarer could count three tricks each in spades, hearts and clubs, so that he needed three diamonds to make his contract. His problem then was how to limit his loss in that suit to one trick, with the Q, 10 and 8 missing.

He laid down the A and then played low and finessed the 9. The K took the third round and West's Q won the fourth. However, declarer's play enabled him to accomplish his purpose. Even if East held four instead of West, his play was the safest, for if West showed out, the K could have been played and only the Q would win a trick.

Playing for a finesse of the J in this situation would fail, for two tricks would have to be given up.

Germany Wants No Jews In Tanganyika

BERLIN, Nov. 23—(AP). — The German press recorded Nazi feeling against settlement of German Jews in Tanganyika, former German East Africa, as plans developed today for continuing the anti-Jewish campaign through the winter.

He is to address 1,000 of his colleagues at the Kroll Opera House tonight on how to conduct an anti-Jewish drive, and the newspaper Zwoelf Uhr Blatt said 1,500 meetings were planned for Berlin alone this winter.

The subjects will be, the newspaper said, "Eternal Jew Disturbs Peace of the World" and "One People —One Will—On Aim.' The nazi film "Jewry With the Mask" will be shown at all meetings.

Authoritative quarters said a strict ban on all Jewish religious services except marriage and burial rites was the latest restriction, one which aroused much bitterness.

The absence of official reaction to the British plan for settlement of Jews in Tanganyika, other parts of British Africa and British Guiana was seen as a studied effort while the Nazis await the outcome of Prime Minister Chamberlain's visit to Paris where he is to discuss defence and foreign policies with Premier Daladier.

There was talk that Chancellor Hitler would summon the Reichstag to protest against the proposed allotment of former German territory to Jews.

Jews themselves acclaimed the proposal but feared the inclusion of Tanganyika among prospective havens might react against them.

"Won't Hitler be so enraged about Tanganyika that he won't let any Jews out of Germany?" one leader asked.

Cool Reception.

The British proposal, offered by Prime Minister Chamberlain in London yesterday, received a cold reception in the Nazi press.

The newspaper Loakalzeiger charged a "misuse of the mandate is being planned," while the Berliner Tageblatt said:

"Chamberlain's statement brings the problem of settlement of Jews in British colonies not much nearer to solution."

Oswald Pirow, Defence Minister of the Union of South Africa, who is scheduled to see Hitler at Berchtesgaden on Thursday on the colonial question, was expected to be the first to hear the Reichsfuehrer's reaction to the proposal.

Informed Nazi quarters, before Mr. Chamberlain spoke, said they expected Hitler to tell Mr. Pirow that Germany would consider as an "affront" any scheme for settling German Jews on former German soil.

Further evidence that Jews are being squeezed out of every form of public life appeared with a government order forbidding bookmakers to accept bets from Jews. Jews also were forbidden to frequent the premises of bookmakers, all of whom are government licensed.

Dienst aus Deutschland reported a decree soon would be issued whereby Gentiles and Jews no longer would be permitted to live in the same apartment building.

Jewish leaders received word from London that 25 rabbis now in concentration camps would obtain permission to go to England. This led to hopes in Jewish quarters that perhaps a similar number could obtain permission to enter the United States above the regular quota. Sixty rabbis have been arrested.

American proprietary medicines are now going to 100 foreign markets.

Chamberlain's Canadian Pilot Killed In Channel Crash

Bristol, England, Nov. 23 (CP)

ERIC GLYNNE LAWRENCE ROBINSON, former Canadian flier who was Prime Minister Chamberlain's pilot on his September flights to Berchtesgaden, Doesberg and Munich, was killed today when his plane crashed at Redcliff Bay on the Bristol Channel. His co-pilot, R. P. J. Leborgne, also was killed.

Commander Robinson, senior flight officer for British Airways, was 32 years old. He had flown more hours on regular night mail routes than any other British pilot. Before joining British Airways he flew freight for mining companies in Canada where he obtained his first flying experience.

He was instructor at the Hamilton Flying Club after getting his licence there in 1927. Later he explored by air in Ungava for the government and also served in the Forest Fire Patrol.

He married a Sault Ste. Marie girl and a son, Larry, was born in Canada six years ago.

Kenora Mill Swept By $500,000 Blaze

KENORA, Ont., Nov. 23—(CP).—The plant of the Maple Leaf Milling Company here was totally destroyed by fire which raged last night and early today, causing damage of more than $500,000. Between 60 and 70 workers lost employment.

After razing the seventh-storey mill, the flames swept through the warehouse, containing flour and other supplies. The warehouse was still smouldering late today.

The mill had a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day and in normal times employed 100 men.

KENORA, Ont., Nov. 22—(CP).—Flames swept through the Maple Leaf Milling Company mill here last night, causing damage estimated at $250,000. Firemen from Kenora and Keewatin fought the flames for hours in the huge seven-storey building.

Fire broke out about 8:30 o'clock last night on the seventh floor. Night watchman George Lundy who made a tour of the building a half hour before without finding anything amiss, discovered the top floor in flames.

Lundy suffered from smoke as he made his escape and was given medical attention. Firemen, summoned by Colin Fraser, resident manager, found the blaze centered in the southeast corner of the seventh floor.

Fanned by a strong north wind, the flames raced through the building, destroying valuable machinery and other equipment. Large storage tanks and elevator were saved.

Cause of the flames was unknown. The building, struck by flames in 1908, is the pioneer plant of the Maple Leaf Milling Company Limited.

Avalanches Kill 45 In Windward Isles

CASTRIES, St. Lucia, British West Indies, Nov. 23—(AP). — A series of rain-loosened avalanches today spread death and destruction in the interior of this island of the windward group.

A mountain eight miles long last night buried two hamlets and a number of inhabitants estimated to run into the hundreds.

Rescue workers laboring all night recovered 45 dead and 60 injured, but today a new avalanche buried all of the dead again in addition to many injured and several rescue workers in a fresh catastrophe.

Shortly after the first avalanche a gang of 50 laborers were swept into a river when the house in which they were sheltered slipped away along with an acre of land. Few of them were saved, and six of those recovered died during the night.

Continuous rains of the past three weeks apparently loosened tons of earth which caused the disaster.

Trackless Trolleys

WINNIPEG, Nov. 23 — (CP). — Trackless trolley buses, first to appear in Western Canada, went into service today on a westend line of the Winnipeg Electric Company. When the six new buses started from near Portage and Main streets of downtown Winnipeg, the city became the second in the Dominion to have the latest method of electric transportation. Montreal trolley buses have been running for some time.

Women Advised To Watch Their Rights

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP).—Women need to watch their rights on a world front these days, in the opinion of Alice Paul, chairman of the newly-organized world woman's party.

"The world has become so closely knitted together," Miss Paul said to-day, "that matters are being settled for us all in treaties adopted at International conferences." She agreed to head the world women's group in order to provide women with a "watchdog" for their rights at such International parleys.

"The last straw" to Miss Paul and women from 16 countries associated in the new party was a measure approved in June by the International Labor Conference, of which the United States is a member.

The treaty, she said, would limit the right of a married woman to contract for employment outside her home except with her husband, or as a domestic servant in the same neighborhood.

Other Threats.

Other measures which Miss Paul said were threatening women's equality were:

1. Two treaties adopted by the International Labor Conference limiting the right of women to work at night between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

2. Recognition of "the old European" nationality system by which a woman takes her husband's nationality and a mother gives her nationality only to an illegitimate offspring.

Miss Paul said the new party wants the world "to recognize and establish a liberty and equality without distinction as to sex."

She is a veteran in the feminist movement. While a school girl in England, she was arrested three times in connection with suffrage campaigns. At the age of 27, she organized the Nation Woman's Party in the United States and continued as its head until woman's suffrage was won.

WARSAW

Executive Plans To Present Play

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Nov. 23. — The executive of the United Church Sunday School held their first practice for their play "Plain People," at Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Payne's home on Friday evening. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Gerald Payne, Mrs. Harold Payne, and Rev. J. W. Wilkinson.

Mrs. Weller, Mrs. T. Cooper, and Mrs. Milton Drain returned home from Toronto on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. David Tucker are staying at their daughter's home, while Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Garbutt are in Toronto to attend the Winter Fair.

Dr. and Mrs. Campbell of Lakefield and their little son Lorne visited friends in Warsaw on Sunday.

Hilliard-Clements has the contract to wire the United Church parsonage.

The Presbyterian Young People's Class, Mrs. Wright teacher, is preparing the annual entertainment which will be held much earlier than usual.

Miss Valetta Drain returned to Toronto on Saturday after a month's visit at her home.

The hunters are all home. Most report a successful hunt. The Rock Lake party were one short of their number and no very large deer. The party with Reg. Bolton each got a large deer. Other parties report about the same, and all report wolves.

Lord Stanley's Friend To Seek His Seat

PRESTON, England, Nov. 23. — (CP-Cable)—Captain Claud Lancaster, a friend of the Late Lord Stanley, today was nominated as conservative candidate to contest the by-election in the Fylde division of Lancashire Nov. 30.

The seat was made vacant by the death Oct. 16 of Lord Stanley, who was secretary of state for the Dominions.

Captain Lancaster, who is 39, is interested in the coal and iron industries and in agriculture. He will be opposed by Dr. Mabel Tylecote, history teacher of the Workers' Educational Association, who was nominated as labor candidate.

MORE BUILDING

GLACE BAY, N.S.—(CP).—One hundred and six permits to construct houses, with a total property value of $119,600, were issued in Glace Bay up to November 15 this year. Total value of permits issued was $654,921.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

Re-union After 32 Years' Search

Mrs. Sarah Winkler de Blum, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, embraces and kisses her son, Jack English, as they met in Cincinnati, Ohio, for the first time in 32 years. English was kidnapped from his parents in 1906, when they lived in their native Roumania. Mrs. de Blum has been searching all these years, tracking down every lead and refusing to give up hope. Her faith was rewarded when she received information leading to Cincinnati and rushed north by fast boat to claim her offspring.

Negro Fraud Idea To Be Aired

OTTAWA, Nov. 23—(CP). — Magistrate Glenn Strike to-day committed Cary Burns, 53-year-old negro, and his white secretary, Mrs. Amelia Monique, 40, to-day for trial on charges of conspiracy to defraud the public.

Preliminary hearing concluded without argument of the evidence by defence counsel for the little negro who, witnesses testified, wrote $145,900,000 worth of promissory notes at the ratio of $1 cash for $1,000 he promised to pay when he could obtain settlement of alleged court cases over infringements of patents he claimed to hold.

Police said a similar case against Burns and Mrs. Monique had been instituted in South Bend, Ind., and was yet to be completed.

The couple, according to evidence at the preliminary hearing had operated in Montreal as well as Ottawa, claiming to have patent infringement damage suits before the Exchequer Court of Canada here, but a clerk of that court certified there was no such case before the court.

Detectives entered as exhibits packets of letters sent to Burns in Canada from the United States, and claimed many of them contained money orders for the promissory notes committing Burns to pay "at my earliest convenience" at the rate of $1,000 for $1.

An Active Brotherhood.

Also exhibits before the court were a number of seven-pointed star-shaped badges of Burns' "Brotherhood of Universal Perpetual Peace." Police claimed the negro's clients were organized into groups throughout the Middle West United States and group leaders wore the star badges. Seized letters from group leaders, they maintained, told how widespread was the negro's money collecting organization.

The Canadian Post Office authoritis denied Burns use of the mails, and remissions kept pouring in by telegraphic money order. Since he was jailed, police said, Burns had received $57 consigned to him in his cell.

Dominion immigration authorities said Burns entered Canada at Sarnia, Ont., in 1935 and could not be deported back to the United States pending proof of his United States birth.

Two Party System Wasteful Method

TORONTO, Nov. 23—(CP).—The two-party system of government is a "most wasteful" method, according to Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.-Labor member of parliament for Grey-Bruce.

"I believe the time will come when the cabinet will be a body elected by the members of the house," she told the Toronto branch of the Civil Liberties League last night.

"They will share equally in blame and praise and the situation will not be as it is now, namely, when the government does something really fine, the opposition is in despair."

She added: "When you think that the leader of the opposition is paid a salary to oppose, it does seem ridiculous."

Fatal Mistake

VANCOUVER, Nov. 23—(CP). — Ransford Young, 26, died in hospital here today a half hour after he jumped over the edge of a five-storey building by mistake. Police said Ransford had jumped over what he thought was a guard rail in the centre of the roof but which actually was at the edge.

Wife Is Arrested After Aiding Spouse Suicide

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Nov. 23—(AP) — Authorities today probed deeper into the death of a business executive whose wife, they said, admitted attaching a length of vacuum-cleaner hose to an automobile exhaust to help him commit suicide.

Mrs. Marie Burckhalter, a slight, comely woman of 44, was held on a first-degree manslaughter charge.

Elbert Gallagher, assistant district attorney, said that Mrs. Burckhalter told him she had helped her husband, Eugene, 47, prepare to take his life Saturday at their Hastings home, believing his courage would fail at the last minute.

Gallagher said she related how she took a final snapshot of Burckhalter, had her maid bring him a glass of egg-nog—his favorite drink—and then pushed her foot on the starter to show him how to pipe death-dealing carbon monoxide fumes into the car through the tube she had improvised.

"You haven't got the nerve to go through with it," she told him—according to the story Gallagher quoted—and left to do some shopping.

Returns, Finds Body

When she returned an hour later, she found the body of Burckhalter, president of the Southern Chemical Corporation, in the car in the garage.

Puzzled by aspects of the case, Gallagher said he would call in several persons for further questioning, including a salesman friend of Mrs. Burckhalter with whom he said she admitted spending much time in recent weeks.

Mrs. Burckhalter, the prosecutor said, told him her husband had been drinking heavily because of business reverses and had threatened suicide several times.

Gallagher said she appeared "completely unemotional" over Burckhalter's death and was "even inclined to wisecrack."

When he asked why she took a snapshot of her husband before he entered the garage, Gallagher said she replied: "I just had one film left and I wanted to use it."

Find "Swing" Brings Higher Production

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Nov. 22.—(CP).—Those skilled factory workers on the assembly line like their swing but they're not jitterbugs.

Workers on jobs requiring a high degree of hand and finger dexterity do better work with less spoilage when listening to the crooning of Bing Crosby or the "sweet" swing of Guy Lombardo.

Different types of music were played at various intervals during the investigation. For several days no music was played and the management received a petition signed by a large number of workers requesting that it be resumed.

The purpose of the experiment was to determine the effect of different types of music on plant production and morale.

Although Dr. Humes deferred final conclusions, he found that generally better work was done when the programs "did not contain blatant, cacophonous strains" of the more extreme swing. Spoilage was generally higher when no music was played.

Russina Stork Sets Too Fast Clip For Diaper Makers

Moscow, Nov. 23 (CP).

Inefficient organization was blamed by the government paper for the losing race diaper factories are running with the increasingly busy Russian stork.

"In 1936," Izvestia said, "the peoples' commissariat of public health ordered the production of 3,170,000 sets of diapers for newborn infants. But although this figure was below the actual needs, the commissariat of light industry produced, during the first nine months of 1938, only 765,900."

Many of these, the newspaper charged, failed to reach the ultimate consumer.

"Even in Moscow shops in the same neighborhood as the peoples' commissariat of trade," it added, "it is difficult to find a set of diapers. During the past 20 days articles for babies have disappeared entirely from shops."

Atlanta Turns Out For Tobacco Road

ATLANTA, Nov. 23 (AP).—Widely discussed "Tobacco Road," protected by a temporary injunction obtained after a local board of censors ruled that it was "immoral" and should not be presented, opened before a capacity audience here last night, but with the controversy apparently far from ended.

Adapted from the novel by Erskine Caldwell, a native of Georgia, and depicting the hopeless outlook confronting an uneducated, impoverished rural family in a section known as Tobacco Road, near Augusta, Ga., the play already is in its fifth year in New York, and has been shown in numerous other cities.

The Atlanta Constitution today quotes Mrs. Roosevelt as saying she "never agrees to censoring anything of an artistic nature" and felt Tobacco Road "should be seen by people desirous of understanding certain conditions who would be willing to put forth every effort to change them."

Others who agreed the play should go on included Dean Raimundo de Ovies, Episcopal minister, and Dr. M. Ashby Jones, Baptist clergyman.

Alderman Robert Carpenter, member of the municipal censorship board that ordered the play banned, said he would ask an immediate hearing on a permanent injunction.

Pan-American Peace Pact Looms At Lima

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23—(AP).—A Pan-American pact of peace, linking the nations of the Western hemisphere may develop at the Pan-American Conference at Lima, Peru.

Secretary of State Hull and other members of the United States delegation will discuss a project to unify all the inter-American peace instruments now existing and to weld them into a coherent unit.

President Roosevelt's idea of continental defence scheme, embracing Canada and the 21 American republics, give added point to the discussion.

Mexico has prepared a peace code which experts are now studying and will submit to the Lima conference. The Mexican Ambassador to the United States, Francisco Castillo Najera, will be at Lima as chairman of his country's delegation, to push the project. He is believed to have the sympathy of the United States American delegation with regard to a great majority of the points in the code.

The Mexican peace code aims to include in a single document all the elements capable of promoting peace, such as conciliation, arbitration and international justice. It also contains a definition of the aggressor and a procedure for applying sanctions.

Application of sanctions, in the event of an attack by an outside power on any Latin American country, would enable the Pan-American States to help the United States in enforcing the Monroe Doctrine.

If the Lima Conference agrees on a definition of the aggressor and on application of sanctions, it will have gone farther than any previous Pan-American Conference. Significantly, both Brazil and Bolivia also have submitted methods for ascertaining who is the aggressor in a conflict between nations, and a definition is also contained in the proposal for a league of American nations submitted by Colombia and the Dominican Republic.

Bolivia, Colombia and the Dominican Republic have also advanced proposals for diplomatic and economic sanctions against an aggressor, hence these two points will have considerable support, provided the minor variations existing among the various proposals can be ironed out.

The conference may unite the Pan-American states even more, if agreement is reached on the creation of an inter-American court of international justice and on a declaration with regard to the non-recognition of territory acquired by force.

False Teeth Wearers Are Worst Breath Offenders!

"Need More Than a Mouth Wash" say Authorities . . . Recommend Polident

Plates and bridges soak up odors and impurities like a sponge! A thin dark scum collects on them. This scum holds germs and decay bacteria. It is so tough that ordinary brushing seldom removes it. And it gets into every tiny crevice where brushing can't even reach. Almost always it results in "denture breath" —probably the most offensive of all breath odors.

Yet there's a perfect way to clean and purify false teeth without brushing, acid or danger. It is Polident, the powder that dissolves away all scum, stains, tarnish and odor. Makes breath sweeter—and plates or bridges look better and feel better. Tens of thousands call Polident a blessing for comfort, convenience and hygiene. Long-lasting can costs only 40¢ at any drug store. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and dentists everywhere.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

War Swings Close To Hong Kong

Refugees, Wounded Begin Flocking To British Colony

HONG KONG, Nov. 24 (A.P.). — Warfare in South China surged within 20 miles of this British Crown colony to-day as Japanese opened a pincer drive to wipe out Chinese south-east of Canton.

Throngs of Chinese refugees and a scattering of wounded Chinese soldiers crossed into British territory this morning.

The Japanese landed 2,000 soldiers yesterday on the east bank of the Pearl River. The yadvanced inland toward the Canton-Kowloon Railway along which Chinese irregulars and Kwangtung Provincial militiamen had remained since the October 21 capitulation of Canton.

Meanwhile, other Japanese troops pushed southward along the railway from Sheklung, about 40 miles east of Canton and a similar distance north of Hong King.

The number of Chinese troops still in the 20-mile strip of delta land between the railway and the river mouth was believed to be several thousand—irregulars and members of the Kwangtung Provincial Defence Corps that failed to save Canton.

This fighting was the closest to Hong Kong of any land operations in the Chinese-Japanese conflict. The force which took Canton landed in the north-eastern extreme of Bias Bay, 30 miles from the colony.

Hitherto the Japanese had carefully steered clear of Hong Kong's boundary. In the present drive, however, a Japanese plane flew along the edge of the colony, showering pamphlets to warn Chinese villagers to submit peacefully.

Kai-Shek in Charge.

(A despatch from Shanghai said General Chiang Kai-Shek personally was directing Chinese operations in the south where a counter-offensive against Canton from the west and north-east has been under way for several days.

(Chinese advices to Shanghai said the General was fighting the Japanese to stalemates in some sectors and pushing closer to Canton in others. The Chinese were said to be supported by their newly active air force.

(The Chinese also claimed success 110 miles north of Hankow where Sinyang was said to have been encircled. Japanese spokesmen reiterated their forces were organizing for a full force offensive in South China to carry the invasion up the Canton-Hankow Railway.

(A Chinese report on a Japanese air raid yesterday at Sian, capital of Shensi Province, said 250 casualties and destruction of 150 houses resulted from 80 bombs. The Japanese had told of striking establishments of the Chinese Communist. Eighth Army.)

Memorial Honors Sandford Fleming

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — A bronze plaque on an old three-storey red brick building in downtown Toronto was unveiled to-day by Mayor Ralph C. Day in memory of the Scottish engineer who gave the world standard time, Sir Sandford Fleming.

A group of about 100 citizens stood in a chill wind as the tablet was unveiled in a brief ceremony. The building, now the headquarters of a fraternal society, formerly was the Canadian Institute where 60 years ago Sir Sandford read a paper upon his proposal to divide the world into time zones.

LONDON, Nov. 24 (CP Cable) —When the King visits Canada next summer he will be offered "two elk and two black beaver" as his right under an ancient pledge, Hon. Vincent Massey said in a speech last night.

Addressing a dinner of the City Livery Club the Canadian High Commissioner said the charter of the Hudson's Bay Company provided that "whenever the sovereign visits the territory of the governor and company of adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay" he shall be presented with two elk and two black beavers.

The offering will be made "on some appropriate occasion."

He declared His Majesty will reach Canada "not as a visitor but as the King of Canada," and that the Dominion is happy at the compliment paid her.

$2,000,000 Fires Scourge California Area

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24 (AP)— Two disastrous mountain blazes in the Santa Monica and San Bernardino ranges were checked by an army of fire-fighters today as property damage exceeded $2,000,000 and 12,000 acres of watershed lay blackened.

One death was indirectly attributed to the Santa Monica blaze, which scourged Topanga, Santa Ynez, Los Flores and Santa Ynez canyons after in kindled in tinder-dray brush yesterday.

Mrs. Silver, wife of the music director of 20th Century-Fox film studio, was found dead at her home. Nerve-worn by the menacing nearnes sof flames during the night, she apparently took an overdose of sleeping powder, the coroner reported. An inquest was ordered.

Blown oceanward by a desert wind, flames kindled in the tinder-dry brush of the Santa Monica Mountains yesterday poured down Topanga Canyon and other inhabited areas to the Pacific.

Along traffic-jammed roads, many families fled on foot, while it was estimated 350 homes and cabins were burned behind them.

A switch of the wind saved the $25,000 estate of film actor Richard Dix at the head of Los Flores Canyon. Menaced on two sides by fire, Fernwood, fur miles from the coast in Topanga Canyon, escaped destructin of its 150 homes.

Near Exclusive Colony.

If ocean breezes do not spring up to swerve the Santa Monica range fire inland toward foothill communities of San Fernando Valley, fire fighting chiefs expressed hope it could be held in check.

Rising breezes before dawn drove flames three miles in less than an hour. They hurtled Sunset Boulevard and closely approached the Pacific colony, a religious settlement atop Pacific Palisades, and the exclusive Santa Monica Canyon area.

Bel-Air's countless movie estates were menaced by the conflagration moving relentlessly along the southwestern slopes of the Santa Monica

Author Thompson Seton Explodes Hoax Admits New Daughter Is Adopted

When the 78-year-old Seton, once naturalist for the Manitoba Government, and his wife reached New York last week they told reporters that "Beulah is our very own."

"Why I know a man who became a father when he was 92," Seton assured sceptics.

Mrs. Seton, who is 49, helped the joke along by saying her husband was "as youthful mentally, spiritually and physically as he had ever been."

The metropolis was duly impressed and the supposed blessed event was widely publicized.

The hoax was admitted today as the Setons appeared to leave for Santa Fe, New Mexico.

2 Toronto Brokers Jailed For Nickel Swindle

Racket-Buster Dewey Seeks Pair In New York Over Shipments Of Iron Ore For Nickel

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP).—Toronto police today awaited instructions from New York State's racket-busting district attorney, Thomas E. Dewey, following arrests here of two Bay Street brokers on grand larceny charges. The apprehensions climaxed a two-year investigation into an alleged $250,000 nickel "swindle" in 1936.

The men arrested yesterday at Dewey's request and being held awaiting an extraditional hearing, are Meyer Brenner, president of Meyer Brenner Securities Corporation, and Leopold Bochner, a partner. An indictment filed July 21, 1936, in New York charged the men with stealing $48,000 from several New York corporations.

Indicted with the pair arrested here was Freeman Bernstein, prize fight promoter, who was brought back to New York from Los Angeles as a probation violator. He has been placed on suspended sentence in connection with a worthless cheque for $2,000 that he had passed on the management of the Hotel New Yorker.

The fraud shipments of nickel to Italy during the Ethiopian war. It is alleged that in 1936 New York residents were approached and told that a large shipment of nickel cathoids could be obtained in Toronto at a moderate price and sold to Italy at a profit.

Sanctions were in effect against Italy at the time and when the shipment was unloaded at two European ports, the bags were found to contain old scrap iron from a Toronto junk yard.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers, acting on rumors nickel was being smuggled illegally out of Canada, halted one shipment but took no action when they discovered the bags contained iron. At that time the fraud had not been exposed and the R.C.M.P. gave the shipment a clean bill.

The swindle was allegedly discovered when the second shipment reached Rotterdam and an Italian government agent ordered payment upheld. The New York syndicate immediately appealed to the district attorney's office.

The old iron was allegedly shipped by a circuitous route to Halifax and Saint John, N.B., The first shipment, valued at $103,000 left Halifax early in 1936 and arrived in Hamburg two weeks later. Other shipments followed from Halifax and Saint John for Rotterdam. The second load was reportedly valued at $33,000 and the final shipment at $113,000.

Bail at $25,000

Extradition hearing of Meyer Brenner and Leopold Bochner, Toronto brokers charged at New York with theft of $48,000 in an alleged nickel "swindle," was set by Judge Daniel O'Connell for Dec. 1. Bail for the two was set at $25,000 each.

Mother Braves Fire For Friend

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (C.P.).— Because another young mother was her friend, Mrs. Wilmar Flood early to-day climbed through the window of a blazing apartment building. Barefoot and with a dressing gown thrown over her nightgown, she ran up two flights of stairs and roused the occupants of a third-storey apartment in time for them to escape with a 20-day-old baby.

Afterwards, when she and her husband and nine-year-old boy Jack, had fed half-a-dozen who escaped from the Dundas Street West building, and firemen had put out the blaze which roared from the basement up three floors of a stairwell, Mrs. Flood fainted from nervousness and exhaustion.

The flames that swept up the central stairwell forced occupants to escape from the rear of the building and blackened woodwork and staircase all the way to the third floor skylight.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Piper, young married couple, had Mrs. Flood to thank for enabling them to escape from their third-storey apartment. Mrs. Piper injured her back in racing down the stairs, carrying her baby, Barry Douglas, who will be three weeks old to-morrow.

Crown Gives $1,000 To Campbell

$1,378, Of $4,000 Lost Goes To Bank Rest To Bandit

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 24—(CP).— Approximately $1,000 of the money seized when Melville Campbell, confessed bank bandit, was arrested in Windsor last month, has been returned to the gunman, it was learned to-day.

Campbell is in Kingston Penitentiary, serving a nine-year term for his part in a holdup of the Royal Bank of Mount Brydges on October 13, when he and Harold J. Moore of Windsor obtained nearly $4,000 at the point of guns.

When a squad of Provincial and Windsor city policemen raided Campbell's aparment at the border, five days after the holdup, they found $2,394 in cash.

The money was seized by the police and held until after the bandit pleaded guilty and was sentenced by County Magistrate Hawkshaw. Then under an order signed by Magistrate Hawkshaw, they returned $1,378 to the Royal Bank.

The remainder, which crown officials could not earmark as having been part of the actual loot from the holdup was given back to Campbell.

States Celebrating 317th Thanksgiving

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(CP). — Many an American family, gathered around its Thanksgiving dinner table, offered a quiet prayer today for peace, tolerance and freedom for the oppressed.

In public religious services throughout the country there were special prayers and appeals for an end to attacks on Jews and Christians in foreign lands.

The residents of Plymouth, Mass. —birthplace of Thanksgiving Day in the United States 317 years ago —chose 26-year-old Rabbi Samual Friedman to addres sa union church service as 'Our answer to anti-Semitism."

"The very fact that Jews are present in this church now, and a rabbi is speaking from a Christian pulpit, is the answer which true Christians give to those who have strayed from the precepts of the 'Sermon on the Mount'," the rabbi said.

On Thanksgiving Eve, President Roosevelt issued a statement from the "Little White House" at Warm Springs, Ga., expressing hope reports of a prospective increase in refugee migration to Palestine would prove authentic.

From Pittsburgh the 500 delegates to the 15th annual convention of Young Women's Hebrew organization, despatched a Thanksgiving message to President Roosevelt expressing gratitude for "the blessings we enjoy as Americans."

In three or four days $500,000 was raised in England for the Czechs.

We Need Population Says Alaska But Must Be Select

Ketchikan, Alaska, Nov. 24 (AP) "WE NEED population but it must be reasonably selective," the Ketchikan Chronicle said editorially yesterday in declaring any attempt at colonization of refugee Jews in Alaska would be doomed to failure.

The suggestion was made by Interior Secretary Harold Ickes and others.

"Political refugee or an unemployed American is not necessarily the man to carve a home out of the wilderness, break ground and start raising foodstuffs," the Chronicle said.

Many Remedies

HOLSTEIN, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)— Bernard MacDonald started something when he offered recently to sell his eye for $5,000. The farm worker will use the money to obtain special treatment for stomach disorders. He hasn't yet had an offer for his eye but many people have shipped him a wide variety of medicinal preparations.

Use of the liner Normandie as a hotel for French athletes in the 1940 Olympic Games is urged.

Aids In Suicide

Mrs. Marie Burckhalter is shown here as she left the office of the district attorney of White Plains N.Y., after being charged with first degree manslaughter for aiding here husband to commit suicide. According to Mrs. Burckhalter her husband, president of a chemical company, expressed a desire to commit suicide and she accompanied him to their garage and helped him rig up a hose to the exhaust of their car and then went shopping.

Suicides Mount As Nazis Break Jews

BERLIN, Nov. 24 (A.P.). — Suicides among Jews were reported increasing to-day before the mounting intensity of the Nazi anti-Semitic drive.

There were no figures, but those who told of the suicides said they included husbands who chose death as the best way to guard against further hardships for non-Jewish wives.

Driven from social life in Germany and ordered to get out of industry, Jews yesterday suffered a further blow in an assessment of one-fifth of their fortunes above $2,000.

The money must be paid by August 15, 1939. For the some 60,000 Jews in concentration camps there was almost insurmountable difficulty in trying to arrange for the payments.

Few Jews have sufficient cash on hand to pay the fine, and their source of income is being curtailed rapidly by the taking over of Jewish stores by non-Jewish owners.

Nazis said to-day that the process of Aryanizing business at present was confined to the retail field.

The propaganda campaign continued, with the Deutsche Bergwerks-Zeitung, important industrial publication of Duesseldorf, editorializing that the anti-Semetic drive was justified because of the wealth of Jews.

The editorial "How Jews Became So Rich," said they never lost all their property despite medieval persecutions because "they knew how to cover up."

Their opportunity to build wealth, the paper said, increased with the development of capitalism in league with liberal democracy.

No Power To Impound Car In Sentencing Drunk Says Cadi, Upsetting Law

Important Decision Follows Protest On London Court Case; Fails To Rule Law Is Invalid

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP).—In city court today Magistrate Donald Menzies ruled that a magistrate in sentencing a man on a drunk driving charge has no power to impound his car.

The decision was an important one. During the past four months courts in all parts of Ontario have been impounding cars for three-month periods in drunk driving cases. The decision handed down today rules that the magistrate dealing with a drunk driving case has no such power.

The magistrate's decision was given in the case of Harvey McDonald, Jacqueline Street man, who was convicted of driving his truck while intoxicated. When Magistrate Menzies considered issuing the usual order impounding the machine for three months, A. B. Siskind, defence counsel, protested that Ontario's new law covering impounding of cars was invalid.

The lawyer argued that drunk driving cases were tried under criminal law, which is in the exclusive jurisdiction of Federal Parliament. Therefore he claimed the punishment for drunk driving cases could be provided only in the criminal code. He claimed that the Provincial regulation ordering seizure of cars in drunk driving cases was an attempt of the Legislature to encroach on the jurisdiction of the Federal Parliament. He asked the court to declare the Provincial law invalid.

Crown Attorney Norman Newton argued that the law was proper and was not an attempt to impose an additional penalty.

Magistrate Menzies, in handing down his decision, did not rule that the Provincial law was invalid. Instead he ruled that the law gave the magistrate no power to impound the cars.

May Be Appeal.

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (C.P.).—Ruling of Magistrate Donald B. Menzies in London that he had no power to impound the car of a motorist convicted of drunk driving likely will be appealed by the Attorney-General's Department, it was learned at the Provincial Parliament buildings to-day.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant has instructed W. B. Common, K. C., Department solicitor, to write to London for details of the case, following which it will be reviewed either for appeal or as the basis of an amendment to the Highway Traffic Act at the next session of the Legislature.

Impounding provision of the law, enacted last year, is said to be vague as to what body has the necessary authority to order impounding of a car. Confusion is said to have arisen as to whether the Magistrate has the power or whether the order must come from the Department of Highways.

The Attorney-General said to-day if an amendment to the Act was defeated it would establish beyond a doubt the right of a Magistrate to take such action.

Macphail Urges All Farmers Get Organized

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (C.P.). — Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.-Labor member of Parliament for Grey-Bruce, suggested to the annual convention of the United Farm Women of Ontario here to-day the formation of a "general organization which takes in all farmers."

"I would like to see a farmers' union, though I don't like to call it that," said Miss Macphail. "We should have some general farm movement, such as the U.F.O. was, that would bring farmers together as a whole."

Addressing the women's section of the third day of the 25th annual convention of the United Farmers of Ontario, Miss Macphail said live stock producers, wheat farmers, fruit growers, and other agricultural groups must unite as one unit. "All these commodity groups have to get together to thresh out a national agricultural policy for Canada," she said.

A Last Effort

Canadians must make "a last desperate effort to save democracy," for democracy is "definitely threatened," she said. Elected representatives in many places were attempting to be dictators. "You see them everywhere—you see them in this province," Miss Macphail added.

She noted a trend toward increased provincial powers. The powers of the provinces were increasing while those of the federal government were decreasing until it had become "a collecting agency to give money to ungrateful provinces."

The member for Grey-Bruce urged discontinuance by Canada of appeals to the Privy Council. The Dominion had "practically sold out her unity by referring to the Privy Council on constitutional matters."

At the outset of her address, Miss Macphail said she would like to stop making public speeches "for six months or a year if anyone would only tell me how to do it." She said she had been bothered with her heart and "I want to quit speaking until I am just consumed with the desire to speak."

Six Sailors Killed

ROME, Nov. 24 (AP)—A collision between the Italian cruiser Pola and the destroyer Lampo in which six men were killed and several injured was announced officially today.

The navy said the crash, which occurred in the Gulf of Taranto, between the "heel" and "toe" of southern Italy, was due to the failure of the Lampo's rudder. It was understood the accident occurred during a storm.

Bank Door Damaged

BROOKLIN, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP) —Thieves last night damaged a door on the branch office of the Dominion Bank of Canada here. They were apparently frightened away before they could force an entry, Manager P. A. Journeaux said, since everything in the office seemed to be in order. The bank was robbed about six years ago.

RUNS INTO SIDE OF CAR

HAMILTON — Running into the street in scanty attire at four o'clock this morning, George J. Green, 83, was killed when he ran into the side of an automobile driven by David C. Webber, 31.

Rain, Snow And Fog Curb U.S. Holiday

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)— Wintry weather gripped much of the country and forest fires claimed a property toll of at least $2,000,000 on two Southern California mountain ranges today as the United States celebrated its Thanksgiving Day.

Rain, snow and fog hampered holiday traffic.

An official reading of 30 degrees below zero was reported from West Yellowstone, Mont. Temperatures in the 20's prevailed in many other areas.

Inclement conditions developed for major football games.

Sleet, rain and sub-freezing weather caused cancellation of airline flights into Shreveport, La., and fog bothered air traffic in parts of the east.

Snow fell in many states from the Rockies to New England, dipping into the south last night.

Hunting Deer With An Empty Gun, No Permit Amazes Warden But Costs Alderman $12.75

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP)—Alderman William Croft has been shooting holes in Board of Control reports all year, but when he shouldered a gun and went out into the deer country near North Bay he forgot to arm himself with a licence to shoot deer.

The alderman was peacefully planting trees around his summer home the other day when some neighbor boys invited him to go hunting. He took his rifle, pinned his gun licence on his coat, left his cartridges on the kitchen table and went into the bush.

Ere long a game warden demanded proof of his right to shoot, although he had no cartridges with him. The alderman proudly pointed to the gun licence pinned on his breast. The warden shook his head and asked for the licence to shoot deer. No such licence was in the possession of the alderman and the cartridges were still on the kitchen table.

But that did not satisfy the game warden. He demanded his pound of flesh in the form of a $12.75 fine. Ald. Croft paid rather than motor 480 miles to North Bay and back to fight the case. The game warden seized the alderman's gun, but the cartridges are still on the kitchen table.

Civilian Flying Corps Mooted

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—(AP). — The United States Congress may be asked to lend financial aid to a plan for creating a large army of civilian fliers to bolster any air rearmament program advanced by President Roosevelt.

Organized efforts to build up such a flier reserve, like those in Germany and Italy and to a lesser extent in Great Britain, to insure an adequate number of pilots in a national emergency, have been given impetus by the President's hint November 15, that the air forces might be expanded.

The Army Air Corps has surveyed the possibility of increasing its pilot-power by instituting aeronautical courses at land grant colleges.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority, which supplanted the old Bureau of Air Commerce last August, apparently is developing its own plan to encourage private flying.

"We have no mandate to militarize civil aviation," Edward Noble, Authority chairman, said in a recent address. "Turning the aim of the airplane from economic to military use is a matter for military experts. But we can at least give them the material to be expert with."

He advocated such an increase in private flying that the United States would have 250,000 civilian airplanes in daily use. Currently it has about 10,000.

Los Angeles, Nov. 24 (AP)

OBLIVIOUS to smoke that billowed about his beach cabin from the Topanga canyon forest fire, Grisha Goluboff, 15-year-old violin progidy, practiced while his parents sought frantically to reach him.

Motoring from San Francisco for a Thanksgiving visit to their son, they found traffic on the coast highway halted when they reached the mouth of the canyon.

Mrs. Rose Goluboff, the boy violinist's mother, abandoned her car and ran for a quarter of a mile to find him, clad in shorts and shirt, busy with his music.

Demonstration Is Given Of Cooking

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24.—Mrs. H. M. Aitken won the hearts of the large crowd of Lakefield ladies who turned out on Tuesday afternoon to see the demonstration of cooking which was given by the dietitian in the Memorial Hall here under the auspices of the Women's Association of Lakefield United Church.

The ladies turned out primarily to garner new recipes, but were so carried away by the vivacity and charm of the speaker, that they all but forgot to jot down those all-important details which Mrs. Aitken divulged and which do so much toward making a cake or a pie all that it should be.

Rev. G. F. Kelly acted as chairman and introduced Mrs. Aitken, who delighted her audience by the amusing recital of a number of humorous stories.

Mrs. Aitken, in less than 2½ hours, showed the ladies present how to roast chicken, make three kinds of rolls, a whole-wheat loaf, a chocolate cake, a beautiful icing, salad dressing, mince pie and fancy cakes.

At the conclusion of the demonstration, a draw was made and prizes distributed to a number of lucky winners. The most-coveted prizes were a large cake presented to the oldest lady present and won by Mrs. Dick Simpson, who is 83; a silver cake plate won by Miss Milburn of Smith; and the roasted chicken won by Mrs. Doug. Davis. All the cooking prepared during the afternoon was given out in the draws, after the ladies had inspected and admired it as the appetizingly arranged and delicious looking food demanded.

Mrs. G. F. Kelly moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Aitken.

Duchess Resigns To Test Policy

LONDON, Nov. 24 (CP-Havas).—The Duchess of Atholl today resigned her seat in the House of Commons and announced she would be a candidate in the by-election which will follow in the Kinross and Western Perth division of Scotland.

The Duchess has been a vigorous opponent of Prime Minister Chamberlain's foreign policy and last Saturday the Conservative organization of her constituency disowned her and chose another candidate to fight the seat on its behalf at the next general election.

In the by-election the Duchess, who visited Canada last month, apparently will stand as an Independent. She had been Conservative member for the division since 1923, and in recent months has been active in support of the Spanish government and in opposition to the Munich agreement on Czechoslovakia.

Chamberlain Wires Widow Condolences

LONDON, Nov. 24—(CP-Havas).—Prime Minister Chamberlain today telegraphed condolences to Mrs. Eric Robinson, formerly of Sault Ste Marie, Ont., and widow of the pilot who was at the controls of the plane that carried the Prime Minister to his meetings with Chancellor Hitler. Commander Robinson, formerly a pilot in Canada's hinterlands, was killed in a crash Tuesday.

"Greatly grieved at the news of your husband's fatal accident," the prime minister said. "Please accept my deepest sympathy. I have most greatful recollections of his wonderful skill."

Commander Robinson will be buried at Portishead Saturday.

Three Men To Hang For Woman's Death

DAUPHIN, Man., Nov. 24—(CP).—Three men will die on the gallows Feb. 16 for the murder of aged Mrs. Anna Cottick, fatally beaten by robbers who ransacked her home, 25 miles north of here, on May 13.

The three men, sentenced to death yesterday by Mr. Justice A. K. Dysart, are Peter Korzenowski, 29, Dan Prytula, 32, and Dan Kanuka, 41.

The jury deliberated more than four hours before returning a verdict. The jury recommended mercy for Dan Kanuka.

All three accepted the sentence calmly and thanked the judge with Kanuka adding: "I did not enter the house and I killed no one and I do not think I should hang."

Mr. Justice Dysart assured Kanuka he would forward the recommendation of mercy to the Minister of Justice at Ottawa.

Passenger Injured

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Mrs. Earl Finnegan, Frankford, suffered a fractured leg, broken hand and severe concussion, when the car in which she was riding failed to negotiate a curve and turned over in the ditch today, 10 miles northeast of here. Her condition was given as "fair" by Dr. G. H. Stobie.

Francis Long, driver of the car and three other passengers, were uninjured.

FOR BETTER BANANA PLANTS

To counteract disastrou effects of the Panama and leaf-spot diseases upon the West Indian banana industry, Sir Frank Stockdale advocates large-scale production of disease-resistant plants in his report to the British commission investigating the problems.

Reich Obtained Valuable Concessions

Two German-Czech agreements, designed to provide for a great motor highway and canal waterways to connect up Germany with Austria through the centre of Czechoslovakia, have been revealed by official radio broadcasts from Berlin. The highway treaty gives Germany the right to build a speedway through Moravia from Silesia to Austria, providing a short cut between Breslau and Vienna. A canal system will be built linking the Danube River, which flows into the Black Sea, with the two German rivers, the Oder and the Elbe, which empty into the Baltic and North Seas, thus opening a great waterway diagonally across Europe.

Windsor Will Probe High Building Cost

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Windsor National Housing Act committee members will press for an investigation into the high costs of building in Windsor to determine if a combine controls building here. They decided last night to write Dominion housing authorities at Ottawa for the investigation under the combines act.

F. W. Nicholls, national housing director, informed committee members in a letter, it was unfortunate building costs are so high in Windsor and "we are more and more leaning to the belief that, where there is such a large discrepancy between rentals and building costs something is definitely wrong in the community and whatever is wrong should be corrected before too extensive a building program gets under way."

Nicholls added in his letter he believed that 90 per cent of the Windsor district loans were not sound loans and there would eventually be grief for everyone connected with them.

Crokinole Party Planned By Y.P.U.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24—The Young People's Union of Lakefield United church will hold a crokinole party on Monday evening Dec. 5, the members decided, when they held their regular meeting here on Monday.

Crokinole parties used to be quite popular in these parts, the young people were informed and though their popularity has waned of late years, the young people decided there was no reason why the game should not be revived.

Monday evening's meeting opened with an hour of recreation led by Rev. Kelly, after which Mr. Robert Spence, president of the Peterborough presbytery Y.P.U., took charge of the meeting. After the business, a short worship service was held and Mrs. Dora McMillan sang delightfully the selection "Dream of Paradise."

Robert Spence spoke on the place of the local Y.P.U. in the National Young People's Union. He explained that the Young People's union is a small link in a very large chain extending across Canada. He told how the programs are planned annually by the national council and explained how members of the Peterborough Presbytery Y.P.U. are appointed for the purpose of helping the local unions with their work.

Railroaders Protest German Savagery

MONTREAL, Nov. 24—(CP)—The Montreal district council of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees last night adopted a resolution urging the Canadian government to protest "savagery of present attacks on Jews, Catholics and Protestants" in Germany.

As a means to support the protest, the meeting proposed an economic boycott in trade and credit "against Hitler and his followers."

"Maintenance of a 'dignified silence' is not a worthy contribution on the part of a democratic country of Canada's prestige," a preamble to the resolution declared.

Won Special Prizes

CAMPBELLFORD, November 24.—Special prizes were won by R. Osier and Mrs. R. Bush at the bingo party held under auspices of the Catholic Women's League on Tuesday evening. Twenty-one prizes were given out during the evening and the attendance crowded the league rooms to capacity. Mrs. Vince Farrell who with Mrs. Ed. O'Connor was in charge of the evening announced that this would be the last bingo party until after Christmas.

Hold Theatre Party

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, November 24.—Members of Campbellford's Boy Scout Troop were guests of the management at the Hollywood theatre on Wednesday evening. Nineteen of the Scouts assembled with their leader Charles Collard early in the evening to march into the theatre as guests of Mr. Rapport who has in various ways indicated a sincere interest in the work of the Scouts. Latter the boys gathered at the home of Scoutmaster Charles Collard where they were served refreshments and spent the remainder of the evening in open forum.

O'Leary Criticizes School System

MONTREAL, Nov. 24 (CP) — Canada's school system and its governmental system were criticized last night by Grattan O'Leary, associate editor of the Ottawa Journal, in an address before the Montreal branch of the Canadian Credit Men's Trust Association.

Not enough attention was paid to teaching the tenets of democracy in schools, he said. Canada's youth should learn more of democracy and of the duties of citizenship. He added very little of world history after the French revolution was taught Canadian pupils.

The system of government had resulted in "a steady decline in intelligence of members of the House of Commons in the last 30 years." In England young men were educated especially for parliament, he said, whereas in Canada the man who could solicit most votes was elected in each riding. This constituted a dangerous trend in public life, harmful to democracy.

Barcelona Raided 8 Times In 22 Hours

BARCELONA, Nov. 24—(AP). — Nine swift insurgent bombers dumped death into Barcelona's streets this morning in the eighth raid in 22 hours.

The number of dead was not established at once. The toll for the previous seven raids yesterday and during the night was 48 dead and 146 wounded.

Coming from the north in two squadrons, the bombers weaved waril yacross the city against heavy anti-aircraft fire and bombed several sections of the city. Then they wheeled away toward the Mediterranean.

Government pursuit ships had patrolled the cloudless Barcelona skies all night long and twice fought with invading bombers. One bomber was reported shot down.

3 Toronto Crashes

TORONTO, Nov. 24—(CP).—One man is under arrest on a charge of not remaining at the scene of an accident, another will be summoned and a third is sought after three automobile accidents last night in which drivers did not stop.

Stanley Pont, 27, Toronto, is under arrest. He is the alleged driver of an auto that sped away after striking another car. The second man was questioned in connection with an accident in which a car did not stop after overturning another machine. The third similar accident occurred when a parked machine was damaged by a car later found abandoned.

Young Gunman

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. Nov. 24—(CP).—Police held a 13-year-old state ward today because, authorities say, he threatened to shoot up the school teacher and students after he was reprimanded but he returned shortly and drove the teacher and students out of the school at the point of a .22 rifle. He will appear in juvenile court.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 24 (C.P.). — Scarcity of offerings and relative steadiness at Liverpool gave Winnipeg wheat futures a firm tone in listless dealings to-day. At the final bell prices were unchanged to ¼ lower, November 59¼, December 58⅛, May 61¼, and July 62 cents.

Brokers for the greater part of the session stood on the pit's sideline awaiting developments. Lack of outside buying or selling accounted for the drab proceedings. With United States markets on holiday there was practically no intermarket spreading.

Canadian export sales were placed at 150,000 bushel overnight compared with 500,000 bushels daily earlier in the week.

with other grades $6 to $7.25. Sheep

Fewer Jobless

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 24—(AP)—Unemployment insurance officials announced today 43,204 persons have been eliminated from unemployment benefit rolls here through getting employment or having obtained the maximum of 16-week benefits.

The peak load of 312,000 persons has been cut about 40,000 weekly during the past month.

Marmora Flyers Sponsor Program

MARMORA, Nov. 24.—The Marmora Flyers' Club put on an entertainment at the Town Hall on Wednesday before a moderate attendance.

The program opened with a mock wedding ceremony in which the following high school pupils took part: John Shannon, Leo O'Connor, William Prentice, Tom Byrnes, Miriam Nobes, and Dorothy Henry. Also assisting was Jackie Marsh, boy soloist of Belleville, who sang, "I Love You Truly." This young vocalist next gave "Little Old Lady" and "Little Lady Make-Believe," with Miss Flora Sanderson as accompanist.

After Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds had given some instrumental selections, the following three members of St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. put on a playlet entitled: "Too Sulky": Betty Jones, Theresa Burridge and Kathleen Kerr. Joan Marsh of Belleville next executed a pleasing tap dance. This was followed by more selections by Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds.

Another playlet "Hypnotism" was then given by the following cast: Francis Hollingsworth, John Shannon, William Prentice, Dorothy Henry and Miriam Nobes. Joan Marsh was the napplauded for some more fine dancing to the harmonica accompaniment of her brother, Jackie. The latter rendered "The Cathedral in the Pines," as the next number. The program concluded with a Charlie McCarthy skit, and the National Anthem.

France, Germany Draft Pact To Shun War

PARIS, Nov. 24 (AP)—France and Germany were said officially today to have completed negotiations for a written war renunciation accord. Signature and publication were expected soon, it was said, but the date was not announced.

The disclosure an agreement had been reached came as Premier Edouard Daladier awaited the arrival of Prime Minister Chamberlain for diplomatic talks.

An authorized government source said simply that the French-German negotiations had come to a successful conclusion.

Closer co-operation between the armed forces of Great Britain and France was expected to be arranged by Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Informed quarters said the meeting, planned as a second step in European appeasement following the four-power Munich conference, would be devoted almost entirely to strengthening and co-ordinating the armies, navies and air forces of the two nations.

It was understood also that the military agreement signed last April 29 in London between the two countries would be re-drafted and strengthened.

Instant Army Aid

The new accord would make instant military aid unconditional, whereas the present pact gives Britain the right to decide in case war resulted from a German attack on France's central European allies, informed sources said.

Mr. Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, British foreign secretary, were expected to arrive in Paris by train shortly before 6 p.m. (1 p.m., EST).

Military cooperation was listed as the primary subject for discussion today and tomorrow. A plan for mediation of the Spanish civil war, the question of aiding Germany's persecuted Jews and the situation in the Far East were other important matters to be taken up.

Sources close to the government said it was believed the dropping, or at least readjustment, of the French-Soviet pact would be a necessary condition to any automatic guarantee to France by Great Britain.

Under this pact France would be called upon to attack Germany if Nazi troops committed an aggression against Soviet Russia.

In the event of a German attack on Rumania, France's ally, it was believed Britain also would choose to fight in view of the new close co-operation between London and King Carol's government.

As far as France was concerned the prospects for appeasement with Italy and Germany were not bright.

Italy is carrying on a violent press campaign against France and has refused to reach a friendship agreement with her except on terms France considers unreasonable.

Hilarious Heils For Hermann

Just bubbling over with happiness, despite the fact that he was obliged to dress in the plain brown shirt of the original Nazis, and to leave his beloved field marshal's baton at home, Field Marshal Hermann Goering, premier of Prussia, and No. 2 Nazi, gaily acknowledges the enthusiastic hails of lesser brownshirts during the celebration commemorating the ill-fated "beer cellar putsch" of 1923, when the heils that met revolting Nazis were hails of bullets that killed 16. A small boy, carried away by admiration for the plump field marshal, crashed through storm troop lines to give the great man a real close-up heil and salute.

King Offers R. B. Bennett Benefit Of His Housekeeping Experience

OTTAWA, Nov. 24—(CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night paid warm tribute to his long-time political rival, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, whose complete retirement from the Canadian political scene was announced Monday.

His best wishes would follow the former Conservative chieftain always, Mr. Mackenzie King said. He rejoiced that Mr. Bennett was acquiring an estate in England where, for the first time since he left his paternal home, he will have his own private residence.

As one bachelor who has for years enjoyed the pleasures of a country home, to another bachelor who has always lived in hotels, the Prime Minister jokingly offered to give Mr. Bennett the benefit of his housekeeping experience.

"I appreciate the great service Mr. Bennett has rendered his country and will watch his career in the new sphere he has adopted with the greatest interest," the Prime Minister said.

Monday Mr. Bennett, just back from a visit to England, announced that he had purchased a home in Surrey and would return within a few weeks to take up residence there. He also indicated that he would not again take his seat in the House of Commons, where he represents Calgary West. He is 68.

"I suppose most men have dreams as to the manner in which they would want to spend the concluding years of their lives," Mr. Mackenzie King said in commenting on the decision taken by his predecessor in office.

"Mr. Bennett is fortunate in being able to gratify his hopes for an opportunity to play a part in the larger arena of public affairs which his new surroundings will open to him. At the same time he will be in a position to continue serving his native country.

"I am glad too that Mr. Bennett is getting a home of his own in the country. I have often wondered why he did not do so before. Living so long, as he has, in hotels, must have meant a great personal sacrifice to him. I know what it means to me having my home in the country."

U.F.O. Year Nets Profit Of $46,193

TORONTO, Nov. 24—(CP).—The Ontario United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Limited, in the year ending Sept. 30 last had a net profit of $46,193, not including $19,110 added to depreciation reserve and $6,507 set aside for possible bad debts, the total improvement being $71,811, it was reported to-day to the shareholders' annual meeting here by General Manager H. B. Clemes.

Sales in the livestock department, $6,498,514 were the largest item in the tabulation of all sales at $10,390,378. Second was the creameries department with sales of $2,317,663.

"Unfortunately we took a rather heavy loss in our butter inventory," Mr. Clemes' report said. Requirements for part of the winter demand were purchased in the summer and when Canada's butter exports fell, an inventory loss was taken because of falling prices. Since the close of the statement the market has advanced and it was predicted part of the loss would be retrieved.

The mortgage of $30,000 against the Guelph and Galt creameries was paid off. Outstanding is a $20,000 mortgage against the plants at Renfrew, Arnprior and Cobden. "Your properties and equipment with a book value of $640,000, are practically all paid for," said Mr. Clemes.

Want Fertilizer Plant

The opening of two new sales departments—oils and electrical appliances—was reported. An effort was made to open a fertilizer plant but dock space could not be had in time. However arrangements were made to bring in a boatload of fertilizer for distribution through the co-operative.

Marketing of hay, straw, potatoes, turnips, etc., was reported becoming more difficult each year because of the activities of truck salesmen who peddle them from store to store. The grower was not sure of market conditions when selling to truckers. "He cannot secure advance prices and must, on many occasions, sell at a lower price and break the market."

The exporting of fresh eggs to Great Britain early in 1938 was reported as an "oustanding development." Small, regular weekly shipment were maintained through the spring producing season. Stability of the domestic market in January and February—peak months for winter egg production—was thus aided.

Total current assets were reported at $580,142 and current liabilities at $411,450, a surplus of $168,692. Other assets, including capital ones of $244,789, brought the asest total to $858,782. The net surplus at Sept. 30 was $64,623.

It was reported the co-operative now owns the Bradford Marsh Gardens, the owner having died and the co-operative purchasing the properties to protect its second mortgage. Outlay was $20,000. Since then an offer to buy 66 acres of the 300 acres for $16,000 has been received. "We should not only save the mortgage but make a profit besides," the report said.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Howard Clark, Seymour West, was hostess to the members of her Sunday school miass from St. John's United church on Saturday last. Eighteen girls found it possible to attend and spend a very joyous afternoon in games, contests and singing. About five they sat down to supper and did ample justice to the bounteous repast provided by the hostess.

The contests were won by Marguerite McComb and Betty Blake who worked together. The consolation prize went to Jean Free.

Two-Year Term?

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 24—(CP)—City Council will have the electors vote, at the municipal election, on the question as to whether aldermen shall be elected for two-year terms, instead of one year terms, as at present. In 1915 the electors voted on a three-year term for aldermen and the vote resulted in a majority of 1,000 against the proposal.

Freak Mishaps Claim 6,000 Lives In Canada In Past Year

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—You may die in bed or by falling out of bed, in the bath tub, or by stepping out of the bath tub. An insect might bite you, or you might swallow gopher poison or gasoline—or lye. Or you might take the wrong medicine.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has recorded 6,000 strange deaths in the past twelve months—deaths by accident to young and old alike, in the cities and on the farms.

And men are more likely to get killed than women, for two-thirds of the accidental deaths occur to men.

Automobiles take their toll, but there are many strange means of accidental death. The Dominion Bureau reports that one young girl set her comb down on the stove after combing her hair, and died in the fire that followed. A youngster played with a cigaret lighter and his clothes caught fire, taking his life. Another, heeding his mother's call to the dinner table, slid down the banister, to death.

Four hundred youngsters under 4 years of age died by accident—they fell into boiling tubs of water, or into wells; or they were fed external medicine or tumbled into open fireplaces. Some died when they fell from trees or swings in the playyards. Others fell onto the sharp edge of a plow, or saw, and others fell into the river.

Explosions claimed the lives of some men. Others were shot by their companions while hunting. Runaway horses killed others. Some fell through river ice in mid-winter, and others fell from high buildings while cleaning windows.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, Nov. 24.—Apsley United Church Sunday School was given a supper in the Orange Hall on Friday evening by the Women's Association. Hot supper was served by the ladies, which was very much enjoyed by all. After supper games were played.

Quite a number of people from this district took in the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto last weekend, among them being: Rev. Frank McMulken, Mr. Hector Montgomery, Mr. Norman James, Mr. Lemel Prouty, Mrs. Stanley Windsor

Mrs. Charles Smith has returned home from Toronto, where she attended the Central Ontario Women's Institute convention.

Mr. Orville Miller of Lakefield, Orville Payne of Warsaw, Mrs. C. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. George Moore of Warsaw, Mr. and Mrs. R. McDonald were Thursday visitors in the village.

Mrs. Lloyd Kenendy of Dunsford is on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman James, Chandos.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Kennedy of Dunsford were Sunday visitors to Mr. and Mrs. N. James on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown of Whitby who have been visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Brown returned to their home on Monday.

Mrs. Norman James of Chandos and daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Kennedy of Dunsford were supper time visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Lean on Monday.

Ease CHEST COLD misery

Then, to make its long-continued poultice-and-vapor action last even longer, spread a thick layer of VapoRub on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. This also gives the skin extra protection against chilling.

Long after restful sleep comes, VapoRub keeps on working-loosens phlegm—eases muscular soreness or tightness—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

VICKS VAPORUB

Golden Age For Babies

BABIES born in this modern age have so much better chance of growing up big and strong and healthy! We know so much more about their feeding and care. We know now, for instance, the great value of evaporated milk as an infant food. And Irradiated Carnation Milk is being used in so many thousands of homes because babies do thrive on it. And we know the absolute need for "sunshine" Vitamin D for babies and children, so that is why Carnation Milk is irradiated for an extra supply of it. You know that Carnation milk is always safe (sterile), uniform (no matter where you buy it), convenient (needs no boiling, keeps without refrigeration until opened), more digestible than other forms of cows' milk. Also enjoy every day Carnation's rich, creamy smoothness in all cooking and in creaming cereals and coffee.

Write for these Carnation books. "The Contented Baby" is free. The Carnation Cook Book, containing a host of ideas and recipes, with full-page, full-colour illustrations is 15¢ (postpaid). Carnation Company Limited, Toronto, Ontario.

Two Outstanding Men

Within the space of a few days Canada has lost the services of two outstanding men—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett and Hon. N. W. Rowell Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario and chairman of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations. Both have announced their retirement.

Mr. Bennett is going to reside in England, but he is too much of a Canadian to be lost to this country. The place he has selected for his future home in the Old Land is a delightful spot, and Mr. Bennett will find much there with which he will be in harmony. He can when occasion requires it, faithfully portray this young land to the people of England and there are occasions when such service is required because—whether we care to admit it or not—Canada is not well known in England.

Mr. Bennett is a product of this country; he has enjoyed occupancy of the highest elective post Canadians could give him. Always the student, he possessed probably more energy than any man of his day in the House of Commons.

Hon. N. W. Rowell is retiring because his health will no longer stand the demands made upon his services. The long and tiring sessions of the Royal Commission and the distances to be travelled created a drain which was too great. It is doubtful if we have in Canada today a finer legal mind than that of Mr. Rowell and his career has been such that he has given unreservedly of his talent where he found a field which he considered worthy. He became leader of the Liberal party in Ontario in 1911 at a time when the fortunes of the party were at low ebb; as leader of that party he came out definitely with his policy of "Abolish the Bar," and he did so because he believed abolition of the bar was something which should be brought to pass. In national and international affairs he has gone as our representative and this country has known always that his representations would be outstanding and the work of a master mind.

No country has too great a supply of men like R. B. Bennett and N. W. Rowell, and finding that we have within a few days lost the services of both is somewhat of a challenge that we should make certain that our national atmosphere is made so wholesome that we can develop others of the same high order.

Something Wrong In It

Fourteen inspectors of the waterwords department in Toronto have been suspended without pay until the end of the month because they have been eating their breakfast during hours when they were supposed to be at work. They reported for duty early in the morning and then instead of getting out on the job went and had breakfast. The Board of Control, according to the Mayor, is going to have a thorough investigation to see if such practice is general in other departments.

The information regarding the 14 inspectors was furnished by another employee who had himself been discharged some time ago. It is also stated if the public care to make any complaints regarding any civic employees who are not putting in full time their cases will be dealt with at once.

Certainly if a man is employed and paid to work a certain number of hours in a day he should carry out his contract, and one is not called upon to feel much sympathy for those who have been chiselling on paid-for time to eat breakfast. But having said that there is something in the situation we do not like. We find it difficult to understand or appreciate the motive of the one discharged employee who made it his business to get 14 others into trouble. If his motive had been sound he would have warned them they were likely to get into trouble if they did not mend their ways. As things stand at the moment it is plain as a pikestaff he was out for revenge because he had been fired himself.

Nor do we think much of the plan which invites citizens in general to report cases where civic employees are not doing their full time. In a case of a discourtesy or dishonesty such a report should be made, but to cause the civic employees as a whole to feel that they are being spied upon generally is so miserable that it should not be entertained. If employees are not doing their full duty then the individual to be blamed is the one in charge.

The Germans In Kitchener

There are a number of people living in Kitchener who are of German extraction and the German language is freely spoken there by a number of people. In Waterloo county generally there are also many Germans. Until the years of the war Kitchener was known as Berlin, and there was opposition and heated discussion before the vote was taken to change the name. There were many there who wanted no change made. We mention that to show that the German feeling there was a distinct and known quantity.

German-born residents of Kitchener met the other evening and much of their speaking was again done in their native tongue. What they said could have been understood in Berlin without the aid of an interpreter. They denounced plainly and vigorously what is taking place in the Germany of today. They said they did not believe the brutal and callous treatment of the Jews was a thing which the German people themselves would countenance if they were able to do anything about it.

Plainly these people in Kitchener understand they are not today dealing with the Germany they knew in other years, and we can well believe they are right in saying that the German people themselves would not tolerate the deviltry which has been launched against the Jews.

Right there is something which should not be overlooked when one compares a dictatorship with a democracy. A democracy may lack the quick action and the regimentation of dictatorship, but a democracy can quickly raise its voice against an injustice. If such a thing as the persecution of Jews were to be suggested in our country and by our government, the people would be heard from—and at once. They would say the thing would have to stop. They could protest in any way they saw fit and they could made their protests effective without being put in prison or hurried off to concentration camps.

In the autocracy or dictatorship it is different. The people are powerless; they actually do not know what is going on in their own land apart from what they see with their own eyes as the German press is not reporting the persecution of the Jews, and Berlin has banned 77 foreign newspapers because they carried reports of atrocities in Germany. The German people of Kitchener probably realize now as they never did before that they are living in a better land than that from which they came.

Governments Get 65 Per Cent.

The last figures published regarding the estate of the late John D. Rockefeller show a net value of $26,410,000. There was a time when the holdings of this man were said to have been worth a billion dollars, and that was probably correct enough.

It is known that during his life he gave away something like $530,800,000, which is a very sensible thing for one to do when he has more money than he possibly can use.

Just how much the government has actually received in taxation and inheritance levies from the Rockefeller estate we do not know, but it is stated that of the $26,410,000 now up for probate New York State will take $4,616,467, and the Federal government will receive $12,245,000. So in a general way out of the 26 millions the governments will receive as their share some 17 millions.

Which means that the taxation going to these two governments represents 65 per cent. of the total of the net value of the estate. Mr. Rockefeller gave away much and he must also have worked a good many days for the governments.

Fame Is So Fickle

The University of Alberta provided the steer which won the grand championship at Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. This fine animal had been reared on something more substantial than the promise of a basic dividend of $25 per month, for in him there were 950 solid pounds.

Likewise he bore from the West the proud name of Killearn Lord Rothes. They may be a democratic lot of folk in Alberta but when it comes to giving honorable and distinguished names to well-bred steers of the Shorthorn school they are lavish to the extent of triple titles. Whether this prize beast had any idea he was representing a University and a province we know not.

During the days of his triumph he would be much viewed. Possibly he had a place near the front in a parade; expert herdsmen would gaze upon him and probably pass a hand of admiration over his splendid spine and well-filled quarters.

But Killearn Lord Rothes is not going back to his home in the West. When the big fair was over his ribbons were taken away and he took his place in a ring where men of the East gathered and began to make bids on the basis of so much per pound and this titled representative of the West went for 40 cents per pound with his boots on. His university days are over and his hour of triumph is something which is inscribed on official records and in newspapers. Killearn Lord Rothes came as a conqueror but will eventually emerge as Christmas beef. Of such fickle stuff is fame made.

We noticed the report of another horse-sale or horse-trading case in court and the evidence was rather long and somewhat conflicting. That was to be expected, as we have never heard of a horse-trading dispute where all the facts could be so arranged that they would stand up nicely in such a way that one did not topple over another.

The amount involved was not great as the horse was rather old, and among other things it was stated the horse snored. On the Tenth Concession grandfather would have contended the only thing to do with a snoring horse was to get rid of him. There were occasions when grandfather indulged in that delightful pastime himself, but he grew alarmed when he found a horse had decided to do the same thing.

There was but one such case on Lot 4, Concession Ten, and grandfather blamed the hired man for not letting him know about it sooner. It was an ancient horse and sentiment had spared it from having been traded before. Some time previously the horse had started slobbering and getting thin, but grandfather fixed that because he started looking for bad teeth and found them. It was one of the rare occasions when a vet was called to come from the village. Two bad teeth came out, after which the old horse seemed to fatten up a bit and look as though life were still a comfortable thing.

Then it was grandfather was minded to find a buyer for the old horse and a man with about four acres of ground in the village and who needed a horse now and then agreed the animal would suit his purposes. The day of delivery was not decided upon and in between it was found the horse snored, pawed and had the habit of continually shaking its head. All manner of things were tried, but the greater the amount of treatment the greater the tendency to snore. If that horse could have been taken away to the village in the short time between having its teeth fixed for slobbering and the night the hired man first heard him snore then then the deal would have gone through even if the margin were pretty close. Possibly it could have been claimed the horse started to snore after going to the village. It was about the only case of a snoring horse we ever heard of along the Tenth and grandfather took it rather keenly that it should have been allowed to develop on Lot 4. He contended that if the vet set to work on the old horse he would probably have a bill greater than the horse was worth and grandfather doubted if an operation would be successful. It was the one time when he was left flat with a horse on his hands that he could not sell, trade or look forward to its recovery.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Potatoes have come up in the world. They have potato fairs now, and no one ever refers to potatoes as spuds today.

Lord Tweedsmuir says that the use of brains is vital to democracy. The dictators seem to be getting along, however, without any.

We were never quite sure where Kashabowie was and now that it has started to boast about its 22 below zero temperature we are not anxious to learn.

Britons are being advised to learn to enjoy the arts of peace. To get interested in such arts, however, they would first need to be convinced that permanent peace has been assured.

Meaford has decided that fire protection like charity, should begin at home. Henceforth the town's fire brigade will be forbidden to respond to calls from outside.

Following a motor crash near Hamilton a woman screamed and was heard by a policeman a mile away. A woman with that sort of equipment would hardly need to use a phone when she wanted to talk to her friends.

T. L. Church, M.P., of Toronto, says "Canada has been sold down the river" by the new trade agreement. The same thing was said about Ethiopia and about Czechoslovakia, so it might be well for Mr. Church to find a newer simile.

A New York man won an award of $117 for damages because he had to stand in a train for two and a-half hours, being unable to find a seat. Decision was that buying a ticket entitled him to a seat. Right enough, but getting $117 for standing a couple of hours is making a good start on a day's work.

ANTHEM

¶ I heard the choir begin to sing, it was the most peculiar thing, it did not seem quite real; for some soprano had her way, and said in quite a brazen way, as how she loved to steal.

¶ And then the man with tenor voice, admitted stealing was his choice, it put me off my keel; and yet his words came very plain, and what he said was just the same—I love, I love to steal.

¶ The organ played quite softly then, a cop should really threaten them, 'twas plainly to be seen; but then they all began to sing, they made the colored windows ring, and stealing was the theme.

¶ Profundo basso had a part, he made me sit up with a start, the notes came from his heel; he was a big and powerful jay, surprised I was to hear him say, I love, I love to steal.

¶ The alto sang a little song, nor did it take her very long, her rich tones I could feel; I felt afraid when sitting there, to hear the lady plain declare, I love, I love to steal.

¶ At last they all joined in to say "I love to steal a while away," 'twas sung in every part; my spirit might have mounted higher, if all the members of the choir—had said so at the start.

When Should A Tenant Vote?

THERE seems to be considerable confusion of thought on the question of tenant votes for the board of control says H. L. Rogers in a letter to the Toronto Star.

The main object to the tenant's vote for the board of control seems to be that the tenant is not directly responsible for the payment of taxes, nor for the payment of money borrowed by the city to provide city services. A tenant vote for controller, and for that matter for city council, in effect, gives a tenant the right to mortgage someone else's property for his own benefit. As the tenant vote is in a majority in Toronto, it means that the property owner cannot effectively control the mortgaging and taxing of his property for city debt. This is well illustrated in the matter of parks and playgrounds. We have approximately 2,243 acres of parks. One thousand and six acres (or nearly one half) were donated by private citizens and 1,236 acres were purchased, mostly during the past 25 years, during which 909 acres have been acquired. The outstanding debt on parks stood at $5,719,153 at the end of 1937. In the past a favorite route to political popularity by members of councils and boards of control has been to advocate the purchase of parks.

Surely, if the tenant has a complete and unassailable right to vote for council or board of control his right must include some direct responsibility for the debts incurred through his vote. At present he has no such responsibility.

It is not, however, the first cost which is serious. The annual cost of maintaining parks, including debenture charges was, in 1937, $1,683,053, and this is charged directly to property owners, not to tenants. There may be room for some discussion as to how much taxes a tenant pays in his rent but it is the property owner who pays the penalty if taxes are not paid, never the tenant, and the property owner must pay taxes or lose his property even when it is vacant and producing no revenue whatever.

In 1937 the city spent $11,824,136 on education, including debt charges of $1,906,416 on an outstanding debt of $23,438,415. One wonders to what extent the tenant vote has encouraged extravagance in education. Direct unemployment relief charged to city taxpayers has exceeded $16,000,000 since 1931. At the end of 1937 the city's debt on direct relief amounted to $7,478,000. To what extent has the tenant vote affected the cost of unemployment relief?

Surely in view of the above it is not unfair to suggest that there should be a fair balance between the tenant's voting power and his direct responsibility for expenditures and money borrowed through his vote.

H. L. ROGERS.

To The Editor

NOISE BYLAW

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The Examiner contained a letter saying that the bylaw is wrong regarding the blowing of locomotive whistles and other whistles and sirens in the city of Peterborough.

Mr. J. E. Haggart's contention that the whistles should be allowed to blow by locomotives in the city means that the locomotive driver blows his whistle three blasts in every block before he comes to the intersection, and which blocks are, generally, less than four hundred feet long.

Unfortunately for the city of Peterborough there is one railway line running practically from the northwest corner to the southeast corner of the city, one north and south, and the C.P.R. cuts across the middle of the city east and west, so that the blowing of whistles by locomotive drivers puts this city practically in the position of living in the neighborhood of an extensive railway yard.

There were cases of nervous prostration and many men and women were awakened up early in the morning and could not get to sleep for hours on account of whistles being blown near their homes. For several months during the spring, summer and fall when windows are left open, it made it impossible for hundreds of people to obtain their natural rest and sleep.

The law required Mr. Haggart to look and listen, and it was not because of the bylaw that Mr. Haggart had the accident, but it was because he broke the law requiring him to look and listen and the locomotive ran into his automobile at Romaine and George streets.

This crossing has not had any serious accidents for years, except in a couple of cases where it was the negligence of the driver in not watching for the approach of locomotives.

The crossing on Water street north of the C.N.R. does need further protection, and the City Council have arranged to put up two large reflecting danger signs at the north and south side of the railway crossing.

I would like to say that this bylaw preventing noises, such as the blowing of sirens, unnecessary blowing of automobile whistles, and locomotive whistles has been commended by hundreds of people for saving them the annoyance and disturbance of rest from which they formerly suffered, and every modern city in Ontario is adopting this course of preventing noises and disturbing the public's rest. We get enough of it with forty-four thousand pound loaded trucks roaring past under our windows during all hours of the night and day.

G. N. GORDON.

SERIOUS ENOUGH.

(Chatham News)

REV. D. P. ROWLAND of York Presbyterian church Toronto says the churches and the government should close up shop unless they do something for young men out of jobs. He suggests setting aside 300 acres to train youth in farming. If something isn't done, he claims the young men will end up in jail. The plight of unemployed youth is one of the most serious we have to face and certainly both the church and the government should be interested.

• Hoover Had To Make His Own Way

HIS LIFE a success story on a grander, more exciting scale than Horatio Alger ever conceived in any rags-to-riches book for boys, Herbert C. Hoover, the quiet, modest, ex-president of the United States, who was in Toronto to address the annual dinner of the York Bible Class.

From a Quaker orphan boy who made sound engineering principles and charity his guiding stars, Mr. Hoover in the 40 odd years since he graduated from Leland Stanford University, has left a chain of achievements reaching around the world. Credited with having saved millions of people from starvation in war-torn Europe through his work as relief administrator, before this established as a highly successful engineer with big mines in almost a dozen countries to his credit, his career is undoubtedly the most colorful of any American president.

His is a success story in the best American tradition, colored by experience in the Australian goldfields, in far parts of Russia, developing the greatest coal fields in the far East, prospecting in Siberia, finding the rich Burma Mines in Mandalay, financing in London and years of public service in Europe and America.

AT THE PEAK of his profession as a mining engineer, Mr. Hoover was established in England in 1914 when the war broke out. Already wealthy, he was situated to become one of the richest men in the world if he applied his great knowledge and technical skill to getting war materials. Instead, he chose to liquidate his mining interests and plunge into war relief work, first in getting some 200,000 American tourists back home, then in supplying food for the Belgians.

For 4 years, for instance, his commission fed some 10,000,000 people. Later he was feeding half Europe. He personally raised millions of dollars and administered a fund running at times over $25,000,000 a month. All the while he was paying his own expenses, for 5 years taking no salary for his public work, even paying his travelling expenses to the last cent. But his ability as an organizer, his diplomacy and courage enabled him to do a great job for humanity. Towards the end of the crisis, in one period of 9 months, he administered relief supplies totalling $1,150,000,000 to 40,000,000 people. A leading London paper said of him, "he is much the biggest man who has emerged on the Allied side during the war."

THAT WAS THE HOOVER of middle age in work that made him world famous. His earlier career as a mining engineer is equally colorful. Mr. Hoover's story begins at West Branch, Iowa in 1874. He was born in a Quaker family of pioneer stock. His father was a blacksmith, his mother a Quaker preacher. He had lost both before he was eleven and grew up with kindly relatives in Iowa, then Arkansas and finally Oregon.

At 16, when he was keeping books for his uncle's Oregon Land Company he began to find his bearings. A mining engineer finding him interested in rocks suggested he go to Leland Stanford University at Palo Alto, California, then opening its doors for the first time. So he went, in the school term making money by collecting laundry and keeping books, in summer working for the U.S. Geological survey.

Seven years after graduating, he was making $15,000 a year and had a top rank reputation with important financial groups in London, England, then the world center of mining interests. But he started his mining career on the business end of a shovel in underground work as a mucker in the Mayflower Mine in Nevada City, made famous by Bret Harte as the center of California gold mining. The pay was $2.50 a day. Soon connected with the Justin interests he established one success after another. Then opportunity knocked. John Hayes Hammond, working in Africa with Cecil Rhodes had given American engineering talent great prestige in London. Herbert Hoover through his employers got an offer to go to Australia to apply California mining methods in the Western Australia gold fields at Coolgardie. He was then 23. In two years he was chief of a widespread organization with many hundreds of employees, several profitable mines, and had an established reputation.

• English Exam. Papers Are Stiff

LONDON, Ont. In receipt of copies of examination papers given to English schoolboys of the same average age as entrance class youngsters in this province, school officials rubbed their eyes today and whispered "Wow!"

Sent here purely as a matter of information, the papers disclosed that the English child, if he is to be successful in his academic work, must know why Hitler rose to power in Germany, why any three cities in British Columbia grew to large proportions, why no other country could have given Henry Ford such opportunities of mass production as the United States.

These are just a few of the general items of examination importance in England. The history paper, which is long, but which offers choices in the selection of questions, asks, in part, for reports on the changes in Ireland since 1918. It asks for an account of the part the U.S. played in the League of Nations and its attitude since the formation of the league. In history, the child must draw a map of the British possessions in Africa. It must know why new states were created by the Treaty of Versailles, and be able to draw them. It must know also Japan's aims in China and the history of Spain or Italy since the war.

The geography paper is no push-over either. Among the questions are requests for accounts of the reasons for the scantiness of the population of the Amazon basin, drawing a large-scale map showing the importance of the situation of Montreal and other such puzzlers. The list of examination papers sent here included those in Latin and French, as well as a paper on "Divinity." The last named deals with the Old Testament.

IT COSTS MONEY.

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

AS AN AFTERMATH of the American election someone has dug up the fact that the cost of running the United States government from 1789 to 1864 was $3,852,000,000, and that for the current fiscal year the national deficit will amount to $3,985,000,000. That is simply the prospective excess of the government spending over government income, and takes no account of the billions of taxpayers' money already collected and which will be poured out before next June.

Of course, the population of the country was comparatively small in those earlier years and the people did not expect the multitude of services they demand of government today. Still, it is appalling to learn that the cost of operating the U. S. for 75 years was much less than the cost of operating it for one year now.

Political considerations have a great deal to do with the situation. Governments spend lavishly to win votes and in this they are aided and abetted by the supporters in Congress.

GRAPEFRUIT SURPLUS.

(Edmonton Journal)

SO BENIGN HAS been the growing season in the southern states, that the output of grapefruit is expected to reach an all time high of 41,000,000 boxes as compared with a normal consumption of 29,000,000. Complete absence of hurricanes and frosts is given as the reason. But the heavy surplus will not mean necessarily that more people will be able to buy grapefruit because prices are down. The U. S. Government is to buy 5,000,000 boxes for distribution to persons on relief and the growers have agreed to divert another five million into non-commercial channels. In this way, it is hoped prices will be maintained.

WANT TO BE REPORTERS.

(Fergus News-Record)

LOOKING over a tabulated list of results of a questionnaire submitted to high school students in New York City, we see that the majority of the boys would rather go into newspaper work than any other job or profession. Think of that. They would rather be reporters than an aviator or a fireman, or a railway engineer, or a detective, or anything else that boys are supposed to like particularly.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

MY SOUL, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him.—Ps. lxii, 5.

✧ ✧ ✧

I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth. My soul shall make her boast in the Lord: the humble shall hear thereof, and be glad. O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together.—Ps. xxxiv, 1-3.

✧ ✧ ✧

God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things....For in him we live, and move, and have our being.—Acts xvii, 24, 25, 28.

A Bit of Nonsense

In Other Words

There had been a domestic argument and the chemist turned once again to his desk.

"You do not know what tears are," sobbed the wife.

Good Reason

"I dislike that man in the far corner more than any man I have met," said the young man to his pretty dance partner.

The girl looked surprised. "Why," she said, "that is my fiance."

Her partner took a deep breath. "I know," he said. "That's why I dislike him."

Greece, Turkey Forget Old Hatred Dating To Smyrna Blow Of '22, Both Bow In Tribute To Ataturk

By Dewitt Mackenzie
(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer.)

ATHENS, Nov. 24 — (AP). — The attendance in Ankara of General John Metaxas, strong man of Greece, at the state funeral of Kamal Ataturk, Turkish leader, is the culmination of a chain of events which have carried the two countries from hatred to friendship—and incidentally sent me on a reminiscent quest to Bellini cemetery here in Athens.

The story goes back to 1922 near the end of the Greek invasion of Smyrna which was turned into disaster by the Turkish commander, Mustapha Kamal, who later was to adopt the name of Ataturk.

There came to London, where I was then stationed, five members of the Greek government, headed by the statesman Demetrius Gounaris. Among those with the Premier were the Minister of Finance, Peter Protopadakis, and Foreign Minister George Baltazzi. They were seeking badly needed financial aid in England.

The visit was especially impressed upon me because the late T. P. (Tay Pay) O'Connor, famous Member of Parliament, invited me to attend a private dinner given for the distinguished Greeks. I went and sat beside Baltazzi. He was a most affable fat gentleman who wore a monocle which was forever dropping from his eye, only to be jammed into place again with rare good humor.

Five Are Executed.

Gounaris and his colleagues came back to Athens. Between Aug. 26 and Sept. 9 Mustapha Kamal smashed the Greek army and recaptured Smyrna—a terrible catastrophe for Greece.

On Nov. 15, Greek army officers, just back from Smyrna and infuriated at the loss of life and suffering of their men in a campaign which they maintained should never have been undertaken, staged a coup against the government. They dragged Gounaris from a sick bed, seized four other members of the government and George Hadjanesti, who had been commander-in-chief in Asia Minor, and executed them.

I remember that a news despatch describing the death of my dinner companion Baltazzi said he faced the firing squad calmly with a cigarette in his mouth. His only trouble was that he couldn't keep his monocle in his eye.

The blow which crushed Greece and tossed six famous men into Bellini cemetery made Kamal leader of Turkey. He became the idol of the people and was accorded the title "Liberatotr of the Fatherland."

Join Balkan Entente

Time and unusual circumstances have dimmed hatred and drawn Greece and Turkey together. In 1934 both joined the Balkan Entente which includes Rumania and Yugoslavia. In April of this year, just before Ataturk entered his last illness, he and Metaxas signed a treaty of friendship guaranteeing the frontiers of the two countries for 10 years.

The presence of Metaxas at Ataturk's funeral is a tribute to the Turkish colossus. But it was far more than that. It meant further to cement the bond under which these two nations have elected to stand together in the face of what they regard as potential menaces from two directions. Ankara and Athens are afraid that Both Germany and Italy may have designs which would affect Turkey and Greece in some measure.

Curiously enough, while Germany has brought the Greeks and Turks under a heavy degree of politico-economic domination, especially since Herr Hitler's Austrian and Czechoslovak coups, it is Italy about which they are mainly concerned. Indeed, Metaxas is well known as being a great admirer of Germany, although not wishing to play into its hands. Ataturk was anti-German.

The Greco-Turk brotherhood thinks Mussolini has a yearning to expand at the expense of one or both of them, particularly Turkey.

Three Kings Attend Funeral Rites For Queen Maud

London, Nov. 24 (CP)

THREE KINGS attended funeral rites for Queen Maud of Norway today before the body was placed aboard a purple and black-draped train to begin the journey to Oslo.

Departure of the funeral ship from Portsmouth was delayed because of a gale in the English Channel.

The body was borne from the chapel to Marlborough House to the station on a gun carriage drawn by six bay horses. Welsh and Grenadier Guards rendered honors when the funeral cortege passed Buckingham and St. James's Palaces.

Madoc Woman's Leg Broken By Car

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP). —Mrs. Arthur Parks, Madoc, suffered a compound fracture of the leg and internal injuries when she stepped from in front of a parked car into the path of a car driven by Wellington Munro, also of Madoc, while returning early today from a social function. She was brought to Belleville Hospital. Munro was charged with operating a car with defective brakes.

While Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond was investigating his parked car was struck and Maurice Fitzgerald, Remington, was arrested shortly. No charges have been laid as yet.

Earlier Murney Ray was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, the accused creating a scene when he resisted apprehension.

To Aid Canadian Motion Pictures

Arriving in Canada to aid government and private motion picture producers in making documentary films on Canada, John Grierson, noted British government film expert, RIGHT, is shown aboard the liner Montrose as it arrived in Montreal. Mr. Grierson was accompanied by Major J. P. Parmalee, LEFT, deputy minister of trade and commerce, Ottawa. Mr. Grierson said he would act merely in an advisory capacity in producing films depicting Canadian progress.

George Bernard Shaw Resents Criticisms About His Clothes

By Charles A. Smith
(Central Press Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 22 — George Bernard Shaw may not be a Beau Brummel when it comes to snappy clothes, but he deeply resents any suggestion that he is badly dressed.

In fact, he feels he has been libelled because Judge McElligott of Killarney Circuit court, in deciding a suit brought by a tailor who once built clothes for Shaw, sarcastically declared he didn't see that was any recommendation, since Shaw's clothes were "appalling."

The former "sage of Adelphi," who has been keeping quiet since doctors outraged his vegetarian beliefs by forcing him to take a meat extract to cure a bad attack of anaemia, emerged from his country hide-out to blast at the judge and defend

Called Gross Libel

"The judge's remarks are a gross libel on a very good firm of London tailors who have made my clothes for years," Shaw declared. "I have a very extensive wardrobe and some of my suits are very nice. I would not expect the judge to know that—probably he thinks a wig and gown becoming.

"Anyway, I am better known for my writing than my clothes. A Norfolk knickerbocker suit is not the only suit I wear. I have a lot of suits that have accumulated through the years.

"Some of my suits I have worn for thirty years. They are silk suits which I only wear three days of the year. You can't always wear them in the English climate. I am a married man. I must pay attention to my clothes; otherwise my wife will.

"I don't mind my clothes being old-fashioned. I am no foreign office attache who rushes to his tailor as soon as fashion alters a vest button.

Suit Buying Policy

"I buy a suit when I need one and discard it when it is worn out. That means I visit my tailors once or twice a year.

"And my tailor know how I should be dressed and he does the job well. I am completely satisfied with my appearance."

And in his whitewashed cottage 25 miles from Killarney, 40-year-old Michael O'Sullivan, the man who made clothes for Shaw, said:

"Judge McElliott may be a good judge of law, but he is a poor judge of clothes. Mr. Shaw likes to have his clothes distinctive, but his good taste cannot be questioned. I made four suits for him around 1920. They were hand-stitched, every inch of them, and all were homespun Norfolk suits."

Eleven Youths Start 7,000-Mile South Sea Adventure

AT SUNSET yesterday 11 young adventurers sailed into the dusk, bound on a 7,000-mile voyage to the South Sea Islands and Tahiti.

They are the crew of the awkward, antiquated little brigantine Florence C. Robinson, and they travelled in a style little different than seamen of a century ago.

Youngest, and biggest of the ship's company is her skipper, Sterling Hayden, 22, a blond giant, who stands six feet four without his sea boots.

The little brigantine — she is only 98 feet overall—was built in Ceylon of teak and other native woods, and her original name, carved so deep in her topsides that paint could not hide it, was "Annapooranyammajafna." Only six of her crew, according to Captain Hayden, have had previous experience at sea.

Wider Markets Urged For Dairymen

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—The necessity for an increased market for dairy products, especially milk, was stressed by distributor, producer and consumer at the nineteenth annual meeting of the National Dairy Council of Canada in the Royal York Hotel yesterday.

Although speakers for the distributors and producers emphasized the part they played in bringing milk before the public, and claimed that both sections were underpaid, they agreed with Miss Laura C. Pepper, household economist of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, that the market could be extended.

W. R. Aird, speaking on behalf of the distributors, said that, contrary to public opinion, it was necessary to gather milk in large quantities from areas far removed from the source of demand.

Collecting Job Done Well.

"We have done our job of collecting, processing and distributing more than creditably," he said. "This is proved by the high confidence the public have in our work.

"The boycott of last year shows that, if the price of milk is too high, the public is quick to react. We distributors have greatly enlarged the market for milk. If the dairy industry is to advance, greater co-operation and understanding of each other's problems is needed," he said.

Claiming milk production was one of Canada's basic industries, W. L. Carr, president of the Montreal Milk Producers' Association, said it was hard for the dairy farmer to understand the difference in price range from producer to consumer.

Miss Laura Pepper held out hope for the future of the dairy industry, claiming that the consumption of dairy products would be even greater in the future.

KEENE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kylie and family attended the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

A very successful card party was held in the Lang Hall on Friday evening sponsored by Mrs. L. Bowie, Mrs. F. Walsh and Mrs. Jas. Foley. The prizes were won by Mrs. James Miller, Mrs. Harry Reid, Ross Comrie and Mr. Frank Walsh. The door prize went to Miss Catherine Bolin. After supper James Miller's orchestra furnished music for the dancing.

"Wait a minute," protested Mr. Picobac. But a glance was enough, he shook his head ruefully. "Guess you got me there Herb. You newspapermen sure know your moves."

"We keep our eyes open," replied Mr. Smith, hopefully eyeing Mr. Picobac's "seal-tight" pouch.

"To the victor belong the spoils," observed Mr. Picobac philosophically as he passed the pouch. "Here you are . . . no man could wish for better. It's a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke."

TWO GRATTAN HORSES WIN AT DUFFERIN IN STRAIGHT HEATS

June Peters Is In The Lead In Fast Class

TORONTO, Nov. 24. — Straight heat victories were the order at Dufferin Park yesterday, with Miss Peter Grattan and Happy Grattan scoring harness racing's hat-trick in their respective divisions of the slow class.

These two left little doubt about their superiority as for the first time this season the horses raced over a real winter track. A cold wind had a tendency to slow up the speed of the contestants, but the "hard track" pacers were right in their element.

Capably handled by Owner Allan Brown of Orono, Miss Peter Grattan, a split favorite with Lee Axe for the first heat, got away on top and was never headed, winning by three lengths from Alex. Volo. It was much the same story in the second heat, but this time Miss Peter Grattan, after setting all the pace, was extended to shade Lee Axe in a driving finish.

A couple of accidents marred the second heat of this race. Driver Decote, handling Ann Scott, was thrown clear over the fence when his horse and Gingen Worthy and Bertha Lee all fell at the first turn. Later the sulky wheel of Bertha Lee collapsed going up the back stretch, and Driver Wilson was thrown off, but escaped uninjured.

Miss Peter Grattan concluded a grand performance by taking the third heat in an almost blanket finish. Ineligible for the final heat, the Orono horse retired to the barn and Willis Direct came through to take the final heat.

Harry Fields, leading driver of the current racing season, had little difficulty piloting Happy Grattan to three stright victories in the second division. A 1 to 2 favorite, Happy Grattan won the first heat handily from Junie Grattan, the second choice, and then set all the pace in the next two to retire undefeated. The fourth heat will be raced off on Saturday, with Happy Grattan a non-starter.

Three heats were competed in the fast class and in each heat a different winner came through. Frank took the first heat, June Peters the second, and Baron Rothschilds the third. The latter recorded the fastest heat, stepping the mile in 2:14. Idol Princewood, highly-touted Western Canada pacer, failed to live up to expectations. The final heat will be raced off Saturday.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

WANTED: Two or three defencemen who can meet the public hard; must be rugged, willing and not afraid of bumps; apply to Peterborough Hockey Club. We hasten to explain to our Advertising Dept. that this ad is being run by this writer—though the puck officials no doubt will back us up. A crying need with the Petes for some seasons now is a bashing rearguard, a couple, or three defenders who hang rivals in the rafters. Gees who smear incoming puck-carriers every chance they get. There is an O.H.A. rule which permits bodychecking, so players do not need to hesitate about bouncing the other side around. Hit 'em hard and often, but legally. Each winter we wail aloud along this line, and each spring sees nasty opposing defencemen blast our lads out of playoffs, with local defenders still poking futilely at a puck which too often eludes them. Some body checks, yes, but not nearly enough.

* * * * * * *

WHAT HAPPENED the Petes in playoffs with the Falls last Spring? Well, they were smeared around and softened up so much in the first fray that they tried all through the second struggle to detour around a tough Niagara pair of bashers. It sticks out like a sore thumb that the only two Petes who had much success in piercing the rival defence in Niagara Falls were ex-pros, Shrimp McDougall and Doug. Brennan. Along with local players and fans, we believed that the Falls' crew were downright dirty in their play here — and they weren't any too lily-white. But they played just as rough, though a bit cleaner, right in the Falls. And folks there, and from St. Catharines and that district told us: "That's the way hockey is played in the peninsula—a hard-hitting game." Just as it is in Western Ontario. And in the Toronto mercantile loop.

* * * * * * *

NOW IT STANDS to reason that local puckists aren't yellow, or too gentlemanly to mix it. The Petes tangled plenty with Trenton Fliers last winter, and easily held their own. So the fault must lie with the refereeing. Inasmuch as puckists in Central Ontario get the gate from the referee for such things as accidental trips, slashing at sticks, short charges, etc. And these minor offences in other districts are entirely overlooked by officials. Just as in pro company, they figure the players are adults, in good shape, well able to protect themselves, and adequately padded. Only dangerous high-sticking, hard boarding, fighting or a trip after the player is past, draw the official ire and a jaunt to the cooler. Let us have more of this refereeing, and not petty bell-ringing stuff. Or local teams will never be able to hold their own in playdowns.

* * * * * * *

BUT GETTING BACK to defencemen, we maintain that their job —so long as the wings backcheck properly—is to stop rival puck-carriers, and the most effective way, usually, is to biff 'em with the body. It knocks the guy right out of the play and slows him up for a time, also teaching him to come in carefully next time. Don't tell us we're screwy, else Eddie Shore, Seibert, Horner, Bucko, Goodfellow and all the ace defencemen in pro ranks are wrong. If they don't know how to play defence (and they sure lay on the body) then local amateurs certainly don't. Toronto Leafs, aside from Horner, have lacked hard-hitting defencemen in recent years—and how the Leafs have been bumped out of playoffs by the Bruins, Red Wings and Black Hawks! So, let's look for a few burly defencemen this year who will aid their goalie and inspire their forwards by a hard-hitting resistance back of the blue line—let's play hockey something like the professionals do!

* * * * * * *

VARIOUS BUSINESS MATTERS discussed at last night's executive hockey meetng, but no coach appointed. A joint officers-players' session next week will officially appoint the Petes' pilot. Lornie Rose was present for a time and made application as coach, and he also is seeking re-instatement to amateur ranks. If it's not too late in the year, the O.H.A. will likely restore him to simon-pure ranks. The veteran star pro—one of the best in the business when he left Peterborough—saw service in Saskatoon, Moosejaw and Regina before returning east. A great player in his day, and Lornie ought to still have flashes of fine hockey left in him. He is in his late thirties, but so was Doug Brennan last season—and didn't Doug turn in some swell hockey to help the Petes hurdle the Fliers? We can recall Rose outplaying Cook here years ago i nthat tough series with Kingston. Yep, the rugged, tricky local forward was good enough for N.H.L. company.

MIKE SHEEHY and Murray Hartley are running the Brock St. rink this season, and Ben English will be ice-maker. They'll flood the floor as soon as possible. With three O.H.A. clubs operating locally this winter, it will be curtains for the Junior City Puck Loop at the Brock, and maybe also for the Blood and Thunder Circuit. A couple of nights of skating each week are planned—but some arrangement may be made whereby the Senior City League might have one night a week there. It'll have to be threshed out soon, if the league is deciding to re-organize. If the rink isn't available, some return to a district circuit (like the E.P.L.) should be arranged as several centres around here will be looking for puck competition. Too bad the Junior City Loop can't be accommodated, though the "O" club partly takes care of that, and other minor local loops look after most of the lads.

TIGER JACK COX is, according to Promoter Charlie Kumpf of Toronto, "a good elbow thrower and hook-slider or leg-trip artist, while McKenzie is an aggressive two-fisted villain who is rougher than most wrestlers." This pair are matched on the Riverview A.C. mat card at the Brock St. arena tomorrow eve at 8.30, having a one-fall bout with 30 minutes time limit. Cox is 175 and comes from Toronto, while McKenzie goes 182 and hails from Amherst. We know good elbow tossers here, too, but they are not grapplers. Semi-final on the card is a return Labelle-Gazelley go at 185 pounds, while the main match is between The Mask, mystery man of Winnipeg, and Buck Moffatt, 180, of Mount Denis. Show should last about two hours and ought to be chuck full of rasslin' action. Mat fans shouldn't pass it up.

THE SUDDEN DEATH of Jerry Connell came as a shock to sports followers throughout Ontario. Connell was just 22 years old and on his way to Toronto Maple Leafs via Syracuse, a grand puckster and lacrosse star. He played twice in Peterborough with the famed Orillia Terriers, last summer making his final appearance against the Petes. One of the best exponents of the gutted-stick game in the country, he was also a most promising hockey player—and a big good-natured chap. It is uncertain yet what caused his sudden death, lacrosse injuries of the past season, or some hard bump in his game night before last against Providence Reds. Jerry was in several hard scrimmages in this 1-1 tilt but seemed okay after the game. Yet he died before morning, possibly of heart attack. Local lacrossers were surprised and sorry to hear of the sudden passing of such an illustrious rival.

Tuten Brothers Lead Orioles To 2-1 Victory

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24 (CP). — Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern United States Amateur Hockey League last night defeated Toronto Goodyears 2 to 1 in an international series game here. The Canadian outfit played a 3-to-3 overtime tie with Hershey Cubs, another Eastern Amateur League team, Tuesday night.

The Canadians' only goal came in the first period on a solo shot by Goldup. J. Tuten, assisted by C. Ripley, tied it up in the second period, and A. Tuten, assisted by Meloche and Squarebriggs, gave Baltimore the winning goal in the third.

Many penalties marked the contest, Laurent of Toronto drawing a ten-minute enforced rest in the third period for arguing with the referee after Goaler McQueston had been severely bumped.

Officials—Harwood and Reilly.

1—Toronto, Goldup 7.00

Penalties—J. Tuten, King, A. Tuten.

Second Period.

2—Baltimore, J. Tuten (C. Ripley) 1.57

Penalties—A. Tuten, Imlach, Lapointe.

Third Period.

3—Baltimore, A. Tuten (Meloche, Squarebriggs) 8.40

Penalties—Laurent (misconduct), Imlach, Draper, J. Tuten.

Dachshund Held Best Dog At Royal Show

TORONTO, Nov. 24—A dachshund called Herman Rinkton, owned by Mrs. A. A. Jones of South Orange, N.J., was awarded the Geraldine R. Dodge Trophy as the best dog in the show, by Mrs. M. Hartley Dodge at the Royal Winter Fair last night.

Mrs. Dodge, niece of the late John D. Rockefeller and daughter of the late William Rockefeller, is one of the keenest dog fanciers in the United States, and judged in the special classes for best dog and best brace.

Mrs. Dodge gives the biggest outdoor, one-day dog show in the world on the last Saturday in May, every year at her Madison, New Jersey estate, and owns about a hundred of America's finest show dogs, a dozen of which are always in her house.

Competition in all classes was very keen, with the best brace class being particularly close. Mr. Justice Gordon McKinnon of Bondville, Que., was the winner with his pair of English cocker spaniels.

Results in the other classes follow:

All-Star Squad Is Criticized

(Alan Rose of Brantford Expositor)

According to the list of all-stars selected for the annual O.R.F.U. team, Peterborough is the home of the forgotten men. Not one member of the Lift Lock City was elevated to membership in the "Best Eleven Sellers."

Montreal has six players. This seems abnormal seeing that the Sarnians have but two and they won the first game of the finals right in Montreal. The Imps would have had another were Ormond Beach still with the team. The fatality really hurt the Oilers, who were out of the picture until someone raised the question of Living's status. This committee-room newspaper-column fight really stirred up the ethyl in the Three Star spuad.

Should the Sarnians win the title, and they have a good lead now to take home, the consensus of opinion will be that Art Massuci is a better coach than Hoddy Foster. When the Montreal O.R.F.U. club raided the Montreal "Big Four" team it took the starry players. Did the raiders get that intangible spirit that a team of regulars, playing well together, has? It is doubtful.

The Montreal O.R.F.U. just put the money on the line and the bait attracted the players down in the Quebec metropolis. The Sarnians, imported good men, it is true, but there seems a better spirit at the Three Star (no pun meant) than other places although Balmy Beach and Argonauts have a wonderful esprit de corps. The finals will tell the tale. Here's hoping Sarnia and Argos meet in the Eastern finals. It gives residents of this section a chance to see good football at its best.

Normie Smith Proposes To Retire Go Back To Summer Job As He Balks At Order To Minors

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 24—(CP).—The way of National Hockey League goaltenders is hard—so hard that already a couple of the best are on the sidelines with but three weeks of the schedule gone.

But then there's the case of Walter (Turk) Broda. The day he allowed 17 goals in Toronto Maple Leafs' training camp, they said Phil Stein probably would start the season in his place. Yet Broda has held the crippled Leafs together so far, has allowed only 10 goals in eight games and has put himself in the running for nomination as player of the year.

Take a look some night at the hemstitching over the eyes of Tiny Thompson of Boston Bruins or Earl Robertson of New York Americans. Thompson wasn't able to start the season in goal because of a 6-stitch cut over one eye. Robertson came out of American's camp with a similar injury and had to take time out to have the other eye repaired on a recent night.

Normie Smith, who two years ago won the Vezina trophy as goalie for the world champion Red Wings, announced his retirement last night with the statement: "I won't play minor league hockey. I am either good enough to play with the Red Wings or not at all."

Cude Also Resting

Wilf Cude, nerves badly shattered, is taking a rest while rookie Claude Bourque replaces him in the nets for Montreal Canadiens. If Bourque is good enough, Cude's rest period probably will be indefinite.

Smith has compensation, though. He will go back immediately to his summertime job as assistant director of personnel with the Ford Motor Company in Detroit. If Adams ever wants him for the Red Wings, he promises to be in shape—but he won't go to the International-American league farm.

"I am not going down to Pittsburgh and take young Jim Franks' job away from him," he declares.

The contrast in the case of Broda is one of the amazing developments of the young season. The Turk was supposed to be erratic, not quite up to the calibre of the top-flight backstops like Dave Kerr of New York Rangers or Thompson or Robertson.

But manager Conny Smythe had picked out Broda from the minors. He shut his ears to criticism while the youngster was gaining experience in his first two big-league years.

Fights

(By The Associated Press)

Remember When—

Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight boxing champion, knocked out Kid Chocolate in two rounds at New York five years ago tonight. It was the first knockout the "Bon-Bon Kid" suffered in his sensational career that started in the United States six years earlier.

Ex-Pro Applies As Puck Coach

Lornie Rose, former star player here and later a professional, last night applied at the Peterborough Hockey Club meeting as coach of the Petes in the 1938-39 campaign. Rose also stated he would apply for his amateur card and, if granted, would be willing to play for the local puckists this winter. His application as coach was left over till the executive and players meet next week to vote on the position, and his re-instatement to amateur ranks will be taken up in Toronto this weekend.

President R. M. Glover was in the chair at the executive club meeting with these officers present: Bert McLeod, Jim Dorris, H. A. Cranfield, Bill Prindible, Ches Mowry, Cliff Cadd and Manager Tommy Miller of the Petes. The rink representatives, Murray Hartley and Mike Sheehy, were also present, and Lornie Rose and Jim Guiry, of the Junior "C" club, for a time.

The club's agreement with the rink was read at length and agreed upon, and the club's agreement with the Monarchs' "C" club was also passed without question. It was decided not to put out a program this winter, it being considered too much of an imposition on the merchants. A suggestion whereby fans could pick stars at home games for prizes was discussed and decided against, as tending to become too involved. R. M. Glover was appointed to represent the club at the annual O.H.A. meeting in Toronto, and he will check on possibility of the re-instatement to amateur ranks of Lornie Rose. Possible groupings and payment of the local entry fee came in for some discussion, as well as handling of tickets, etc., before the meeting adjourned. The local teams will take to the ice early in December, if ice is available at that time.

Eight Potent Forces in the Big Four Rub ber Match

Can These Rough Rider Stalwarts Stop the Argonaut Speedsters and Overcome an Eight Point Deficit . . .

. . . Or Will These Razzle-Dazzlers Continue Their Winning Ways Through the Air and Around the Ends?

Saturday sees the wind-up of the Big Four rugby season as Toronto Argonauts visit Ottawa to meet the Rough Riders in the second of their two-game total-point series to decide the wearers of the crown for 1938. This is the third year they have gone through the same procedure, the Riders coming out on top two years ago and the Scullers last year. Shown here are four aces in each deck, along the top the Ottawans, LEFT to RIGHT, Bunny Wadsworth, hard-plunging middle; Andy Tommy, elusive backfielder; Tiny Herman, placement-kicking inside; and Murray Griffin, plunging, passing and running backfielder, the driving force of the Capital squad. Argonauts along the bottom, LEFT to RIGHT, are Art West, swivel-hipped payoff runner; Doug McPherson, plunging back, whose passing and pass-receiving have been a thorn in the Ottawa flesh this year; Annis Stukus, Argos counterpart for Tiny Herman at the field goal art; and Bill Stukus, passing and running quarter.

Adams Believes Smith Will Toe Line

(By the Canadian Press.)

There's three games in the International-American League to-night, but most of the interest centres around the nets of Pittsburgh Hornets when they play hosts to Springfield Indians.

Either Jimmy Franks or Normie Smith, goalie with Detroit Red Wings when they took two National Hockey League Stanley Cups, will be in those nets. Normie announced his retirement last night rather than take the demotion to the minor league, but Manager Jack Adams of Detroit still thinks his erstwhile star goalie may change his mind and make the ordered trip to Pittsburgh.

The third-place Cleveland squad perform at Hershey, while Syracuse, tied with Hershey at the top, meet Philadelphia, leaders of the Eastern Section.

Cleveland moved to within shooting distance of the leaders last night when they battled Providence Reds to a 2-2 tie. Les Cunningham and Earl Batholome were the Cleveland point-getters. Ron Hudson banged in both Providence markers.

Dales To Come East For Half Expenses

REGINA, Nov. 24 (C.P.).— Regina Dales, Western junior rugby champions, are ready and willing to go East in search of a Dominion title as soon as the East declares its representative.

If Hamilton Italo-Canadians and Montreal Westmounts play this Saturday, Dales want to meet the winner on December 3.

"If we are guaranteed 50 per cent. of our expenses, as outlined by the Canadian Rugby Union," said Paul Dojack, Dales' coach, "we are as good as in the East. We want that title."

Last December 18 Dales went to Hamilton to play Italo-Canadians after raising $1,100 in Regina. The guarantee they had was 60 per cent. of the Hamilton gate, or $485.

"We cannot ask the people of Regina to stake us again," said Dojack. "But if either Hamilton or Montreal guarantee us 50 per cent. of our expenses, they can count on us coming."

It would cost approximately $1,500 for Dales to go to Hamilton and $1,875 to Montreal.

Believed to be the smallest area ever disputed in court in England, land nine feet long by ten inches wide is the subject matter of a suit filed at Blackburn.

Newark, N.J.—Wally Dusek, 210, drew with Abe Coleman, 215, New York (30-minute time limit.)

Wrestling Card Here Tomorrow

The wrestlers return to the Brock St. arena this Friday (tomorrow) night at 8.30 o'clock when a three-bout amateur card will be run off. Acting for Promoter Charlie Kumpf of Toronto, Norm Bowler of the local Riverview A.C., is arranging local details. The grapplers are all from outside points and a lively, entertaining show is promised to local followers of the matmen. The main bout is two out of three falls, or one hour, between The Mask, 185-pound Winnipeg mystery man, and Buck Moffatt, 180, of Mount Dennis. Semi-final sees a return engagement here between Ren Gazeley, 185, and Frenchy LaBelle of Toronto, it being two out of three falls with a 45-minute time limit. The prelim is between Tiger Jack Cox, 175-pound "Toronto Tornado," and Scotty McKenzie of Amherst, N.S.

It is some time since an all-wrestling program has been put on for Peterborough fans, and a goodly turnout of cash customers is expected for this show, which should last about two hours. Popular prices will prevail and Promoter Kumpf promises plenty of heated action when his six husky grapplers go into action with all the merry abandon that marks the mat game as shown by the professionals.

Betting Jumps Eight To Five On Armstrong

By Drew Middleton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—All along Cauliflower Alley there is a revival of the "Armstrong is the greatest fighter ever" cult as the odds swing back in favor of the little brown man from St. Louis who fights Ceferino Garcia, the Filipino, Friday night.

When the warriors knocked off heavy training yesterday Henry again was the favorite. If you wish to bet on the welterweight champion around this town you must put up $8 to win $5. If you think Henry can knock the challenger out, one will bring you two.

Henry looked afar from formidable training a month ago and the price was 6 to 5 and take your choice when Nov. 1, a day before the fight, he had an accident and asked for a postponement. Now Henry is back buffeting his sparring mates and appears to be in top shape.

Whether he is or not some $90,000 will trickle into Mike Jacobs coffers at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. And Uncle Mike, if the house hits $100,000 will not care if they are both knocked out.

"I said it a month ago and I say it now. He will go out there and pour it on Ceferino for four or five rounds and Garcia will fold."

Still Bounding

Jean Borotra, ABOVE, famed "Bounding Basque" of the tennis courts, and one of the most popular of all players, can still bound at a pretty fair rate. While he hasn't taken a serious part in international competition for some time, he had enough on the ball to capture the English covered courts title for the ninth time recently.

(By SID FEDER)

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—(AP)—The football mob is all over Philadelphia to-day, like it is every year for Penn-Cornell and Army-Navy the same week-end. . . Benny Leonard's refereeing act is a nifty. . . He opens with a half dozen or so fight stories that lay 'em in the aisles, then works whatever fight he's on. . . . Benny wowed 'em in one place when a leather-lunged fan hollored "How many times did you fight Johnny Dundee"- . . . "So many," cracked Benny, "that I learned to speak Italian." . . .

Arkansas football outfits have always been a little shy in the full-backing slot since Fred Thomsen's been there . . . But they won't be after this year, if you can believe what they tell about Jay Lawhon, a 210-pounder on the freshmen squad. . . . Can kick and pass with any of 'em. . . . When Patty Berg was found down to Janet Shock of Dayton in their gold match in the United States women's championship, no one around the Denison University campus was surprised. . . 'Cause Janet is on the Varsity golf team there and won 11 out of 12 matches in competition. . .

Have you noticed how Detroit, the late city of champions—when the baseball Tigers and hockey Red Wings were running wild—now has only Joe Louis left on the "Mr. Big" list. . . And even Joe spends most of his time in other places. . . . This department thinks Henry Armstrong will be "winnah and still champeen" when his fight with Ceferino Garcia is over. . . .

Oshawa Pitcher Barnyard Golf Champion

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (C.P.). — In the almost-deserted Coliseum of the Royal Winter Fair, Dean McLaughlin won the Dominion horseshoe pitching championship early to-day —but lost an overcoat.

While they looked for the 20-year-old Oshawa automobile worker to present the trophy to him, he was searching through the tiers of seats for the overcoat he had laid aside while he won the singles crown.

Someone had taken it while the youngster was beating the country's best at heaving cast-iron and the champion, clutching the big trophy, had to travel 30 miles home without a coat. But he still was happy.

The last of the Horse Show patrons had left and the live stock in the nearby pens had long been bedded down when McLaughlin threw the deciding ringer. A hollow clang of shoe against stake sounded his victory after 5½ long hours of competition.

"I was just getting warm," he lamented. "I feel now as if I could go in there and pitch for hours."

25 Cars Of Stock Go To Chicago As Royal Ends

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP).—The Ontario Provincial Fair at Guelph and the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago called many exhibits today from the most successful Royal Winter Fair in history.

A capacity crowd of 13,000 sang "Auld Lang Syne" as the Royal — Canada's largest agriculture and livestock display—closed its 17th season. Brilliant closing ceremonies took place in the Coliseum's main ring.

Six and four-horse teams pulled wagons laden with flowers and fruit, vegetables and wheat to the middle of the ring. They were flanked by six international army equestrian teams, Boy Scouts, the Royal Canadian Dragoons, Halifax junior riders, a Toronto police squadron and two military bands.

Record Crowds.

The eight-day exposition drew larger crowds than ever before and the record number of exhibitors took approximately $100,000 in cash prizes and thousands of dollars represented by handsome trophies.

For the first time in the fair's history, tragedy entered the jumping ring last night when Flitter, United States Army team mount, crashed into the final fence of the military knock-down-and-out competition and was killed. Lieut. Franklin Wing was thrown clear of the horse and escaped with a shaking-up.

The event was won by Lieut. E. W. Berwick of the Canadian Army team on Eureka. It was the first Canadian victory of the international military classes which brought officers of six nations into competition. Azteca, ridden by Lieut. Palafox, Mexican Army team, was second.

Allan C. Leslie, Watrous, Sask., won the Lady Middleton trophy with a brilliant display of handling a six-horse team. James Brandon, Forest, Ont., placed second.

Rev. T. S. Gault Given Welcome

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24—Rev. T. S. Gault was officially welcomed to Campbellford by members of his congregation on Wednesday evening. Nearly two hundred members of Christ church were present for the social evening and program for which Hilton Beatty, rector's warden, acted as chairman and in introducing Mr. Gault who spoke briefly, he urged that the support of the congregation be placed solidly behind him. Mr. Gault was highly pleased with the reception and expressed his warmest thanks to all those who had come and particularly to those assisting in the program.

The tables from which lunch was served were beautifully decorated with pink and white carnations in silver baskets. Members of the Parish guild, under the direction of their president, Mrs. Nelson Lloyd,

The opening number on the program was a violin solo by Bruce Elmhirst followed by a song and dance offered by little Marilyn Hopping. Mrs. F. de F. Free favored the audience with two vocal numbers both of which were generously applauded, and the Misses Phyllis and Gladys Elmhirst gave a piano duet and encore. The concluding number was a vocal selection by R. C. Ramsden. The accompanists were Miss Marie Grosson, Miss Gertrude Maynard and Mrs. J. O. Benor.

SNATCHER MISSES HAUL

REGINA—(CP). — A thief who snatched Mrs. C. Stephens' purse from beneath her arm extracted 75 cents from the bag and threw it over a fence. Picked up and restored to its owner, it contained $12 in bills, a gold wedding ring, and a solitaire diamond ring which the snatcher missed.

Ended The War

Corporal Sellier, of the French army, blew the bugle call to cease firing when news of the false armistice was flashed on Nov. 7, 1918. Sellier is shown ABOVE, sounding the call 20 years later at Le Haudroy, where a monument marks the spot.

Investigators are shown here as they examined the damage to the hull of the German ship, Vancouver, now in drydock after being damaged by a bomb placed in her hold shortly before she was due to sail from Oakland, Calif.

French Protest Strikes Spread

PARIS, Nov. 4—(AP).—Strikes against Premier Daladier's government spread into the coal mines of Northern France today, bringing the number of strikers to more than 40,000.

About 14,000 coal miners occupied their pits this morning in sympathy with 26,000 striking metal workers to protest the government labor policy of increasing work beyond the 40-hour week and of evacuating occupied factories by force.

Another 4,000 railroad men, who transport coal from the mines to canal barges, also joined the movement.

The strikes involved the Anzin Mine, greatest coal producer in France, and several other northern pits.

Of 40 metal plants seized by strikers yesterday, only 15 had been evacuated today but police were proceeding methodically in thei rcampaign, under Daladier's orders to end the occupation.

The new conflicts heightened tension aroused by the general confederation of labor's call for nation-wide mass meetings Saturday and a 24-hour general strike at a date to be fixed for next week, in protest against Premier Daladier's recent decree laws ending the 40-hour work week and providing new taxes.

Mr. Chamberlain, Viscount Halifax, Daladier and the French foreign minister, Georges Bonnet, carried on their discussions at the foreign office today, looking toward coordination of armed forces and airplane and munitions production.

France and Great Britain, it was argued, could not forego precautionary extension of their collaboration even though the French-German war renunciation understanding was a bright element in the European situation.

The French-German understanding parallels the British-German anti-war declaration signed at Munich Sept. 30. Its details were withheld until a formal pact is signed, probably about Dec. 1, when the German foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, is expected here.

Students Present One-Act Comedy

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24.—Students from the fifth form were the featured entertainers in the program provided by the High School Literary Society held Tuesday afternoon. The one act comedy skit "Not That Far Gone" disclosed there is still plenty of acting material for the commencement which it is understood will be held before Christmas. The capers of Joe O'Sullivan provided plenty of laughter for junior members of the school as he portrayed his roll in the affairs of the Bell family. Others in the cast were Dorothy Curle, Elizabeth Free, Art Rowe and Helen Murray. The opening chorus, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" placed the student body in the jovial mood which predominated throughout the whole program. Six girls gave a fine demonstration of the Lambeth walk while a chorus of girls sang the number with piano accompaniment. Joe Kelly gave the current events and Thomas Lee offered an amusing song entitled "Stumbling." Lisle Hendricks, the critic, commended the fifth formers on their fine program.

Truth Hurts Dictators

CHICAGO, Nov. 24—(AP).—The Daily News said editorially to-day the expulsion from Italy of its Rome correspondent, Frank Smothers, "is evidence of the intense fear and hatred with which some dictators and their henchmen regard honest, independent newspaper work."

Guido Rocco, director of the Italian foreign press section of the Ministry of Popular Culture, informed Smothers yesterday he must leave Italy within a month because of the "generally unfriendly tone" of his dispatches.

The Daily News said Smothers' dispatches could be called unfriendly "if it is unfriendly to tell the important trith."

Marmora Banker Is Honored

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 24—The presentation of a handsome gladstone bag was made to Mr. T. W. Rhind on Monday afternoon by the business men of Marmora on the eve of his departure for Toronto where he has been transferred to the managership of another branch of the Dominion Bank after being manager of the Marmora branch for the past twelve and a half years.

The presentation was made by Dr. Hamilton Crawford. Mr. Rhind expressed his appreciation of the gift and his regret at severing business connections with them.

Recently Mr. and Mrs. Rhind, who have been members of the local bridge club for several years, were the recipients of a beautiful table lamp.

Mr. Sam Kelly of Holloway was the Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. O'Neill.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Simmons visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Simmons at Hillier on Sunday.

Mrs. S. Bridges and son of Boston, Mass., are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. Hamilton Crawford.

Dewan Promises Support To U.F.O.

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP)—United Farmers of Ontario, hearkening to the advice of Hon. P. M. Dewan, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, "put their heads together" today to discuss ways and means encouraging organization of co-operative purchasing, distributing and marketing agencies.

The minister told the association yesterday, second day of the 26th annual convention, that good results "can come from promotion of the co-operative movement." He urged greater efforts be made toward aiding spread of the movement and assured the farmers of the government's "heartiest and best support."

Programs and projects for 1939 will be discussed today by the United Farm Women of Ontario. The women's organization also will hear Agnes Macphail, U.F.O.-Labor member of parliament for Grey-Bruce. Miss Macphail yesterday was one of the nine directors of the United Farmers Co-operative Company, Limited, re-elected at the annual meeting. The meeting was held in conjunction with the U.F.O. convention.

Fleming, Father Of Standard Time Lauded As Giant Of Achievement

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—(CP)—Sir Sandford Fleming, the Scottish engineer who lifted the modern world from the haze of crippling time confusion by giving it "standard time," was described yesterday by D. E. Galloway, assistant vice-president of the Canadian National Telegraphs, as a "giant of intellect and achievement and his work remains his greatest memorial."

Mr. Galloway told a Canadian Jewellers' Association luncheon that "in commemorating that eventful night at the Canadian Institute here 60 years ago, when Sir Sandford Fleming, the great Scotch-Canadian, read a paper upon his proposal to place the world on a basis of universal time, we are honoring not only an outstading man of science and a public benefactor to humanity at large but are paying tribute to one who represented the ultimate in the development of time consciousness."

"By his conception of zoning the world into time belts, Sir Sandford attained that degree of exactitude for which man had struggled unsuccessfully throughout the ages."

Mr. Galloway, addressing the luncheon after the unveiling of a memorial tablet to Sir Sandford on the downtown Toronto building where the engineer first outlined his proposal, said it was due to the genius of Sir Sandford and his understanding of time as a measure of duration that business operated as a well regulated machine throughout the world.

Boon To Business

"Today, with the world operating as an economic unit, with our widespread business ramifications, our vast systems of communication and transport, and modern devices to speed up commerce, we would find it impossible to operate without standard time, as did our forefathers."

Mr. Galloway recalled the difference in time, even between such comparatively close centres as Montreal and Toronto, before the Fleming system of time zoning was adopted. In 1856, Montreal-Toronto trains operated on "Montreal time", which was 8½ minutes faster than Brockville time, 12 minutes ahead of Kingston, 14 minutes faster than Belleville and 25 minutes ahead of Toronto.

Searching for a common denominator, Sir Sandford spanned the centuries to the day of primitive man, who sat down to his mid-day meal when "his shadow was at his feet."

"For all practical purposes, Sir Sandford placed that shadow at the feet of the world according to Greenwich mean time and divided the earth's circumference into 24 parts so that each time zone would include all territories between two meridians 15 degrees apart. At a world conference held in Washington in 1884, his plan was adopted and Greenwich was set at the zero zone. Thus for the first time since man appeared upon the earth his objective to divide the day into definite fixed periods was attained.

Vital Necessity

"There is no need for me to elaborate upon the importance of Sir Sandford Fleming's achievement, nor indeed of its important to all of us of accurate time schedule. In the world of communication and transport it is one of vital necessity. To ensure accuracy of operation and punctuality the great public carriers, such as the railways, the telegraphs and radio, or short wave stations, receive daily time signals, and watches and clocks are set accordingly," Mr. Galloway said.

He traced the life of Sir Sandford born Jan. 7, 1827, at Kirkcaldy in Fifeshire, Scotland, and who came to Canada in 1845 to join the engineering staff of the Northern Railway at Toronto. He became chief engineer 12 years later.

Sir Sandford, knighted by Queen Victoria for his time reckoning efforts, played an important part in the development of Canadian railways and conducted a survey from which grew the Intercolonial Railway linking the Maritimes and Central Canada. He surveyed the route, too, over which the Canadian National Railways now cross the Rockies to the Pacific Coast, and assisted also in the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"He was a giant of intellect and achievement and his work remains his greatest memorial," Mr. Galloway concluded. "I cannot do better than conclude with the pronouncement made by the late Earl Grey, himself a shrewd appraiser of men, a great imperialist and one-time governor-general of Canada, who said, 'Sir Sandford Fleming was one of the most public spirited Britons the Empire ever has produced."

Held In Slaying Of Western Farmer

Henry Wesley Heipel, 24, LEFT, has been arrested in Oregon, Ill., in connection with the slaying of a Moosomin, Sask., farmer, J. A. Kaeser, who was found with four bullet wounds in his back. Police suspected that Mr. Kaeser had been slain when he gave a hitch-hiker a ride near Sintaluta, Sask. Heipel is reported to have denied knowledge of the crime, but admitted having driven the victim's car to Winnipeg, according to Sheriff Blanchard, RIGHT.

Wigle, Croll Tilt Seen Vital To Labor Move

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Windsor's mayoralty campaign has developed today into a bitter personal contest between Mayor E. S. Wigle and David Croll, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Windsor-Sandwich, with Roy C. Haight, the third announced candidate, confining himself to criticism of civic expenditures.

Col. Wigle, now 79, was mayor of Windsor more than 30 years ago. He made a comeback two years ago to defeat a Labor candidate. He has announced he has the support of Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and his government in his campaign against Croll.

Croll, former Minister of Labor, Relief and Municipal Affairs in the Hepburn cabinet, left the cabinet in 1937 when he opposed Hepburn over the Committee for Industrial Organization and the United Automobile Workers of America. Croll was mayor of Windsor for four years from 1931 to 1934.

Col. Wigle in campaign speeches has termed Croll a "Communist with $100,000." Wigle said Croll "never did an honest day's labor and he has a heart and soul filled with falsehood."

Croll is running with the endorsement of the Essex County Trades and Labor Council, consisting solely of American Federation of Labor Unions, and with endorsement of the U.A.W.A., an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Would Run Own Show.

Croll's main program is a demand for removal of Provincial supervision of Windsor's civic affairs. Windsor is under provincial supervision because it is a defaulting municipality. Cheaper bus fares are demanded by Labor candidates, including Croll.

Fundamental conflict between Croll and Wigle is over Labor policies. Wigle in campaign addresses declared Windsor was on the eve of a great industrial development that would not materialize if Croll, as a friend of the C.I.O., was elected.

"Labor throughout Canada and the United States is watching the outcome of the Windsor election," Steve Wallace, a Croll supporter, told an election meeting last night. "If Croll is defeated in an industrial centre of the importance of Windsor look out for "pressure" from Toronto. The defeat of a Labor candidate here would be a major catastrophe."

Nominations will be held tomorrow with the election on December 5.

Denies Canadians Hinted Secession

MONTREAL, Nov. 24—(CP).—Two McGill University professors who attended the British commonwealth relations conference in Sydney said yesterday no member of the Canadian delegation gave the impression in Australia that Canada would secede from the Empire if war broke out.

Percy E. Corbett and F. R. Scott, both of the university's law faculty, were replying to Senator W. A. Griesbach of Edmonton, who said here on his return from the conference last night that certain Canadian professors at the assembly had left the impression Canada would secede in the event of war. The Senator declared the conference had not been worth "a hill of beans."

"What we said in Sydney didn't influence Australian opinion at all, since sessions were held privately," Prof. Scott said. "If the Australian people got the idea Canada was hesitant, they got it from the Canadian government and not from the Canadian professors."

Prof. Corbett declared that "some of us" had questioned "the present value of the imperial connection" and also had suggested a policy of neutrality would have been to Canada's advantage in view of the European situation. He agreed with Senator Griesbach that "actual neutrality in war would be incompatible with membership in the commonwealth, but none of the Canadian delegation believed that if war arose over the Czechoslovakian crisis Canada wouldn't have been in."

Has Strange Powers

Alice Belle Kirby, 13, has astounded many reputable witnesses in her native town of Jonesville, La., with her "miracles." She is said to have strange mystic powers and to be able to make inanimate objects move by holding her hands over them. There is $10,000 waiting for Alice from the Universal Council of Psychic Research, if she can exert psychic control over inanimate objects, "without the use of mirrors."

150 Refugees Happy As Land Of Hope Nears

VANCOUVER, Nov. 24 (CP) — The Royal Mail steamship Aorangi sailed for the Antipodes yesterday carrying 150 German Jews from their old homes in Germany to a new land of promise—Australia.

"We have got away from the terror of Germany, but we fear for friends and relatives left behind," a spokesman said.

Most of the group—from babes in arms to white-haired grandfathers and grandmothers—smiled broadly as they were welcomed almost boisterously by members of Vancouver's Jewish colony on their arrival by train from Montreal. But there were occasional tears at the welcome, too.

"You look well, but how much you have lost," one Vancouver woman said quietly to a mother whose child clung tightly to a frayed black skirt.

In Australia the refugees will be reunited with other members of their families who are permanent residents of the commonwealth.

One For Each Relation.

"Australia has agreed to accept one blood-relation of each of her own Jews," an elderly lawyer said.

A dark-eyed woman, a Vienna music teacher, put in words feelings she said were those of all members of the party:

"We do not know how to say how much we appreciate the kindness that has been shown since we left Germany. It is a great sense of relief and freedom to find ourselves among friends. We go to make a new life, to start all over again in a land we do not know."

"We are going to a new land and we are alone," he said through an interpreter. "We know no English to help us."

46 Are Entered Farm School At Warkworth

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, Nov. 24.—The Northumberland County branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture held their opening meeting in "Agriculture" and "Home Economics" in the town hall on Wednesday morning with an attendance of 25 girls and 21 boys. Mrs. George Helson, the local president, and Ian MacLeod, the agricultural representative were there to welcome the students and teachers. The following are the staff: Ian MacLeod, B.S.A., Brighton, principal; assistant, Fred Campbell, B.S.A., Shanty Bay; Miss Cora Lush, Milton, in charge of the household science instructor; Miss Edith McAlphine, Toronto, health education and home care of the sick.

With the keen interest that has always been shown in this district in other courses and the large classes the instructors are looking forward to very interesting and educational meetings. The first day was spent mostly in outlining the work and getting things ready.

Y.P.A Meets

The Y.P.A. of St. Andrew's held its first meeting of the fall with the new president, Samuel Black and new secretary, Mrs. B. Jenkinson in the chair. The meeting opened with the familiar hymn, "Work For the Night Is Coming" and Rev. G. Duncan led in prayer. Miss Lenore Isaac read the Scripture lesson. The Society appointed two delegates to attend the special meeting of the different societies to be held at Centreville on Wednesday evening. Sammie Black and Miss Bessie Grant will attend from Warkworth.

Mrs. Carman Carlaw, as service convener, had charge of the meeting, giving a full account of the second days' program of A.Y.P.A. work at the convention held in Toronto recently, after which a humorous recitation was given by Miss Nelson and the meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah benediction.

Mrs. Wallace Baker is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Arkils at Castleton.

The collectors for the Bible Society, Miss Mary Park and Miss Blanche Baker completed their work Tuesday night and received over $58. This is the largest donation received for this work and the collectors are very grateful to the public for its generous givings.

Mrs. Orval Kelly and Patricia have returned to Brighton after spending a few days with Mrs. E. Thompson.

Tobacco Combine?

EDMONTON, Nov. 24—(CP).—Legal action will be taken against one or more tobacco companies in Alberta for operating an alleged combine, said Premier Aberhart today.

Action by the Government will be based on the findings of F. A. McGregor, Ottawa, Commissioner under the Combines Investigation Act, last September that a combine within the meaning of the Combines Investigation Act exists in Canada.

No decision has yet been made as to whether proceedings would be taken against one individual company or jobbers or both.

Prince To Marry American Dancer

THELMA ATTERBURY PRINCE LUIS FERDINAND

Prince Luis Ferdinand D'Orleans-Bourbon, first cousin of ex-King Alfonso of Spain, declares he'll wed Thelma Atterbury, once known to the Broadway stage as Feon van Marr, dancer, after he divorces his present wife, 81-year-old Princess Marie Charlotte Constance D'Broglie. Prince Luis stirred up his royal relatives a decade ago by marrying the princess. He was stripped of his rank and Spanish titles by Alfonso and banished from France because of escapades which startled Paris. His wife, a member of a distinguished family of the former French nobility will contest the divorce suit. The price will soon be 50.

Claim German Losses On Somme Greater Than Allies'

By Guy Rhoades
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 24 (CP Cable).—The contentions of "rhetoricians" that Allied casualties in the Battle of the Somme were greater than Germany's are belied by figures in "1916, Volume Two" of the Official History of the Great War edited by Captain Wilfrid Miles, which was published to-day.

A preface to the handsome volume by Brig.-General Sir James Edmonds, Director of the Historical Section of the War Office, summarizes the great offensive opened on July 2, and quotes official figures for losses of both sides, which only recently were available.

Winston Churchill in "The World Crisis" wrote that "in all British offensives British casualties never were less than three to two and often nearly double the corresponding German losses."

David Lloyd-George in his "War Memoirs" said "on the Somme our losses were twice as great as those we inflicted."

General Edmonds' figures are from the German official war history and were checked by the German Casualty Inquiry Office. They give Allied casualties at 623,907, German casualties at 680,000.

General Edmonds acknowledges the Allied casualties would have been lighter but for the inexperience of the new troops, initial tactical errors, and the loss of 57,000 men in the first days bf fighting.

He remarks the "true achievement of the British in the Battles of the Somme in 1916 has never generally been recognized except by our foe."

The volume contains in detail the performance of the Canadian forces in the battles, checked by Colonel Fortescue Duguid, Director of the Historical Section of the Department of National Defence at Ottawa.

Hunt Knifer

ORILLIA, Ont., Nov. 24—(CP).—Police today sought "a tall fellow of unusual strength" who knifed Alf Radford after entering a barn belonging to R. W. Holmes. Radford was uninjured, although his clothes were cleanly cut by the alleged attacker.

Radford thought he heard a noise in the neighboring Holmes barn. He went to investigate and the "tall man" grabbed him from behind and slashed his clothes. He then knocked Radford down and fled.

A few nights previous an attempt was made to burn the Holmes barn, but in last night's incident the building and its contents were undisturbed.

Claim Communists Hold Americans Jailed In Loyalist Spain

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—United States congressional investigators received testimony yesterday that communists were holding Americans in jail in Loyalist Spain.

Sam Baron of New York, testifying before the Dies Committee investigating unamerican activities, said the only way to get them out was through publicity.

"If there is enough publicity we will be in a position to remedy the situation," he said.

Baron said he had been arrested and been held in a dungeon in Spain.

On two occasions, he testified, he went to Loyalist Spain as a correspondent for the "Socialist Call," which he said Communists, after extending aid to the Loyalist cause, had set up a reign of terror to wipe out opposition to Communism. He said they had established a secret jail in the monastery of Santa Urusula near Valencia, another in Barcelona and others in various parts of the country.

Baron said Communists "controlled the international brigade from top to bottom," the Abraham Lincoln battalion, he testified, is part of the brigade.

The witness expressed the opinion the United States Department of State had many letters and reports from Spain substantiating his testimony.

"It is true," he asserted, "that Communists have enlisted men for the international brigade. I do not criticise them for it. I believe the cause is just and worth while.

"What I criticize is what they did to these boys when they got on the other side. They took away their passports, presumably to keep them safe, but actually to prevent any anti-Stalinist from getting out of Spain. If they came back and told what they had seen, it would have reflected on the Communists."

Purpose Of Hospital Auxiliary Is Explained At Millbrook; Branch May Be Organized There

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 24.—Interest in the proposed organization, locally, of a branch of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, in connection with the Nicholls Hospital of Peterborough, was sufficiently strong to bring an interested group of women to the council chamber of the Town Hall on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m., though the number present was hardly up to expectations.

Have 2,000 Members.

Mrs. J. G. Wharry, who was accompanied by Mrs. H. W. Morphet and Mrs. T. G. Detcher of Peterborough, took charge of the meeting explaining the nature and purpose of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, which had been organized in June, 1937, with 24 members at the initial meeting, the numbers having grown by September 1st of this year to 2,000 enrollments.

General members pay an annual fee of 25 cents, and life members are made on payment of $15 at one time. Besides the officers and conveners of committees ,there is a board elected in September, representative of the various churches, and the ladies' organizations of the city. "Outlying districts may apply for representation on the board, and the request will be granted."

Want 4,000 Members.

"Our objective is a membership of 4,000, which will give us an annual income of $1,000. We have now over fifty life members, and we expect that they may shortly do some special thing with their $1,500. Members who pay their free of 25 cents may be active or inactive, as their circumstances will allow, but in the interests of an improved hospital building, equipment and accommodation, every such step is a help."

The various committees, social, visiting, transportation, membership, sewing and buying, and their several duties, were described in detail, and an interesting account was given of the "Samaritan cupboard," containing supplies for patients going out from the hospital, including layettes, eight of these having been supplied by the Thursday Club. Other organizations of the city supply needed equipment for the wards, and the visiting committee sends two members each Friday with magazines, flowers, fruit, etc., a collection plate at the door, each time the Auxiliary has its regular meeting, bringing in enough funds for this helpful service. "Last year we provided venetian blinds for the sun rooms, and bedside curtains for semi-private and public wards, these latter being so much appreciated they have brought us several new members, and help from other sources as well. Most of our work is done in the semi-private and the public wards, as we believe these are more in need of such help as we can give."

New Wing Needed.

How badly the new wing for the hospital is required was evident from the message sent by Mrs. Leeson, the hospital superintendent, who spoke of patients turned away for lack of accommodation, and the inadequacy of practically every part of the present building to meet the demands constantly made upon it. The message was read by Mrs. Morphet, and Mrs. Wharry explained that the idea of forming hospital organizations in the outlying districts had, as one objective, the building up, locally, of a fund that a room might be furnished in the new building, such as, for instance "The Millbrook and Cavan Ward," where, as far as possible, patients sent in from this district would be placed.

Naturally, as patients from the entire countryside over a wide district are sent to the Peterborough hospital for medical attention, its equipment, the amount of accommodation available, and other details, are of vital interest, and Mrs. Wharry mentioned Norwood, and other places visited, or shortly to be visited, where already organization has been effected, or where it is hoped this step will soon be taken.

A committee, consisting of Miss Anna Kells, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, Mrs. W. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. E. L. Armstrong, and Mrs. George Fallis, was appointed to make a personal canvass to secure members, or to find out how many in the village and countryside would be interested in forming a local auxiliary, those who paid their fees on Tuesday, or promised membership, in addition to those already mentioned, being Mrs. M. Sloan, Mrs. J. H. George, Mrs. W. E. Ball, Miss Maud Fee and Miss Mamie Fisher.

SEES AID

LAWRENCETOWN, N.S.—(CP).—Hon. J. W. Comeau, Minister without Portfolio in the Nova Scotia government, told a banquet which ended a two-day mink show in this Annapolis County village, he believed the government would aid the newly-formed Central Mink Breeders' Club of Nova Scotia.

Crippling Rheumatism

In the beginning rheumatism is often due to dyspepsia or indigestion, for if the digestive organs did their duty there would not be any poisonous uric acid in the blood to sow the seeds of rheumatism.

From the Riviera and Uplifters' Country Clubs, vans hurried costly polo ponies to safety. Almost within a stone's throw lies the Plateau Ranch of the late Will Rogers, where his widow has resided since his death.

W. C. Fields, Mary Astor, Claudette Colbert, Joan Crawford, and other screen celebrities have palatial homes in the threatened sector.

Accused of starting the fire by dumping live coals from a stove in the belief they were dead, a 33-year-old ranch workman was held by Los Angeles fire department arson investigators. He was identified as David Trewitt, employed on the Trippett ranch in Santa Ynez Canyon, bordering Topanga.

Another Blaze East

The destructiveness of fire near the Pacific was equalled if not exceeded by a blaze in the mountains above San Bernardino, 60 miles east of Los Angeles, which razed the $750,000 Arrowhead Springs Hotel as 40 guests, including the Ritz Brothers of comedy fame, reached safety.

The Las Casitas night club nearby and more than a score of mountain homes were destroyed, the fire spreading out over 2,500 acres. Flames stretched down Waterman canyon, while authorities evacuated 200 families from the north district of the city of San Bernardino.

One thousand men, conscripted from works progress administration lists and private citizenry, feverishly worked on a firebreak to stop the flames advancing on forests near Lake Arrowhead.

As the fires at Santa Monica and San Bernardino flared up suddenly yesterday, it seemed as if a plague had struck Southern California.

200 Rural School Pupils Are Heard In Concert At Normal

Upwards of 200 pupils from the rural schools made a creditable showing in a musical festival that filled the auditorium at the Normal school last night The program demonstrated conclusively that the pupils had been given excellent training in music, and their platform manner and concentration on their singing reflected further credit on the supervisor of music, Homer Ouellette and the different teachers.

Mr. Ouellette who is supervisor in both inspectorates of the county, explained the various songs to the audience and led the children in each number while R. F. Downey, school inspector was chairman. Practically all of the songs were sung without musical accompaniment.

Fourteen Schools Entered

Fourteen rural schools were represented on the program, and it was noticed that every child in each school regardless of his or her ability as a singer took part in the choral work. All of the songs were taken from the school music reader and sung in unison. Variety was added to the presentation by several folk dances cleverly executed by the tiny pupils, and by several two part songs. The latter arranged for unchanged voices, were particularly well done, with the contralto and soprano sections showing an evenness of volume that was pleasing.

The small children when they took their places on the stage and started the songs were intent on the director and were remarkable for their lack of selfconsciousness. The smaller ones, who would ordinarily be almost paralysed by such an act, apparently gained confidence and courage from looking at Mr. Ouellette and during several numbers smiles denoting complete freedom from fear flitted across the faces of the youngest children.

Not A Contest

There were no prizes and the festival was not a contest, merely a musical program to indicate the progress being made teaching music to the children in the primary grades.

It was evident throughout the entertainment that the director was stressing sweetness of tone rather than volume and was not forcing any of the children to bellow at the top of their voices. Their voices almost without exception were well modulated, even the older boys following this rule.

The highlight perhaps of the entire program was the singing of the two part songs, particularly the hymn "Abide With Me" sang by pupils from five schools.

The program was as follows:

S. S. 8, Emily, "Begone Dull Care."
S. S. 12, Douro, "The Blue Bells of Scotland."
S. S. 8 Douro, "Bonnie Dundee."
S. S. 6, Otonabee, "Come Lasses and Lads."
S. S. 3, South Monaghan, "The Mermaid," and Folk dance.
S. S. 3, Douro, "When the Children Sleep," and Folk dance by juniors.
"Abide With Me," two-part song by five schools.
S. S. 10, Emily, "The Quest."
S. S. 1, North Monaghan, "Come to the Fair."
S. S. 5, South Monaghan, "The Rain," 2-part.
S. S. 17, Otonabee, "Dame Swallow."
"Sailor's Hornpipe", by Gladys Young and Patricia Mackey.
S. S. 16, Otonabee, "Whitecaps," by juniors; "Old Folks at Home," two-part.
S. S. 4, South Monaghan, "O Come With Me," two-part.
S. S. 2, South Monaghan, "Birds' Ball," juniors.
S. S. 2, South Monaghan, "Lullaby," seniors, two-part.
"Santa Lucia," duet by Joan and Norma Pue.
S. S. 2, Smith, "Gently Ev'ning Bendeth," three-part.

Charge German Ship Runs Arms To China

LONDON, Nov. 24—(CP-Havas)—Japanese reports a British freighter had discharged a cargo of munitions at Rangoon, Burma, for transit to China brought the assertion from qualified sources here that the vessel in question was a German craft.

The same quarters argued that a British ship's owner or captain would be within his right in accepting such a cargo, since there is no Chinese non-intervention agreement. Whereas Great Britian abstains from sending arms to China, there are no restrictions against a freighter attempting such commercial traffic.

According to a Domei, Japanese, news agency dispatch, 6,000 tons of planes, arms and ammunition taken aboard at the Soviet port of Odessa were unloaded from a British freighter at Rangoon to be forwarded to Mandalay and then overland to Yunnan, China. Four other vessels were expected at Rangoon before Decc. 31 with similar cargoes, the dispatch said.

Shipping circles here said the itinerary reported by Domei was identical to the one scheduled for the German steamship Bertram Rickmers, out of Hamburg, this 4,188-ton vessel was reported loaded with explosives of German manufacture destined for China by way of Rangoon.

Plan To Extradite Murder Suspect

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 24—(CP)—Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness announced here Tuesda ythat unless Dan MacDonald, 53-year-old handyman wanted for the slaying of Captain F. J. Cameron, 64, and now held at Malone, N.Y., waives extradition proceedings that steps will be taken to bring him back to Canada to stand trial.

MacDonald was arrested at Fort Covington, N.Y., by immigration authorities after fleeing from Cameron Island in the St. Lawrence 12 miles east of here where Monday he allegedly struck Cameron with a hickory hoe handle, inflicting injuries from which the Captain died in Cornwall hospital. MacDonald, formerly of Bucklin, Kansas, and a cousin of Cameron's, had been working at the Cameron farm on the island as a handyman for more than a year.

At Malone, MacDonald said he would not waive extradition under any circumstances. A warrant for his arrest was issued by Ontario provincial police on a murder charge.

Following his apprehension at Fort Covington, he was charged with being a fugitive from justice and sentenced to 30 days in jail. The sentence was imposed to hold him pending institution of extradition proceedings by Canadian authorities.

Committees Are Selected For Annual Red Cross Drive

Plans for the opening of the Peterborough Red Cross campaign are now completed states Mrs. John Mills, chairman of the Campaign Committee. All cards have been allotted to the workers and these will be given out at the opening Campaign meeting Friday.

Mrs. R. H. Turner, president of the branch, has invited the seventy-five campaign workers to this opening meeting which is being held Friday, Nov. 25, in the officers' mess at the Armouries, through the courtesy of the Officer Commanding and officers of the Prince of Wales Rangers. N. R. Vinton, field secretary of the Red Cross Society, who has just returned from the Fort Francis Rainy River district fire area, where he was in charge of the Red Cross rehabilitation work for the burnt-out settlers, will be the guest speaker and tell the story of the fire and what is now being done for the victims of the catastrophe.

TORONTO.—Police said today the Dominion Government has been asked to investigate the source of a large number of Mexican peso bills they said were circulating in Toronto. Merchants in the past month were said to have lost more than $1,000 by accepting five-peso and 10-peso bills which resemble Canadian five and 10-dollar bills.

Fractured Neck Is Fatal

HAMILTON.—Charles W. W. Fielding, 82, who suffered a fractured neck last Friday when he fell and his head struck the curb while he was hurrying to catch a street car, died in hospital last night. Before his retirement several years ago, he was head of the postal registration department here.

Mountie Tells On Watching Mash In Woods

Evidence of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police corporal and a county constable hiding in the woods on the bank of Squaw River in Harvey Township from 5 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, watching a vat containing 80 gallons of mash, suitable for the manufacture of spirits, featured a case before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Bruce Freeburn of Bobcaygeon, tried as a second offender, was charged with having been in possession of the mash without having a license from the Excise Department and pleaded not guilty.

He was defended by Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., while F. D. Kerr, K.C., prosecuted for the Department of National Revenue.

Corp. T. J. Woods of the R.C.M.P. testified to watching with county constable John Dixon, a vate containing mash which was on the bank of the Squaw River and covered over with old bags and tree stumps, from 5 o'clock on the morning of September 4, until 3 o'clock that afternoon. At 3 o'clock a car stopped on the bridge over the Squaw River some 150 feet away from the vat and witness said he saw Bruce Freeburn standing beside the automobile. A little later he saw Charles English, Bobcaygeon, at the vat and then start out toward the road in the direction of the car. English came right to where they were hidden and the officers intercepted him, and detained him for some time. After a while they saw Freeburn get into the car and drive off to the south and then come back in the direction of Bobcaygeon a few minutes later. Corporal Woods said he had been unable to locate Freeburn in Bobcaygeon and later heard of him in Sudbury where he had been arrested on information sent by Corporal Woods.

The officer produced a certificate of analysis of a quantity of the mash found near Squaw River, showing that it was intoxicating.

Corroborates Evidence

Constable Dixon, corroborated Corporal Woods' evidence as to what had happened on September 4, but said that he had been unable to identify Freeburn who was a stranger to him.

Charles English, who asked the protection of the Canada Evidence Act and against whom a similar charge has been laid was called by the prosecution. He said that he had gone to the Squaw River bridge with Freeburn and had left the car and looked along the river bank for mink signs. He noticed the vat but did not know what it contained. He was stopped by the officers and when they got out to the road Freeburn had gone.

"He probably got tired of waiting for me," witness said.

Adverse Witness

The consent of the court was given to treating English as an adverse witness and over protests by Mr. Gordon, who remarked "this is a court and not an inquisition," was examined as to a statement allegedly made by him when he was arrested some weeks after the finding of the mash. English admitted that he had said to the officer "I was a dam fool to have been around there," but denied that he had said "Freeburn should take the rap, like he did before."

Corporal Woods recalled by the prosecution after the defence had stated that no defence witnesses would be called swore that when he arrested English and warned him properly English had said that Freeburn should take the rap and that he himself was a fool to have been around the place at all.

In his argument Mr. Gordon said that no case had been made out against his client.

The court then adjourned for luncheon and Mr. Kerr's argument was left over until the afternoon session.

Two Young Hunters Have Close Call

Two young Peterborough duck-hunters had a close call at Rice Lake the other day when their canoe was riped by the ice near shore and they just managed to reach shallow water before the craft filled.

They were William Lanouette, 379 Bethune street and Bruce Barfield, 371 Bethune street. They had been paddling out from the shore and did not notice that ice was forming close in until they tried to return. The ice was not thick and broke in front of their canoe but before long two long gashes had been ripped in the side of the craft and it began to ship water. They paddled frantically toward land and had reached shallow water before they were finally forced to leave the canoe and wade to shore.

New 35,000 Tonner

—Buckingham Palace announced last night the King and Queen will attend the launching at Newcastle-on-Tyne next February 21 of the new battleship King George V.

After the ceremony, Their Majesties will tour North-eastern England, it was announced. The King George V. is one of five 35,000-ton battleships being built under the 1936 and 1937 naval programs. The others, all commenced in 1937, are the Prince of Wales, Anson, Jellicoe, and Beatty.

Five Sentenced For Thefts; Pleaded Guilty

Five sentences were imposed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning, following pleas of guilty. The list was as follows:

Kenneth Donaghue, 19, on charges of entering the store of David Rice and the residence of John Wyllie by night, three months determinate and three months indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory.

George Kempt, for stealing articles from the Naborhood Shoe Store, E. F. Mason, the A. and P. store and the Dominion store, two months in jail.

John Harran and Harry Jones for breaking and entering the booth of Mrs. Catherine Brady and stealing tobacco and cigarettes, two months in jail.

Joseph Heffernan, on a similar charge, one month in jail.

All the accused with the exception of Harran had pleaded guilty at previous sessions of the court. This morning Harran, who was represented by W. B. Gordon, changed his plea to guilty, and his counsel urged a light sentence.

It was pointed out that the accused was on suspended sentence, however, and in regard to the three charges in the Brady case, Magistrate Langley said that he proposed to stop that kind of thing and would impose jail sentences.

Heffernan, in whose behalf John R. Corkery appeared, was mentioned by the court as the main offender in the case and he escaped with a month.

In regard to Donaghue who admitted having been committed to the Industrial School and to being on parole from that institution, Magistrate Langley remarked that the loot from one of the burglaries was only a matter of a few cents.

Kempt whose escapade on George street on Saturday night got him into trouble when he carried off a number of articles from in front of stores, admitted a previous conviction years ago in Campbellford but said that had been a case of mistaken identity. He was given two months in jail.

Jewel Is Presented To W. Roy Loucks

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24.—W. Roy Loucks was presented with the P.D.D.G.M. Jewel by members of the Campbellford Lodge, No. 248, I.O.O.F. The presentation was made by J. A. Irwin before nearly one hundred members and guests, including the members of Loch Lomond Rebekah Lodge. The jewel presented to Mr. Loucks was emblematic of his having served as Deputy Grand Master of the Madoc District No. 45, I.O.O.F., and Mr. Irwin congratulated him on the keen interest he had always maintained in the Order.

George Lucy, the Noble Grand, presided during the program, which was concluded with a dainty lunch served by the ladies. Those taking part in the program were Mrs. Ed. Bates, vocal solo; Pauline Cassan, dance; James MacDowell, mandolin solo; Mrs. Lorne Evans, reading; Miss Monica DeCarrol, vocal; Yvonne Hollings, dance; Miss June Burgiss, vocal solo; Jack and Pauline Cassan, piano duet; C. W. Palliser, reading; Jack Storie, vocal solo; Florence Bertrand, novelty dance; Gloria Anderson, vocal solo; Frances Hendy, vocal solo; Ruth Palliser, reading; Mrs. M. McFarlane, piano solo; G. W. Lucy, piano solo. Jack Cassan, June Burgis, Mrs. John Storie, and Mrs. M. McFarlane were the accompanists. The committee in charge of the refreshments included Miss Stella Keir, Mrs. Ray Phillips, and Mrs. T. J. Craighead.

Honored In Boston

Hastings Doctor And His Two Sons Take Dip Almost Daily In The Trent River

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 24. — Dr. J. A. MacDonald and two sons Phillip and Joseph of this village have been enjoying a swim in the Trent River almost every day this fall. While passers-by on Front Street on Monday were huddled in winter overcoats, the trio were observed in swimming. Dr. MacDonald claims its not an extraordinary fete to swim in late fall. The lowest temperature the water reaches is 32 degrees and then it starts to freeze. His only complaint following Monday's dip was that his feet were cold. Phillip and Joseph offered no complaints.

The showing of "Damaged Lives," a motion picture given under the auspices of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council in the Town Hall here on Tuesday evening, was well received.

Tear Down Sheds.

The United Church sheds, used in former years to shelter the horses when people drove to church in a horse and buggy or cutter, are being demolished. Several men are employed in wrecking the two buildings.

Inspector Reports Cruelty To Cats

One glaring case of cruelty to cats was reported to Dr. Thos. Johnston, inspector for the Humane Society during the past month. It concerned a six-year-old boy who had held a cat down while he slashed off its legs with an axe. At the regular meeting held this week the inspector reported a fine spirit of cooperation had been shown by the people of the city in the drive to rid the city of diseased or maimed cats by humane methods.

Investigations were carried out in South Monaghan, Ennismore, Crawford's Grove and the Port Hope highway into complaints of ill treatment to horses or live stock and in every case the conditions were corrected. A warning is issued to boys in the city that the society members are cooperating with the police in a drive against the use of bow and arrows.

Membership in the society is growing by leaps and bounds according to the monthly report, and one active member added fifty names to the membership roll. An invitation is extended to any person interested in the promotion of the society's work to attend the meetings held each month in the Chamber of Commerce.

The detailed report of the inspector's activities is as follows: Horses examined, 29; horses destroyed, 1; dogs brought to shelter, 9; dogs destroyed, 9; cats brought to shelter, 20; cats destroyed, 18; cats to homes, 2; live stock examined, 200; complaints investigated, 13; warnings issued, 7; emergency calls, 15; telephone calls, 300.

PURCHASED PRIZE CATTLE.

Peterborough beef eaters are going to have an opportunity within the next few days to determine whether prize beef from the Royal Winter Fair is better meat than they are accustomed to buying in Peterborough shops. Local buyers at the Fair were Porter S. White Co., the Empress Hotel, and H. J. Taylor, of Campbellford. They purchased prize cattle at the dressed sale, the first time in some years that anyone from this city has done so.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

By an Examiner Reporter.

ANOTHER ADJOURNMENT.

William Miller, charged with illegal possession of liquor, got a week's adjournment this morning when Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., called his case in police court.

PLAN BRIDGE PARTY

The lawn bowlers have been holding several meetings in preparation for their annual bridge party to be held on December 12. It will likely be in the Canadian Legion Hall.

LAWYERS PLENTIFUL.

There was no lack of legal knowledge around the police court this morning for at one time early in the proceedings there were eight local lawyers in and around the court room.

WOOF REMANDED.

Charged with false pretenses James Ross Woof of Toronto, was remanded until Wednesday when his case was called. In police court this morning, his counsel, Reg. J. Chandler, asked for the delay and the Crown raised no objection.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Clearings passing through the Peterborough Clearing House during the past week showed a considerable decrease over those of one year ago. Last week the clearings totalled $562,968, while for the same period a year ago they were $616,732.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Unable to secure bail, Pierce Nicholson, charged with a serious offence against his own daughter, was committed for trial at the next assizes by Magistrate Langley this morning. Had he been able to secure a bondsman for $500 he would have been bailed for trial.

KNOWS HIS NOVEMBERS

Arthur Stinson, North Monaghan gardener, called the arrival of cold weather about a month ago. "You'll find that around November 19 or 20 outside work should all be done because the ground will likely be frozen by that time," he told the Examiner, and his prediction was close enough to merit rating as a weather prophet.

BROADCAST CHIMES.

Warne's Jewellry Store have added another big city innovation to the main street. They have placed a radio amplifier above the door of their store and connected it with a grandfather's clock. The sweet tones of the chimes in the clock are amplified and broadcast on the street every quarter hour.

NOT SAFE FOR SKATING.

When winter comes can such warning as this be far behind? Boys and girls are warned that the ice covering the Kiwanis club's projected skating rink in Jackson Park is not safe for skating. Water has been flooded into the artificial lake and ice has formed over its surface, but to no safe depth.

JITTERBUGS

Nick Harkley, Jack Dinsdale, Alice Collins and Dolly McAdams entered the Jitterbug contest held in Maple Leaf Gardens Wednesday night by the Lions Club of Toronto. The locals were eliminated in the second round. They report it was not a dancing contest but one in which unusual contortions counted. Evidently the locals figured fancy dancing would place them in the win column, but the others had a variety of acrobatic acts that overshadowed the dancing.

NECKLACE OF ICE.

Chip island, north of the C.P.R. bridge, was fringed this morning with a narrow and irregular margin of ice as winter began closing in on the uptown waterfront.

TO MEET DIRECTORS.

J. A. Carroll, superintendent of Ontario Fairs and Agricultural Societies, will meet the Peterborough Exhibition Board here on December 14 in the office of F. C. Paterson. It will likely be an afternoon meeting.

WOULD RESCIND BY-LAW.

"A city with all the railway entrances, apart from the local sidings, such as Peterborough has, should provide traffic with every possible protection," a main streeter said this morning. "That means we should be encouraging trains to give warning to the public, instead of preventing them as the city by-law does. May be some light sleepers might hear a whistle, but that is not so serious a matter as a fatal accident that leaves the whole community distressed. I think it would be safer to revoke that whistling by-law."

Lakefield Hunter Always Hails His Deer Before He Makes Ready To Fire Shot

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24—Amongst the wealth of "Back from the hunt" stories which are going the rounds these days, W. H. Pearson of Lakefield tells a "startling" tale.

Sherman Pearson, who was hunting in his father's party north of Buckhorn, brought home two nice deer which he claims, were brought down by the following unusual method.

Standing in the bush one day, Sherman saw a doe coming toward him. Startled he shouted "Hi." The deer, apparently likewise startled stopped in its tracks for a second whereupon Sherman, taking advantage of the hesitation, raised his gun, pulled the trigger, and down fell the deer, shot squarely between the eyes.

Finding that the method worked, the young man tried it again. A few days later he saw a large buck coming along the trail.

"Hello," shouted Sherman. The buck, apparently not accustomed to being accosted in such a familiar manner by a complete stranger, stopped suddenly and looked disdainfully about him. But pride cometh before a fall, and when the deer turned in Mr. Pearson's direction the hunter put a bullet through its brain.

The advantage of this method, Mr. Pearson points out, is that none of the meat is riddled with shot.

He neglected to state whether his son had had previous experience in "hog" calling.

Urging Company To Re-open Mill

Working on the theory that it's an ill wind that blows nobody good, the city council's manufacturing committee is in communication at present time with officials of the Maple Leaf Milling Company. Headed by Ald. R. M. Glover, the committee hopes to have the large company start up its idle plant here in lieu of building a new one to replace that at Kenora, destroyed by fire early Tuesday evening. Loss was estimated at half a million dollars.

The plant here is capable of turning out three-quarters the amount of flour milled by the Kenora plant and could be fitted for operation within six weeks, it is believed on good authority. The cost would be relatively small—practically nil in comparison with the cost of erecting an entire new plant at Kenora.

While it is not known how many men the opening of the Peterborough plant, situated on George street near the Canadian Pacific Railway station, would require, the burning of the eKnora platn threw between sixty and seventy employees out of work. The mill has a capacity of 3,000 barrels a day and in normal times employed one hundred men.

Ald. Glover did not say that any progress had been made in the negotiations between his committee and the company officials, yet the fact that they are in contact regarding opening of the plant here, in itself lends an air of hope. Other municipalities in the province will be taking steps to try to secure the new plant, but Peterborough has the advantage in that here the company already has a plant erected and almost ready to commence operations, Mr. Glover said.

Car Being Pushed To The Side Of Road Plunges To Bottom Of Otonabee River

A car that was being pushed off the road by the owner and his girl friend so it would not block traffic on River Road Sunday afternoon is now in the bottom of the Otonabee River.

The car, a 1927 model is said to be owned by J. Pritchard, 536 Stewart street. The owner and a girl friend were returning to Peterborough on Sunday afternoon and were travelling south on the River road near Lock 22 when the car stalled. The engine is believed to have seized because of a dry radiator which had frozen up unknown to the driver. They were unable to start the engine, so both the man and girl proceeded to push the car off the travelled portion of the road so as not to obstruct traffic. There is only a narrow stretch between the road and river and when the car started to move it kept on going until it nose dived into the river down the steep bank.

The car is submerged in ten feet of water and is scarcely visible from the shore. It must be removed because it lies in the boat channel but the unfortunate part of the story is that the cost of removing it at this time of the year would be almost as much as the car is worth.

The accident occurred about half a mile north of Nassau and only a few hundred yards from fence running south from Lock 22

Claire Stuart 25 Years In Post Office

Officials and employees of the Post Office staff gathered in the office of the postmaster on Wednesday to honor Lt.-Col. Claire H. Stuart, senior clerk, who has completed 25 years of service with the Post Office.

Presentation of a plaque and a beautiful gift came as a complete surprise to Col. Stuart. He was not scheduled to come to work until midnight, but at eight o'clock he was routed out by Norman Lewis and brought to the office, where his colleagues were gathered. Jack Legros, president of the local branch of Canadian Postal Workers, extended warm congratulations on behalf of the staff and best wishes for many more years of good health and continued service.

Charles Lacheur, postmaster, paid tribute to Mr. Stuart's fine record. He said Claire had started as a junior clerk on August 4, 1913, and had risen to his present position of senior clerk in charge of staff. He referred also to his fine war record. He was commissioned as a lieutenant in 1915, but enlisted as a gunner in the 27th Battery Canadian Field Artillery, and served throughout the balance of the war.

Charles Stenton, senior letter carrier, voiced the good wishes of the mail carriers, and brief speeches of commendation were given by George Lynch, Allan Macnab, and Norman Lewis.

Harry White, assistant postmaster, presented the gift, and Mr. Lacheur handed Mr. Stuart a plaque which read: "In commemoration of your 25 years of service in the Post Office, we, your colleagues, heartily congratulate you and wish you continued good health to carry on for many years to come."

Mr. Stuart, in a gracious reply, said he had enjoyed every minute of his work in the organization and spoke of the pleasant associations that had been formed down through the years, and the ever present spirit of harmony that pervades the entire staff.

Royal Arch Masons Host To 10 Chapters

Corinthian Chapter No. 36, Royal Arch Masons were at home last night as the ten chapters in District 10 were represented at a ruling first principal's night in the local Masonic Temple. The degree work was in charge of the principal from each chapter and the total number of members attending from outside points topped the one hundred mark. The local members boosted the attendance close to 200.

J. Dishart, tendered a warm welcome to the visitors and acted as toastmaster at the banquet which followed the degree work, and the business meeting. Entertainment was provided by Jack Smith and Bob Hendrie.

A highlight of the evening's program was the presentation to Stan. Couper of the complete regalia as an officer of the Grand Chapter.

The degree work was in charge of the following: W.M. J. Dishart, Peterborough; S.W., E. P. McLennan, Lindsay; J.W., S. J. Batt, Port Hope; S.D., J. O. Benor, Campbellford; J. D., D. Plunkett, Havelock; I.G., S. E. Turpin, Colborne, assisted by F. J. Groat, Bowmanville; E. A. Hircock, Cobourg; H. A. Suddard, Oshawa, and E. Hayes, Cannington.

Tweed Elections Begin Pepping Up

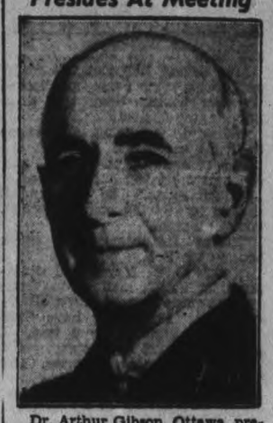
(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 24—Early Tuesday evening, Murney Ray, Springbrook, caused considerable excitement in the village of Madoc, when he is said to have resisted arrest when Constable Dymond went to place handcuffs on him. Ray was subsequently taken into custody on a charge of disorderly conduct.

While the majority of northern municipalities and townships do not swing into nomination action until January, a large number are preparing for their annual nomination meetings that take place on Friday and Monday of next week.

Advance reports have it that a spirited meeting will beheld in the township Hall, Tweed, on Friday night where reeveship and councillor seats will be contested. It is believed that some of the councillors will retire from the field and it is expected that there will be a large entry. One councillor, C. H. Kerr, will contest the reeveship, if the present reeve "Herb" Sayers continues to remain in the running.

Presides At Meeting



Dr. Arthur Gibson, Ottawa, president of the Entomological Society of Ontario, is presiding at the 75th annual meeting of the society being held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Representatives from leading colleges, universities and scientific societies from all parts of the United States and Canada are attending the meeting.

Prices In 1884 Are Compared To Present Day

A North Monaghan farmer quoted to the Examiner to-day some comparative prices he had marked down in his reading. In 1884 Winnipeg wheat sold at from 65 to 90 cents and oats at 40 to 45 cents. In 1914 wheat was $1 a bushel, oats 42 cents the bushel, cattle $8.25 per cwt., hogs about the same price, butter 29 cents, eggs 30½ cents.

Then in 1920 produce prices soared to an all time high—wheat $2.50, oats 95 cents, cattle $12.70, hogs $18, butter 65 cents, eggs 60 cents; and in 1938, wheat 57-8 cents, oats 27 to 30 with 35 as high, cattle $6.25, hogs $7.25 to $7.75 and $8; butter 21 to 23 cents.

During one week in 1884 the receipts of wheat at Duluth were 850 bushels, and for the month of September in that year 6,527 bushels and in October 9,535 bushels. "Quantities like that are not worth mentioning in these days," this man said.

"Back about that time there was an attempt made to get through the Manitoba Legislature an act which they called the Creditors' Relief Act. It was intended to bring about a more equal distribution of the assets of insolvent debtors. Apparently it didn't pass, but it sounds exactly the same as our own Farm Creditors' Arrangement Act. You might say times don't change very much looking over those two signs of to-day and fifty-three years ago, but on the other hand we all know they have changed a tremendous lot since 1920."

LINDSAY

One Arrest Is Made In Chicken Thefts

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Nov. 24.—L. Clayton, a local man, is facing, it is alleged, 17 cases of chicken stealing. It is understood, however, that only one charge will be preferred. He was arrested Tuesday night by Provincial Constable Adair and came before Magistrate Langley of Peterborough in local police court yesterday. Accused was remanded without plea of election for one week. According to the police an epidemic of chicken stealing has been raging through this district. Constable Adair stated that the accused admitted some thefts after considerable questioning.

Charles Shields of Coboconk, who is the owner of several thousand acres on the shore of Balsam Lake, has decided to open up a large section as summer resort property. Roads are being built into the stretch at present and several new cottages have been erected.

Game Warden E. Prosser of Pefferlaw, found a young buck deer stranded on a railway fence near that village a few days ago. It was dead when he arrived. The deer was apparently frightened by a railway train, and failed to clear the fence in its efforts to get away.

Canada's Need Is Settlers Kumpf Declares

Canada needs a great influx of settlers, agriculturists primarily, in order to reach her destiny as one of the great nations of the world, was the opinion offered to-day by Ford S. Kumpf, president and managing director of the Dominion Life Assurance Company in an interview with the Examiner.

While he said that this land would probably be a happier and more prosperous one should such settlers come from within the British Empire, he did not entirely dismiss the suggestion that refugees from Europe's dictator-ruled nations might form a nucleus for such a new group. Obviously, he said, settlers must not come to Canada as paupers, for as such they would be merely an added burden to tax payers. But he agreed that Canada would benefit should some means be found of establishing refugees or large groups of British citizens on Canadian soil in such a manner that they would be financially sound, and able to more or less look after themselves until they began to reap the dividends that this land has to pay for hard work.

For it was his firm conviction that Canada is a land of untold wealth and opportunity, waiting only for two or three times its present population to get off to a flying start as a great nation. "We've simply got to fill this country up," he said. "If this country were under Hitler it would certainly be filled with settlers and we would go places." Not that he believed in a Canada ruled by a dictator, but only that such efficiency and vision is needed.

A man whose business carries him back and forth across the entire Dominion, Mr. Kumpf said he has found business conditions throughout Canada's industry on the upswing. "Conditions are defintely better now," he said, "especially in manufacturing." He believed that Canada's return to prosperity has been hampered in the past by a tendency on the part of the United States to lag behind—a tendency he believed has passed away now. "We were ready to go ahead months ago had the United States been ready to take our raw materials."

Business Better in West.

Business is better in western Canada now, he said. With Alberta's good crop this year, the country stands in a fair way to return to prosperity. Moisture in the drought area of Saskatchewan is good and gives promise of good crops next year, he said. Thatcher wheat, rust resistant, should prove a boon to farmers in those areas, he said. "Wherever it has been sown this year there has been no loss to crops through rust," he said, and believed much more will be sown in the coming year.

"Forty or fifty millions is quite a lot for the government to lose, but then the farmers of the west needed help," was the only comment he had to offer on the pegging of wheat at 80 cents a bushel by the Dominion government. He had no criticism to offer on the recent trade treaty between the United States, Great Britain and Canada. He admitted he knew little of its intracies, could offer no sound opinion on it. Manufacturers with whom he is in constant contact have voiced no adverse criticism of the agreement, he said.

BY ORELL ARNOLD

Read This First:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 students "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him....then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 8

ON THE afternoon after Dr. Holgate had called on Sara Sue, confessing to her his love for Peaches Pomeroy, Robert Towne, Rice senior, stuck his head out of his dormitory window and issued a command:

Gurley was not insulted, since all freshmen are called "slimes". He had been at Rice for a week, which is long enough to begin learning things. He hastened upstairs.

"Yes, sir," he reported to Bob, giving the salute. The slime salute consists of touching the button on a ridiculous green skull cap and wagging one's fingers. The cap, like the salute, is mandatory at Rice.

Bob engaged in some intense berating of the slime until such time as his rich vocabulary ran out. Then the freshman was made to shine two pairs of senior shoes, sweep the senior's room, dust all his furniture, and bring him a glass of ice water from the hall fountain. Twice during the hour's process, Bob whipped the lad with a leather belt — not too hard — just for added pleasure.

Some of Bob's friends came in, and they also insulted the freshman variously. One of them painted a mustache on the young lad with iodine. Another made him sing words on a cigaret pack, to the tune of "Home On the Range" Another commanded the boy to do an imitation of Mae West.

When these scholastic pursuits were over, Bob ordered Slime Gurley to go to the dormitory entrance gates about 200 yards away, climb one high brick post and stand motionless on top of it in the pose of Napoleon.

"How long shall I stay?" Worthington asked.

"Until I tell you to come down, you slime! Get going!"

He got going. Moreover, he got going in good spirits. Nobody was peeved at anybody else. This was all routine. He struck his pose on the gatetop, while a lot of passers-by grinned appreciatively. And he was promptly forgotten by the seniors.

Really young freshmen — i. e., slimy slimes—have been known to stand on that post all night, so great was their awe of upperclassmen, and their general lack of acumen.

But slime Worthington Gurley came to himself after an hour or two. Hunger contributed a great deal. When the dinner signal sounded and students began running like stampeded cattle for the mess hall entrance, "Napoleon" began to worry. Finally he decided to risk the upperclass wrath. He climbed down and hastened to his own meal.

"Slime, if you had stood up there another half hour," Bob Towne greeted him. "I would have smacked you for it. I ought to anyhow."

A chorus of guffaws and hooting answered. Even his own fellow freshmen grinned. After all, the game is to appear obedient to the upperclassmen, and yet disobey them in every way possible. Sometimes, though, it isn't possible, when they hover near with paddles, traps and belts. Bob Towne was an exceptionally muscular football man.

After dinner Bob took the freshman to his room again, and locked the door behind them this time. Worthington sighed.

"What are you going to do to me now?" he asked.

"Hunh?" He automatically shook hands with Bob.

"You're O. K. If you had whimpered, or gotten mad, or sat back on false pride it would be a different story. I wouldn't have Sara Sue Davis annoyed by a heel. I had—I had sort of hoped you'd turn out to be a heel, Gurley. But damn it, you didn't!"

Slime Gurley was still young. Young enough not to follow Bob's conversation. He stared a little vacantly.

"You mean—?"

"I mean you must have something, even if you are a slime, see? Sara Sue told me you are going to take her to the freshman ball, I wondered—that is—well Gurley, you see—" Bob Towne rarely ever was at a loss for words. But then he rarely ever faced a situation such as this. "—the fact is, Gurley, I was trying to get a line on you. Sara Sue's tops. If you had not been the right sort, I wouldn't have stood for it. Of course, it's her privilege to select her own escorts. I'm nuts about her myself, though; and if any mug who isn't worthy hangs around her, he'll answer to me!"

"Gos-sh, Bob!"

"I mean it, Gurley. If you—if she wants—well, the fact is I guess we're rivals. You know what I mean. If she likes you, and you're all right, then my hands are tied. I just wanted you to understand."

"Gosh, Bob!" the younger lad repeated it. "I—I—you mean you aren't going to try to keep me away from her? Me, a slime?"

"That's what I mean. If I did that, then I'd be a heel, Gurley. I may haze you, for fun, along with the other freshmen. But this, this other business, is confidential, you see? It's—man to man!"

"You're younger than she, Gurley. By five years. But that still doesn't matter. It's a free country. You can set up to her all you like, if she permits it. She has the privilege of choosing between us, or a dozen of us for that matter. But I'll break anybody's neck that's not honest with her!"

"Say—me, too, Bob! Say, that's —" the younger man was deeply impressed. His face shone like the kid he was, but he felt he was in adult business now. He swallowed again.

"I'll do everything in my power to beat your time, Gurley. But it's no hazing business, in senior-freshman fight. It's me versus you, with a girl for judge. Man to man." The senior, intensely serious, again held out his hand.

"T-thanks, Bob! Gee, you're swell!" Young Gurley looked up at him. "Say, would you—would you like some dances? I mean it. I can be as fair as you can, Bob. My ball program isn't filled yet. I can let you have some dances with her."

The two men stared momentarily at each other. Bob felt distinctly ill at ease, a sensation almost unknown to him. Something had happened to him of late; something had disturbed his ego. A freshman had beaten him to the dance date. A freshman! He, Bob Towne the go-getter, was playing second fiddle. He didn't like it.

"No thanks," said Bob, not very graciously.

For Friday, November 25

Very sudden and surprising developments may descend upon the scene to-day with a precipitancy that might be almost sensational or spectacular, according to the rather mixed planetary forces. The signs indicate unexpected and probably devastating adventures of an unpredictable nature; they may bring romantic experiences, upheaval, radical change or a complete reversal of life and its interests. Discretion, wise deliberation, and sound judgment are recommended in social, emotional and untried situations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a possibly very dramatic year, with much transpiring of a memorable character. Romance, adventure, change and unexpected events may be precipitated with devastating effect on the fortunes and the destiny. At the source of this may be a bereavement, accident, illness, loss or a visitation demanding an entire reorientation of the interests, especially personal, domestic, or social. All call for circumspection and sound consideration rather than whirlwind decisions.

A child born on this day may have rather conflicting traits, with sound ideas, practical habits and methodical attention to details. At the same time, it may have many unorthodox, irregular, unconventional and audacious proclivities. It may have a surprising and thrilling career.

DOROTHY DIX

The Husband Is the Breadwinner, Therefore It Is Up to the Wife to Do Everything She Can in a Social Way to Assist Him in Making Right Contacts

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—We have recently moved to a small town where the company my husband is with has built up a little village of thirty houses and a country club. The place is lovely, but I am unhappy because the other people are different from us. They are younger, with either no children or one or two children at most. They drink and smoke and do things that my husband and I do not do. I am 37. Have four children, one a girl in college, and although my husband makes a good salary, we are not able to entertain like the ones who have no family. I have tried to be friendly with these people, but we just don't click. When there is a party I am left out. Since I realized I wasn't making friends I have just stayed to myself. I cry and beg my husband to leave and try to find a position somewhere else. I want to go back to my old home. I know he is worried because I am not happy and it does not do his work any good. He is highly valued by the company. What would you do if you were me? MRS. X.

ANSWER:

Well, I hope that if I were you I would have enough courage and common-sense and affection for my husband to act like a reasonable human being instead of a silly cry-baby; to meet the situation with a grim determination to make the best of it instead of a gust of tears.

Haven't you enough sense to realize that you are ready to jeopardize the whole future of your family just because you think some woman has snubbed you; because you are homesick for Mother and the girls and your old bridge foursome and your church sewing circle? Don't fool yourself into think that if you force your husband into giving up the god job he has he can step out and pick up another one just as good back home. Good jobs are hard to get these times, and they are not handed out to men who are so henpecked by their wives that they can't be depended upon to do anything except what their wives want them to do. Squawmen are not highly regarded by employers.

Probably all of us would prefer to live among the people we have known all of our lives and whose ways and habits are our ways and habits. But that good luck happens to comparatively few. Most of us have to go where our fortune calls us. If we have any intelligence whatever, or any character or backbone, we adapt ourselves to the conditions under which we must live and to the people with whom we must associate.

And we find that people the world over are just about the same and that they respond to the same sort of treatment. Hold yourself aloof and they will let you flock by yourself. Be friendly and they will hold out their hands to you. Take an interest in the community doings and you will be one of them. But if you withdraw from all contacts they will leave you to gloom and feel yourself ill-treated and left out. Because none of us is so attractive that strangers are going to run after us and drag us out of our shells.

So my advice to you is to dry your tears and quit worrying your poor husband, who no doubt has plenty of troubles of his own without your whining and complaints. Quit showing your neighbors that you disapprove of them and have taken a critical attitude toward them. What they do is none of your business. But it is your business to conciliate them and make friends of them for your husband. You can queer his chances of rising in the company by making him unpopular with the other employees.

Put your pride in your pocket and start out to court the other women in your little community. Join in all of their activities. Invite them to your house to little informal meals. You will soon find that they will meet you halfway and that they are just as nice as the folks you knew back home.

Don't let your homesickness make you ruin your husband's chances of success. It is the meanest and most selfish thing a woman can do to a man.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—My boy friend says that I am mistaken when I say that if a man isn't jealous of his sweetheart it means he doesn't love her. He says jealousy is NOT a proof of love. I say it IS. Which of us is right?—J. F. M.

ANSWER:

The boy friend. Jealousy isn't a compliment, as you evidently think it is. It is an insult. When a man is jealous of his sweetheart or his wife, it simply means that he doesn't trust her. He has no faith in her honor or her affection for him, or else he would know that where she was, or with whom, she would walk straight and be faithful to him.

A man must have a pretty poor opinion of a girl if he thinks that she is such a weak and vacillating creature that she can't dance with a man without falling in love with him, or even be civil to her dinner partner without being disloyal to him. I have never been able to understand why any woman would be foolish enough to marry a man who was filled with suspicions of her and believed her capable of having affairs with any stranger who came along.

The queer thing about jealous people is that their minds seem to be filled with the most rotten thoughts, and that they believe the people they profess to love to be capable of the lowest crimes. Whether this is because they themselves have no sense of honor or loyalty, and hence do not believe that any one else has I do not know. But at any rate it is a safe bet never to marry a green-eyed man or woman.

Easy to Plant and Care For

You can enjoy the fantastic beauty of the Orient by planting in your dish garden tall sansevierias, paint Japanese rubber plants and drooping philodendron.

Use a painted watertight baking pan or dish. Cover bottom with drainage material and fill with garden loam. Make a blue lake from half a rubber ball or toy dish painted blue inside and filled with water.

Or turn your dish garden into a Sahara oasis by planting small umbrella palms grown from the tops of an old plant or from seeds.

Your fav[illegible]e woodland dell will spring to life if you plant seeds of Virginia cedar, pine and elm. To keep dish garden plants healthy spray once or twice daily.

It's amusing, too, to make a bottle garden with gay begonia, tiny palms and ferns. Push plants into place easily with wire forceps.

Our 32-page booklet gives expert advice on bottle gardens, terrariums and dish gardens. How to grow gardenias and orchids in terrariums. Kitchen herb gardens.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of GLASS GARDENS AND NOVELTY INDOOR GARDENS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Looking Back On This Date

Ninety years ago today, on Nov. 24, 1948, there was born at Halifax a boy, who, by his own exertions, was to become one of the great journalists of Canada and one of the greatest statesmen of the British Empire. William Stevens Fielding was of English stock, and proud of it. He never had any advantages; any education he had he gained himself. It was not until he had made his mark in politics that he was given honorary degrees "for cause" Much as Mr. Fielding valued these recognitions of his work, his greatest pride was that he was a newspaperman and that his "university was the reporters' room, the editorial chair and the print shop."

When only 16 he joined the staff of the Morning Chronicle as a very "cub reporter" and within a few weeks had won his spurs. He added to this very small salary by acting as correspondent for New York, Boston and Toronto papers, accomplishing many "scoops," notably his story of the dreadful wreck of the White Star liner Atlantic on April 1, 1873, when he actually "beat the world."

From reporter he became editor of the Chronicle, and chief adviser to the then premier of Nova Scotia, being permitted to sit in council even before being sworn as head of the provincial government July 18, 1888, then only in his 40th year. There he remained until 1896 when he was called to Ottawa as minister of finance in the Laurier cabinet and from then until his death June 23, 1929, he was a power in politics, even when out of parliament.

W. S. Fielding lives in history as the man who established the Canadian preferential tariff in favor of British goods and as the consistent advocate of extended trade with the United States. He was one of our greatest finance ministers; he was as eloquent in his later years as when I first heard him speak at the great Liberal convention at Ottawa in 1893, then, despite his small physical structure, a giant in eloquence and intellect even in that great gathering.

Mr. Fielding remained a newspaper man in his heart to his end. Often, relying upon the code of honor that he had himself practised, he often gave newspaper men advance information, the publication of which would have brought them large sums in money. But "Bill" Fielding, as he loved to be called even by those who were not very closely associated with him, knew he could trust the men of his best loved profession. He could have been a knight a dozen times; he preferred to be just plain "Mr. Fielding" even in the days when knighthood was indeed in flower and a majority of Laurier's ministers were given titles.

Future generations will include W. S. Fielding among the greatest men in Canadian history.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

It was bright and early in the morning. The sun was shining right into Mr. Canary's cage and he was singing at the top of his voice.

"Tweet-tweet-tw-ee-eet," he went. He stood on his perch and stretched up his neck as far as he could. "Oh! what a beautiful voice I have!"

Knarf, the shadow-boy with the turned-about name, who was standing near the cage with his sister, Hanid, said: "You certainly have a fine voice all right. Where did you get it?"

Always Had It.

"Where did I get it?" the canary repeated in surprise. "Why, I've always had it. I was born with it."

Hanid said: "Knarf means, how did you learn to sing so beautifully? Did you ever take lessons from anybody?"

"Oh!" said the canary, jumping on the swing and off again to the perch. "Now I understand you. But I never took any lessons. I just listened."

"Where did you get it?"

"Listened to what?" asked Knarf.

"Well, first of all, I listened to the leaves—"

"To the leaves!" both shadow-children exclaimed. "They don't say anything," Knarf added. "Leaves don't sing."

The canary hopped down and took a little sip of water before answering. "No," he said when he hopped back to the perch again. "They don't sing. But they whisper and they chatter and they rustle. And when the wind blows really hard they seem to sing. I listened to them very carefully. Then I imitated them. You can hear their sounds in my songs if you listen. And I also learned a great deal from the brook."

"The brook?"

"Oh, yes! I learned lots of sounds from the brook. I learned how to murmur and trill and make rushing sounds like water falling over a rock. And brook was a wonderful teacher."

"And whom else did you learn from?" Hanid wanted to know.

"I learned from the rain that goes ping-ping-ping from the roof into the puddle, and I learned from the grasses that swish in the breeze. And, best of all, I learned from—whom do you think?"

The two shadows shook their heads. "We can't guess," they said.

"I learned from the little children who played out in the garden and laughed and laughed all day long."

"And those were your teachers?" the shadows asked.

"And those," said the canary, hopping down to the seed box and cracking a sweet little seed," were all my teachers."

PILE SUFFERERS

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and remove the cause of Piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flabby, full of impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Leonhardt. HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that McDermid and Jury and Bond's Drug Stores or any other good druggist is authorized to make good our promise to you that if you are not completely satisfied with the result from one bottle, you may have your money back.—advt.

VARICOSE VEINS REDUCED AT HOME

Prove It At Small Cost

Ask McDermid & Jury or any good druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and refuse substitutes. Use as directed and in a short time note improvement. Then continue until the swollen veins are further reduced.—(Advt.)

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK —By R. J. Scott

German Inroads On Trade Worry States

By Andrue Berding
(Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—(AP).—If the flag follows trade, as the history books say, then the shadow of the Nazi swastika will stretch longer in 1939 from Mexico to Patagonia than it ever has in the past.

This is the belief of United States' experts as State Secretary Hull and the American delegation prepare to leave to-morrow for the Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru.

Secretary Hull will endeavor to keep the Latin American nations on the broad paths of liberal trade. He will counsel them against Germany's economic system of barter and artificial marks.

The United States has at stake a total trade with Latin America, both import and export of about $1,000,000,000 a year and she doesn't intend to lose it. Yet experts here realize Germany has made enormous strides in gaining markets in Latin America, and they concede she will make a few more in 1939.

Have Czech Industries Now.

The acquisition of Austria and the Sudetenland of Czechoslovakia have added 10,000,000 people to Germany's population and have given her the majority of Czech export industries. Thus Chancellor Hitler is materially strengthened both for export and for absorbing imports.

In 1937 the United States' share in Latin America totalled more than that of Germany, Great Britain, Italy and Japan combined, but Germany was a rapidly climbing second. The United States' share was 34.4 per cent., Germany's 14.1 per cent.

German gains will be aided, too, it is felt, by the drop in United States' exports to Mexico, because of the controversy over expropriated United States' oil properties. This dispute is forcing Mexico to seek barter arrangements with Germany and Italy, giving them oil in exchange for their manufactured products.

Wheat King

Retreating Chinese Dynamite Water Supply

Scenes such as this are commonplace in many Chinese towns today. With Hankow's waterworks destroyed by the fleeing Chinese army residents of the French concession are forced to have their water carried to them in buckets by coolies who scoop the water from the muddy Yangtse River. Nearly all of the city's utilities were dynamited by the Chinese when they evacuated the city.

NORWOOD

Temperance Talk Is Given Young People

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Nov. 24.—The weekly meeting of the Norwood Young People's Society was held on Monday night with over thirty-five members present. The meeting was opened with a song service conducted by Maynard Bongard. The scripture reading was taken by Beryl Starke.

The meeting was turned over to Wilfred Buck, who was in charge of the program. A reading, "Nothing Or Something" was given by Earl Hamblin. Learl Humphrey favored with a solo. Principal S. S. Breckon gave a brief talk on the dangers both in health and moral standings derived from the use of alcohol and tobacco. A vote of thanks was moved to Mr. Breckon by Earl Hamblin and seconded by Laura Metcalfe.

W.A. Meets

The regular meeting of the Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Webster. A delegate was appointed to attend the anual meeting of the association of the Presbytery to be held in Millbrook. The treasurer gave a very encouraging report of the finances. A committee was appointed to see about having the church linoleum finished on the sides and top. It was announced that the December meeting would be one week earlier. Mrs. Webster took charge of the program. The scripture reading was read by Mrs. R. Gardner and a reading on peace was given by Mrs. Webster after which Mrs. Ed. Scott led in prayer. Miss Shirley Starke favored with a solo which was followed by a reading on "Bearing Our Troubles" by Mrs. Girvin. Mrs. Ferguson and Ruth Packenham favored with a duet. Lunch was served and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

Personals

Mrs. Smith of Elmvale was the weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dean.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Scott and daughter, Helen, also Mrs. Verne Fuller of Hastings visited with friends in Wellington on Monday.

Snow In New York

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 24—(AP)—A snowstorm swirled over upstate New York assurance today of an old-fashioned Thanksgiving. More than an inch fell in Buffalo in three hours. Motor traffic was slowed to a crawl by the storm, which swept eastward from the Great Lakes, heralding the end of the shipping season. The snow was general over most of New York State and in Michigan. Airlines officials said conditions at Buffalo were "below normal" and that stops here might be cancelled later in the day.

Training R.A.F. Fliers Defence Problem

OTTAWA, Nov. 24—(CP). — Possibility of the United Kingdom Government establishing facilities in Canada for training officers for the Royal Air Force will form a part of the general program on defence to be considered at the next session of Parliament, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said here last night.

It was revealed during the last session that the British War Office had initiated "confidential and informal exploratory conversations" with respect to training British air pilots in Canada.

The attitude then taken was that Canada could not permit any military establishments being set up within its territory by any other Power, but that arrangements could be made whereby the R.A.F. could have its officers trained in Canadian owned and controlled schools.

Later in the summer an officer of the R.A.F. came to Canada to survey the possibilities of carrying out such a scheme. No report of his findings have been made public.

It was considered possible, from the Prime Minister's statement, that appropriations may be asked at the next session for the establishment of new flying schools or enlargement of those now in existence, based upon proposals of the War Office to make use of such facilities.

Mr. Mackenzie King would not enlarge on the statement, but merely said all such questions would form a part of the general defence program to be submitted to Parliament. It has been reported that the defence estimates next year will be considerably larger than heretofore.

Last year the defence vote was $34,000,000, and the previous year, when it met with stubborn opposition from Quebec members, it was $36,000,000.

Campbellford A.Y.P. To Visit Havelock

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 24. — Honorary president of Christ church A.Y.P.A., the Rev. T. S. Gault, told members that his transfer to Campbellford culminated a desire he had entertained over three years ago.

"When I was transferred to Peterborough I gave up all hope of ever reaching this town," he declared.

President Earl Wood presided at the meeting at which members accepted an invitation to attend a social evening as guests of the Havelock A.Y.P.A. Following this arrangements were made for the transportation. The resignation of the secretary, Miss Marian Higginson was accepted and the office filled by Mrs. Art Tripp, and Mrs. R. Farrell was replaced as press reporter by Mr. M. T. Thomas.

To Address Y.P.S.

Miss Marion Armstrong, president of the Young People's Societies for the Peterborough Presbytery, will address members of St. Andrew's Y.P.S. at their meeting held on Dec. 5th, it was revealed on Monday.

During the business period Miss Helen Meiklejohn was appointed to take charge of the program for November 28. The president, Mrs. P. H. Macmillan, was in charge. The program was arranged by Miss Violet Patrick and was introduced by singing several hymns and the topic took the form of a history of the hymn "Jesus Lover of My Soul." The hymn was later sung as a solo by Miss Monica De Carrol. Mrs. P. H. Macmillan and Mrs. Cliff Vessey rendered a vcal duet. At the conclusion of the program Miss Patrick conducted a contest to test the knowledge on the great hymns of the church. Rev. B. Simpson Black closed the meeting with prayer.

Dominion Life Employees Hear President

The picture of a stately Roman, garbed in flowing toga, knocking at the front pillar of a centurian's home, his wreath of laurel leaves in one hand, and an insurance policy in the other, was conjured up last night, as Ford S. Kumpf, president and managing director of the Dominion Life Assurance Company, spoke at the Empress Hotel. He was addressing employees of that company in this district and their guests, and he told them that theirs was not a new work, that the Romans had known it 2,000 years ago.

While insurance was not then on as reputable a basis as it is now, nevertheless the ancient Romans even had mortality tables, those mysterious statistical books that are compiled by highly paid, mathematically-minded men of genius. Not only that, as early as a thousand years B.C., there were insurance policies on ships plying trade between nations, the speaker said. Then he told of the tricky days of insurance in London, England, back in the late 16th century, when a man could take out insurance on another's life without a second party being informed of the fact. Some mysterious deaths often occurred as a result, he said.

Started Century Ago.

In the United States insurance commenced on a sound basis about 100 years ago, although the oldest company in existence on this continent was formed in Philadelphia in 1759, and is still in operation. "It was a company for the relief of poor and distressed Presbyterian ministers and of the poor and distressed widows and children of Presbyterian ministers," he said. Fourteen members paid in a total of $185 and the synod of the church gave $575 to establish the company, he related. It is restricted and ultra-conservative, has never contested a claim in its entire history. "Other companies have far exceeded its record, but it still goes on, safe and sound, doing good."

In Canada life insurance was started 91 years ago by a man who wanted to take out a policy and found he had to travel to New York City for examination. The journey, by stage coach, rail, and horseback, required four days, and on his return he decided to form a Canadian company. With other backers he formed the Canada Life Assurance Company, and in October of 1847 the first policy was written.

Mr. Kumpf told the gathering that he was highly pleased with the Peterborough branch of the Dominion Life Assurance Company. He praised the work of both its manager, Paige Rowell, and Ken Kingston. Both men have qualified for the gold section of the company's Hilliard cup, he said. He termed it a remarkable accomplishment and one that had been duplicated by only three other men in the entire company to date. Employees are allowed until February 11 to qualify for the cup, he said. The fact that these men had already done so was indication of their work, he said. The Dominion Life Assurance Company celebrates its fiftieth anniversary next year.

Two Boys Contesting South Hastings Seat

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, Nov. 24.—A joint meeting was held on Tuesday evening in the United Church at Springbrook on behalf of the two candidates who are running for members of the Eighteenth Older Boys' Parliament in Hastings South, which comprises nine southern townships of the county.

Rev. A. W. Harding, mentor of the Springbrook Trail Rangers Group, acted as chairman and called upon Roy Juby, the present member of Boys' Parliament, to introduce the candidates Mr. Juby thanked those present, which included members of groups from Stirling, Trenton, Springbrook and Bonarlaw, for their support in electing him to the seventeenth Ontario Older Boys' Parliament last fall. He then introduced the candidates, Ralph Campbell of Marsh Hill and Malcolm Campbell of Trenton. Both these young men gave splendid addresses declaring that if elected they would do all in their power for the youth of the country and would promote boys' work in the constituency.

Fred Elgie of Stirling, returning officer for South Hastings, and J. F. Baker, mentor of the Argonauts Tuxis Square of Bonarlaw, also spoke briefly.

Receives Award

H. L. Seamans, Dominion government entomologist at Lethbridge, has been awarded the 1938 medal of the Professional Institute of the Civil Service, according to an announcement by J. C. Beauchamp, institute president, Ottawa. Mr. Seamans was awarded the high honor in recognition of his work in the control of the pale western cutworm, one of the most serious insect pests that western agriculturists have had to cope with.

United After 50 Years

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP)—Separated 50 years, two white-haired sisters whose birthplace was Hamilton, have been brought together here for a visit. Half a century ago, Mrs. J. W. Winslow, now of Vancouver, and Mrs. Jennie Meil, now of Cleveland, O., parted after their mother's funeral in Hamilton. Mrs. Winslow went to Vancouver with her husband, a Methodist minister. Recently Mrs. Winslow, 79, came her to visit her daughter and plans were made for her sister, three years her junior, to meet her here.

Telephone Call Asks $2,000 From Orpen

TORONTO, Nov. 24 — (CP). — police said today they were searching for a "man with a foreign voice" who telephoned A. M. Orpen, Jr., and demanded $2,000.

The threat yesterday was similar to one made to obtain money from Orpen's brother, Fred, which resulted in the conviction of Bernard MacKenzie a month ago on five charges of fraud and false pretences. He was sentenced to one year in jail.

According to police the man who telephoned A. M. Orpen, Jr., said to him: "Is that you, Abe? You'd better leave a parcel addressed to John Brown in the —— restaurant downtown, and be sure there is $2,000 in cash in it or there will be a blowout. We'll give you three days."

ARE YOU WEAK, NERVOUS?

FOR young girls growing into womanhood, for women in middle life going through the "change," or those who suffer from headache, backache and nervousness associated with functional disturbances, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a reliable vegetable tonic. Read this: Mrs. J. F. Jones, 4 Antwerp St., St. Catharines, Ont., said: "I felt tired and weak and my nerves seemed to be all unstrung. But after I had used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a short while my appetite increased and I picked up strength and felt better in every way. 'Favorite Prescription,' in my opinion, is an excellent tonic for women." Buy of your druggist — size this. 50c, liquid $1.00 & $1.35

We Noticed

....That such a season there has never been for the wearing of purple. Maybe it was the upswept hair-dos that started it; maybe it was Queen Elizabeth's Paris visit that emphasized it; but no matter—the fact remains, there is certainly a purple rage.

◇ ◇ ◇

....Hands tuck violets under proud high chins once more. Violets are also present on great muffs of deep fur. Fragile fingers tie purple bows in high coiffures, and they flutter beneath chunky bracelets of amethysts. Mauve-to-purple hues in dresses, coats, etc., are extremely fashionable.

◇ ◇ ◇

....And, just so you'll know we're not fooling about this popular shade, there's a frock in one of the shops that is created of sheerest tulle in a glorious purply-mauve, and on the skirt are scattered bows of deep purple velvet. Underneath is a full taffeta slip to swish luxuriantly at every step!

New Styles Feature Padded Shoulders

Pockets, sleeves, shoulders and collars are the strategic points of the new styles. A general impression of bulkiness above the waistline is one to be aimed at to achieve chic, in contrast to the hourglass waistline and rounded hips. Shoulders are padded and squared or rounded, but never built out. Some "shrug" sleeves are seen. Kimono tops are in again, but with the difference that shoulders are padded.

Thirty-six tables of euchre were in play for those who preferred cards to dancing, and prizes were won by Mr. Frank Spencely, Mrs. P. Scott, Mrs. N. Gordon, and Mr. O. Masters. Lucky door prizes were won by Miss Louden, and Mr. J. Mitchell.

Arrangements for the dance were in charge of Mr. W. Benentt, chairman, Mr E Guppy, Mr. R. Whitehead and Mr. A. Hann. Euchre tables were arranged by Mr. R. Howarth and Mr. L. Millard.

The marriage of Ada Irene Bonner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bonner, Millbrook, to Clifford Ross Webster, only son of Hr. and Mrs. Herbert Webster, Oakwood, took place at the Presbyterian Manse, Millbrook, with Rev. H. R. Williams officiating.

After a motor trip to Quebec, the young couple will reside in Oakwood, Ont.

Miss Stoatley Addresses Business Women

Miss Mabel Stoatley of Toronto, vice-president for Ontario of the Canadian Confederation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, adddressed a supper meeting of the local club on Wednesday evening. She was introduced to the members by Mrs. W. R. Morris, president of the Local Council of Women.

Miss Stoatley brought greetings from the Toronto Club, and extended an invitation to all business and professional women to attend the tea, fashion show and cabaret which the Toronto Club is sponsoring at the Toronto Motor Show opening on Saturday.

Following her opening remarks, the speaker gave a resume of the activities of the Confederation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, both in Canada and internationally, and a short report on the international convention at Budapest during the summer, at which the Confederation was represented by six Canadian women, including Dr. Douglas of Winnipeg, the Canadian president.

Sending out a challenge to the women of today, Miss Stoatley spoke of the priviliges which women of today, both in business and at home, are enjoying because the noble women of the last generation had paved the way, and urged women to take full advantage of the franchise which had been won for them.

Pink chrysanthemums in a crystal bowl, and pink lighted tapers in crystal holders adorned the supper tables. A delightful musical interval was provided when Mrs. Bertha Mitchell, accompanied by Mrs. H. V. Dobson, sang two lovely groups, "The Blind Promise," "May Day At Islington," "You Belong With Me," and "Love the Peddler."

Mission Bale Is Exhibited At Hostess Tea

At a succesful and well-attended Hostess Tea and sale of work which the Senior Branch of St. John's W.A., held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday afternoon, guests were welcomed by the president, Mrs. G. S. Cameron.

Silver vases of white baby 'mums decorated the small tea tables, where tea was served to the many visitors by Mrs. R. Crocker, Mrs. N. Stanger, Mrs. B. Wardle, Mrs. R. Cooper, Mrs. H. Lemmings, Mrs. F. D. Craig, Miss E. Murphy, and Mrs. H. Gamble. Mrs. Edward Graham was the efficient tea convener. Mrs. F. Ford was treasurer for the occasion.

A cheerful grate fire burned in the ladies' parlors, where tables of fancy work; of jams, jellies and pickles, and of Christmas cards and calendars, were arranged. Mrs. A. W. Turner and Mrs. W. E. Massey-Cooke convened the fancy work table; Mrs. D. J. Eldred and Mrs. H. Kelcey the jams and jellies, and Mrs. J. Cridland calendars and Christmas cards.

Of much interest was the exhibit of the contents of a bale which is to be sent to the Anglican Mission at Hines Creek, Alberta. A warm and practical assortment of flannelette gowns, pieced quilts in cheery colors, knitted scarfs, toques and mitts, pretty babies' clothes and many other pieces of clothing as well as a wide variety of toys and games to gladden some Western child's heart on Christmas morning, were exhibited. The donations came from the members, or were the work of the Dorcas committee, headed by Mrs. George Groombridge.

There'll Be No Reconciliation

"There will not be any reconciliation. Harmon will apply for a divorce," stated Bette Davis noted screen star, when questioned as to reports that she and her husband, Harmon C. Nelson, had agreed to go their separate ways. Nelson charged that Miss Davis' film career had wrecked their home life. The couple are pictured here in happier days.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"You shall not press down upon the brow of labor this crown of thorns — you shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold!"

—William Jennings Bryan.

Dear Friends:

And yet, this is done every day. We read or hear of ones who have forty million dollars, or a hundred millions, while another poor soul has not enough to live decently.

And what is that but being crucified on a cross of gold? No one man ever made all these millions honestly, never mind how he worked or how clever he was.

Many people labored for that money, but little of it came back to them, and where there are such sharp contrasts in wealth and poverty, there will always be a sense of unfairness.

The other day a few of us were talking about people being refined like gold, so that all the dross was removed. And I took the stand that if anyone is refined too much, they would come to the ASH stage, just as gold would do.

For, there is a limit to a person's endurance, a time when one cries "enough. I can stand no more." And it benefits no one, neither in heaven, nor on earth, for a human being to be crushed down to earth by sickness or poverty.

Because, just as none can rise without taking others up with them: Neither can one fall without taking others down with them. If they have lived decently as far as they could?

If they have helped others whenever possible, have lightened the burden for many, have shown faith in God, and helped others to see it too, how then is it going to profit anyone for that person to go down to bitter defeat?

Van Amburgh tells us, (and I agree with him) "Self-confidence is the first factor of success. Self-confidence inspires the confidence of others, and unless you have the confidence of others, you cannot for the life of you succeed."

But bitter poverty and hardship, defeat after defeat, will sap the confidence of anyone, and what is one going to do then? How can you inspire confidence in anyone, if it has all been knocked out of yourself?

We read of poets and painters, sculpters and writers, who have been honored after their death. But did that help them any, did it still the pangs of hunger or put decent clothes on their back?

It isn't that we "can't take it". We have taken it so often that we are sick and tired of it, sick to the very soul of us, yet struggle as we may the path to success seems to have been closed against us and we cannot find it.

Not alone success in terms of money, (yet money is very necessary to a gracious mode of living) but success in our work, in our play, in our association with other human beings.

We read of Job, of all he went through. Well, there are many who suffer as Job suffered without his reward. What is life for, if all we get out of it is suffering and defeat?

The world is beautiful. Right now Nature is painting everything in brilliant colors, but how many have time to see it? All they get is glimpses as they go to and from work, or if they can spare a minute to look out a window.

Their time is too much taken up with trying to earn the means to live. Surely, surely, God did not mean it to be like that, but men have made it so, as they go about this business of crucifying men on crosses of gold. And until conditions are changed, humanity must go on suffering in so many ways. Defeat is bitter bread to have to eat.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Social Evening Enjoyed At Central School

A most enjoyable and well-organized card and crokinole party was held Wednesday evening at Central School under the auspices of the Home and School Association. The kindergarten room where the tables were placed was attractively decorated with pot plants, ferns and bronze 'mums.

Twenty-seven tables of euchre, crokinole and bridge were played. Mrs. R. N. Wilson and Mrs. W. Burns acted as general conveners with Mr. R. N. Wilson as timekeeper. Mrs. J. S. Quirt, the president, expressed the appreciation of her club for the large turnout, and of the generosity of the prize donors, and made a special plea for those present to become members. At an intermission a service of Coca-Cola was enjoyed by the guests, this being a gift from the Coca-Cola Company.

After the card games delicious refreshments were served by the social committee, with Mrs. H. Honor and Mrs. R. Tayne as conveners, and a willing band of assistants chosen from the lady members.

The lucky winners were as follows: Euchre—Ladies high, Mrs. L. Eason; low, Mrs. E Graham; gentlemen's high, S. Brown; low, J. Hooper. Bridge—High, Miss Bonnycastle; low, Miss Dix. Crokinole—Ladies' high, Mrs. D. Munro; low, Mrs. F. Smith; gentlemen's high, Mr. R. Tayne; low, Miss A. Donley (playing as a gentleman).

Altar Boys Hold Fourteenth Annual Banquet

The fourteenth annual banquet of the Altar Boys of Sacred Heart Church was held Wednesday evening in the Sacred Heart Club rooms, with Rev. J. V. Masterson, D.D., Rev. P. M. Grant, J.C.D., and Rev. J. C. Maloney as special speakers. Mr. George Maloney acted as toastmaster.

Included in the program were readings by Bernard Amyotte, Gerard O'Dette, Paul O'Dette, Carl Heath, Vernon Grady, Frank Welch, Leo LaPlante, Jack LaPlante, Byron Heath, Harold LeGrow, Anthony Giardino, Armand LaPlante, John Doyle, Fred LaPlante. "O Canada" was sung by Oscar Chenier.

A toast to "Our King" was proposed by Gerald Grady, and responded to by Harold Maloney; to "Our Country" by L. Giardino and responded to by C. Wheeler; to "Our Parish" by Wm. Jones and replied to by Clare Grady; to "Our Office" by Hubert Hallihan, and replied to by Jack Welch; to "Our Pastor" by Joseph Amyotte, response, Rev. J. J. O'Brien; to "Our Parents" by Frank McCarthy, response, Robt. Jones.

WHERE MEN WIN

LONDON—(CP). — Whisper it softly in this land where there are thousands more women than men, the men take the honors in the arts of rugs and hand-made musical instruments at the Women's Fair.

Do You Know?

Candles will burn longer if they are given a coat of white varnish before using? This will also prevent the wax from dripping down on the holder.

That baked squash makes a better pie than pumpkin or steamed squash? Cut the squash in half, take out seeds and pulp, put salt and a little butter on one half, to be used as a vegetable for dinner. What isn't used for a vegetable is saved with the other half and made into pies.

A good-sized chest of drawers instead of the usual table in the hall or entranceway makes a splendid storage space for children's gloves and mittens, wool scarves, caps, etc. Hang a mirror or picture above it and you'll have an attractive grouping.

A little salt added to dry coffee before perking it will improve the flavor?

Oilcloth Mats Make An Original Gift

Oilcloth table mats are an idea for original table trimming. The mats are oblong, about 12 inches by 18 inches, with picoted edges, and an all-over design of peasants and trees. They are made in bright green, yellow, red and a royal blue, eight mats and a long runner making a set.

Napkin rings covered in oilcloth are made to match. Each has a different decoration, and they are packed in long boxes covered in oilcloth containing eight. Smaller sets of four are made in various colors spotted with white.

These may easily be made at home and make excellent Christmas presents for a woman to give who is clever with her fingers but has not much money to spend, for oilcloth is very wide, comes in lovely shades and is not very expensive. Such sets are practical, too, for they only need to be wiped with a damp cloth to be kept clean.

Cinnamon Stars In Demand As Cookies for Christmas

If you do this page the favor of glancing over it go a little further this week and clip out these cookie recipes—they are the best to be selected from many lands and are most desirable—if you are not ready to do your cookie baking yet tuck this away (not too well) for the day when a cookie spree is in your bones.

Some years Lebkuchen is in the limelight and undoubtedly is one of the favorite European cookies, but this year requests have come from several sources for cinnamon stars—or almond cakes as they are often called—and here it is, the best of a selection of eight slightly varying recipes:

Cinnamon Stars (Almond Cakes)

Whites 6 eggs, 2 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons cinnamon, 1 lb. blanched grated or ground almonds. Beat whites of eggs with rotary beater until very stiff. Add sugar slowly to whites. Continue to beat until stiff enough to hold shape. Stir in cinnamon and almonds, using enough almonds to make a soft dough —it might require a little more than a lb. if the whites of the eggs were large. Mix ½ cup flour with ½ cup sugar and sprinkle this thickly on board. Pat out dough to about ¾-inch thickness and cut out cookies with floured star-shaped cutter. Place on greased cookie sheet. Chill for at least 2 hours. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 14 minutes. These keep exceptionally well, and the flavor is of course delicious.

The following cookies are nice companion cookies to make with the cinnamon stars for they will use up the leftover yolks:

Lebkuchen (Genuine German Gingerbread)

Two cups sugar, 6 egg yolks, 1 cup sweet milk, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ pound bitter chocolate, grated, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup molasses, 3 beaten whites from eggs, 3 cups sifted flour, ¼ cup citron peel chopped finely, ¼ lb. chopped blanched almonds, ¼ teaspoon cloves. Beat the yolks well. Add the sugar and continue beating until light and fluffy. Stir in the molasses, mix and sift the spices, baking powder and flour. Shake a little over the unblanched almonds and the citron. Add the milk and flour mixture alternately. Stir in the floured nuts and citron and the chocolate. When thoroughly mixed fold in the beaten egg whites. Bake in 2 greased baking pans (12 x 8 x 2) at 350 deg. Fahr. for 1 hour. Cool. Ice and cut in strips when cold.

Icing for Lebkuchen. — Beat 2 whites, beat in 1½ cups confectioners' sugar, and continue beating until the icing will spread well, then spread thinly.

Orange Cookies (American)

Two and one-quarter cups sifted flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 8 tablespoons granulated sugar, ½ cup shortening (butter is preferable), 2 egg yolks beaten, 2 tablespoons orange juice, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 1 egg white, ¼ cup chopped pecans or almonds. Sift together the flour, salt and 6 tablespoons sugar, and cut in the shortening either with a pastry blender or 2 knives, using a cutting motion, until the mixture is crumb-like in consistency. Add the yolks, orange juice and rind and mix well. Roll ¼-in. thick using a little flour as possible. Cut with 2" cookie cutter and place on a greased baking sheet. Brush each cookie with unbeaten egg white and sprinkle each with ¼ teaspoon of a mixture of the nutmeats and the remaining 2 tablespoons sugar. Bake in hot oven of 425 deg. Fahr. for 10 or 15 minutes. This makes 24.

Scotch Shortbread

These may be made in the traditional shape of cakes the size of layer cakes or smaller or individual cookies.

Three-quarters pound butter (1½ cups), 6 ounces powdered sugar (¾ cup sifted), 1 pound bread flour (4 cups sifted). Cream the butter with a wooden spoon and gradually sift in the powdered sugar while creaming constantly; then work in the flour, using the hands. Roll out ½ inch thick if cookies are to be made, pressing edges together as they will crack when rolled. Cut out into diamonds, stars, crescents, etc., and bake on buttered sheet in slow oven of 325 deg. Fahr., being very careful that they do not brown at all—they will only change their shade from creamy yellow to a transparent biscuit color. They must not brown.

If to be baked in pan press down to one-half inch in thickness, prick with fork at even frequent intervals and bake a little faster—about 350 deg. Fahr.

These may be sprinkled before baking with finely chopped almonds or cashews or shaved citron.

If you would like other traditional Christmas cookies write asking for those you prefer—please write this month while there is time to send the recipe and for you to make things.

Sickly Children Get Well and Strong on Haliborange
Vitamins A, D and C
"Haliborange" quickly strengthens weak, sickly children. It is a combination of Halibut Liver Oil (vitamins A and D) and fresh orange juice (vitamin C) treated by the Allenbury process. "Haliborange" has double the vitamin A and D strength of Cod Liver Oil. It is especially rich in the body-building, bone-forming vitamins and protects against scurvy.
Young babies and children like the luscious orange flavour of "Haliborange" and it is very easy to digest. When once they have tasted it, they ask for more. There is absolutely no fishy taste or odour about it. Children thrive on it. It is also excellent for adults who are rundown or anaemic.
Try Haliborange Free
Buy a 5-oz. bottle of Haliborange with the free sample attached. Taste the sample. Then, if you are not absolutely satisfied with its taste, return the bottle to your druggist and he will refund the full purchase price of 75c. The 5-oz. bottle contains two weeks' treatment for children averaging 10 years of age. The dose varies with the age of the child. Haliborange is particularly beneficial to women who are "run down" or at all anaemic.

Lady Tweedsmuir Tells of 2 Queens

MONTREAL, Nov. 24 (CP)—When Lady Tweedsmuir told a woman's gathering of the 11 days she once spent in Holyrood, in Edinburgh, she said she had often stood at night in the room where Rizzio was murdered—a tiny slit of a room in which it was difficult to imagine the supper table at which Mary Queen of Scots and her companion sat and into which the murderers crowded.

Lady Tweedsmuir described the tiny bedroom of Mary nearby, the dark-panelled walls, the dark red hangings, the work box on the table filled with spools of silk which the Queen used in her needlework. The most touching thing in the room was the Queen's tear bottle of green glass.

Some people declared it is impossible to like both Queen Elizabeth and Mary Queen of Scots, but Lady Tweedsmuir was "not sure that this is right." Historians, she said, are coming to see that Elizabeth had a very good case for her treatment of Mary, who was constantly intriguing against her. If ever a Queen was adored by her people, it was Queen Elizabeth (1558-1603).

Lady Tweedsmuir said she could not help feeling that if the two Queens had ever met, history might have been different. Mary and Elizabeth were both politicians before anything else.

Any who should visit Holyrood were advised to see the death mask of Mary, although, said her Excellency, some say it is not the face of Mary but that of some other woman.

Enquiry Column

Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Could you tell me through your interesting page some different ways in which avocado pears can be served? Would half a pear be too large to serve in a salad, and also could it be served in small pieces as hors d'oeuvres?

I would like to know what dressing to use with it and any other ways in which it could be served—also how long it should be kept before it is ripe enough to serve. Sometimes it turns dark.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

Avocadoes may be added to any fruit in salads or cocktails, especially with oranges, grapefruit and pineapple. Their nutty flavor combines well with such vegetables as tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce and celery, especially when marinated in French Dressing (see below). With tuna, crabmeat, or chicken salads or as a garnish to cream soups. They may be dipped in lemon, very fine crumbs and salt and pepper, fried in bacon fat and served with crisp bacon or frizzled wafer thin ham. They are very seldom served without peeling—when served as a main course they can be halved, stone removed, and centre filled with creamed Roquefort, when the skin may be left on. Crumbled roquefort moistened with lemon or orange marmalade is an excellent accompaniment.

Avocado Salad

Arrange thinly sliced peeled avocado and thin slices of canned pineapple alternately and overlapping each other on a ¼-inch slice from head lettuce or half heart of romaine. Sprinkle with very finely chopped apple and green pepper, moistend with lemon juice and serve with a fluffy mayonnaise.

Racing King Salad

Called so because a horseshoe is cut from an unpeeled, stoned avocado—only one such slice (about 1 inch thick) can be had from each avocado, but the remainder can be used in salads at another meal. Place the horseshoe of avocado on bed of lettuce, fill centre with alternate wedges of orange and grapefruit, garnished with strips of green pepper and pimiento. Serve with french dressing.

French Dressing

One-fourth teaspoon each salt and freshly ground black pepper, 1 tablespoon pure vinegar or fresh lemon juice, 4 tablespoons pure olive oil or good salad oil. Shake well every time before pouring.

Avocadoes may be cut in chunky pieces, dipped in lemon juice and rolled in finely chopped almonds and stuck on large toothpicks which in turn are stuck in tooth pick holder or large red apple, and used as hors d'oeuvres.

Avocado No. 2

Cut a ripe avocado in two (it is ripe when it feels slightly loosened through the skin), remove the stone and place a half in a nest of lettuce. The avocado served au naturel and seasoned with a little salt, lemon juice or French dressing then scooped out with a spoon is the epicure's favorite.

QUESTION: I should be very glad if you would let me know what to do with ginger syrup, as I have a gallon of it and I would like to use it up. Also the recipe to make a cold slaw.—Mrs. M. F.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter. Ginger syrup may be used for making

Virginia Gingered Pears

To 2 quarts ginger syrup add the juice of 2 lemons and bring to boiling and add 8 lbs. pears which have been peeled, cored and sliced very thin. Boil very gently for 45 minutes, then pour into sterile jars and seal. Very good served with pickled tongue or spiced beef or soused mackerel.

Steamed Ginger Pudding (Using Ginger Syrup)

Mix together 1-3 cup butter, 1 cup hot ginger syrup, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, and when butter is melted, beat one egg and add it. Sift together twice 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt. Then mix the wet and dry ingredients, steam one hour (in tube pan standing in colander over kettle of boiling water) or in steam mould in steamer. Serve with hot lemon sauce made by making a syrup of ¾ cup sugar, ¼ cup water, 2 teaspoons butter, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, boiling them together 2 minutes.

Cole Slaw

With very sharp knife shred firm cabbage very finely, then add 1 tablespoon good vinegar, 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Boiled or mayonnaise dressing may be used in place of vinegar. Peas or green pepper make a good addition.

Queen Favors Shades of Blue

Two miniature urns that she has selected at the Antique Dealers' Fair at Grosvenor House are made of solid lapis lazuli, mounted in gilt.

Regency times, a period that appeals to her immensely, produced two cabinets which are to be sent to her at Marlborough House for her final decision. They are in rosewood and ormolu, plaques inlaid on the doors providing in this case a touch of Wedgwood blue.

Even Egypt Had Gay Digits, Permanents Too

By Molly McGee
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Nov. 24 (CP)—Under a rainbow awning of 12,000 yards of rayon, a "Women's Fair" is being held at Olympia. A great 60-foot silver statue of Venus stands at the far end surveying booths of cosmetics, home exhibits, health exhibits, cooking shows, fashion shows and even a "Mother and her child" section.

This is the first Women's Fair attempted. It should be a success. Psychology has been neglected. In contrast to other shows of this kind, visitors may buy what they see and for many women it will mean grand shopping, with purchases of everything from hairpins to a new fox fur.

As always there are surprises and oddities. In one exhibit a handsome young man spends his days trying to set fire to drawing-room curtains with a gas jet. The fabric—flimsy as it seems—fails to burn. The explanation is simple. Asbestos is the secret.

"They learned to weave asbestos about 1850," the demonstrator explains, "but this is the first time it has been shown in new fabrics for curtains and floors."

Perfumes from Silk

Just along the aisle they are showing perfumes and cosmetics made from silk. "Smooth as silk" takes on a new meaning. Then as if to give extra proof anything can be made from almost anything these days, there is an evening gown and cloak modelled by a mannequin shining from head to heels. Look closely and you find the entire outfit is of aluminun chain, very fine and the girl says very comfortable.

Aside from the fashion and frivolous side there are other exhibitions that mean a great deal to the women who crowd the aisles. In one modest compartment is a box-like device which turns out to be painless-birth equipment. Any woman can buy it for about $1, Mrs. Rose Youard, who recently filled Albert Hall with 8,000 women anxious to hear and learn all about this, will, during the show make a public demand for wholesale use of this astounding boon.

In seven connecting cubicles are shown "The Seven Ages of Make-up." It is a little disconcerting to find the Egyptian mummy in the first has a permanent wave and painted fingers nails. The expert who did the historical research for this display insists the century from 1200 to 1600 was the worst age of cosmetics. "They never bathed and they covered the dirt with powder," he explains.

Lilies and Their Pools

In a separate pavilion, under a blue awning sky is the "Hollywood Garden" or rather a series of gardens, for here are reproduced the outdoor playgrounds of such favorite stars as Shirley Temple, White Stucco beach houses with red-tiled roofs are set beside swimming pools that cascade one into the other and to add to the realism a handsome "Life Guard" parades among the cacti and palms.

Most of the people who watch the fashion parade have one idea in mind. They want to see the crinolines, and they are not disappointed. Taffeta rustles by, wide billowing skirts of taffeta, sleeves in "leg o'mutton" effect and tiny frilled sunshades and muffs. All the mannequins have their hair "up" and the full-fashioned skirts are found in velvet as well as in the slinkier silks.

Much space is given to cooking. Marcel Boulestin, the famous chef, shows how to make even a steak and kidney pudding glamorous. At an adjacent stand Janet Bond, whose new book tells how to feed a husband out of a can and keep him contented, demonstrates how every meal you can imagine could emerge by the aid of a patent opener from a tin container.

The electrical and gas companies have a vast amount of space, not all given to stoves. The gas company now is making war on the evils of smoke and grime and displays all the latest appliances for lighting, heating and cleaning.

Before the show was organized a cross section of the feminine population was made the subject of one of those mass surveys to find out how best women could be interested in the Fair. It was found their first interest was food, second the home, third children, then in turn, fashion, beauty, leisure and careers. The order of the interests was kept in mind when the space was finally allotted, though to the casual visitor there seems to be at least several tons of various kinds of cosmetics on view.

Off in a corner by itself is a zoo for the children. The thought behind this is that today no home is complete without a pet. There are lizards, penguins, monkeys, rainbow mice, budgerigars and even snakes.

Of course there are beauty queens, one for each 12 industries. From among the 12 who each receive about $100 is to be chosen the Queen of Queens who will get Queen of Queens who will get and made up according to her type and all are different. Visitors are told "surely among them you will find your prototype and be able to get hints from her."

New Gloves Are Embroidered

Unusual gloves add definite interest to street or evening ensembles. Seen in smart New York shops are daytime gloves with dainty designs embroidered on the cuff with matching bits of embroidery on each fingertip; gloves of large bright plaids; gloves with insets of one finger or thumb in a contrasting color; a short glove with minktail binding the cuff. For evening wear, fingerless gloves scalloped and embroidered at top and bottom; long latticed gloves, the lattice work ending from the elbow down to a point in the back of the solid hand.

DIED

McFAYDEN, Mrs. Ann. — Passed away on November 13, at Victoria, B.C., Ann Spence, widow of the late Colin McFayden. She leaves on son, Colin S., of Victoria; one daughter, Ethel A., of this city. Her only sister, Mrs. E. Aitken, resides at 538 Bethune street.

The funeral took place from the Thomson Funeral Home on Nov. 16; Rev. J. E. Bell conducted the service followed by cremation at the Royal Oak Crematorium, Victoria, B.C.

IN MEMORIAM

WILSON.—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mary Alida Wilson, who passed away November 24, 1936.

Oh, what we would give
To clasp her hands,
Or see her dear face again;
To hear her voice and hear her sing.
—Ever remembered by husband, Christopher Wilson, and daughters, Cora Lily and Estella and family.

CARD OF THANKS

Miss Pearl Peacock of Lakefield wishes to thank her many kind friends for flowers and cards sent and for other kindnesses extended during her recent illness; also the nursing staff of Queen Mary Hospital, Peterborough.

HASTINGS

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hoard returned on Monday form a motor trip to the Blue Mountains, Napanee and Oshawa.

Mrs. George Cook of Campbellford, spent several days with her granddaughters, Misses Claudine, Ona and Frances Hoard.

Miss Kathleen Crosson, teacher of the Cobourg Road School and the cast of characters who are practising for a Christmas play were entertained at the home of Misses Alice and Jessie Whitred on Tuesday evening for their play practice.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Dainard and Mr. and Mrs. N. R. Dainard and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dainard of Lindsay.

Bowling Results

Two old pals divided the honors in last night's 5-pin roll when three leagues went into action.

M. J. Duffus, veteran bowler for the Buick team in the Automobile league topped the list of around 180 trundlers from the C.G.E. Drafting Room, Quaker Oats and Motor leagues, his 786 total for 3 games was not only high for the evening, but it also beat Kenny Shadgett's 756 for high three in the league. In the same loop Gray Copping of the Nash team, after waiting to see if Mike was sure of his, went out in the third game to lay down a spare in the first frame and follow up with eight straight strikes to count 380. His fine single rubbed out Fred Stanley's 328 single in the Automobile league and also ousted Freddy Martin's 379 of the City League for the best on the alleys this year.

During the night 32 men bettered the 60 0mark. Of these the Drafting Room gave out Fred Hickey with 665, S. Valentine 662, J. McCarney 655, Max Metheral 632, W. Prest 610, O. Price 609, A. Rooke 609 and D. Grant 607.

In the Quaker Oats group Jack Ferguson chalked up 679, J. Jeffords 627, H. Webb 613, S. Agnew 611, H. Kennedy 612, J. Hopcroft 607, L. Thomas 603 and F. Innis 600.

From the twelve-team turnout of Automobile men, in addition to M. J. Duffus 786, Fred Stanley hit 717, T. Abramson 663, G. Copping 667, O. Fallis 663, A. Watson 628, L. McLaren 628, K. White, 629; F. Wemp 627, E. Metcalfe 625, F. Jamieson 615, R. Herron 614, M. O'Neill 613, E. Nickson 610, V. Fitzgerald 605 and S. Clements 600.

In Pain for Weeks

Acting on his principle of "when you know a good thing tell your friends about it," a man who had very bad lumbago pains writes as follows:

"I suffered from lumbago, and for weeks could scarcely move in bed. I had treatment, but it did not ease the pain very much. A friend said, 'Why not take Kruschen Salts? Take them every morning, and you'll likely get relief from that pain in your back.' So I have taken them every morning for some time and I am in fit condition for my work again—thanks to Kruschen."—C. B.

Why is it that lumbago, backache, rheumatism and indigestion in many cases yield to Kruschen Salts? Because it is a combination of several mineral salts that are vital for your bodily well-being. Each of these salts has an action of its own. Stomach, liver, kidneys and digestive tract are all benefited and toned up to a high state of efficiency.—advt.

"The Authority on Authorities"

BIDDING ON NOTHING

PARTNER'S SINGLE RAISE of your original suit bid puts it up to you. Will you bid some more, or pass? If your hand is practically an absolute minimum, you should keep quiet. Bidding again would constitute showing additional strength which you do not possess.

After a 1-Spade bid by South, North raised to 2-Spades. South then went to 3-Spades and North decided he had sufficient to continue on to 4-Spades.

The diamond K lead was taken with South's A and the spade A cashed, revealing East's void. The spade 5 followed, West covered with the J and North won with the K. Next a club was led and the Q overtaken with the A, by West, who then cashed his spade Q. The heart 10 was next led and North's Q lost to the K. East returned the diamond 3 to West's J. Dummy's A won the return of the heart 9. Next came a lead to the spade 10 and a ruff of the diamond 8. The club K was cashed and the last two tricks captured by the opponents, so that declarer was set two.

The fault was with South for rebidding after so weak a response as North had given. Although he held three high card tricks for his opening bid, the hand was bare of playing tricks and his best procedure was to pass.

The Hunt Spoiled?

BAKER, Ore., Nov. 24—(AP)—Just as John Cutting and a companion were starting on an elk hunt, they were called to the farm of John Brant on an errand. In a field adjacent to the Brant farm yard stood a bull elk nibbling at a haystack. The hunters got out their guns, bagged their limit before they could start their hunt.

The Whipping Post

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 24—(CP)—At the meeting of the City Council last night, Alderman C. P. Dalton advocated the old time system of a whipping post for persons found guilty of vandalism. He referred to the act of some persons removing a number of iron coverings from man-holes.

Steady Progress In 24th Year Is U.F.O. Report

TORONTO, Nov. 24—(CP). — A year of "steady progress" was reported to-day to the 24th annual meeting of shareholders of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, Limited, by President R. J. Scott. He said the company this year was in a "still stronger financial position."

The president reviewed the history of the company, the marketing agency for the United Farmers of Ontario. He reported a membership of 22,000 shareholders "as well as membership of affiliated co-operatives," and said that since its formation in 1914, the company has saved Ontario farmers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

For some years the question of needy individual shareholders who invested in the company and who now desire to recover their principal because of financial difficulties "has been causing some concern," said Mr. Scott. "The problem was to find persons or agencies who would be willing to purchase shares at or near their fair valuation.

More Stock Wanted.

"We believe the logical and best agencies are local co-operatives who have affiliation agreements with your company and become as vitally interested in its success as in their own....In the few months this policy has been operating, a new demand for stock has been created."

The company during the past year had assisted local co-operatives in bookkeeping and auditing services, requests for which have been increasing, said Mr. Scott. It was "highly desirable" and that this service be made available as co-operative education must play "a still more important part in the co-operative field."

The meeting was the second day of the U.F.O.'s 25th annual convention. Yesterday, the delegates adopted a manifesto which urged adoption of a three-way program of agricultural organization "each phase of which would operate independently of the others, but all three would be co-ordinated to give us a completely organized and united industry."

The manifesto recommended organization of producers into voluntary marketing associations and commodity groups to control and regulate the sale of farm products and schemes controlled by producer boards; a consumers' co-operative organization, and a farmers' council which could "speak with one voice for the industry."

Perfect Skunk

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 24—Frank Taylor of Birdsalls station believes he has found a perfect specimen of skunk. While going over his traps yesterday, he came upon a tailless specimen. It never had a tail he found, on skinning it. The odour accompanying the species was absent. "I believe it is the perfect specimen," he said.

TAKE THE LEAD OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1938, G.T. Fulford Co., Ltd

Canton In Flames As Japanese Occupy City

The main business district of Canton is shown here in flames during the Japanese advance on the city. In this district are located the main shops, restaurants and business establishments. Note the bamboo "bomb catchers" on the roofs. These were built by the more optimistic souls who believed that bombs may be "bounced off" or "caught" before exploding.

TRENT RIVER

Teachers Plan Annual Concert

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, Nov. 24.—A meeting of the Sunday School Board of Management was held Monday night at the United church. Thursday, December 22 was fixed for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment. A program committee of the following was appointed: Mrs. Bert Robson, Mrs. H. B. Wood, Mrs. Thos. J. Brown, Mrs. K. Waters, Mrs. T. W. Brown, Miss Fleda Thompson.

The church board of management met Monday night at the church to discuss business in connection with the shed on the north side of the church, when it was decided to dispose of it by tender.

Crokinole Party.

Celebrate Birthdays.

W. C. Inkster had a birthday anniversary Sunday and the same date marked the 84th birthday of Mrs. Inkster's mother, Mrs. Harry Archer, of Havelock. The occasion was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Roberts of Havelock where a birthday dinner was served. Mrs. Archer makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Roberts and is enjoying excellent health. With Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Archer motored to Peterborough Saturday and enjoyed the day's outing.

The following news item, taken from the Bermuda Colonist daily paper of recent date is of interest to the many friends of Mrs. R. E. Frewen, formerly Mabel Inkster, Reg. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Inkster, of Trent River:

Mr. and Mrs. R. Brooker were at home yesterday at the Headmaster House, Salprus Grammar School, when the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Frewen, who were recently married. Mr. Frewen is a member of the school staff and Mrs. Frewen was formerly Miss Mabel Inkster, Reg. N., a popular visitor to Bermuda for the past few years. About 300 guests accepted the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Brooker and many good wishes were offered the newly married couple for their future happiness. The gifts were many and beautiful.

Sunday guests with Mr. and Mrs. Percy L. Johnston at "Cedar Lodge" were Mr. and Mrs. Ed. C. Manning and daughter Marion of Peterborough.

Miss Ruth Taylor of Campbellford, and Mrs. Goldwin O. Walker, of Toronto, sisters of Mrs. Percy L. Johnston, "Cedar Lodge," are en route to San Bernadino, California, where they will spend the winter, guests of Mrs. McCarney and her daughter Zoe, returning home in May by the west route.

Mr. Joseph Tedford has returned from the deer hunt, having secured his deer.

Mrs. Joseph Tedford has returned from spending two weeks with her son, Mr. Clarence Tedford, and Mrs. Tedford at Warsaw.

150 Feared Dead In Avalanches

CASTRIES, St. Lucia, Nov. 24 (C P. Cable). — Authorities pressed orders to-day for the evacuation of areas endangered by landslides as rescue workers battled a welter of water and mud to remove the dead and injured left behind by a falling mountainside.

Death toll was set tentatively at 150 after masses of earth twice crashed down from the face of a mountain. The first slide started on Monday burying two island hamlets and a gang of road workers. A second landslip yesterday buried 50 corpses and the bodies of an undetermined number of rescuers.

The slides were blamed on abnormal rains which have fallen intermittently on this island of the British West Indies Windward Group for two weeks, but some islanders suggested they may have ben caused by volcanic disturbances. Geologists of the neighboring French Island of martinique issued a warning on Saturday that disturbances could be expected on Monday or Tuesday.

Seeing danger of further avalanches, authorities ordered all but rescue workers out of the area along a stretch of eight miles.

Cardiff, Wales, Nov. 24 (CP)

A WHITE - HAIRED Welsh mother, Mrs. Minnie James, 72, opened the door of a new £60,000 ($300,000) temple of peace and health today with a golden key.

The temple was built by Lord Davies, former secretary to Lloyd George, as "a permanent symbol" of mothers' desires for peace. The King Edward VII National Memorial Association for prevention and treatment of tuberculosis and the Welsh national council of the League of Nations Association will have headquarters there.

Mothers of 24 nations took part in the inauguration. Mrs. Mortimer Appleby of British Columbia and London, whose son was killed on the western front during the Great War, represented Canadian mothers. Lady Reid, daughter-in-law of the late Sir Robert Reid, who also lost her son on the western front, represented Newfoundland.

Talk To Replace War, France Germany Agree

PARIS, Nov. 24—(AP)—A French-German agreement to submit all future disputes to consultation, rather than to threaten each other with war, was announced officially here today.

Announcement of the "war renunciation" pact came a few hours before the scheduled arrival of Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Minister Halifax for Anglo-French diplomatic talks.

The French-German understanding complements a British-German anti-war accord signed at Munich Sept. 30 by Chancellor Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain.

The new accord goes farther, however, by recognizing formally the present French-German frontier. In other words, Hitler will promise in writing that Germany lays no further claim to Alsace-Lorraine, provinces returned to France by Germany after the Great War.

The French office, making known the fact that the agreement had been reached, hinted the signatures may be affixed to it when the German foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, visits Paris, probably Dec. 1.

The accord amounts to a re-affirmation of "the spirit of Munich," and is labelled by its supporters as a determination to solve international differences by consultation rather than by warfare or threats of war.

Bright Outlook

While authorized circles termed the accord with Germany a distinctly bright development, informed quarters said precautionary measures and the extension of collaboration with Great Britain could not be foregone.

It was stated the agreement would have two major points:

1. Official recognition by both nations of the present French-German frontier, meaning that Germany renounces all claim to Alsace-Lorraine.

2. Agreement for consultation in case of difficulties between the two nations rather than resort to war.

It was disclosed that yesterday's exchange of greetings at Berchtesgaden between Chancellor Hitler and Robert Coulondre, new French ambassador to Germany, marked the reaching of an understanding to be embodied in the new written accord. The diplomatic speeches contained the main points to be set forth in writing.

Despite the Franco-German understanding the conversations opening today between French statesmen and Mr. Chamberlain and the British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, were expected to draw Great Britain and France still closer together.

34 Die In U.S. As Winter Strikes Hard

40-Mile Gale Piles Roads With Snow Halts Air Traffic

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (A.P.). — Forty-mile winds, piling up snow and sleet over an area already seriously crippled by the worst Thanksgiving storm in years, threatened additional distress for transportation facilities throughout the United States to-day.

Icy winds struck sections of the North Atlantic coast early to-day, accompanied by a severe and freakish thunder and lightning disturbance in New York and New Jersey. The coastguard said sections of Long Island, were battered by high seas, but that no serious damage had been reported.

Additional sleet and snow and continued cold were forecast for most of the United States, with clearing skies expected to-night and rising temperatures to-morrow.

At least 34 deaths were attributed to what was winter's first real onslaught for most sections. Air traffic was at a standstill in the East last night. Weather officials believed flights would be cancelled through most of to-day.

From almost every section of the United States came reports of stranded motorists, stalled busses, delayed trains. Communications and light and power facilities were crippled in some regions.

New England reported the highest holiday death toll, with 10 auto fatalities. Ice-covered highways accounted for five deaths in the South. Ohio reported four dead in traffic accidents, and Pennsylvania three; New York reported five storm deaths; Michigan and Indiana had two each, and Nebraska, Indiana, and Maryland counted one each.

Ice Coats Highways.

In New England, hit by the first heavy snow and the coldest weather of the winter, traffic was virtually at a standstill because of glazed highways. As much as five inches of snow fell in the East yesterday and last night.

At Milan, New Hampshire, Wilbur Potter, a farmer and the father of seven children, was missing in a driving snowstorm which swept the mountains near Dixville Notch. He disappeared while hunting deer on Wednesday.

Pennsylvania, where drifts had piled to a depth of 12 inches, expected more snow in some areas to-day. Buses were running one to three hours late, but trains were keeping close to schedule. Temperatures were below freezing in most sections.

New York City measured several inches of snow through the night and ordered out more than 2,000 pieces of snow fighting equipment to clear the streets. The equipment included rotary brooms, flush tanks with ploughs, and wrecker trucks equipped with ploughs.

Virginia reported the winter's first snow ranged from one to nine inches. Buses and automobiles were stranded in some areas and temperatures ranged well below freezing. The seven-inch fall in Baltimore was the heaviest for the Thanksgiving season in 66 years.

Pastor Says People Starving In Perth

PERTH, Ont., Nov. 25.—(CP). — Rev. Harold Prevost, chairman of the Provisional Welfare Board of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, scored relief conditions here at a meeting of more than 100 relief recipients here yesterday and said "there are people starving in Perth."

J. Marshall and George Florence of the Canadian Shoe Workers' Union told the meeting that they had come to Perth to interview the town council and relief committee to obtain increased relief allowances in the town. Mr. Marshall said the Union had spent more than $11,000 here in direct relief for shoe work strikers and there was no money left now.

1000 Debutantes To Cost Fond Papas 8 Million To Meet "Polite Society" Stag Line

New York, Nov. 25 (CP)

THE QUESTION of debutante parties bobbed up again today with the finding, announced after some research, that fond papas will spend approximately $8,000,000 to introduce their daughters to "polite society" this season.

The actual cost of the debut parties for 1,000 eligible 18-year-old girls in New York and 15 other of the biggest and wealthiest cities in the United States was placed by Fortune magazine at approximately $3,000,000 — for champagne, orchestras, engraved announcements, scrambled eggs with sausages, et cetera. The total cost for the "coming out" year —exclusive of $3,000 for a wardrobe—was figured at around $8,500 each.

It's still a big business, Fortune said after a survey of the debutante scene, but the debutantes are all dressed up with no place to go because, the magazine said, there is very little "polite society" left into which they can be introduced.

"Society" in the United States today is little more than a stag line of college boys and unemployed young men, the magazine said.

Goering Curbs Nazi Leaders In Jew Street Attacks

Reports Abroad Result In Trade Boycotts That Hurt, Force Hermann's Horns In

BERLIN, Nov. 25 (AP). — A new order by Field-Marshal Hermann Goering banning further street action against Jews was interpreted today to indicate that foreign boycotts were having a telling effect on Germany's foreign trade.

Chancellor Hitler's chief lieutenant told 36 Nazi district leaders last night that the time for extra-legal action against Jews was past and that he would hold them responsible for any new outbreaks.

Sources close to Goering said his order undoubtedly was in the interest of foreign trade, upon which the November 10 shop wrecking by angry crowds proved a boomerang. Goering was said to have told the Nazi leaders that the series of anti-semitic decrees issued were now taking care of the "Jewish problem" and that these regulations must be obeyed.

In Vienna a new round-up of foreign Jews and those unable to produce satisfactory citizenship documents was in progress with an estimated 300 arrested yesterday.

Kai-Shek Wants Showdown Wth Britain

SHANGHAI, Nov. 25. — (AP)—General Chiang Kai-Shek was said by Chinese sources today to have expressed dissatisfaction to the British ambassador over Great Britain's Far Eastern policies and to have hinted strongly the time for a showdown had arrived.

This was disclosed as the British ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, returned to Shanghai from a conference with Chiang "somewhere in Hunan" province. Informed quarters said the conference might be the turning point in Anglo-Chinese relations.

Chinese sources said, however, that Chiang told the Ambassador Great Britain had failed to carry on the traditional Anglo-Chinese relationship.

He was said to have told Sir Archibald that unless Britsih policies were changed and aid was forthcoming China would be forced to turn elsewhere. In that event, Chiang was reported to have said, Britain's dominance in China would fade away and the power that provides the needed help would become the paramount influence in Chinese foreign affairs.

Wants British Pledge

The Koumintang is scheduled to open an important session at Chungking, temporary capital, early in December to determine China's foreign policy for the future. Chiang was said to have urged Great Britain to provide assurances of positive assistance.

Britain thus was placed on the horns of a dilemma, since Japan frequently has said Britain must change her Far Eastern policies to meet Japanese approval before peace and understanding can be achieved in the Orient.

French and American relations with China were understood to be slated for a similar frank review in conversations Chiang expects to hold in the near future with ambassadors of the two countries.

Daladier Calls Troops Out To Quell Strike

With the strike toll nearing 100,000 and climbing hourly, Premier Daladier ordered 30,000 mobile guards and 20,000 gendarmes concentrated in the strike centres about Paris and in the north.

Parliamentary deputies said Daladier was determined to crush the movement and was planning to decree a state of siege, similar to military law, unless the strikes were mastered quickly.

Some deputies said they understood the premier even considered the arrest of former Socialist premier, Leon Blum; Peon Jouhaux, general confederation of labor secretary, and Maurice Thorez, communist party secretary, along with dissolution of the communist and socialist parties.

Blum, through his newspaper Le Populaire, warned that France faced a "real social battle whose consequences none can longer foresee."

Estimates were that 45,000 strikers were out near Lille in the north and 40,000 in the Paris region. Strikes broke out early today in western factories.

Take It By Storm

Shortly after dawn 5,000 mobile guards and police were ordered to dislodge 1,000 strikers who remained throughout the night barricaded in one of the Renaut automobile plants on an island in the Seine near Paris. They were told to "take the plant by storm if necessary."

Mobile guards with loaded carbines guarded railway stations and power plants in the north. Twenty-

Pirow In Berlin Skips Colonies

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Oswald Pirow, South African defence minister, made it clear today he had given up whatever plans he may have had for discussion of Germany's colonial demands during his present visit.

When he left South Africa, informed quarters said, he was prepared to listen to Germany's demands, but by the time he arrived his frame of mind was such that he said "colonies is one subject I am not interested in."

Mr. Pirow was represented by friends as being greatly disappointed over the turn Anglo-German relations have taken as a result of the Nazi anti-Semitic campaign. Yesterday's press information from the Berchtesgaden emphasized he had discussed these relations with Chancellor Hitler during their talk.

In his capacity as defence minister Mr. Pirow this morning visited the war academy of the German Air Force at Gatow, near Berlin, and was scheduled for an afternoon trip to the infantry school at Doerberitz.

King Carol of Rumania, who also saw Hitler at Berchtesgaden yesterday, returned to Sigmaringen where he is visiting two of his Hohenzollern cousins. His visit with Hitler was described as merely a courtesy call.

Bomber Crashes

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 25 (C.P.-Havas). — One man was killed and two injured to-day when a Royal Air Force bomber crashed near Alton, in Hampshire. The name of the dead flier was not learned. The men injured were Robert James Thoroughgood and Victor Rawlings.

Nazis' Orders Silence Greek Press

Athens' Government Forbids Tales Of Cruelty To Jews

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 25—(AP). —I understand from a well informed source that the Greek government the other day issued an order to the newspapers that they were not to publish any further news regarding the anti-semitic activities in Germany unless it came from German sources.

This action, I am further told, came after the German minister had made representations to the Greek foreign office.

The enforcement of this order would mean, of course, that the Greek press would not publish anything the German government did not like, since the Nazi authorities absolutely control the publications of the Reich.

Later this order was relaxed somewhat and papers were permitted to publish not only news from German sources but that carried by two conservative agencies of other European countries.

This order is notable for several reasons.

First, it shows the Nazi authorities don't like the adverse publicity they have been getting because of anti-semitism. More important it marks a new development in diplomacy between totalitarian states as concerns the press.

The Government View?

Germany is said to have taken the attitude in the present instance that since the Greek government controlled the newspapers of this country, any publication unfavorable to Germany must ipso facto have the endorsement of the Greek government. In other words if the Greek press were unfriendly to Germany the Greek government also must be hostile.

Such an interpretation opens up an endless range for further repression of the already hamstrung press of totalitarian countries. I have just completed a tour of seven such countries and believe me the newspapers of those countries have been stripped utterly of independence. Not only do the governments bar publication of things they do not like, but they enforce publication of material which they wish made public.

Tories Win Third By-Election

LONDON, Nov. 25 (CP). — The sixth by-election since the Munich agreement resulted Thursday in the government retaining West Lewisham, but with a majority of 5,648 votes compared with 12,370 in the 1935 general election.

The test of the government's foreign policy followed the paths laid down in each of the five preceding by-elections. A large group of voters turned over to the opposition, and in two cases, in Dartford and Bridgwater, the swing was sufficient to score Opposition gains. The government held Oxford City and Walsall, while Labor retained Doncaster.

Henry Brooke, Conservative member of the Hampstead Borough Council, was victorious in West Lewisham, a constituency in suburban London regarded as a safe Conservative seat. He defeated A. M. Skeffington, lecturer and economist, running in the Labor cause.

The vote of 22,587 to 16,939 compared with the 27,173 votes the late Sir Philip Dawson, Conservative, polled in 1935 to 14,803 for R. M. Stewart, Labor.

Next Stanley's Seat.

The next polling will be November 30, when Fylde, held by the late Lord Stanley, Dominions Secretary, will decide between Captain Claude Lancaster, Conservative, and Dr. Mabel Tylecote, Labor.

The Duchess of Atholl dramatically resigned from the Scottish constituency of Perth and Kinross yesterday, following action of the Conservative Association in repudiating her because she has been extremely critical of Prime Minister Chamberlain in his conduct of foreign affairs, both in regard to Spain and Czechoslovakia. She will run as an Independent. Efforts are being made to line up Labor, Liberals and dissatisfied Conservatives solidly behind her.

Pontiff Suffers Second Stroke In Day

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Rome today said that Pope Pius had suffered a second stroke at 5:50 p.m. (11:50 a.m. E.S.T.) following his heart attack this morning.

The dispatch said the holy father was unconscious for about 15 minutes.

In Oxygen Tent.

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 25—(AP)—Pope Pius suffered a serious heart attack this morning and a trustworthy Vatican informant said this afternoon that the holy father had been placed in an oxygen tent. The Vatican announced officially that his condition was improving this afternoon.

The 81-year-old pontiff was stricken suddenly as he was about to leave his private apartment for an official ante-chamber for his daily round of private audiences.

A Vatican medical bulletin described his illness as cardiac asthma. Another informant said it was myocarditis (inflammation of the muscular part of the wall of the heart.)

Hamilton Mayor Gets 3rd Term

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—(CP)—Prospects of mayoralty contests in nearly all Ontario cities and towns where municipal elections will be held December 5 brightened today when nominations for office closed, giving the nominees 24 hours in which to file qualification papers.

Hamilton alone was assured of having no election for mayor. William Morrison became the first mayor in Hamilton's history to receive three successive terms in office by acclamation. Only in 1936, seeking the mayoralty for the first time, was Morrison given a contest.

A feature of nomination day was the candidature of Norman Perry, former Sarnia Imperial football great, for mayor of Sarnia. Perry, who retired from the gridiron in 1935, topped the aldermanic poll a year ago. Also nominated for mayor at Sarnia were Mayor Fred Pelling, John T. Barnes and Arthur Kirby.

Timmins may be without a contest for mayor though Dr. Lee Honey and Ald. Emile Brunette were nominated with Mayor J. P. Bartleman. It was not known whether Dr. Honey or Ald. Brunette would enter the field.

Windsor was assured of a three-way fight involving Mayor E. S. Wigle, Roy C. Haight and David A. Croll, former Ontario minister of labor, welfare and municipal affairs. Mayor Ernest Duckworth and Ald. Peter Laing were nominated at St. Thomas and Mayor H. A. Stewart, Dr. W. W. Sands and Ald. J. F. Rowlands at Kingston.

Conant's Advisors Sure London Cadi Wrong In Ruling He Can't Impound Drunks' Cars

TORONTO, Nov. 25.— (CP).— Further study of the action of Magistrate Donald B. B. Menzies of London, Ont., yesterday in ruling he had no power to order impounding of cars owned by persons convicted of drunk driving has convinced officials of the Attorney General's Department the magistrate is in error, it was learned to-day.

Government officials said today they failed to see any basis or reason for that decision of the magistrate.

"There is a mandatory provision of the Highway Traffic Act, passed this year, that the cars shall be seized and impounded for drunk driving," Attorney-General Gordon Conant said. "There is no doubt in my mind that the province has the right to pass and enforce such legislation. That legislation will be enforced by every means in our power.

"When we have all the details before us, if any appeal seems necessary, an appeal will be taken."

In the case in question at London, Magistrate Menzies said he was not ruling the car should be impounded, but that he, as a magistrate, did not have the power to issue such an order. He said he later would give written reasons for his decision.

En Route

Composed mostly of business and professional men, a party of 154 Jewish refugees, fleeing from Nazi persecution, arrived in Montreal en route to Australia where they will strive to create new homes for themselves and their families. This little girl, LEFT, smiles happily as she arrives in Canada, far away from the terrors of Nazi oppression. Holding his small son, this father, RIGHT, is just one of hundreds of Jewish refugees who are seeking new homes in strange lands.

Making Faces At The Duchess Starts Police Hunting Stranger at "Autumn Fayre"

HOVE, England, Nov. 25 (AP) —Police of this seaside town were searching today for a dark-haired young man on the complaint of the Duchess of Norfolk, wife of England's Premier Duke.

The Duchess, who lives with her husband and five-month-old daughter at ancient Arundel Castle near here, told the authorities she was followed around at the "Autumn Fayre" here Wednesday by a stranger "who made grimaces at me."

Police were alarmed at the report because only Wednesday the body of four-year-old Patricia Owens was found near Hove after a 72-hour hunt and an unemployed ice cream salesman was arrested the same day and charged with murder.

The Duchess on Wednesday opened the "Fayre" to aid local charity and afterwards she visited various booths. She said she noticed a man who made strange faces following her.

Hove's Mayoress, Mrs. A. W. Hillan, said she saw the same man in the banquetting room but thought he was the Duchess' bodyguard.

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., No v.25. — (CP).—More than $1,000 worth of clothing and $700 worth of cigarettes were discovered yesterday by police when they raided a shack, four miles north of King City.

The clothing, according to Provincial Officer H. P. Hammer, of Orangeville, was stolen from Murphy's clothing store, Alliston, 10 days ago, while the cigarettes, carted away in three bags and a large box, were taken from the Mutual Supply stock room at Arthur on the night before the Alliston robbery.

Provincial Officers Hammer and F. W. Kirk, of Shelburne, were investigating stolen markers when they stumbled on the shack, hidden behind a clump of bushes. Unknown to the occupants, the officers peeked through the window and saw clothing and cigarettes tossed about the floor, and three men sitting around a table.

One Gets Away.

A further search of the premises showed two cars, with stolen markers on them, and engines running. When police knocked on the door of the shack all three made a dash for liberty. Sandford was captured as he bolted through the door, Garvey was taken as he attempted to jump into the waiting car, while the other occupant of the house dashed out the back door into the bush. Both Garvey and Sandford were handcuffer while the officers made a search of the bush, but it was fruitless.

The previous day York County Police Sergt. Sidney Barraclough and Constable Aubrey Fleury, in company with Chief Fisher Dunham of Aurora, visited the shack and found a stolen car. But at that time the shack was empty. The stolen car was towed back to Aurora, where it now stands awaiting identification.

A revolver and a large amount of ammunition was found by county police in the stolen car.

Czechs, Poles Clash On Frontier

Both Britain, France Warn Warsaw Against Invasion

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 25.—(CP-Havas).—Shots were exchanged to-day between Czechoslovak forces and Polish troops that crossed the frontier at Czaca, it was officially announced here.

A communique issued by the Slovak Propaganda Commission, said the Poles had crossed the border, occupied one whole commune, and were continuing their march toward Svroinoveo.

The area entered was supposed to have remained within Slovakia according to the decision of the Border Delimitation Commission, the communique said. The commune concerned is that of Cierna on the Ciesnanka river, which was supposed to have marked the frontier.

The communique said Polish delimitation commissioners arrived yesterday by car at Orava. There the people put up barricades in the road and refused them entry. Stones were thrown at the cars, the windows of which were broken. Two of the commissioners were slightly injured.

Warning From France

PARIS, Nov. 25 (AP).—The prime ministers of Great Britain and France warned Poland today against invading Czechoslovakia's eastern territory.

Alarmed by reports from their ambassadors in Warsaw and Prague, prime minister Chamberlain and premier Daladier instructed their Warsaw representatives to caution the Polish government against the "danger of such action."

France and Great Britain, along with Germany and Italy, agreed in the Munich pact to guarantee the new frontiers of Czechoslovakia.

The statesmen, who last night concluded a review of Anglo-French relations, were informed Poland had massed 12 divisions of troops along the frontier of Ruthenia and that Czechoslovakia was sending heavy reinforcements to the eastern provinces.

If the tension continued, informed quarters said, Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier were agreed it might be necessary to call an immediate conference of the 'Munich Big Four" —Chancellor Hitler, Premier Mussolini and themselves.

If Germany moved to prevent Polish occupation of Ruthenia, which would give Poland a common frontier with Hungary, it was said France and Britain would back up Hitler.

Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier, accompanied by foreign ministers Georges Bonnet and Viscount Halifax, arranged for a final few minutes' talk this morning before the departure of the British statesmen for London.

Hepburn Assailed By Heighington

WELLAND, Nov. 25.—(Special.)—Charges that the Hepburn Government had undermined the morale of the civil service, ganged up against Confederation and allowed Ontario to be classed as a welsher on its debts were made here last night by Wilfrid Heighington, K.C., candidate for the leadership of the Provincial Conservative Party, at a meeting of the Welland Riding Conservative Association.

"We have witnessed, throughout the period of the Hepburn Government rule, the besmirching of the dignity and detachment of the Crown, the repudiation of the solemn obligations of the province, vindictive and discriminating taxation, one form or another of legislative piracy and the most open and violent betrayals of the elementary principles of responsible government," Mr. Heighington declared.

Accountant's 'Rob Peter To Pay Paul' System Breaks Down On 10 Forged Debentures

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 25 (C.P.) —Samuel A. Taylor, 30-year-old accountant, said in City Court today that he had forged 10 Westminster Township debentures. Magistrate Donald Menzies remanded him to jail for one week for sentence.

The court was told of Taylor's attempts to cover debts by posting forged securities with banks and loan companies for loans.

Well known among London's younger business men, Taylor had borrowed from a number of financial institutions in the city, each time posting forged securities. Most of the money was borrowed to pay earlier notes.

"It was a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul," suggested Magistrate Menzies.

All the forgeries occurred last September. Officials said Taylor, finding himself in debt, had gone to a printing office in St. Thomas and had secured 10 blank debenture certificates. Then he had gone to a metal workers' shop and had a seal made to stamp the name of Westminster Township on the certificates. He then forged the signatures of the Township Reeve, and treasurer and an official of the Ontario Municipal Board.

See Higher Pay Producing Better Cheese

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 25 (C. P.). — A drop of 1.09 per cent. in first-grade quality cheese recorded this year, the lowest since 1927, prompted suggestions for remedying the situation at the annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association here yesterday. The convention continues to-day.

In his presidential address, Robert J. Anderson of Carleton Place said he often wondered why there is so much undergrade cheese, and if it is because cheesemakers are getting lazy and indifferent. "No doubt we have a few men of this type, but I know the majority of makers have been putting forth their greatest efforts to make high-quality cheese," he said.

Cheesemakers would be able to hire more help and provide a greater percentage of high-scoring cheese if they were given better remuneration, said Mr. Anderson, advocating a minimum wage scale in the cheese industry. "The time has come when the cheesemakers will have to look after their rights by having some kind of a minimum wage scale," he said.

Cheesemakers will be able to hire more help and provide a greater percentage of high-scoring cheese if they are given better remuneration, he continued.

Resolutions aimed at improving the quality of cheese, providing better living conditions for the makers and raising the standard of the Eastern Ontario cheese industry were presented to the convention for consideration.

Urges No Time Reduction.

One resolution urged the convention to protest the regulation requiring cheese to be held eight days after manufacture before being boxed and recommended a five-day period. Joseph Burgess, chief of the grading and dairy products inspection service, Federal Agriculture Department, warned that reduction in the time limit for holding cheese in th curing room would have an unfavorable reaction on the industry.

"In view of the fact there is not much possibility of any change be-

Liberals Hold Regina Seat

REGINA, Nov. 25 (CP) — Saskatchewan's Liberal government, which lost a member in the first provincial by-election following the June 8 general election, was successful yesterday in a second appeal to the electors when Capt. B. J. McDaniel, M.C., defeated four other candidates in Regina.

Liberals led by Premier W. J. Patterson now hold 37 of the 52 legislature seats, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation 11, Social Credit two and Independents two.

They lost Humboldt riding Aug. 4 when Hon. C. M. Dunn, Minister of Highways, was defeated by Joseph Burton, C.C.F., 3,906 to 3,763. Mr. Dunn lost June 8 in his former cial Credit, and Dr. J. C. King, Lib-Melville riding to F. Herman, Soeral, resigned in Humboldt to permit the by-election.

Regina voting yesterday was necessitated by appointment of P. M. Anderson, Liberal, to court of King's Bench. Elected first in 1934 Mr. Anderson was returned last June along with B. D. Hogarth, Liberal, in the two-member Regina riding.

McDaniel, native Nova Scotian, retained the seat with a plurality of 4,410 over R. M. Balfour, Conservative, polling 10,334 votes to Balfour's 5,924; Alderman C. C. Williams, C.C.F., 4,324; J. B. McLeod, Independent Social Credit, 193; Cornelius Rink, Social Credit, 145.

No Early Closing For Toronto Beer Parlors

TORONTO, Nov. 25 (CP).—Toronto citizens may continue to sip beer and wine in hotel beverage rooms until midnight, if they so desire, in accordance with a ruling by Chairman E. G. Odette of the Ontario Liquor Control Board.

Necessity for a ruling came through efforts of the Toronto Temperance Federation to bring about a 10 p.m. closing bylaw for beverage rooms, while City Council contended it could not legally set a closing time for Toronto taverns.

Mr. Odette ruled against the early-closing suggestion in a letter to City Council yesterday. He said the Toronto ruling would have no affect on closing bylaws passed by other Ontario municipalities.

Most council members approved the decision and expressed satisfaction the question would not become intermingled with civic politics. Temperance leaders criticised both the Liquor Board and Toronto council for alleged evasion of the issue.

O'Dette's Opinion.

"Calling me harsh names will not deter me from doing what I firmly believe is proper," Mr. Odette said. "When I became commissioner I was empowered to set the hours of closing and it was my considered opinion at that time that 12 o'clock closing in large centres of population was the wise action to take. After four years of operation I am still convinced it is the proper time."

Mr. Odette said it was not in the interests of true temperance to shorten the hours of sale. It was

Jews Urge Pressure On Ottawa Officials

TORONTO, November 25—(CP)—There must be concerted pressure on the Federal government to allow Jewish refugees from Europe to come to Canada, Rabbi Reuben A. Slonin told a mass meeting of University of Toronto students last night.

The meeting, called by the student Christian movement, the social problems club and the Aboukah Society, was addressed by Rabbi Slonin and Rev. C. E. Silcox, secretary of the social service council of Canada.

"We protest the inactivity of the Canadian government regarding the Jewish refugee problem," Rabbi Slonin said.

Dr. Silcox said that "many of Canada's national problems would be solved" if the country had a population of 30,000,000. He urged admittance of German Jews who have been maltreated in their native land.

Chicago Stockyard Strike Brightens

CHICAGO, Nov. 25—(AP)—Prospects of a settlement in the Chicago stockyards strike brightened today after opposing forces agreed to an initial conference.

United States government conciliators said representatives of the Congress for Industrial Organizations stock handlers union and of the Union Stockyards and Transit Company would confer Saturday.

It marked the first break in the adamant stand taken by both sides since handlers quit work Monday, causing suspension of trading at the world's largest livestock market.

The conciliators, Robert Mythen and W. H. Rodgers, expressed hope of removing the obstacles to peace before next week when the effects of the dispute would become more pronounced.

The union's demands for a written contract, a closed shop and a check-off were regarded the most formidable barriers to a settlement. Differences over the other demands—vacations with pay, overtime pay and a 40-hour-week—were believed not beyond compromise.

Today—thanksgiving day in the United States—was a holiday in the sprawling south side packing town. Fridays and Saturdays normally are light days. Hence there was little likelihood that the pinch of the strike would be generally felt this week.

Mary S. Reynolds Dies In Toronto

TORONTO, Nov. 25—(CP).—Two young women teachers in Toronto Public schools died of pneumonia yesterday. Mary Sheelah Reynolds, 26, organist at Holy Rosary church for the past seven years and a teacher at Boulton avenue school for girls for four years, died at her home.

Miss Reynolds was born in Kitchener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Reynolds, and lived for many years in Western Canada, including Prince Albert and Regina, and also in Peterborough.

Unemployed Stage Strike

The lobby of the Corona Hotel, Edmonton, was seized by 100 single unemployed transients who staged a "sit-down" strike in an effort to bring their plight to the attention of authorities. The strikers left the hotel lobby after a few hours, when a relief officer offered them jobs.

Rockies Shown In Colored Film

"Canadian Rockies Holiday", a two-reel prize winning film, colored and in sound, shown by Hamilton Jones and under the auspices of the Student's Council of the Peterborough and Vocational School was presented to an appreciative audience of about 600 people Thursday night in the Collegiate Auditorium.

The film, showing scenes of unbelievable beauty and awe-inspiring grandeur was taken last summer by Mr. Jones almost entirely within the borders of Jasper National Park in the heart of the Canadian Rockies. The large audience sat spell-bound throughout the showing and went away convinced that they had seen some of the best examples of colored photography yet to be presented in Peterborough. Not only was the scenic beauty and enthralling spectacle of the towering mountains and sparkling lakes shown most effectively but the subjects ranged all the way from the Totem Pole Golf Tournament on the famed Jasper Park course to a full-fledged rodeo complete with Indians, cowboys and bucking broncos.

The first reel was taken in and around the Jasper Park Hotel and the spectator was taken to such scenes of beauty as Lake Maligne, Athabaska Falls and Sunwapta Falls and canyon while reel No. 2 dealt with the mighty Athabaska Glacier, the largest in North America. The picture showed how, by rail, by automobile, on horseback and on foot the travellers pushed on higher and farther into the mountains. The expedition was complete with the native guides, fresh mountain trout and animal life that attract thousands of tourists to the Park every year.

Mr. Jones was introduced to the audience by Alex Young, president of the Student's Council who thanked the crowd for their patronage. Mr. Jones, remarking that it was his first visit to this city, said that Jasper National Park, the world's largest National Park has been greatly opened up the last few years with good highways, comfortable living quarters and everything a tourist could ask.

Hunter Returned As Search Starts

Lost in the Cavan swamp Thursday afternoon while on a hunting trip, Frank Hughes, Bolivar street wandered far away from the point at which he and his companion had entered that bog-ridden territory and finally emerged on a road to the north and tramped the weary miles home, while a search party was organized and had started out to look for him.

Hughes, in company with George Ruttle, also of Bolivar street, went to the swamp via the road leading out from Sherbrooke street Thursday afternoon to hunt rabbits. For a while the two young men kept together but later they got separated and in a short time Hughes could not hear his companian and was not certain of just where he himself was located in the swamp.

He wandered around for some time before he finally reached a road which he thought at first was the road on which he and his companion had left their car. Inquiries at a farm confirmed that opinion but after walking for some time Hughes found he was on another road so he decided to strike out for home. He stopped enroute to telephone home that he was all right but by that time, Ruttle, uneasy because of the failure of his companion to return had given the alarm and a posse of searchers had been organized.

Hughes finally reached Peterborough about 8.30 o'clock, tired and foot sore. He estimates that altogether he must have walked about twenty miles.

The alarm caused by his temporary disappearance had been of course heightened by the cold weather and by a knowledge of the fact that there were many dangerous bogholes in the district in which Hughes had been last seen. It would be quite possible for a man to wander into one of those danger spots and drown there. As a matter of fact only a week or so ago a man named Mitchell of Mount Pleasant was nearly engulfed in the bog and would have lost his life had not his two sons come to his rescue just in time.

repeated the declarations of Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier that Great Britain and France would seek peace with Germany and Italy but "just to be sure" they would arm to the teeth.

The new Anglo-French agreement was said to provide that:

1. Great Britain will train a large expeditionary force to help the French army in wartime.

2. Production of all war supplies will be coordinated.

3. France will purchase 6,000 bombing planes, many of which may be built in Canada, with payment assured by British loans to France.

4. Army, navy and air force general staffs of the two countries will be in permanent consultation.

5. A common policy of buying and giving credit will be followed by the two countries in their dealings with Central European nations to enable them to keep out of Germany's sphere of influence.

Hopkins, Roosevelt's Choice As Successor

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (CP)—Harry L. Hopkins, ardent New Dealer who heads the Works Progress Administration, was reported by the New York Tribune today to be President Roosevelt's current choice as a successor in the White House.

A Washington dispatch to the Republican newspaper said that impression was gained by Democratic leaders of 11 states who have just concluded a political pow wow with Chairman James Farley of the Democratic National Committee.

However, the dispatch added it was learned from the state leaders that a Hopkins nomination for president in 1940 would not receive their support. He would become a White House candidate "only over our dead bodies," these leaders were quoted as saying.

Avalanche Victims Now Feared Over 250

CASTRIES, St. Lucia, Nov. 25 — (CP Cable). — Slipping mountainsides weakened by weeks of rain, brought terror to inland villagers today as laborers pushed aside tons of sodden clay seeking bodies of victims of a series of landslides. Recurers listed 250 missing after recurring landslips along an eight-mile stretch of road crashed through island hamlets.

Authorities believed the exact death toll would never be known. Fifty six bodies have been recovered from the mass of mud and water. Scores more have been treated for injuries. More than 500 refugees from the stricken villages are being cared for by the colonial government.

New Avalanches threatened. A huge crack in a hill near Aceleray threatened to hurl tons of earth down upon the coastal town. The population was evacuated.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG Nov. 25 (C.P.). — Canadian wheat export sales, estimated at 300,000 bushels, gave wheat futures a strong undertone here today. At the final bell values were ¼ to ¼ cent lower. November 59b, December 58⅝ a, May 61 to 61⅛, and July 61⅞ to ⅞ cents.

Generally traders had little to do. Lack of outside market influence and narrow fluctuations at Liverpool, Buenos Aires and Chicago accounted for a dull session. Minor seaboard buying offset thin offerings at the start. Later routine trades were scattered.

Liverpool closed unchange to ¼d down with distant futures easier on selling encouraged by cheaper new-crop Argentine offers. Demand for Manitoba wheat and sale of one Australian cargo to India was reported.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—(AP)—Three days of conferences between war department and aircraft officials have given sharper outline to the United States government's defence proposals.

The newest objective, informed persons disclosed, is the production of 1,000 planes a month by the American air craft industry.

This, however, is only one part of a comprehensive program being developed by President Roosevelt's advisers for submission to congress.

A larger, far better equipped army air force; rivalling Europe's strongest; further measures to make the navy "second to none," and closer gearing of industry to the military establishment are other phases.

Economic as well as military considerations have figured heavily in defence planning. "Approximately 40,000 persons are employed in American aircraft and accessory plants whose output is expected to treble in the next two years.

Agreement by certain utilities to expand power facilities for possible emergency use is expected to stimulate heavy industries, a development regarded by many economists as essential to economic improvement.

What They Want

Some details are still nebulous, but the major outlines of the defence program appear to be shaping up about like this:—

Air Force—Upwards of 9,280 planes for the army's air corps, four times the present goal of 2,320 first line military planes by 1940. The navy's present 3,000 authorized planes may be expanded to 4,000.

Army—Increase of 15,000 or more in the present 165,000 enlisted men, including a large number for the air corps. Munitions to equip fully an initial protective force of 400,000, including the regular army and national guard. An expenditure of $142,000,000 for semi-automatic rifles, tanks, anti-aircraft and anti-tank guns and other weapons would be involved.

Navy—Two additional battleships, probably of 45,000 tons each, along with a score of other warships; modernization of five existing battleships and two aircraft carriers, and a further extensive strengthening of shore bases.

Industry—Appropriation of $30,000,000 for "educational" orders for munitions, compared with $2,000,000 this year, production of three times the present output of 320 air planes monthly; a two-year, $2,000,000,000 construction program to assure an adequate supply of power for 15 key munitions manufacturing centres.

Colombia Recalls Berlin Envoy

BERLIN, Nov. 25—(AP)—Colombia's minister-designate to Germany announced today he had been recalled as the result of an incident during the anti-Jewish violence of two weeks ago which strained relations between the two countries. The envoy, Rafael Garamillo, said he would leave tonight for Paris.

The incident which caused the recall occurred Nov. 10, the day anti-Jewish violence reached its height. Gamarillo and the entire legation staff drove about Berlin in a legation automobile flying the Colombian flag.

From time to time R. Rocha-Schloss, first secretary, jumped out to photograph a burning synagogue or broken store window. Suddenly the party was halted by the screaming siren of a police car. Dozens of policemen surrounded the diplomats an dtried to seize their cameras.

Garamillo protested, but according to his version the police told him it made no difference whether he was a diplomat or not. They attempted to take him to a police station, but the party locked themselves in the automobile. Thereupon the police made it impossible for the car to move.

Finally Garamillo persuaded the police to accompany him to the foreign office, where, he said, he was told the police had done their duty and that the foreign office could not reprimand the police. A written protest was handed to the foreign office the following day, but no reply was received.

Rocha-Schloss, as charge d'affaires, meanwhile was called to the foreign office and told that Chancellor Hitler, to whom the minister-designate had not yet presented his credentials, had heard of the affair and had postponed indefinitely his reception of Garamillo, set for Nov. 15. The Colombian government thereupon recalled Garamillo and decided to leave the post vacant as a protest.

Bride-Deserter Out Hunting Work

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—Milton D. Soulliere, 24, pleaded guilty here today to charges of deserting and not supporting his child-bride, Mrs. Bertha Soulliere, 15. He was remanded a week pending a Children's Aid Society investigation.

"I had to go out and work to make money to support her," Soulliere told the court. "At the time we were married I was unemployed. I didn't want to sponge on her parents."

The husband said he was working for a Windsor district farmer for his keep and $5 a month. Soulliere said he had tried without success to get factory work here and he did not think it likely he could take his bride to the farm. "I'm willing to support her if I can get a job anywhere else. There's nothing wrong between my wife and me."

The girl, asked if she was willing to live with the husband who deserted her immediately after their wedding Oct. 31, bowed her head and said "I leave it to the court, for all I'm asking is support."

Blames Hitler

The Marquis of Zetland, British secretary of state for India, addressing a government rally at Torquay, declared that the hope he had placed in Munich agreement had been "rudely shaken" by the anti-Jewish violence in Germany. The marquis was the first member of the British government to publicly lay blame for the current disorders in Germany directly on Chancellor Hitler.

No Municipal Office For Liquor Vendor

FORT ERIE, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP) Cranmere Riselay, Ontario Government Control Store liquor vendor, announced today that owing to regulations of the Provincial Government, he has decided not to offer himself as a candidate in the Fort Erie municipal elections. Nominations take place tomorrow.

Mr. Riselay said he had taken up the matter of provincial government employees standing for municipal offices, whether they are salaried or non-salaried appointments with his superior officials in Toronto and had received advices to the effect such is distinctly discouraged.

The ruling is regarded as important because of the effect it will have in other parts of the province as well.

Prior to coming to Fort Erie, Mr. Riselay was a member of the Board of Control at Hamilton and also a candidate for the Legislature from one of the Hamilton district ridings.

Youths Steal Thunder Of Human Seal To Show West Tough

Edmonton, Nov. 25 (CP). A SHIVERING CROWD of 4,000 Edmontonians watching Krikor Hekimian, self-styled Human Seal, swim in the North Saskatchewan River were surprised yesterday when three youths jerked off overcoats and jumped into the icy water beside the "Armenian Polar Bear."

Krikor ignored the boys and then climbed onto the ice for a breathing spell. The trio came out too but dived in again when Hekimian re-entered the water.

"We did it to show Edmonton boys are just as tough as Toronto lads or wherever the Human Seal comes from," said one of the boys, John Shaw, 19. The others were Orval Thomas, 20, and Tripp Davis, 18.

Hekimian is a native of Georgetown, Ont.

May Let More Jews Into Palestine

LONDON, November 25—(AP).—Malcolm Macdonald, Secretary for Colonies and the Dominions, told the House of Commons today he was considering poposals by the Jewish agency for increased Jewish immigration into Palestine.

Mr. Macdonald opened a debate on the Government's abandonment of its plan for partitioning of Palestine at a moment when Germany's anti-Jewish campaign gave urgency to the problem of finding new homes for German Jews.

His announcement followed by a few hours the statement of President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., that it had been "reported" that the "number of refugees to be permitted entry into Palestine will be materially increased and in particular that many children and young people will be given refuge there."

Mr. Macdonald said he was considering the Jewish agency's proposals in connection with Sir Harold MacMichael, Britain's High Commissioner for Palestine.

But he added "the problem of refugees in Central Europe cannot be settled in Palestine."

Great Britain, the Secretary said, made no promise that Palestine "should be a home for every one who is seeking to escape from such an immense calamity."

Franco-German Deal Pleases Chamberlain

PARIS, Nov. 25—(CP-Havas).—The new Franco-German agreement, Anglo-French defence plans and the situation in the Far East, where the interests of France and Great Britain are jeopardized by the Sino-Japanese war, were the main topics discussed at the first meeting between French and British statesmen here to-day.

At this morning's meeting Prime Minister Chamberlain expressed satisfaction at the conclusion of the non-aggression accord between France and Germany. He emphasized this was an important step in Germany's return to cooperation with the other European powers.

The opening session developed into a round-table discussion with Premier Edouard Daladier, Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Mr. Chamberlain all speaking on the numerous problems of the agenda.

Get It Made Right

It looks as though the impounding of cars driven by drunk drivers is something which will have to be placed on a firmer basis. Magistrate Menzies in court at London, Ont., decided he had no power to order the impounding of a truck for three months because the owner had been drunk while driving it.

The claim advanced by defence counsel was that drunk driving cases were tried under Criminal law, which is the exclusive field of the Federal government. To attempt punishment by impounding was actually a case where a provincial government was seeking to encroach on federal law.

Magistrate Menzies appeared convinced there was sufficient logic in that plet to refuse the impounding process which has heretofore been considered mandatory under the provisions of the Highways Traffic Act.

If there is a knot tied in the process then the best thing our law-makers can do is to get it untied as quickly as possible. The impounding of cars of drunk drivers is a powerful and useful weapon in the hands of our courts and officers in fighting drunk driving. It is too good a weapon to be lost because the jurisdiction of one section of our law-making machinery is said to have collided with the functions of some other section. The safety of our highways and streets is the chief consideration and nothing can be allowed to stand in the way of that objective. We want to keep right on with the impounding of cars which are driven by drunk drivers and we want the law straightened out to meet that situation beyond the possibility of successful appeal.

Stealing Chickens

When one reads of chicken stealing it is probably regarded as not a particularly serious thing. But it is. Men can be—and are—sent down for stealing chickens just the same as for other offences.

This particular farmer purchased 125 chicks earlier in the season and his plan was to keep and finish them for the market so he would have some cash income about the time of year when he needed money to pay his taxes. He had plenty of feed and as it has been low-priced it looked best to sell some of it in the way of poultry.

Like a good many other farmers he has found cash none too easy to secure. But the chickens were coming along well and it did look as though they were going to provide the major portion of the 1938 tax money.

Then it was that the chicken thieves visited the premises and on one night raid took away 100 of them, so the plan for paying the taxes has been simply shot full of holes and no longer exists. We are not exaggerating when we say the farmer in this case is going to have a hard enough time trying to gather together enough to settle his tax bill. The loss is just as definite as though the farmer had been held up with a gun and robbed of the money when on his way to pay his taxes.

So when you read again of a man being sent down for chicken stealing do not come to the conclusion that it is a slight offence. It is about as miserable as can be, and the position in which this farmer finds himself today proves it beyond argument.

Rather a Failure

The view was expressed in this paper several weeks ago that the visit of King Carol of Rumania to London might not be much of a success. Carol is now on his way home and is making calls in Paris and Berlin and other places.

Nor was his visit to London much of a success. King Carol was bent on doing some business for his country. It may seem strange for a king to dabble in such affairs, but Rumania has wheat for sale and also oil and a market is needed.

When he arrived in London it became necessary to talk with men who attend to business for the British government. Even if a king comes to sell wheat it is the commoners who have the say in the matter and apparently they talked business to the king of Rumania like they would to any other individual. Rumanian wheat is not up to scratch this year, and the duty against American wheat had been reduced by the new treaty, so of Carol's wheat they took none.

Much the same with his oil. Britain purchases much oil but prefers to do her buying where she knows the supply is not going to be cut off in case of hostilities. Rumanian oil would have to make its way to London by way of the Mediterranean, and British buyers were none too enamored of that idea. So the monarch went away rather empty-handed; the signatures he hoped for were not on the dotted lines. Apart from that he may have enjoyed himself immensely.

Railways Lose Money

The C.P.R. has made application for the right to abandon its service to the town of Listowel. Listowel is a town of some 2,700 population in Perth county, and being surrounded by a good farming area is a substantial trading and business centre.

But the C.P.R. finds it can make no money by keeping up its service there, although there was a time when shipping was good. Trucks are blamed for taking much of this trade away, and the town is also served by the C.N.R.

The business men of the town are opposed to the withdrawal of the C.P.R. They fear if there is but one railway that rates for shipping and express and other services will increase. Listowel also has an empty factory building for which a tenant is being sought, and this building is located on a C.P.R. siding. If the C.P.R. pulls out then the chances of getting a tenant for the place would become slim.

That is getting to be a rather old story. People who have it in their hands to place transportation business have gone toward the truck, and in a good many places they have brought the railways to the point where they find they are losing money by operating certain lines, and common-sense suggests that the only way to quit losing money is to cease operating where the loss is being sustained.

When that point is reached there is generally a united protest and a recounting of what the town will lose if the railway ceases its unprofitable operation. It is realized all at once that the railway is actually an asset to the place. The people who do the protesting would not hesitate to close out a section of their own business which was losing money for them but they insist that a railway has no right to do the same thing to defend its financial position. If the protesting people could show some good and substantial reason why the railway should keep on operating at a loss it would shed a new and much needed light on the situation.

A Rough Passage

Premier Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax were among the passengers who crossed the English Channel during the recent storm when wind was blowing a full 100 miles an hour. It would seem that the British Premier was deserving a little peace and quiet, and if weather were favorable he should secure it on a Channel crossing. When wind blows 100 miles an hour he would not secure anything but rough treatment on that trip.

Travellers who have made a number of ocean trips have at times found they were more disturbed crossing the few miles of the Channel than in all the miles they had travelled in other water. From Dover across to Calais in France can hardly be more than 25 miles, but in rough weather one can be pitched about in great style. If the crossing is from the Hook of Holland for a landing at Harwich then the experience can be even worse. There appear to be no strange motions which the vessel will not observe. It will plunge headlong and come up to right itself; it will roll from side to side and on occasions it seems to shiver and shake as though weary of the whole business.

It is not recorded how Mr. Chamberlain stood the Channel crossing. One who can cross there in rough weather and be in readiness for the next scheduled meal can without hope of contradiction proclaim himself a good sailor.

We Must Pay For It

A good many opinions have their premise in dollars and cents. This way: The proposal has been made several times to Washington that trade relations with Germany be suspended as a protest against the manner in which Jews are being used.

Professor Edward Collier of Boston University made comment on the suggestion and his view was that such a break would be an entire mistake. His reason was:

"For the first nine months of this year our exports to Germany were $75,000,000, while our imports from Germany were only $44,000,000. Ceasing to trade with Germany would hurt us more than we would injure Germany."

So as far as getting hurt if the trade between Germany and the States were entirely suspended United States would be hurt $31,000,000 more than Germany, so looked at from that point seeking to punish Germany would result in greater punishment to United States.

Admittedly that may be a rather low plane on which to make calculations—merely dollars and cents. But there is something practical in that point of view because nations have to live if the people in those nations are going to live and be occupied.

The time is here now, though, when nations will have to start thinking in terms of right and wrong as being greater than dollars and cents. The desire to make money out of war supplies has been given higher ranking than consideration of the thousands of people who are killed in wars. The right thing to do would be to shut down tight on such traffic, while the profitable thing is to engage in it.

To get at it from another way—we must come to the point where we will be as willing—or more so—to pay for peace as we are to pay for war. When we are willing to pay the price for peace we have no doubt we can secure it.

Reading Of It Is O.K.

The Examiner's correspondent at Hastings reports that Dr. J. A. MacDonald and his two sons, Phillip and Joseph have been enjoying a swim every day this fall in the Trent river. Bringing the custom more up to the minute we are informed that on Monday when things were cold the swimming went on as usual. The doctor had no complaints about the cold and none was forthcoming from the sons.

The MacDonalds can stand a great deal, especially those who us the capital "D" as the spring board for the second syllable. We do not urge our readers in general that they should romp out in the morning and start plunging into bodies of cold water just because the MacDonalds of Hastings can do so. Rather do we record it as something of merit and as showing the spirit of vigor and strength has not evaporated from our land. It is quite possible to sincerely admire that which one would not attempt to emulate.

NOTE AND COMMENT

In answer to a query from a reader: Latest figures show the population of United States to be 130,215,000.

Leopold Macaulay, M.P.P., told the reporters that he had nothing to say. It must be admitted that a speechless politician is a new species.

A stolen car was lifted out of Hamilton bay after being submerged there for six years. Probably the car was not equipped with what they call floating power.

A horse named Scrooge has won a feature race in the United States. If we remember our Dickens, Scrooge made his best showing around the Christmas season.

Proposal is made that idle coal mines in Wales be used as places of shelter if air raids start. It would be better to read that the mines were being used as places of employment in times of peace.

One expert says the number of autos will have doubled in number by the year 1960, so it might be well for people to start now and do their full share of walking.

President of the United Farmers of Ontario says that the economic condition of the farmers is progressively growing worse and we have an idea that Mr. King will not include that sentence in his election manifesto next year.

Toronto paper asks a lot of Queen City folk as to whether Indians are receiving fair treatment in Canada. The chances are that most of the people questioned had never seen an Indian except in a wild west show.

Young man stole a car and in trying to escape at 85 miles an hour drove it through the side of a hotel near London. Stranger still, when that was attended to he crawled out of the wreckage and started to run away.

Securing land for building the new mental hospital near St. Thomas resulted in action for damages, in which the claim was made that a farm there is worth $40,000. We have no reason to doubt the claim, but could the owner secure that much for it?

St. Catharines Standard, in referring to Wilfrid Heighington, candidate for Conservative leader in Ontario, says when he was in the Legislature as member for St. David's he never wore another man's collar. We take that to mean he had one of his own.

SYSTEM

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When there are funds to raise in town old Ten Per Cent. will hasten down, he wants to do his part; he tells the folk to call on him, for he is ready to begin, he wants to make a start.

¶ They call him Ten Per Cent. I know, it started back some years ago, for he lent money then; he mortgaged farms and buildings too, the rate he charged they always knew, was nothing less than ten.

¶ So Ten Per Cent. will take his list, makes sure that not a call is missed, and he talks rather strong; and when some worthy cause exists he wrings anew his soft-palmed fists, before he moves along.

¶ He urges men to drain their purse, he even quotes a little verse, what joy it is to give; and Ten Per Cent. most sheds a tear, explaining just why he is here, that other folks may live.

¶ He makes reports in passioned ways, and those who have refused he flays, and claims they've missed a lot; he names all those who turned him down, throws in a cold indignant frown, and leaves them on the spot.

¶ Perhaps you think it right to ask, what Ten Per Cent. gives to the task. I'll tell you in due time; he urges all the men in town, for dollars they should dig deep down—but never gives a dime.

Future Bright For Canadians

By ROGER BABSON

ALBANY, New York.—Canada has the brightest future of any nation in the world today. She is already the fastest growing of the larger nations as far as population is concerned. Few people realize that her business in 1937 set new all-time highs, surpassing even the 1929 peaks. Today, Canadian business is only 15 per cent below the top and is rising vigorously. Meanwhile, each succeeding wave of unrest that fans out across Europe makes her prospects look even brighter.

"It is an ill-wind that blows nobody good" is trite but true. The unfortunate Jews of Germany are getting a horrible mauling, but their plight is actually a bullish factor in Canada's outlook. It becomes increasingly apparent that England must be prepared to fight aggressor nations such as Germany and Italy. Mind you, I am not predicting war; but the best guarantee of the future peace of Europe is a Great Britain fully armed.

WHILE indignation against Fascism rages white hot throughout democratic nations, Canada stands to benefit. Why? Because England must have a safe deposit box for her reserves. In a war between England and France vs. Germany, the allies would eventually win. In the meantime, however, Herr Hitler's air-raiders would be busy raising havoc with the big cities of England and France. The bombing plane is the most deadly weapon of warfare that has ever been devised. There is as yet no adequate defense against it. It would level such cities as London, Manchester, and Liverpool. England knows this and is protecting herself against it in the only possible way: By decentralization of cities, of industries, and of food supplies.

Few realize it, but the bombing plane will actually revolutionize English civilization. People are moving into the country. Instead of big homes on high knolls, they are building modest homes in wooded glens. Factories are being erected in the country, camouflaged and hidden by trees. Duplicate sets of books are being kept by British firms—one in the city and one in a secret hiding place in the country. If the city offices' records are destroyed, there will be a duplicate set in the rural hideaway. But even such drastic measures as these are just makeshift safeguards against the bombing plane.

HENCE, Britain is looking across the sea to Canada. North America is practically immune to bombing attacks provided an enemy cannot establish an air-base on this side of the Atlantic. Canada is in the geographical center of the Empire. Therefore, it is only logical that England should look to Canada as the storm-cellar for her reserves. For instance, the government is already shifting her aviation manufacturing activities to the New World. It is reported that England is now investing $100,000,000 in Canadian aviation plants. Hence, I look for the nerve center of the Empire to shift across the Atlantic.

the coming visit of the King and Queen is another step in the program. Then should come a constant flow of English capital into Canada. Tremendous reserves of foods, minerals, and munitions can be built up in Canada, where they will be safe from the ravages of the bombing plane and yet ready for use by the Old Country during any death struggle with Russia, Italy, or Germany. The formal government seat or the King and Queen's palace may never be moved to Canada, but the industrial and financial nerve center may well cross the sea.

CANADA is a young country. She has untold natural resources. Her mineral deposits are mammoth. She has adequate waterpower. Her forests are almost limitless. She has millions of fertile farm acres. The only three things she needs more of are: (1) Character, (2) Money, and (3) Men. That is why the surface of her possibilities has hardly been scratched. Yet, despite this, Canada's progress has been phenomenal. The growth line of her business is rising at the rate of over two per cent each year. Activity today in Canada is double the level of 25 years ago, while United States business is up only 50 per cent.

Canada's population has more than doubled since 1900. Her industries have been transformed from back-yard shops to efficient modern plants. Her steel, building, and petroleum businesses are thriving, while her mining industry has mushroomed up overnight. Moreover, the splendid future of Canada has not been marred by bad government. There are a few sore spots here and there, such as Alberta's ill-fated Social Credit. Her nationally-owned rail system is a heavy burden. On the whole, however, she has had good, sane, commonsense government. There is every reason for optimism.

WHAT does all this mean to citizens of the United States? Briefly, it means better business, more jobs, higher wages. There are not two countries in the world which are closer knit economically than the United States and Canada. The Dominion's business cannot grow without boosting business in the United and vice-versa. This is why the new reciprocity tariff — announced last week—should be of mutual benefit to both nations as a whole, although it hurts certain communities. Canada's bullish outlook should mean some good investment opportunities in the securities of Canadian banking, industrial, and utility concerns. They should give American investors an anchor to the windward from the unsound trends in the United States.

Most important of all right now, the British movement to Canada means greater protection for both United States and Canadian citizens against foreign aggression. Here is a unique case in modern history where a stronger neighbor means a better ally rather than a worse enemy!

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

TRAINS AND TRUCKS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Your article "Facts About Canadian Rails" of November 22nd certainly quoted indisputable facts, but, I am afraid, does not tell the whole story, and consequently does not give a true picture of the situation.

In early days of railroads men were worked long, continuous hours. Railroading is a dangerous job, and frequent accidents resulted when long hours robbed men of their alertness. Eight hours, it is agreed, is the longest time any man should work, so railroads were made into divisions designed to consume eight hours train time. The average train uses the eight hours. A special case, such as the "Maple Leaf Limited"—which is, by the way, Canada's fastest train, can hardly be quoted as a fair instance.

The men driving this train are the senior men of the division, the most capable experienced, and reliable of the division. This is to make this fast run for the public's convenience and safety. Surely the training which an engineer must take, the examinations he must pass, the years of experience that he can bring to his aid in this instance—are worthy of $8.70 a day? Not only the engineer, but conductors and trainmen, firemen, mail clerks etc., are similarly qualified. And note this—their wages are by no means as high as the engineer's.

Terminal time was made compulsory to prevent railroads making their men work switching in terminal when they had still a long run to make. This prevented the railroads putting switchmen out of work, or exploiting their men for road service.

How about truck men? Long hours and poor wages are the rule there. Truck driving is a hard job, and these men should be well paid. Their job is dangerous, and they should be trained and paid the wages of trained men. Until the truckers agree that eight hours or 100 miles constitute one day's work, as the railroads do, the public highways will be no longer safe.

Again, we do not regard it as just that there should be what amounts to government subsidization of truckers in that there should be no rules about private companies using public highways for their transportation. The "Canadian Motorist" states that trucks cut the life of a paved highway by ½, and we shudder to think what they do to gravel roads. For this, we, the owners of private automobiles, must pay a gasoline tax, in common with the truckers.

Canada's railroads are among her premier assets. In a country whose transportation is so affected by weather, we must pay attention to the fact that the railroads alone "keep going," they are the last service to cease, and the first to begin again during extraordinary weather conditions. We owe a great deal to this, and it is only right that we should be willing to support the only efficient transportation system Canada posses. Are we to throttle it by taking from it the lucrative trade of these eastern provinces, and leave to it the work of the prairies and mountains, where only railroads can operate constantly and successfully, where trucks cannot operate, where operating expenses are high and returns low?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this space in your paper.

A. BARRIE JACK.

• An Editor Who Is Shrewd

IN THE SERIES of articles on Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson,, publisher of the New York News, which appeared recently in the New Yorker, the head of one of the most successful publishing enterprises in the country was held up, not too sympathetically, as an eccentric genius who enjoys doing things no other editor would even think of.

For example, Capt. Patterson, it was reported, frequently dresses in old clothes and mingles with the denizens of the Bowery; stands in line at the movies and listens in to the conversation of the great common people; and in general exposes himself constantly and directly to contacts with the grimy, sweating multitudes who make up a large part of the public in the greatest centre of population in the country.

We are inclined to regard these habits as smacking more genius than of eccentricity. Certainly an editor who is trying to serve a community or a group is working in the dark if he does not know what these people are thinking about: how they live, what they want out of life and how they are hoping to get it. If he does know about the things they are worrying about, he is certainly in a better position to reflect their viewpoint.

It has been charged many times recently by some who have a political axe to grind that newspaper editors are out of touch with the public, and hence attack political activities which in fact are in line with what the public wants. Generally speaking, we think the criticism is unfounded. But if it is true that editors are speaking from a lofty perch high above, then the methods of Capt. Patterson might well be commended to them as the first step toward knowing what their readers are thinking and doing.

The great editor is not merely a reflector of life as it is—but he needs to know it if he plans to improve it.

• "With Charity Toward All"

SIR,—I READ WITH keenest interest your editorial on the Jewish Pogrom, writes a reader in a letter to The Montreal Star. I feel we are on the very brink of another and greater world conflict. Millions of men from democratic countries will be pouring forth their blood for the ideal of freedom, religious and racial toleration.

In the Great War of 1914-1918 men sincerely fought and died to make the world safe for democracy. The cause of democracy, it was claimed, was "won" at Versailles. Just twenty years from the Armistice we are confronted with the sickening reality that every one of the ideals for which we fought are imperilled perhaps more than ever before. Why?

During the days of Stresemann and Briand, the democratic countries were beginning to realize that the Versailles Treaty was in need of readjustment. But, to the humiliation of the German people, that burden was not removed from their already overburdened shoulders.

In the immediate post-war years, we stood by and watched millions of women and children starve.

Do we wonder that Germany jeers when we extend the hand of friendship now that she has arms to enforce her will?

If we have to fight, let us never forget that we in no small part were responsible for producing the disillusionment upon which Hitler capitalized.

Democracy will only be truly expressed if there is a spirit of deep comradeship between its members and reaching beyond them to the rest of mankind as potentially noble individuals. Have we not learnt above all, that these ideals are not spread by bayonets, but only by the strength and love in the characters of individuals?

Let us in these few months of grace examine our own short comings as we struggle for our ideal. Such emotional discipline is imperative if the ideals for which we are fighting are not to die even in the very hour of victory, as they did at Versailles.

If fight we must,—and heaven forbid that we shall have to,—let us learn from the Chinese, whose slogan is:—

"Fight Japanese Aggression.—
Love the Japanese People."

Can we not find homes here in Canada for some of the countless refugees; is it not worth some sacrifice on our part?

WHY NOT?

The Federal Government will increase the subsidy on Nova Scotia coal for Ontario markets. Wouldn't it be wiser strategy to widen the Canadian coal market in the Eastern States and in return allow the United States the Ontario market? Both sides would benefit by such an exchange.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THE SPIRIT itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ....

For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God. For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

For we know that the whole creation groaneth, and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. — Romans viii, 16, 17, 19-23.

WHERE NOBODY IS SAFE.

GERMANY does not seem to be a safe place for anbody to live in. What is happing to the Jews is world-wide knowledge.

Members of the Roman Catholic faith have been "cracked down" on for years. Two cardinals have recently been publicly attacked and the interiors of churches wrecked.

Protestants are not immune either. Pastor Neimoeller is still languishing in a camp somewhere. Protestant churches have been ordered to eliminate the name of Jehova and of the prophets wherever they are displayed in churches and books.

It is very doubtful that the Fueherer himself feels safe. He must know that his dictatorial methods are building up a cumulative opposition to him and live in fear that one day he will be toppled from his throne; perhaps by violent methods.

THE PUBLIC PAYROLL.

(Los Angeles Times)

ONE of sixteen persons in the United States is now regularly and permanently on the public payroll, a National Industrial Conference Board survey shows. The total being supported in regular Government jobs Federal, state and local, is now 3,590,000, not counting reliefers. The figures show that from September last to June private employment slumped 3,340,000 while 79,000 persons found new jobs with the Government.

It is not true, of course, that putting one man on the Government payroll necessarily throws 42 men out of private jobs, but there is a certain amount of casual relationship. When taxes are increased on private industry, as they must be to enable the Government to hire more men, private industry is forced to retrench somewhere, or go broke.

Home Lacking In Religion Dr. Barr Says

(By Staff Reporter)

MOUNT PLEASANT, Nov. 25.—J. S. McGill of Centreville was elected president of the Cavan and South Monaghan Sunday School Association at its annual meeting held on Thursday afternoon and evening in the United Church at Mount Pleasant.

The other members of the council for the new year are:

And the following superintendents: Children's department, Miss E. Sharpe; boys' department, Fred Barnard; girls' department, Mrs. Kenneth Syer; Missionary department, Miss Phyllis Kidd; teacher training, Miss E. Hetherington; adult department, R. C. Hanbidge; Home religion, Mrs. Garnet Shield; Young people, John Whittington; Temperance, Fred McIndoo and Gomer Robinson.

The new officers were installed by Rev. A. L. Sisco at the evening meeting. Both sessions were well attended, were animated by deep interest in the promotion of the religious life of the two townships, in the round table conference led by Leo Copp, Public School Inspector, the primary teachers' conference conducted by Mrs. E. W. Ball of Millbrook, and in the special addresses delivered by Rev. M. C. Parr during the afternoon, and by Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr and Rev. Fred Horton of Fraserville at the evening meeting. Rev. J. R. Trumpour of Cavan led the devotional exercises during the afternoon, and Garnet Shield, the retiring president, was chairman until the new officers assumed their duties with their installation by Rev. Mr. Sisco.

The relationship of youth to the church and society was a recurrent note in the deliberations of these annual sessions, and youth is prominently dedicated in the personnel of the officers who are about to carry on the work of the association in the coming year. Rev. Mr. Horton emphasized one of the thoughts of the afternoon conference in his statement that the young people coming into the Sunday Schools will look upon their teachers as the representatives of religion, "and will form their ideas of it from what they see in your lives and mine." He spoke of the power of personal influence, and cited the simple but tremendously dramatic example of the disciples of Jesus, men from the common walks of life who by the power of God turned the whole world upside down.

The Duty of Parents

The final address by Rev. Dr. Barr was a presentation to the new officers, and their associates in the work of the Sunday Schools of the two townships, of a clear outline of the challenge to them from conditions which have changed vastly in the last twenty-five years. At times adopting an incisive, epigrammatic style he incidentally defended the church and its ministry against the criticisms of people who, he said, were really trying to raise a smoke screen to cover their derelictions and sins, and he asserted, that the home, in far too many instances, had surrendered to the spirit and the mode of worldliness, and was no longer the handmaiden of the church, which it once had been when family prayer and reading of the Bible and attendance at church were the general custom.

Meanwhile, prisons were filled with law-breakers, younger by years than they used to be, mental institutions were likewise crowded and many of their inmates were persons who had broken the laws of nature and health, and taxpayers were paying increasing millions of money to meet these new costs, the products of conditions which could be more directly and effectually remedied by treating the cause in the only way it could be treated, by the application of the teachings of Jesus Christ.

Dr. Barr said that twenty years ago he had preached to a congregation of men in a penitentiary. Most of them were from 35 to 45 years old. Last summer he preached to a totally different group in the prison of St. Vincent de Paul. That group was from 18 to 22 years of age, and the contrast represented a most deplorable condition that had developed in recent times.

Homes Are Responsible

"And the responsibility lies right at our very homes," Dr. Barr asserted. "In most cases fathers and mothers are not seized of the responsibility that is laid upon them through the children they have brought into the world."

That responsibility could not be transferred to the teachers in the public and high schools, while parents gave themselves up to the whims and caprices of the hour. Citizens living in rural communities might not be aware of the extent of this problem and how it affects Canada as a whole.

Official records showed that in 1935 the number of children and young people in the juvenile courts was 45 per cent more than in the preceding year. The increase in 1936 was 50 per cent more than in 1935, and 1937 indicated a further increase.

"And all that in our splendid Canada," Dr. Barr added.

One of the main causes of juvenile delinquency to-day was the lack of effective home training and control.

"There is no use blinking the fact, the responsibility belongs to the home."

Rev. Dr. Barr said that one hour at church on Sunday, one of the 168 hours in the week, was not enough, and the short period of Sunday school, too often broken up. Too many parents were content to send their children to Sunday school, but failed to go to church with their children. How few homes he said, held family prayer, and too often the Bible was hardly ever opened.

And while all that change had been taking place, especially during the present generation, at the same time juvenile delinquency had become a tremendous social problem.

Pleasure Seekers.

"To many parents are pursuing their own personal pleasure at the expense of their children," Dr. Barr said, and amazing new inventions and facilities were used chiefly by them as means to pleasure. He spoke of homes where children arrive after four o'clock, "but it is likely to be 7 o'clock before anyone else arrives, and one of the parents, some times, not at all."

"Oh, we say the world is changed. It makes me smile when I hear people say the world is getting better and better," Dr. Barr said, and his tone intimated that there was not only a mixture of doubt and sadness behind his smile, but also a sardonic twist.

"I cannot see that the world is getting better and better, on the basis of the escalator theory that has seeped its way into the minds of a great many people—going up and up like those moving stairs you ride on in the big stores, going from one floor to another."

Dr. Barr said he could not accept that statement in the face of such facts as crowded prisons, increasing juvenile crime, and increasing numbers of unmarried mothers. "I believe in progres, yes, in spots as Jesus said."

Penal institutions are costing this country in municipal, provincial and federal taxes $750,000,000, and at the present rate of increase, juvenile delinquency will add another billion dollars more. At the same rate, one in every ten persons in Ontario is heading for either a mental or penal institution.

"Better to give a million dollars to the church for work among children than to pay in taxes and by compulsion enormous sums to look after young delinquents. It is all so stupid the things we are actually doing and paying through the nose for it."

Dr. Barr said he didn't believe there was one minister remaining in the ministry with any other motive than that he had been called to that work. The people who criticized ministers were often trying to throw up a smoke screen to hide their own faults or sins.

In conclusion he appealed to the members of the Sunday school to be steadfast in their lives, to stand by the church and its ministers, "for the church is the only agency for the redemption of man, a light shining in the midst of the degrading influences of life. See if we can't get the children's training started in the homes. Parents could make a new nation of this Canada of ours; but that can only be done by the grace of God."

Dr. Barr's final words epitomized his appeal with impressive effect as his voice was almost hushed on the words—"This great country! So well worth saving."

Bren Gun Production Exceeds Expectation

PURBROOK, Hampshire, England, Nov. 25.—(CP-Havas).—Production volume of the Bren gun has exceeded all expectations, Sir Thomas Inskip, defence coordination minister, said here last night.

"I had two days ago the fullest information as to production," Sir Thomas told the meeting in his parliamentary district, "and I thought then it was satisfactory."

"But yesterday I had the latest information on the volume of production of the Bren gun and it exceeded that which the day before I had thought satisfactory. I am sure it is a tribute to those responsible for this remarkable and complicated weapon."

The entire country is united for accelerated execution of the rearmament program, he said. In anti-aircraft defence production of projectors and balloons for barrages has been speeded up.

Chest Wheezing Means Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied with a rapid wheezing and feeling of tightness across the chest.

There is a rising of phlegm, especially in the morning: This phlegm is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses becomes yellowish or greenish, and is sometimes streaked with blood.

You will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucus, and help nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

Bruce Freeman Is Freed

"Notwithstanding the powerful argument of the crown counsel and the great importance of seeing that the illicit manufacture of liquor is prevented, I nevertheless, feel that it is of much greater importance that no person should be convicted without sufficient evidence to justify conviction," said Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court Thursday afternoon in dismissing a charge under the Excise Act against Bruce Freeburn, formerly of Bobcaygeon.

Freeman was charged with having, without a license from the Excise Department possession of 80 gallons of mash, suitable for the manufacture of spirits, without having notified the department. The mash was found by police in a vat on the bank of the Squaw River in Harvey township.

"It is a case of the very gravest suspicion," said the Magistrate after reviewing the evidence, "but the prosecution has failed to make a case that would justify me in registering a conviction."

He pointed out that there were a number of other reasonable explanations of Freeburn's presence near the spot where the mash was found.

Hon. G. N.Gordon, K.C., defended Freeburn and F. D. Kerr, K.C., prosecuted in behalf of the Department of National Revenue.

In dismissing Freeburn, Magistrate Langley said that he did so almost reluctantly.

U. S. High School Blackshirt Movement Proposes Bloodless Revolution

Oklahoma City, Nov. 25 (AP) HIGH SCHOOL officials pressed an investigation of a blackshirt student movement and its plans for a so-called "bloodless revolution" today but found the members defiant, depending on "the right of assembly and free speech to protect us."

The group, C ? C (Curiosity Club), advocates among other things, its leaders said, more liberal government and obliteration of class lines. They said there were units in Los Angeles, New York, St. Louis, Chicago and Youngstown, Ohio.

Two of the professed leaders, Milton Walser, 19, commissar, and Manford Ishmael, 18, assistant commissar, said the C ? C violated no laws "but we hope for a bloodless revolution to establish a new economic system.

"We want a new social and economic order which will provide equality for all. This probably would be based on Russian Soviet principle, but not exactly. Voting would be by prerequisities of education. We would eliminate class lines."

Concerning religion, they said: "Every member can have his own religion. However, most of us are atheists or pantheists. We think a lot of so-called Christians have doubts in the back of their minds but they're afraid to express them."

The group practices rifle and pistol shooting. The uniform consists of black shirts, black breeches and black boots. The girls dress as boys to emphasize relief in equality of sexes.

Membership here of 24 boys and nine girls was claimed by Walser and Ishmael.

Hotspurs Offer $70,500 For Matthews

LONDON, Nov. 25 (C.P. Cable).—Stanley Matthews, one of the cleverest outside-rights ever to kick a ball, is again a top-liner on English sport pages. Last year Stoke City refused the International footballer's request for a transfer and now wealthy clubs are reported to be offering record sums for his release.

But Matthews is worth his weight in gold to the Midland squad now struggling to keep out of the relegation zone of the English League's First Division and directors are turning a deaf ear to all offers. It is said Tottenham Hotspurs have raised the bid to £15,000 ($70,500) this figure being £1,000 more than the record sum Arsenal paid Wolverhampton Wanderers for Bryn Jones last summer.

The risk attending such high-priced adventures is indicated in the Arsenal's line-up to do battle at Middlesbrough in league warfare on Saturday. Jones will be missing The Welsh International is suffering from a knee injury.

Feature of Saturday's soccer card is the meeting of Leeds United and the league-leading Derby County on the former's ground. Derby has a four-point margin over the third-place Yorkshire team and a thrilling struggle for points is certain.

Another big attraction is the Stoke City-Everton encounter at Stoke. Everton is only two points behind Derby in the championship race, but has the advantage of a game in hand.

First Cup Round.

While First and Second Division clubs battle for league points, 41 of the 44 teams in the Third Division engage in the first round proper for the English Cup along with 27 minor leaguers, survivors of the tournament's qualifying rounds. Barnsley, Noots County, and York City, remaining three Third Division teams, are exempted until the third round, January 7, when major league teams enter the competition.

Some first-class contests are down for decision in Scottish League football. Rangers, the leaders, will have to play in top gear to win at Hampden Park where they play Queen's Park, victorious in five straight games. The amateurs have made a great recovery in the past month, rising from the bottom of the standing to 13th position.

Celtic has disappointed Glasgow Irishmen by averaging only a point a game in the last five matches, but a victory is likely at Arbroath, where the home team has been unsuccessful since August 27.

Armstrong Tilt $115,000 Gate?

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—(AP)—Henry Armstrong has been paid some nice compliments in the course of his mad career, but the bookmakers and the betting public have handed him his greatest one today by installing him a 2-to-3 favorite over Ceferino Garcia for their 15-round welterweight title bout tonight in Madison Square Garden.

The thousands of words written and said about Garcia's murderous punches have done nothing to shake the public's confidence in the little Negro wonder. The fact that the husky Filipino will outweigh Henry by a dozen pounds when they enter the ring is worth only a bored "so what?" from Henry's loyal rooters.

Few fighters ever have gained such a hold on the customers. Promoter Mike Jacobs says indications are that the big hall will be packed, with close to $115,000 in the till.

Army-Navy Fans Laugh Off Snow

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 25 (AP—Snow stacked several inches deep at Municipal Stadium and frigid blasts whistling between the goal posts gave prospect today of a cold, bleak setting for one of football's most glamorous games—the annual Army-Navy battle.

Snow, rain, sleet and sub-freezing temperatures slowed but failed to halt the surge of hundreds of visitors into the city. Muffled to the ears, gay in defiance of the wintery winds, they jammed hotel lobbies, railroad stations and bus terminals. More than 105,000 were expected for the kickoff.

"I'd sure love to win this game in my first year as coach," said Captain Bill Wood, Army's head coach. "I'll make no predictions, but you can bet it'll be a humdinger."

Navy's head coach, Lieut. Hank Hardwick, proclaimed the middies "in fine spirits."

MUSSING UP THE MAPLES

Reg. Dyer broke another season's record 5-pin rolling at Duffus Academy last night when a horde of 250 bowlers from the C.G.E., City, Bankers, Canada Bread, Weston's Bread and Bell Telephone leagues took a crack at the maple pins.

Dyer, trundling in the City League for the Capitol Grill, had a great night when he blasted off a 922 total for his 3 games. His performance which included a 361 single, swept away Bud Weese's 896 of a few weeks ago and places him alone in the 900 ring for this year.

Top-heavy scores were registered all along the line, Joe Marsden led with First C.G.E. League with 753 (340), George Stevens 724, Ollie Taylor 710, Charlie Low 707, Dick Pearson 699, "Lefty" Kearns 686, W. Harris 655, Emery 635, A. Spicer 650, J. Brady 641, W. Carter 640, F. Doris 640, P. Pryde 619, R. Blair 602, H. Ralph 601 and G. R. Langley 600.

From six teams of Bankers, Irwin of the Commerce tumbled off 730, Colley of the Dominion 636 and Widdess of the Montreal had a 314 single in his 631.

Weston's Bread had Elliott with 646, Dan Doe of Canada Bread 605, while Miss Barr of the Telephone girls dusted off a 216 single in her two-game workout.

The final gang of C.G.E. men eased up somewhat from a week ago, although Art Mattuci worked off 801 M. Ruiter 664 (316), J. Playford 645, J. Grierson 637, C. M. Cox 626, D. Sproule 627, D. Whatman 620, F. Wood 607, R. Clyde 603 and Tommy Miller 459 for 2 rounds.

The final standing of the first section of the City League shows the K. of C. in first place and the Capitol Grill second with Duffus and Fowler's tied for third, followed by Grafton's, Examiner, Pattenick's and I.A.C.

Hurley Is Elected Captain Of Mustangs

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP). — Alf. Hurley was last night elected captain of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs for 1939. The quarterback, who called signals for the Wild Horses during most of the successful season just closed, stood up at the annual rugby dinner in Hotel London last night, modestly accepted his election, and told a cheering crowd he expected the Mustangs to bring home a championship next year.

Prof. Nelson Hart, president of the Athletic Association, said the selection of Hurley, made by the team immediately before the dinner, had been unanimous, and "took the boys not much more than 30 seconds."

The banquet was attended by many prominent Londoners and those associated with the three rugby teams at Western—junior, intermediate and senior.

Col. Claude Brown, chairman of the Physical Education Board, praised all the Western players from the three teams, and described Bill Storen as "one of the most popular coaches of the Intercollegiate." He also had good words for Bill's first assistant, Johnny Metras and Don Wright, and Beth Forbes of the "U" band.

8-Point Drag Seen Tough Handicap As Riders Meet Argos; Nats Minus Hempey For Their Fray

The bruised, battered warriors from the camps of Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Nationals get a last chance to-morrow to do something about the Eastern football final, which is being conceded almost everywhere except Ottawa and Montreal to Toronto Argonauts and Sarnia Imperials.

Rough Riders, a half-dozen of their stars severely bruised or ill, have the advantage of home grounds for the final stand against Argos in the Interprovincial Union playoffs. But they are eight points behind from the first game while Nationals have only a point-point deficit to make up against Imperials at Sarnia.

Of the four clubs, the champion Argos are in the best condition for the desperate football bound to prevail. Clary Burt still has his broken hand in a special cast, but he will be able to play against Riders and the other injuries on the club are all minor. But with Nationals, Riders and Imperials, key men are hurt and are doubtful starters.

Hempey Out.

Hoddy Foster's Nationals, attempting to overthrow the Ontario Union champions in their first season, will be without Ernie Hempey, star flying wing and bulwark of the secondary defence, and Outside Eddie Burton. Imperials aren't much better off with the regular quarterbacks, Alex. Hayes and Arnie McWatters, not likely to see action. Jimmy Shanks, a first-year man, will handle the team.

Trip Trepanier, Pat Butler, and Kent-Stevenson, who toil along the line, aren't in top shape either, but Imperials are so pressed for reserves that the trio must play despite injuries.

Imperials remain favorites to win their eighth straight Union title, mainly because they have Hugh (Bummer) Stirling. When the Bummer, leading Eastern scorer for two seasons, is right, it's asking a lot of any club to get a four-point edge against his kicking.

Imperials won the first game in Montreal last week, 9-5, overcoming an early lead Nationals set up in the first half. Ottawa was defeated 9-1 at Toronto.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THEY EARN their dough the tough way. The rasslers, we mean. Even if we had muscles sticking out on our frail chassis like Tarzan of the Orang-outangs, we wouldn't think of taking less than a thousand per slam. A grand slam, as it were. Yet, these husky hombres will slap each other goofy anywhere up to an hour for a week's board. And they don't live in any 16-room mansions on Rue Easy, either. They actually like the mat game and crave the roar of the crowd. So they'll battle away night after night in that crazy man-killing game known as rasslin' for what you will make on the job in two days. All except the topnotchers in the grapple business. For a positive fact and we'll swear in on a stack of dictionaries—to anyone but an Amateur Union official—we've known grapple gees here to batter each other hard for an hour, emerging with a black eye, several skin bruises and maybe cut up a bit, too. Not counting all the slams, hair-pulling, kicking, etc., which left no mark. And they'd be paid off at 10 slugs per each! We'll take less dough, and a whole lot less punishment, any time.

STILL the merry mat matadors give all they have wherever they meet in the ring. They dish up plenty of hot action. It may be rehearsed but they still take a whole lot of punishment in the course of a tough bout. And ya gotta give 'em credit for a few things. One is their superb condition—all rasslers looking the spitting image of an Adonis, Hercules or Vulcan. Really beautifully muscled bodies. Another is their willingness to meet anyone anywhere for any sort of coin. And at any time. They are easy to handle, not demanding this and that in the way of accommodation, equipment and pay, and they seldom seem to be mixed up in criminal offences. Not a bad bunch of athletes. And the fans sure love to see them doing their stuff with all the frills. Despite small purses, the grapplers seem to be getting by better than the high-priced boxers. They definitely have fan interest, as roof-raising roars at the whirlwind mat action will testify.

ALL OF WHICH leads up to announcement of the Riverview A.C. mat show here tonight at 8.30 in the Brock. Topping the three-bout show is The Mask, a hooded horror from Winnipeg, who tackles Buck Moffatt of Mt. Denis. Semi-final sees Rene LaBelle and Ren Gazelley of Toronto in a return fray. Prelim is betwixt Tiger Jack Cox of Toronto and Scotty McKenzie of Amherst. All are experienced heavies and will shoot the works. One fall in the first or 30 minutes, two out of three or 45 minutes in the semi-windup, and two in three with an hour limit for the main eeeevent of the eeeeeve. Local mat fans ought to see a right lively card this p.m. in the Brock St. Winter Gardens.

PERCY BOND, just back from the amateur conclave in Fort William, is making inquiries as to reviving amateur boxing through Central Ontario. The new president of the Central Ontario branch of the A.A.U. of C. knows it will be a tough task, and may take some time, but hopes to get various centres in this section of the province interested again in amateur pug cards. Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville, Trenton and Kingston have in the past produced considerable mitt-slinging, but there are other spots, too. Like the Lakeshore circuit of towns. Mr. Bond recently met Coach Pick Hines of the Baltimore Orioles at Pimlico, and the ex-pilot of the Petes' puckists asked to be remembered to his Peterborough friends. Hines said he was getting fine support in Baltimore and expected his team to do okay.

OSHAWA SCRIVENER is taking a leaf out of Toronto scorers' book and generously handing out O.H.A. senior "A" assists to the GM-men. Brantford writer recently says Mr. Campbell did all he could the other night to help his crew. "One of the ice scrapers," says he, "fell over the side in his excitement, and it nearly earned him an assist on a goal." Come on, Petes, how much are we offered?

SIX TEAMS ENTERED the VanHorne puck series in Kingston, a sort of pre-season independent loop which is valuable for conditioning clubs for later O.H.A. competition. They are Belleville, Trenton Fliers, Queen's, Kingston City, Perth and Garrisons. They start tonight and run a single schedule with playoffs, ending Jan. 6th or so. In this way, some of the clubs which may be grouped with the Petes in an O.H.A. league—squads like the Redmen, Fliers and Kingston—will have an edge on the locals in condition, same as last season. But if the Petes go in hard for gym drills till there is ice (and that should be soon), the locals ought to soon catch 'em once the schedule starts. They did last year. Incidentally, some of the boys were on the ice at the canal last eve between the Liftlock and high bridge—though the frozen surface is by no means a foot thick as yet.

THERE WILL BE NO Church Cage Loop this year, the executive giving up the ghost last eve when but two teams, St. Paul's and St. John's, applied for entry in the junior division. While seven squads wanted in the circuit, they were spread over three divisions and financial obligations made it unwise to run runty schedules. It is the first time in eight years this minor basketball organization has failed to operate, lack of interest by teams being the cause. It is a disappointment t othe executive which worked hard to keep the league rolling. Considerable cage interest is apparent in the Senior City Basketball League with C.G.E., St. Paul's, Quakers and Dominions all prospective entries, and a group of ex-P.C.I. players talking of another entry. More later on this.

ASIDE FROM REPORTS on the Nats-Imps' playoff in Sarnia, the only interest Peterborough grid fans have tomorrow is the sudden-death playoff for the O.R.F.U. intermediate "A" title in Cobourg. The Galloping Ghosts tangle with Sarnia Wanderers at 2.30 in Horse Show Park, tariff being half a slug. The Ghosts, who provided such tough opposition for our intermediate "A" Orfuns last fall, and gave the senior Orfuns a real scrap early this season, will battle their heads off against the tough Wanderers from the Tunnel Town. Prexy Duffton's bunch, coached by Chuck Peck, won "B" honors in '37 and will be really accomplishing something if they cop the "A" flag in 1938. Joe Begley, with Orfuns a year ago, plays for Cobourg now. It ought to be a dandy football fray, and we'd advise local fans to motor down the line and see the fun. • • • • •

Church Cagers Disband Loop

At an executive meeting of the Church Basketball League last night in the Y.M.C.A., it was decided to disband for this season owing to the lack of entries. Just two junior clubs applied for entry, St. John's and St. Paul's. The former team was anxious to play as it planned to enter O.C.B.A. juvenile playdowns and wanted the local competition first. St. Paul's also desired this grouping, but financial obligations decided the officials against operating with so few teams. A total of seven teams applied this fall, but they were spread over three loop sections.

Disbanding of the league, the first time in eight years of play at the "Y," was a disappointment to the executive officers who worked hard but found little interest among prospective teams. President Gord Clegg and Secretary-Treasurer Don Charlton (who held that office since the league organized) were reluctant to drop operations, but felt nothing else could be done for this season. They hope interest can be revived to resume operations in the Church Basketball League next year.

Jockey Club Officers

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—At the annual general meeting of the Ontario Jockey Club held yesterday the following were elected directors for 1938-39: A. E. Dyment, George M. Hendrie, Col. K. R. Marshall, Allen Case, Col. R. S. McLaughlin, G. Harrison Smith, I. E. Smallman, J. E. Prowde Seagram.

At a meeting of the directors held subsequent to the annual general meeting, the following officials were re-elected for the ensuing year: President, A. E. Dyment; Vice-President, George M. Hendrie; Secretary-Treasurer, Palmer Wright.

Olexy Captures Berwick Grind

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 25. (A.P.)—Pete Olexy of Lansford, Pa., former Penn State luminary and now coach of freshman track, used his long legs to advantage on Thursda to win the ninth renewal of the Berwick Marathon by five yards over Lou Gregory, veteran of New York City's Millrose Athletic Association.

Olexy covered the course of 9 miles 257 yards in 51 minutes 25 seconds. The course was covered with snow and the athletes ran in the face of a heavy snow storm.

First of five Canadians to finish was Lloyd Longman of Toronto, who wound up sixth.

Canadians Buy Three Racers At Old Glory

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—(CP).—Two pacers and a yearling trotter were sold yesterday to two Canadian horseman as the 44th annual Old Glory horse auction concluded here. One of the pacers was a 2-year-old, the other seven years.

Joseph Drolet of Montreal purchased the papers. He paid $325 for Highland Worthy, consigned by Robert Hoeffner of Montgomery, N.Y., and bid $185 for Earls Little Miss, 2-year-old runner from the consignment of Claude W. Spears, Lexington, Ky.

Frank Adams of Halifax, N.S., won the bidding at $350 on Watchim, bred by the H. Stacy Smith estate, Newark, N.J. Watchim is by Volomite out of Cita Worthy by Guy Axworthy. Altogether 181 head were disposed of for $102,400, an average of $566.

Sale of Edgar Hanover, a yearling bay trotter, for $8,100 featured the final day of the two-day auction. Son of Calumet Chuck out of Hanover's Bertha by Peter Volo, the star of the Hanover Shoe Farms consignment was purchased by Billie Dickerson for E. Roland Harriman of Goshen, N.Y.

It was the highest price recorded for a Hanover yearling since Lawrence Hanover was bid in at $6,800 in 1933.

Total receipts were considerably lower than in 1937. In the sale just completed, 181 head were sold for $102,400, an average of $566 per horse. Last year's gross was $206,710 for 226 head, an average of $914.

Another big sale was registered when Doctor Baker, consigned from the H. Stacey Smith estate, and by Volomite out of Lady Tipon by Guy Axworthy, was knocked down for $3,900 to the Arden Homestead Stable, Goshen.

Leafs Let Rangers Down Them 6-2 Canadiens Tie Amerks 2-2 Wings Beat Hawks, Lose Conacher

By Jack Calder

Just as Detroit Red Wings were regaining the punch of their National Hockey League championship years, Charlie Conacher's old injury jinx had to come along and damage a main cog in their comeback plans.

Conacher was carried from the ice before the Wings began to score in their 4-2 victory over the world champion Chicago Black Hawks at Detroit last night. The extent of the leg and shoulder injuries to Big Chuck—one of the heaviest, most brilliant and yet most unfortunate men in the game—remains to be determined today.

But no matter what the X-ray pictures say, the fact remains that Conacher has been lost to the Wings while the teams up front are setting a torrid pace in their bitter struggle for first place. Then, too, the last-place Montreal Canadiens, after seven straight defeats, may finally be knocking on the sixth-place Detroiters' door.

Rangers Take Lead

New York Rangers took a one-point lead at the top over Chicago, Boston and New York Americans last night by trimming Toronto 6-2 at New York. Canadiens registered their first point of the campaign by tying Americans 2-2 at Montreal.

A collision with Phil Besler, Black Hawks rookie, forced Conacher out in the second period. The injury to the right winger with the smoking shot was listed beside a shoulder hurt he suffered earlier in the season and a string of fractures, sprains and bruises he ran into during his years with Toronto. An internal injury he suffered early in his career played a part in his sale to Detroit this fall.

Shortly after he went out while leading a five-man offensive, the Wings got a chance to strike again. This time, with Alex Levinsky of Chicago serving a penalty, Mud Bruneteau paced the team. He scored after 18 minutes of the second and helped Syd Howe in another goal 46 seconds later.

Joffre Desilets scored for the Hawks as the third began but rookie Syd Abel made Detroit's margin 3-1 and Syd Howe extended it by another goal with seven minutes to play. Paul Thompson finished the scoring for Chicago and Bruneteau's penalty shot was saved by Goalie Mike Karakas in the dying moments.

A Thanksgiving day crowd of 14,000 turned out at New York to watch young Bryant Hextall score twice and add three assists in Rangers' victor, for the most spectacular individual exhibition of the season.

Rookie Dutch Hiller got two goals and an assist and Phil Watson three assists to stamp the Hextall-Hiller-Watson line as one of the N.H.L.'s best in its first year.

Broda's Average Tumbles

The great-goals-against average Turk Broda of the Maple Leafs had been compiling was knocked skyhigh by the Ranger barrage, but it was not fault of the Turk's. He had to take time out for repairs twice and no easy shots escaped him. Pep Kelly and Murph Chamberlain scored for the Leafs and Muzz Patrick was the Blueshirts' other goal-getter.

Canadiens, after absorbing a 7-3 beating from the Americans at New York Tuesday, stepped into a 2-0 lead in the first period in the return engagement on goals by Paul Haynes and Rod Lorrain. But their crushing defensive tactics and forward-line speed wore out as Tommy Anderson scored a goal in each of the second and third periods. The overtime was uneventful.

There was hope for the Habitants in the play of a couple of replacements, George Brown and Gus Mancuso who came up from New Haven of the International-American league to work for a couple of slumping forwards, Jimmy Ward and Johnny Gagnon.

Six Grapplers On Card Here

Six high-ranking Canadian amateur heavyweight wrestlers will appear on the mat program here tonight (Friday) in the Brock St. arena, starting at 8.30 o'clock. The show is being staged by the local Riverview A. C. with Promoter Charlie Kumpf bringing down the grapplers from Toronto. Their headquarters is in Toronto, but the grapple artists hail from widely-separated places. In a show which should last some two hours, plenty of furious action is likely, and the sponsors of the card guarantee three excellent bouts of a crowd-pleasing nature. At popular prices, and recalling the number of mat fans in Peterborough, the wrestling display here tonight ought to draw a good crowd of both sexes.

In the main bout, two out of three falls wit an hour time limit. The Mask, Winnipeg's mystery man, 185, tackles the tough Buck Moffatt, 180, of Mount Denis. The semi-final, two in three falls or 45 minutes, sees Rene LeBelle, 190, and Ren Gazelley, 185, Toronto battlers, mix it in a return local engagement. The prelim is a one-fall affair or 30 minutes, between Tiger Jack Cox, 175, the Toronto Tornado, and Scotty MacKenzie, 182, of Amherst, N.S. All these matmen are experienced and likely to stage an exciting show.

Leading Figures In Battle For O.R.F.U. Crown

Sarnia Imperials will be shooting for their eighth straight Union crown when they meet Montreal Nationals in Sarnia on Saturday in the second game of their two-game total-point series for the championship of the O.R.F.U. The Nats, newcomers to the loop this year, will be out to bring their first year to a glorious wind-up. There's not enough space to present the entire cast of characters taking part, but here are some of the players in the leading roles. At the LEFT, two of the outstanding figures on the Canadian football scene, both unanimous choices for the O.R.F.U. all-star team, TOP, Bummer Stirling, ace of the Imps, and LOWER, Johnny Ferraro, the Nats' best. Next to the Bummer is Trip Trepanier, diminutive Saria inside wing, and top RIGHT, Jack Wickware, another inside, who missed the first playoff clash, but is expected to be out for this one. Along the bottom, next to Ferraro, is Ed. Barnabe, quarterback for the ambitious Montrealers, and RIGHT, Tommy Burns, hard-hitting middle wing who has been playing this year up to the form he used to display for Argonauts and M.A.A.A. in the Big Four.

McGill Will Lose Westman But Strong Man Coming Up

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

With the 1938 rugby playoffs still in full swing it is a trifle early to discuss the outlook for 1939. But one section of the present campaign has been neatly placed on the shelf until next fall, that of the inter-collegiate footballers. Students at McGill, Western Ontario, Queen's and University of Toronto have packed away their grid togs and are now concentrating on their studies.

"Pop" Kerr

Enjoying one of the best years any team in the union ever had, McGill's Redmen carried off the college crown after a stirring playoff with Western, and with but one defeat on their record, put there by their playoff opponents, they left no doubt as to the rightful wearers of the crown. But what about next year? Will Coach Kerr suffer the same fate that befell Teddy Reeve at Queen's? Champions of the group in 1937, the Kingston academy's team was wrecked by graduations, and 1938 was a disastrous season. Of course that's the way in college circles where the students insist on passing their exams and depriving rugby coaches of their best men.

Kerr Loses Ten

And Coach Kerr? Well, when practice begins in 1939 there will be just 10 members of this year's championship team who won't be answering the roll call, their search for knowledge at an end. All 10 this year's regulars. Missing from the backfield will be Herbie Westman, Ronnie Perowne and Ernie Rossiter. From the line, snap Prestie Robb, captain Lou Ruschin, Andy Anton, Bob Kenny, Chip Drury, Joey Jacobson and Jimmy Hall.

"Pop" Kerr, the noted "Gloomy Gus" of football masterminding circles, might be expected to turn even a deeper shade of blue. Even the most optimistic supporter of the Montreal institute won't claim that replacements for players of the calibre of those leaving can be picked up any day in the week. And they more than likely won't. But there is a trace of silver lining in the McGill outlook. This year, for the first time in 38 long seasons, the McGill intermediate squad carried off top honors in the Quebec Rugby Football Union. And in doing so, uncovered some stars that are expected to shine brightly in the senior intercollegiate firmament in 1939.

Outstanding with the intermediates was Perry Foster, kicking half. In Herbie Westman, McGill's 1938 champions boasted the best kicker in the rah rah ranks, and one of the best in the country. Herbie's mammoth punts were responsible for more than one of the Redmen's wins and the loss of a player of his ability would be in itself a disastrous blow. And it may be, but in Perry Foster the Montrealers have a worthy successor to the mighty Westman. His booting in the second team's games was of the 50 and 60 yard variety that warms the heart of any coach.

And A Payoff Runner

Playing alongside Foster on the half line or in the flying wing position was Norman Cuke, a twisting, side-stepping runner who ran many a yard through the open field for the seconds in their race for the title. The kind of a player who can go places around the end of the line or after grabbing one of the team's passes.

With Russ Merifield, one of the greatest catching halfbacks in the business, and plunging Bob Keefer back in the ranks next year, the McGill backfield is going to be one big problem for Messrs. Reeve, Storen and Stevens next year.

Whether this year's alternates and the intermediate titlists will be able to supply adequate replacements in the line, or someone to call the signals the way Ronnie Perowne did, is problematic, but the O.R.F.U. champs didn't come down in front with just Foster and Cuke on the field, so there should be some strong replacements from end to centre.

"What's the matter with old McGill?" The question was answered very emphatically this past season and next year's squad may come right back at the opposition with the same answer.

Amateur Prexy Boosts Boxing

Percy Bond of Peterborough, newly-elected president of the Central Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, has hopes of reviving amateur boxing in this part of the province. Returning from the Dominion meeting of the A.A.U. of C. in Fort William, Mr. Bond yesterday told the Examiner that if sufficient interest in the amateur mitt game could be shown in this district, the Union would make efforts to line up zones throughout Ontario. Winners of zones would then be drawn against each other at the end of the year to declare champions of Ontario in the various weight divisions.

"We may be bucking against a stone wall," stated the past president of the O.H.A. and member of the C.A.H.A., "but such an orderly arrangement should be possible, and we intend to look into it. I understand there is considerable boxing interest in Peterborough, and there has been some in the past in Lindsay, but a number of other Central Ontario points must be contacted with a view toward encouraging a boxing comeback." Mr. Bond said other Union officials in Ontario would do their part and would even check on centres in this district if a real revival were indicated. He felt it might take time but was a probable development, and would be a good thing for the game.

HONOR VETERAN COACH

BIRMINGHAM, England—(CP).—Sidney Santall, recently-resigned coach of Warwickshire county cricket club after 47 years' association, will be given a testimonial by the club.

Sarnia Imps Crippled Up For The Nats

SARNIA, Ont., Nov. 25—Tape is a thing most in demand in the Sarnia Imperials' dressing room these days. And yards and yards of it are being used on the damaged players who came out of last Saturday's game with injuries.

Alex Hayes, the light but decidedly valuable quarterback who has suffered all season from a bad ankle, has torn the muscles in his hip now and is a very doubtful starter against Montreal Nationals this week-end.

Trip Trepanier has a cracked rib but it is doubtful if this injury will keep the inside-wing out of action. Bill Schultz is another player who will probably play in spite of injuries. Bill has a bad shoulder but is expecting to see action against the Nationals.

Pat Butler, with a badly sprained ankle, may not go into this Saturday's struggle. The rest of the team is badly battered but are no worse—if reports are to be believed—than the Nationals are.

Last night Coach Art Massucci had his boys out to practice but he didn't do much in the way of putting them through the mill. Some defense against the powerful forward passing of Ferraro is being built and the Imperials' line is being taught how to make bigger and beter holes

Moroz, Golab Fit

Bernie Moros and Tony Golab, who are usually to be found at the head of the casualty list, are both uninjured and—if they remain that way—should see plenty of action in the coming game

All the grandstand seats are taken for Saturday and, judging by the way bleacher seats were selling today, a capacity crowd should witnes sthe windup of the senior O.R.F.U. championship games.

Nats Practice

MONTREAL, Nov. 25—Facing a four-point deficit in their final bid for the O.R.F.U. crown, Montreal's Nationals stuck to brisk signal drills last night as Coach Hoddy Foster directed another preparatory workout for the second clash Saturday of a home-and-home titular series with Sarnia.

The Nationals, beaten 9-5 here last week, drew cheer from selection of their number for places on The Canadian Press all star union team.

"If six of our men are good enough for All-Star rating, then there is no reason why we can't overcome the four-point lead held by Imperials," said Tommy Burns, powerful middle who gained a post on the "dream squad."

Captain Ernie Hempey and Ed Burton, All-Stars flying-wing and outside-wing respectively, will remain on the sidelines Saturday. The pair were injured last week with Punter Ray Mullins, whose bruised thigh is expected to round into shape for the Sarnia game.

COSTS FINNS MONEY

HELSINKI, Finland—(CP).—Approximately $142,500 will be necessary to ensure fully representative Finnish teams to the 1940 Olympic Games here, and winter sports at St. Moritz. Nearly $19,000 has already been provided.

Leafs' Goaler

Off to a great start this season is Turk Broda, above, net-minder for Toronto Maple Leafs. Playing behind a team that specializes in wide open play, Turk has allowed by 10 pucks to slip in behind him in eight games and on the road has been scored on only twice in four tilts.

An official report says that British soldiers at Simla, India, are drinking less alcohol and more milk.

Wrestling

(By The Associated Press)

Boston—Danno O'Mahoney, 230, Ireland, and The Shadow, 226, both counted out during third fall.

Toronto—Steve (Crusher) Casey, 225, defeated Dutch Heffner, 248, Texas, straight falls.

Highway From Snows Of Alaska To Wilds Of Patagonia Emerges From Dream Stage

By Andrue Berding
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (AP)—A highway starting in the northern snows of Alaska and ending in the southern snows of Patagonia is gradually emerging from the dream state.

Along 12,000 miles of road, if the dream comes true, automobiles some day may go from Canada and the United States to the 20 republics of Latin America.

A report to the pan-American conference next month will show that great progress has been made since the last conference at Montevideo five years ago. Great tracts of the highway are in operation. You can drive from a point considerably north in Canada through the United States, through Mexico City toward Guatemala.

Canada recently has taken a direct interest in travel facilities between the Americas and Premier Pattullo of British Columbia has conferred in Washington recently about the proposed highway south from Alaska through British Columbia.

In the southern part of the hemisphere a highway runs across the Andes between Argentina and Chile. Argentina and Uruguay are connected by a road and ferry, and Uruguay is linked with Brazil by a highway.

In the northern part of South America the Bolivar highway links the capitals of Venesuela, Colombia and Ecuador. In Peru the delegates to the pan-American conference will see intense road building activity, extending highways north and south as well as into the interior.

The huge increase in tourist traffic between the United States and Mexico which followed the opening of the highway from Laredo, Texas, to Mexico City two years ago has called to the attention of other Latin American states the profit to be gained from the United States automobile tourist trade.

STOMACH PAINS Make Life Misery

Imagine a quarter of a century of constant stomach trouble—and then, at last, glorious relief, appetite regained, stomach made strong! That was the experience of Mrs. B. A. B., De Villier St., Montreal. "No treatment was successful," she writes, "and my life was a misery with nervous stomach and gastric trouble." Her recovery began from the first day she began taking Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. "Now," she writes, "my stomach is stronger, and I eat things I never dreamed I could eat."

The four powerful alkalies in Maclean Brand Stomach Powder are exactly those prescribed in stomach cases by specialists. These alkalies, in perfect balance, neutralize excess acidity at once and put a protective coating over the inflamed stomach walls. Let Maclean Brand Stomach Powder help you. Be sure to ask for Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, which is only genuine if the signature "Alex. C. Maclean" appears on bottle and carton. Sold only in bottles in cartons, 75c, family size $1.75. Never sold loose. 122

Forest Fires Ravage Homes

Sweeping across the San Monica and San Bernardino ranges, two disastrous forest fires destroyed 600 homes, doing property damage estimated at $3,000,000. Many palatial homes owned by movie stars were wiped out as their owners were forced to flee before the raging flames.

Lakefield Friends Hold Shower For Belleville Newlyweds

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 25.—A shower in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Kemp (nee Alma Wilson of Belleville) whose marriage took place recently, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kemp, Lakefield, on Tuesday evening last. About fifty friends of the couple from Buckhorn, Peterborough, Young's Point and Lakefield were present.

The guests were received by Mrs. Herbert Kemp when they arrived at 8 p.m.

About 8.30 p.m. the guests-of-honor and other present were surprised by the arrival by motor of a psuedo-bridal party. The bride, attired in comic costume and carrying a cabbage for a bridal bouquet, entered the room on the arm of her father and marched up the aisle to the tune of Lohengrin's Wedding March. Mrs. William Millage acting as clergyman officiated during a mock wedding ceremony which was very amusing. The chief actors in the farce were Miss Jean Blewett, the bride; Miss Pat Earnshaw, the groom; Miss Jean Kingdon, bridesmaid; Miss Sybil Lennox, groomsman and Mrs. William Millage, minister. All were dressed in comic costume and they created a lot of fun. Miss Eva Hendren played the wedding march.

Following the ceremony, Miss Kingdon led the "bride and groom" to the table where the miscellaneous gifts were arranged. Then asking Mr. and Mrs. E. Kemp to take the places of the mock bride and groom. She asked the couple to accept the gifts on behalf of those present.

Mrs. Kemp spoke briefly and Mr. Kemp added words of appreciation to the thanks expressed by the bride for the very lovely gifts received.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and dancing.

W.M.S. Meeting

The annual thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Lakefield United Church was held on Wednesday evening, in the Sunday school room of the church.

A religious drama, presented by the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kelly and Mr. Robert Spence was the main item on the program. It was an excellent scriptural play teaching what a vital mistake people make when they get the idea that making money is the most important thing in life; and it pointed out how often persons lose opportunities that come to them to help others. "When He knocks, open the door and feel the joy of living."

Mrs. W. J. Charlton read the scripture lesson from Mark X, 17-24 and Luke XVI, 38-42, the stories of the Rich Young Ruler and of Mary and Martha. Mrs. Charlton gave a talk on the scripture.

Mrs. W. W. Yale led in prayer. She gave thanks for our natural blessings; for peace; for the pioneers to whom we owe a great debt; and for our natural resources.

Mrs. Percy Darling gave a reading, "Mrs. Osborne's Awakening"; and Messrs. W. W. Yale, Don Yale and Stewart Loyst sang the selection, "Speed Away," as a trio. At this point the thankoffering was received and Mrs. G. E. Renwick offered the dedicatory prayer.

Mrs. Walter Hamlin and Mrs. MacMillan sang a duet, "Go And Tell To All the Gospel Story." The singing of the Doxology and the Mizpah Benediction brought the service to a close.

Euchre Party

A very enjoyable and successful euchre party was held in the Parish Hall on Tuesday under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. Eight table were played.

The ladies' first prize went to Miss Margaret Hynes and the ladies' consolation to Mrs. Darcy Hill. A tie resulted in the playing for the gent's first, between Mr. Martin Sullivan and Mr. William Armstrong. A play-off resulted in the prize going to Mr. Sullivan. The gent's consolation was won by Mr. Charles Armstrong.

Keen interest was shown in the drawing for the pair of chickens which was run off that evening. Little Miss B. Trude made the draw of a ticket held by Mr. Kenneth Reid.

86 Cows In Stayner End Milkman Foil Pasteurization

Stayner, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP).

THE RAW MILK problem has been solved in Stayner by a number of citizens purchasing cows for their own use. A minister has a Jersey cow to supply milk for his own family. Some neighbors have formed a partnership and bought a cow. Some one has counted no less than 86 cows in town. When the pasteurization law came into effect a local dairyman was forced out of business.

Report On Murder

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 25—(CP)—Complete report of police investigation into the slaying of 64-year-old Captain F. J. Cameron on Cameron's Island, 12 miles east of here in the St. Lawrence River, last Monday was handed to Crown Attorney J. G. Harkness yesterday.

A. W. Nichol, chief clerk of the Ontario Attorney General's Department, will arrive here to-day to institute extradition proceedings to return Dan MacDonald from Franklin County Jail, Malone, N.Y., to Canada to face trial on a murder charge.

Well-Filled Box

CHICAGO, Nov. 25 —(AP)— The thief who broke into the poor box in St. Peter's Catholic Church apparently had anticipated the faithful would fill the box with Thanksgiving Day contributions. He was correct. The Rev. Lealander Conley told police there was $100 in the box.

May, June Fishing Law Termed Joke

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Nov. 25.—H. H. McKay, Provincial biologist in the Department of Game and Fisheries, was the guest speaker at the annual dinner of the Victoria Yacht and Anglers' Association Wednesday night. He spoke on the subject, "How to Improve Fishing in Kawartha Lakes," and claimed that the legislation which permits fishing from an anchored boat from May 16 to June 19 was a joke, and is inconsistent with the idea of fish conservation. He appealed to those present to use their influence in having this legislation rescinded. There should be a closed season, he claimed, on all fishing during the spawning season of bass and lunge.

The death occurred in Toronto on Wednesday of Mrs. Edna Fraser, widow of the late Dominic Fraser of Lindsay, and formerly of Peterborough. Mrs. Fraser was born in Bethany and recently conducted a ladies' wear establishment in Lindsay. She is survived by her parents and one sister. Interment takes place from the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, Toronto, on Saturday to Mount Hope Cemetery.

Owen Teevin, aged 77 years, an old resident of Ops Township, died in Lindsay on Wednesday, following a stroke. He was unmarried and is survived by one brother, Thomas Teevin, of Lindsay.

Vegetable Growers Oppose Trade Pact

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—At an executive meeting of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association held here, the present tariff situation was discussed, stated Charles Williams, vice-president, last night. It was agreed the new Canada-U.S. trade agreement which has just been signed will very greatly increase the hazards of an industry which was already in serious difficulty as a result of the 1935 trade agreement.

American acreage figures for vegetables show a marked increase in recent years. Unit prices have been much reduced and total revenues also reduced.

The 1935 Canada-U.S. trade agreement brought about a serious reduction in both tariff and seasonal protection. This is evidenced by the serious financial condition of most growers during the past three years.

That the trade agreement just signed with its further serious reductions in both tariff and seasonal protection will make it impossible to produce vegetables in Ontario on a commercial basis, is the firm belief of all those present.

Henry Ford To Invest In Manchoukuo?

TOKYO, Nov. 25.—(CP-Havas).—An agreement in principle has been reached whereby Henry Ford will invest capital in Manchoukuo's automobile industry, the newspaper Nichi Nichi reported to-day.

The report said the understanding was between Ford and the Manchoukuo Heavy Industry Company, a sister company of the Nissan concern of Japan.

General Shichi Asahara, director of the Manchoukuo firm, is leaving for the United States in mid-December to negotiate the details of the deal, the newspaper said.

Prospecting Tips To Be Revealed

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 25. — "Prospectors' Classes," under the auspices of the Ontario Department of Mines, will be conducted during next week in the Havelock Town Hall. Local mineralogists will be afforded the opportunity of obtaining a general knowledge of the identification, mode of occurrence, and value of ores, minerals and rocks, during the afternoon classes. The evening lectures deal with the formation of rocks and mineral deposits, and the geology of the prospecting areas and mining camps of Ontario.

This training course for prospectors will be under the direction of Dr. W. D. Harding, an eminent mineralogist. The afternoon classes will be held from 2 to 4 p.m., and the evening lectures at 8 p.m., illustrated by lantern slide. All classes are free of charge, and any adult is eligible to attend, while a set of sixty specimens is supplied to each student.

This section of Ontario is particularly favored by nature in its distribution of minerals of many kinds, and a knowledge obtained by attending these classes might well be the means of some valuable mines being discovered right at our doorstep.

The second degree was conferred upon a candidate at the regular weekly meeting of the Havelock I.O.O.F. on Wednesday evening by the local Degree team, with Bro. Harry Ferguson, N.G., the Degree master. The first degree was conferred at the previous meeting by the first degree team, with Bro. Charles Taylor as degree master. Both degrees were exemplified in a very excellent manner.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the meeting by the members of the Lodge.

A Dog Mystery

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Nov. 25.—(AP)—The cocker spaniel stranded in Niagara gorge at the foot of the United States side was rescued unharmed yesterday, while officials puzzled over how the dog arrived at the spot. They guessed the spaniel had either been carried over the falls or had fallen down the towering cliff. After 20 hours of intermittent rescue attempts, the animal was coaxed into the window of a covered sight-seeing stairway.

Highest Assets Since 1929 Are Reported

Showing assets at the highest point since 1929, the Bank of Montreal's annual financial statement just issued contains numerous features which indicate a steady expansion in operations during the past twelve months. Not only does the statement show that the Bank has maintained its traditionally strong position but the figures reveal a year of progress in all the main channels of the Bank's business, with assets up by over $44,000,000 bringing the total to $874,255,828, the highest in any year since 1929. The liquid position of the Bank is shown by quickly available resources which total $620,335,119, or 77.80% of all liabilities to the public.

Notable is the substantial increase in loans, which, exclusive of call money, amount to $227,000,000 as compared with $204,000,000 a year ago. Call loans in Canada show a slight decrease compared with those of 1937, while abroad they are a million and a half dollars higher at $21,493,000.

Deposits and Bond Holdings Increased

Increases are also noted in both deposits and holdings of Government and other bonds and debentures. The former are up from $717,000,000 to $763,000,000, while the bond holdings total $440,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000.

The statement shows that the Bank, which has just entered its 122nd year, has maintained its liquid position, with quickly available resources amounting to $620,000,000. This figure shows an increase of more than $21,000,000 as compared with a year ago. In addition to the Government securities, included under this heading are cash resources amounting to $152,000,000 represented by money in the Bank's vaults, on deposit with other banking institutions and notes and cheques on other banks payable on demand.

The Bank's assets, which amount to $874,255,828, show an increase of $44,000,000 as compared with 1937, and the excess of assets over liabilities to the public, representing the shareholders' equity, amounts to $76,916,337.

Profits Slightly Down

In the matter of profits, while the statement shows a reduction of $10,000, it is to be noted that the payment of Dominion and Provincial Government taxes has increased substantially from $942,957 to $1,152,618, leaving a profit of $3,398,390 which is equivalent to 4.46% of the capital, rest and undivided profits. From this amount was paid in dividends to shareholders $2,880,000, and $500,000 was set aside as an appropriation for bank premises, leaving a balance to be carried forward of $18,390. This, added to the balance at October 30, 1937, leaves the balance in profit and loss at $1,183,254.

Total Assets	874,255,828	829,633,950
Cash Assets	152,540,082	134,610,309
Liquid Assets	620,335,119	599,051,153

Grim Farewell

Hans Dieckhoff, German ambassador to the United States, who sailed for his homeland upon orders from Chancellor Hitler, is shown leaving the state department building in Washington after a farewell call on Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The latter granted him a two-minute interview and reported covering the event, said Dieckhoff entered smiling, but left looking quite grim. He is to report to high Nazi officials on the United States' "strange" attitude toward Germany's anti-Semitic campaign.

OBITUARY

EDWARD NOLAN
(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 25.—Councillor in the township of Elzevir for the past fourteen years, Edward Nolan died at his home, one mile west of Actinolite on Thursday. Born in the county of Lanark, near Perth, Mr. Nolan had resided in the County of Hastings for thirty-five years. He had been in ill health for the past year and a half.

He was a successful farmer, a member of the Roman Catholic church at Queensboro, and a Liberal in politics.

MISS GLADYS JOHNSON
(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 25—After an illness of three weeks' duration, Miss Gladys Johnson, Eldorado, passed away on Wednesday at the Belleville General Hospital.

The late Miss Johnson was born in the township of Tudor County of Hastings, and for a considerable time she resided at Eldorado. Her parents were Mr. Harry A. Johnson and the late Mrs. Johnson. Her vocation was that of a practical nurse. In religion Miss Johnson was a member of the Standard Church at Eldorado.

CHARLES SANGER MINNIE
(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 25—The death occurred at his home, Actinolite, of Charles Sanger Minnie, after an illness of three years. Born in the township of Elzevir, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Minnie, he had lived in this immediate vicinity all his life where he followed the occupation of farming. The late Mr. Minnie was a member of the United church and was a Conservative in politics.

Remaining are the following family: May, Annie, Norah, Guy, Fern, Gordon, Marie, Harry and Margaret, all at home. His wife passed away several years ago.

The funeral was held on Wednesday from his home to Actinolite cemetery, where the service was conducted by Rev. Snelgrove. The bearers were Archie Eager, Frank Reid, John Kleinsteuber, Theodore Kleinsteuber, David Lockwood, and John Clark.

MARTHA JANE PEEL.
(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Nov. 25.— One of Janetville's most prominent and beloved citizens in the person of Mrs. John Peel died early Sunday morning, November 20th in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay.

Mrs. Peel was the widow of William John Peel, who passed away 28 years ago and before her marriage fifty years ago was Martha Jane Bradburn, second daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Bradburn, pioneer residents of this community.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Peel sold her farm and moved to the vilalge to the house next door to the parsonage, where she resided for the past 26 years.

Mrs. Peel, who was in her 74th year, had enjoyed a lifetime of excellent health until this fall, and two weeks ago, feeling much better went to Reaboro to visit friends. She was suddenly stricken with a paralytic stroke on Sunday morning after returning from church at Omemee and was removed to Lindsay hospital, where she passed away one week later.

She possessed a most pleasing personality and was loved by all who knew her and her name was legion. She was one of God's noble women and was particularly interested and active in all church work, being a member of the United church and choir, the Women's Missionary Society and the Women's Association. She was a member of the Women's Institute and also a member of the L.O.B.A., who attended the funeral in a body and assisted in the graveside service.

Surviving are two sisters, Mrs. R. Hooey of Port Perry and Mrs. Clarke Smith, Woodville, and two brothers, Mr. William Bradburn, Toronto, and R. G. Bradburn on the homestead.

On Tuesday afternoon a private service was held at the home and afterward a public service was held in the United church, which was filled to capacity.

The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. A. Bury, assisted by three former pastors, Rev. R. M. Patterson of Sunderland, Rev. W. C. Smith of Courtice and Rev. H. C. Wolfraim of Lindsay, also Rev. W. H. V. Walker of the local Presbyterian church.

The pallbearers were old neighbours, Messrs. J. Howe, J. R. Burn, Andrew McGill, William McGill, Albert Heaslip and Sam Stinson.

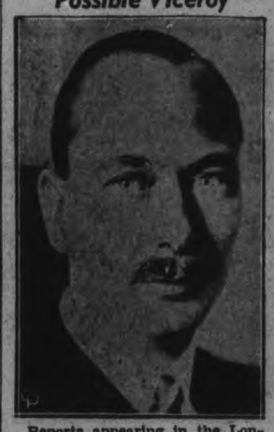
Interment was made in the Janetville United church cemetery and friends attended from Buffalo, U.S.A., Toronto, Port Hope, Port Perry, Peterborough, Bethany, Lindsay and Omemee, as well as the entire surrounding district.

Possible Viceroy



Reports appearing in the London press indicate that the Duke of Gloucester will be named viceroy of India at the end of the term of the present viceroy, the Marquis of Linlithgow.

ALLEN BADGLEY
(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 25—The death of Allen Badgley after a lengthy illness occurred at his home in Tweed, on Monday. In his eighty-fifth year, he had suffered with a heart trouble for some time. The late Mr. Badgley was born in the township of Tyendinaga, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Badley. He came to this township at an early age, settling at Stoco, near Park's church. He was a successful farmer, retiring to live in Tweed about thirty years ago. His wife, who was formerly Abbie Jones, died about three years ago.

The late Mr. Badgley was for many years one of the strongest supporters of Parks' Methodist church, serving on the board.

Surviving are two sons and two daughters, Murney Badgley of Toronto and Wesley of Tweed; Mrs. William Grier, Tweed, and Mrs. H. Kennedy, Thomasburg. Two sisters also remain, Mrs. R. Phillips, Corbyville, Mrs. R. Lansing, Stirling; and two brothers, Wellington Badgley, Tweed, and Ryerson of Melrose.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon with a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. H. B. Herrington had charge of the service. The bearers were Austin Frances, Calude Barnett, Edward Way, Fred Foster, S. B. McGee, and Thomas rath. Interment was in Victoria Cemetery.

The English church in Paris will celebrate the jubilee of its consecration next year.

Hogs Advance 40 Lambs Hold Own

TORONTO, Nov. 25 (C.P.). — Hog prices advanced 40 to 50 cents on Toronto Live Stock Market this week, the Dominion Live Stock Branch reported. Cattle prices were generally unchanged. Calves opened slightly stronger, but eased after Monday. Sheep and lambs were steady to strong.

The Liberal run of cattle included 1,060 from the West. Monday's market was active, but following heavy runs slowed up trade and a few hundred head were unsold at the close. Medium to good weighty steers sold at $5.50 to $6.50, with common as low as $4.50.

Good butcher steers and heifers brough $5.50 to $5.75 and a few tops reached $6. Common butchers sold downward to $4. Butcher cows traded at $2.75-$4, with canners and cutters from $2.25-$2.50 for most. Good butcher bulls moved at $2.75-$4.25, bolognas from $3.50-$3.75, with some as low as $3.25. Fed calves ranged from $6-$9.25 according to quality.

Store cattle trade was active at firm prices although some plain kinds were unsold. Good light stockers went at $5-$5.50, with calves up to $6. Ordinary stockers ranged down to $4. Milkers and springers were unchanged at $40-$75 each.

Calf receipts included 760 Westerns. Light vealers started at $10 to $11 for choice, but closed with none above $10.50, and with most sales from $10 down to $7 cwt. Heavy Westerns were $5-$6.25, with one lot at $6.75. Grassers were mostly $4.50 cwt.

Hogs advanced in value on short runs, closing at $8.25-$8.40 off trucks for bacons. Sows brought $5.75-$6.25. Feeding pigs of light weights sold at $4-$5 each, and some chunks sold up to $8 each.

Lambs were firm, selling generally at $8.25 for good ewes and wethers delivered by rail and at $8 by trucks. A few choice lambs reached $8.50. Bucks and heavies were $7-$7.25, with culls from $6-$6.50. Sheep were steady at $4-$4.50 cwt. for good light ewes, with culls mostly $2-$2.50.

22-Ounce Tot In Home-made Incubator Thrives With Light Bulb For Heat

Drumheller, Alta., Nov. 25 (CP) IN A HOME-MADE incubator, a baby that weighed only 22 ounces at birth was "thriving," Dr. G. M. Gibson, attending physician, reported today.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Carruthers, the baby was born in the Drumheller Municipal Hospital Monday.

Born prematurely, the baby is but five inches long. It has gained a little since birth. So small are the child's arms that an ordinary finger ring could be slipped over either arm.

The home-made incubator, used previously in "small baby" cases in Drumheller, is an apple box lined with cotton wool.

Heat is controlled by an electric lamp under the incubator. The infant is wrapped in wool with only the eyes and nose showing.

Mrs. Carruthers is 28. The father, a mine stable boss, is 30. They have one other child.

"I never saw such a small child in my life," Dr. Gibson said last night. "I think if the child lives it will be a Canadian, if not a world's record."

MORE ABOUT—
Daladier Calls

three strikers and mobile guards were sent to the hospital after the first clash of the strike wave, at the main plant in Paris about midnight.

Valenciennes, near Lille, was like a besieged city today with hundreds of steel-helmeted mobile guards, mounted and afoot, moving constantly through the streets. Textile workers, miners and metallurgists composed the bulk of strikers in the region.

Under the Confederation of Labor banner and backed by the Communist and Socialist parties and War Veterans' organizations, the strikes were aimed at:

1. Daladier's abolition of the 40-hour week, strike leaders contending business is insufficient to make longer hours necessary.

2. The government's tax decrees which labor claims favor the rich.

Behind these specific reasons are suspicions of labor that:

1. Daladier has designs on dictatorship.

2. He intends to continue the policy which led to the Munich Czechoslovak partition by making new concessions to Nazi Germany.

Poppy Day Receipts Highest In Years

This year's Poppy Day was the most successful in the history of the organization, Fire Chief George Gimblett reported to the Canadian Legion at its monthly meeting this week. Receipts totalled $1,337.57.

"We appreciate the co-operation citizens of Peterborough have given the Legion this year on Poppy and Remembrance Days," said Chief Gimblett, president of the Legion. "They have been behind us one hundred per cent., and the Legion will not forget it."

Funds were collected in this way: Girl Guides, $128.19; Trinity Church girls, $100.68; Salvation Army girls, $36.69; Ladies' auxiliaries and members of the I.O.D.E. Chapters, $52.79; St. Peter's girls, $10.45; members of the Legion and Remembrance boxes, $92.27; factories, $216.39; schools, $82.11; wreaths, $618.00.

Plane Cracks Up Near Madoc

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 25.—An R.C.A.F. aeroplane from the air station near Trenton, crashed and turned over two miles east of Madoc on Thursday afternoon, the pilot apparently losing his bearings and attempting a forced landing at the time. The 'plane hit a fence, breaking the propeller and one wheel. A wrecking truck from the air station was dispatched to the scene, where the machine was dismantled and taken to the airport. The pilot was not injured.

Jack Dwyer, who is employed at Bill Deline's Tire Shop, had a narrow escape from serious injury Thursday morning about nine o'clock, when the car which he was driving, was overturned into the ditch just south of the village. It seems that Dwyer was testing the car and as he neared the C.N.R. track from the west, the morning train was approaching the crossing. The driver had the option of striking the train or taking the ditch, with the result that the vehicle landed with four wheels up on the south side of the road. Fortunately for Dwyer, he escaped with a shaking up.

James Blakely, Madoc, was arrested late Wednesday night by Chief Hayes, charged with being intoxicated at the wheel of a motor car. He was remanded to Hastings County jail and will appear before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in police court at Tweed. Accompanying Blakely were Melville Devolin and Thomas Plain. The latter were taken into custdy on charges of a breach of the Liquor Control Act. They will also appear in court at the same time.

No Early Closing

his view that an early closing of taverns "would revive the conditions we had prior to 193- when blind pigs and bootlegging establishments flourished."

In the communication to council, Mr. Odette said he had been quoted as saying that the question of early closing was a city council matter.

"This is an erroneous assumption inasmuch as the fixing of hours for the sale of beer and wine is the prerogative of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario," he said.

"Inasmuch as the city council of Toronto on the advice of their solicitors feel they cannot legally pass a bylaw fixing the hours of sale, and asserting that the hours are entirely a matter for the Liquor Control Board to determine, I accept the responsibility for fixing the hours and they will remain as at present."

Dr. Irwin's Views

"Mr. O'Dette's idea of 12 o'clock closing may represent his mind and that of the liquor interests," said Dr. A. J. Irwin, secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation. "We are confident it does not represent the mind of the people of the province. If he can find a parallel to his 12 o'clock closing within the bounds of the British Empire, it will be news to us."

Mr. Odette's ruling was labelled "autocratic" by Mrs. John Wright, Brantford, president of the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Mrs. Wright said she believed the Liquor Board would receive many requests from women's temperance groups asking a general 10 p.m. closing and a 7 p.m. closing on Saturdays.

City Council members, with few exceptions, expressed relief they would not have to deal with the question, scheduled for discussion on Monday. Ald. J. S. Simmons said that in view of Mr. Odette's decision, he would withdraw his motion asking Council to request the Liquor Board to fix the closing hour at 10 p.m.

"The Liquor Board is to be commended," Mayor Ralph Day said. "It would be a very unfortunate thing for the city as a whole if a municipal election were fought on the Government issue of Liquor Control rather than on a civic issue."

ing made, it appears to me it would be a serious mistake for cheesemakers in Eastern Ontario to go on record in making a request for reduction of this time," he said.

"To my mind, you would not only lower your own standing but you would lower the standing of cheese made in Eastern Ontario in the estimation of the British importer and that is an important consideration."

Problems confronting cheesemakers can and must be solved if Canadian cheese is going to maintain its splendid reputation in world markets, said Thomas J. Hicks, senior dairy produce grader, Montreal.

Dominion grading records showed a drop of 1.09 per cent. in first grade quality cheese during the year, which is the lowest since 1927, despite the fact all provinces except Ontario, Saskatchewan and Alberta, made a better showing than 1937. He blamed dry, harsh, acid and open cheese for the decrease of first grades and said this is most objectionable in retail stores in the United Kingdom.

Berlin-Tokyo Non-Stop

BERLIN, Nov. 25 —(AP)— Five German fliers were reported today to be planning to take off Monday on an attempted 9,300-mile non-stop flight from Berlin to Tokyo. Air ministry officials admitted preparations were being made for such a flight, but said the date had not yet been set.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, CANADA, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1938

Do Not Hold Elections

MILVERTON.—Reeveship elections simply aren't held in this village. There hasn't been an election for the position in the past 14 years, and right now it looks as though Reeve Alfred Denstedt will be re-elected by acclamation when nominations for this year's council close.

A Very Wise Deer

WOODFORD.—Danny, pet deer of this village, knows where the safest place is during the hunting season. The deer has been the pet of William Best for more than a year. Two days before the shooting season opened, Danny trotted from the woods to the Best farm, where he was locked in a stable until the hunting was over.

Kinsmen Give 78 Children Glasses In 1938

A review of the work being done by the Kinsmen Club for underprivileged children who require glasses was given at the regular meeting of the club last night by Bob Leeming. His report showed that 78 children had been looked after so far this year. These are made up of 48 new cases and 30 old ones that had been treated by the club during previous years. Up to October 31 the club had expended a total of $418.25.

The cases are contacted mostly through the Public and Separate School nurses and doctors. Cases outside of Peterborough are contacted through the Red Cross and other social service agencies and members of the club.

One interesting case that has been handled by the club was mentioned. A little girl, six years of age, and one of a family of eleven was given an examination and glasses were furnished. She was given repairs for these glasses and was re-examined when the doctor recommended a change in one of the lense of her glasses. On April 1, 1938, the child's case was again brought to the attention of the committee who sent her to an eye specialist. The doctor recommended an operation, which was undertook on May 10 in Nicholls Hospital. The operation proved to be successful in straightening her eyes and although she will have to continue to wear glasses for some time she is assured that eventually her sight will be perfectly normal.

The dinner meeting last evening while not the annual Ladies' Night, included the ladies. Miss Trucie Pearson sang two numbers, one a special request was the song "Carolina" which was featured in the play "Showboat" staged by the Kinsmen four years ago. Mrs. George Zarfas, and Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Kennedy were guests at the head table.

A. R. Kennedy, editor of the Examiner was guest speaker and was introduced by Emmett F. Sheehy. His talk was the expounding of his philosophy on what constitutes happiness and was vividly illustrated by incidents in his early boyhood. During the course of his remarks he said the real things in life are free and cannot be purchased, and he said with the proper outlook it is possible to have a good time even if one has no money.

Alex Elliott, M.P.P., voiced the appreciation and thanks of the club to the speaker for his entertaining and right provoking address.

Alex Sollitt, chairman of a provisional committee named to arrange a tentative program for the district convention of Kinsmen clubs slated for Peterborough next spring, reported on the progress made. He said the convention would probably be held during the last week in May or the first week in June, and he advanced several suggestions for the entertainment of the delegates. A general chairman will be named for the convention committee in the near future and more members assigned to the various tasks in connection with this affair.

Prize-Winning Bass

R. McWilliams, 570 Bolivar Street, was notified today that a small-mouthed black bass caught by him during the past summer in the Otonabee River had won first prize in the Morley E. MacKenzie competition. The fish weighed 6 lbs. 9 oz., and was caught on a jointed plug halfway between the first and second bridge on the lower stretches of the Otonabee. McWilliams will receive a handsome silver trophy, and a complete fishing outfit, consisting of rod, reel, line and bait.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

By an Examiner Reporter.

CAMPBELLFORD COURT.

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., made the trip to Campbellford today and held court this afternoon.

CHANGE THEIR PLEA.

Two local men who pleaded not guilty to drunk charges last week changed their pleas to-day, one on a written order and each was fined $10 and 75 cents costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.

JUST OFF THE PRESS.

The forthcoming volume, "Torchbearers of Recovery" by the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr will be issued within the next ten days. Advance orders for the book, profits on which will be given locally to church work, are in the hands of a committee headed by Mrs. C. Alex Sollitt.

THE FIRST SKATING.

It may help to settle arguments to state that the records of A. O. Phillips, official weather observer, show that it was on November 23 that the first skating on the canal took place last year, so that in spite of the unusual fall weather there has been very little difference as regards the first hard freeze-up.

PUPILS VISIT CITY

Pupils from school sections No. 11 and 20, Franklin school near Bethany visited the Westclox, Quaker Oats, C.G.E. Company and the Examiner office in a tour of inspection today. They were directed by their teacher, Miss C. Bailey, Don White and A. H. Beals were the chauffeurs and accompanied the children through the factories.

NOVEMBER RELIEF INCREASE.

Sixty names have been added to the city's relief list this month, Relief Officer A. G. Metheral informed the Examiner this morning. "The next report for the committee is likely to be a disappointment," he remarked, and said the loss of the Auburn plant of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds was being reflected in the relief increase.

LAUDS Y'S MEN

Dr. Mark Crough, president of the Kinsmen Club did a little plain and fancy boosting for the Y's Men's Club at the regular meeting of the Kinsmen last night. Mark said 30 tickets for the coming show on November 30 and December 1, had been turned over to him and he urged the members to give the Y's Men their full support, and purchase the thirty tickets.

NOT "MAIN" OFFENDER

Through an error in a police court report Thursday, it was stated that Magistrate Langley had declared Joseph Hefferman to be the "main" offender in a case. The copy was originally written "minor" offender and that of course put a much different aspect on the thing than the report as published conveyed. The explanation is made in justice both to the magistrate and to Hefferman.

CASE IS ADJOURNED.

Two charges against Leonard Morton, 27, of Pontypool, one of reckless driving and the other of drunken driving were adjourned until Wednesday when the cases were called before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this morning, the court ordering that the crown must proceed then. Traffic Officer Gordon E. Broughton who laid the charges after Morton's car had gone into the ditch, four miles south of here, stated that his witnesses were unable to be on hand this morning.

SUGGESTION FOR COUNCIL.

"The council of 1939 should consider the idea of selling for $50 any lot the city owns," a business man said today, "on condition that a house will be built on the property within a year. They might even make the $50 inclusive in the contract cost of the house. I'm not finding fault with the present council for trying to maintain property values in the city, but I think the $50 scheme might be broadened considerably. Every new house represents increased assessment eventually, and even if there is an initial sacrifice of $50 or so, the city gets it all back in the long run."

PLUG FACTORY WHISTLES ALSO

Another mainstreeter disagreed today with the arguments advanced for the repeal of the whistle by-law and is in complete agreement with Alderman Gordon. It is his contention that so far as a safety measure is concerned, the blowing of a locomotive whistle is quite useless in warning drivers of closed cars. He felt even more strongly concerning the blowing of factory whistles. "Here we are," he said, "in a city with the largest alarm clock factory in the Empire, yet in no city in Canada have I heard such ear-splitting whistles as those of Peterborough factories." He believed that the by-law should include them along with locomotives.

Rae McWilliams Wins Trophy With Big Bass

Prize-winning fish in the Morley E. MacKenzie competitions for the past summer are announced today and Rae McWilliams, 570 Bolivar street who caught a large black bass and entered the fish took top honors in that division.

McWilliams fish weigh 6 lbs. 9 oz. and was caught in the Otonabee river between first and second bridge using a jointed plug on a casting outfit. It was a small mouthed black bass, and the largest entered in the contest although it was not the largest caught in this district. One landed by Jerine Dorris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Dorris, King street in Buckhorn lake topped seven pounds.

Opinion Divided On Merits Of Noise Bylaw

Opinion is about evenly divided on the merits of the anti-noise by-law as its exists in the city, but on one point citizens are almost unanimous and that is train whistles should be blown at level crossings.

The by-law came into existence when Alderman Gordon, acting on complaints from residents in the west end said trains blew whistles and kept bells ringing while passing through the city at night. This noise the people said kept them awake and caused much discomfort to old people and invalids. The by-law though went further and made it an offence to sound horns at weddings and make any other unnecessary disturbance.

Expressions of opinion obtained from several people this morning on whether or not they were opposed to the by-law are as follows. One man said he has driven a car 200,000 miles and a train whistle has never yet made a level crossing safe because it can't be heard until the car driver is right on the crossing.

PAUL JOHNSON — Formerly of Peterborough and now a citizen of Toronto says: I'm definitely opposed to promiscuous horn blowing and noisy wedding celebrations, and the by-law is fine in that regard but I feel in the interests of public safety train whistles should sound at railway crossings.

MRS. GORDON WYATT, Roger street—I like to hear wedding celebrations and whistles blowing. It shows people are happy. Noises of any kind don't both me, my nerves are good. I can't see any need for an anti-noise by-law.

J. M. LAWLOR, Asst. Mgr. Bell Telephone — The fellow who bears down on an auto horn instead of walking up to the door of a house should be fined. He is a nuisance. I do favor train whistles and train bells when a train is approaching, particularly in the city.

CHARLES DOUGHTY, Commercial traveller—Human lives are the first consideration. The clause dealing with train whistles blowing in the anti-noise by-law should be struck out. The engineer should be permitted to use his own discretion at a level crossing.

The barber shop of Smith and Freeman is a house divided except on the railway crossing question.

JACK SMITH, Benson avenue says —There should be a regulation to curb unnecessary horn blowing particularly those motorists who park outside and wake up the entire neighborhood with their tooting. In the interests of safety though, I feel engineers should be allowed to blow the whistle at every level crossing.

HAROLD FREEMAN, Barber — If people want to celebrate weddings by blowing auto horns let them do it. A little noise is good for the town. The whistle of a train should blow at every level crossing that is not protected by a wig-wag signal.

MRS. HOLLY McILMOYLE, 529 Reid street—The solution to the safety question in my opinion is to put wig wag signals at every level crossing. I live within a block of one and the bell ringing doesn't bother me. I can't see any need for an anti-noise by-law. If a wedding party wants to celebrate by noise making and horn blowing, more power to them.

MISS LILIAN HURLEY, Hunter street, west—There has been less noise from trains on Bethune street since the by-law came into force, and people in this neighborhood have had more rest and comfort. I am absolutely in favor of the anti-noise by-law.

MRS. LEONARD BEARNE, Princess street—Train whistles never bothered me. I'd sooner hear them blow so that motorists may be warned at level crossings and lives perhaps be saved as a result.

MYER LEVINE, merchant—Every level crossing should have a wig-wag signal. The by-law does some good because it curbs unnecessary noises in residential areas, but I feel they are going too far to forbid wedding celebrations. Why not allow this horn blowing there are no horses to be frightened.

MYER CHERNEY, merchant—The bylaw is a fine piece of work. When people go home they want comfort and quiet, and don't want to be kept awake by shrieking train whistles and horn blowing. A residential area should have this protection.

LOU E. BROOKS, restaurant owner—It would take more than a train or a fire engine to wake me up, once I get to sleep, and as far as I am concerned they can make all the noise they wish.

NO RELATION

The Examiner has been asked to state that the Kenneth Donaghue mentioned in a police court report Thursday was no relation of Daniel O'Donoghue, 449 Rogers street, or any others in Peterborough.

Ice Is To Thin For Skating Children Warned

WITH the coming of winter fear lurks in the hearts of hunreds of mothers throughout the city. For while their sons may not know the dangers of thin ice, they do. They have all read accounts of tragic disaster that has befallen many a home just because some youngster wanted to be the first on skates.

So, primarily, this is a warning to small children: Stay off the ice. Jackson Park has frozen over, there is ice on the canal, but in both cases it is much too thin to support the weight of even a small child. It may be alright for the first foot or two from shore, but tempt it further and it will betray. But it is not only the small and unknowing who tempt thin ice. Many an older lad is possessed of that daredevil spirit that wants to try anything once. To them the warning goes, try skating now and it will probably be the last time you will have a pair of skates on your feet.

Outdoor Rink Is To Be Provided At Jackson Park

The first steps toward providing this city with ideal winter sports accommodations has been taken by the Winter Sports committee and the Nicholls Park trust. Acting in conjunction, the two bodies are now completing arrangements to provide an open air skating rink in Jackson Park on the artificial lake just below the Japanese bridge in the centre of the huge natural playground.

The water in the lake has been raised by some two feet—usually it is allowed to empty completely in the fall—and the piping at the water's inlet has been improved. Already ice has formed, though not sufficient of it to permit skating as yet. To insure that no children shall use the skating surface until it is safe, the city council has entered the picture, providing a guard whose duty it is to keep all and sundry from the ice.

While much of the work is still in the stage of planning, it is hoped that by some means a booth may be provided for skaters to change and to purchase refreshments. Should the rink be used extensively this winter, it is possible that it will be the forerunner of many other winter sports activities. Toboggan slides, naturally formed in the park and requiring only banking, may be erected next winter to revive a sport that was once extremely popular in this city. Skiing facilities may be improved, snow shoe trails might be laid. Indeed, a visionary might well imagine the time when Peterborough could boast a winter sports centre unique in this province—a natural park beautiful beyond most others, situated on the very outskirts of the city, and devoted to all branches of winter sports, with rest cabins scattered across its breadth, colored lights marking a dozen and more trails. Jackson Park may some day become a centre all the year round for a healthy, sports loving people.

The skating rink is the first step, is the result of a vision by the Winter Sports committee and the Nicholls Park trust. Working on the matter on behalf of the committee, who comprise a cross-section of the community, are W. A. Richardson, H. L. Garner, Alex Sollitt and Dr. J. E. Middleton.

A NEW MEMBER.

Sympathy Expressed For Public Servants Who Have To Serve So Many Masters

"I feel a certain amount of sympathy for some of our public servants; they have to serve so many masters," was the somewhat cryptic remark made by J. Ford Strickland, K.C., when a charge against former Mayor Roland Denne, of allowing his dog to run at large, contrary to the local by-law, was withdrawn in police court this morning.

Mr. Strickland was present to defend Mr. Denne, who entered a plea of not guilty.

Dog Catcher Clarence Blodgett informed the court that he wished to withdraw the charge and it was when Magistrate Langley intimated that he presumed the defence would have no objection to that course that Mr. Strickland made his reference to the "many masters" whom public servants had to serve.

Another simdar charge against another man was also withdrawn when it was stated that owing to the absence of the owner the information had not been served.

Builders Busy Erecting Homes In City

The pace in house building did not slacken to any great extent during the month of November as permits for four new homes were taken out at the city hall. Along with these a new bungalow was started at the corner of Douro street and Armour road by William Tinker. The permit was taken out some time ago for two the same, and the first is finished.

O. J. Hayward, who has been one of the most active contractors during the past year has a two storey brick veneer house underway on Manning avenue for Robert Lowery, 92 London street. Fred Robson is building a house on Sherbrooke street across from the Prince of Wales school for Robert Hardy, St. Joseph street. Sam Abbott has started a two storey house to cost $3,000 on Homewood avenue. The other house is being constructed on Douglas avenue by Arnold Steele, 274 John street who is the owner-builder. This is the first house to be built on Douglas avenue since the mild boom of five years ago when several homes went up on the north side of the street.

The only other building permit of any consequence obtained during November so far is one to permit alterations of the Murty building on Hunter street west into two apartments. The work is being done for James Murty, 380 Brock street by R. Walker, contractor.

Builders Are Busy

This is the time of year when the building trades as a rule slacken because of the cold weather. Builders however are unanimous that more homes will be built in the city and its environs in 1939 than in any year during the last two decades. They are encouraged in this opinion by the number of applicants for tentative estimates on homes, and the enquiries for building lots which are coming from all parts of the city.

Work is progressing rapidly on the four major building projects in the heart of the business section and it will be 1939 before they are fully completed. The Bell Telephone building on Hunter street is finished except for the interior, but the Loblaw store, R. C. Braund's store and apartments, and the addition to the Y.W.C.A. are only about two thirds completed.

Shot Three Dear In Three Minutes

Time saving, mass production plans so common in industry today have at last been introduced into deer hunting by John Rickles, Anstruther township farmer.

Rickles was one of a party of three which went deer hunting last week. They had only been in the woods three hours, when Rickles shot three bucks, within three minutes with three successive shots from his high powered rifle. There was enough venison in the three animals for the entire party. To further complicate the three series, Rickles claimed it was just three years since he shot his last deer.

By way of contrast, Alex Elliott, M.P.P. and Ted Chalmers, county engineer, deer hunting in North Hastings county, spotted two deer on a hillside some distance from them and fired a fusillade of 21 shots before one of the deer fell. The other escaped.

Skating Season Opens

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 25.—The skating season was unofficially opened in Campbellford, Thursday. With Wednesday night's cold snap sending temperatures down to eight degrees several of the ponds in this vicinity were coated with a smooth sheet of ice and by Thursday several groups of boys were seen headed for the pasture south of town. Ice was several inches thick at some points and conditions were just right for banging the puck around.

Red Cross Sets $2,500 Mark

Today marks the official opening of this year's Red Cross campaign in Peterborough. Over eighty men and women canvassers will start out this weekend in an endeavour to collect the objective of $2,500. According to W. G. Morrow, honorary campaign chairman, the campaign has never been better organized and the committee feel confident the objective will be reached. Another straw which points to success is the fact that G. H. Thompson, the campaign treasurer, is able to report an increased number of mail contributions over a year ago. "I am very pleased at the advance contributions," states Mr. Thompson, "many of which are an increase over a year ago."

Mrs. John Mills and D. A. Loomis, joint chairmen of the men and women workers, report that their workers are all set to go and are going to tackle the job with enthusiasm. Beside funds for the local work of Red Cross there is the important work in which Peterborough has always had a share. In addition this year the local branch are appealing for the fire sufferers in the Rainy River district and it is hoped substantially increased contributions will be forthcoming in order that the city may have a share through the Red Cross in rehabilitating the 300 settlers who were burned out.

UTILITY CONTROL BOARD.

VICTORIA.—Legislators and business men to-day studied a bill before the British Columbia Legislature which would authorize the government to set up a three-man utility control board.

Charles English Is Acquitted On Liquor Count

"I have to dismiss this case but am not at all sure that I am acquitting an innocent man," said Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning as he registered a verdict of not guilty in a charge against Charles English of Bobcaygeon under the Excise Act.

English faced the same charges as that on which Bruce Freeburn, formerly of Bobcaygeon and now a resident of Sudbury was acquitted Thursday, namely of having possession of 80 gallons of mash, suitable for the manufacture of spirits, without a license from the Excise Department, both charges having been laid by Corporal T. J. Woods of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Plenty of Suspicion

"This is again one of those cases," said Magistrate Langley in his judgment after he had reviewed the evidence, "in which the whole situation creates the greatest suspicion. There is a probability that the actual fact is that this man was interested in this business but there has been nothing brought before the court on which it can be said that it has been so proven." I feel, under all the circumstances, that, putting it on its lowest level, the accused must be given the benefit of the doubt. I don't think the prosecution has taken the case quite far enough to justify a conviction."

The prosecution's evidence against English was similar to that given at the morning session in the case against Bruce Freeburn, the chief new feature being the fact brought out during the cros-examination of Corp. T. J. Woods of the R.C.M.P. that on the afternoon of September 4 when the wash was discovered that English had given the witness a signed statement, in which he had stated that there was no particular reason why he had gone along the bank of the Squaw river on that occasion.

Corporal Woods and County Constable John Dixon repeated their story of the morning session to the effect that they had watched the vat containing the wash for hours on September 4 until they saw a car stop on the bridge over the Squaw river and a man, whom Corp. Wood identified as Freeburn, got out. A little later they saw Charles English near the vat and when he had started out toward the road and came directly toward where they were hidden they had intercepted him. He had given no explanation as to what he was doing in the vicinity of the wash.

Alex. Elliott, K.C., counsel for English, offered no defence evidence and after the argument had been heard Magistrate Langley announced that he had decided to reserve judgment until this morning. Mr. Elliott had submitted that there was no evidence at all of possession so far as English was concerned while Mr. Kerr who prosecuted for the Department of National Revenue, contended that the case against English was considerably stronger than the case had been against Freeburn.

Alderman Robert Cotton, chairman of the Finance Committee of the City Council announced this afternoon that the dog catcher was being taken off.

November Bee Stings Reporter In Church

To be stung by a bumble bee on November 24 may not be a unique experience, but it is unusual enough to warrant passing mention. Some how it got into the sleeve of the overcoat of a reporter who attended the Sunday School convention at Mount Pleasant, and as the left arm was thrust through it suddenly felt as if a scorpion was nibbling its way across the wrist. And on rubbing the shocked spots the thumb and first finger of the right hand found the same barb, and then the bee dropped to the floor of the vestibule. That's what reporters get for going out before the benediction, and with a distracted look the same individual who thinks he knows his way around Cavan, started from Mount Pleasant and landed at Cavan heading west in the general direction of Toronto. Tinney's garage looked a bit familiar, but it seemed on the wrong side of the road. However, there was one mitigating note in the information that two other persons had also called looking for direction. That bee was something like the cuff the father gave his boy as a fillip to impress some fact upon the son's mind. It will be associated in memory with the sermon subjects of the evening.

Ottawa Thumbs Down Pageant For King But Thinks One Fine For Toronto

Ottawa, Nov. 25 (CP)

CONTROLLER Dr. J. H. Putman thinks the idea of a pageant for the visit next summer of the King and Queen would be "suitable" for Toronto but not for Ottawa.

Melburne E. Turner of Toronto, representing a firm engaged in the production of pageants, came before the Board of Control last night suggesting the city sponsor a pageant.

"You don't think the King and Queen are coming her to see pageants, do you?" asked Controller Putman. "What you have in mind is something very suitable for Toronto and the small places outside of the capital."

Mayor Stanley Lewis said there was a definite royal program in Ottawa, the main function being the formal unveiling of the national war memorial. A pageant hardly seemed to fit into the picture, he said.

ROMANCE, INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

Read This Frist:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him....then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Gurley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displeases Towne; but Bob accepts it gracefully.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER 9

LIFE, THOUGHT Sara Sue Davis, is an extremely complicated process.

This morning she was working as if Simon Legree stood over her with a whip. She swept and mopped, shook rugs, scrubbed the two bathrooms in her cottage, washed some blankets, and raked in her yard. She hardly spoke a word.

"Stop all that hard work, chile," Cleopatra Jones ordered her, twice. "Ah makes th' good-for-nothin' Calc'lus do ever' bit of that, ma'am."

"I need the exercise, thanks, Cleo."

Cleo went back to her baking muttering protests. The middle-aged Negress maintained a self-appointed guardianship over Sara Sue. She knew the white girl was disturbed.

But Sara Sue had a deal of thinking to do, and thinking comes best sometimes when accompanied by physical action. She had started first to go on to Hermann park golf course. Hermann park, a vast and beautiful woodland, began just one block back of her cottage. She could walk to the first tee in 10 minutes. Or she could walk to the park tennis court in even less time. But at either place she was sure to meet someone she knew and so have to be sociable. She wanted to think, alone.

By 11 a. m., though, the mood changed, and she wanted someone to talk to. She called her friend, Mrs. Powell, on the phone. "Roxie, come out and let's play a set of tennis, can't you? You can leave the baby here."

Roxie Powell had the cutest two-year-old, nicknamed Bounce. He and his mother arrived in half an hour, but he declined to be left in Cleo's charge. He declined vociferously, and so Roxie and Sara Sue took him to the tennis courts. He got in the way and was all manner of trouble, and fun. Which was ideal, for it helped Sara Sue regain her good humor, in some measure.

Sara Sue played excellent tennis, but she had been tired when she started. For one thing, she hadn't slept too well. Dr. Thornton Holgate had sat in her living room until after midnight. What he had told her had upset her a great deal. She lay awake until 2 a. m. thinking about it, and dreamed fitfully after that. She was up at 7. When the set score reached four-all, fatigue overtook her and Roxie won the last two games.

"Darn!" said Sara Sue, flopping on a sideline bench.

"Yeah, you're slipping," Roxie chided. "Old widder woman." Roxie was a month younger than Sara Sue.

"Don't please, Rox."

Roxie turned to look at her friend. Sara Sue never took defeat at tennis seriously.

"Is—is anything wrong, honey?" Roxie asked, quitely.

"Yes, No, I've just got the blues. They came back to me last night, Rox. I was a little bit lonely, I guess, and wanted to see you. You've been so good, always."

Roxie surveyed her friend carefully, searchingly.

"Is the new business all right?"

"Oh, yes. Better than I expected."

"What is it then? Love? You're so young and sweet, Sara Sue, you're bound to find happiness again. So pretty. Tell me, what is it?"

Sara Sue laughed now, almost gaily. Then she yawned, stretched, threw a tennis ball at Bounce, got up to play with him. Roxie did not press her questions. She knew Sara Sue intimately. She waited, and played with Bounce, too. Pretty soon Sara Sue wanted to talk, but it was about clothes, babies, hair waves, new desserts, tennis strokes, department store sales, football, all manner of impersonal feminine things. In half an hour she acted, and felt, more like her normal self. Roxie had given just the touch of sympathy and intimacy needed, inviting confidence without prying.

"I've got to feed Bounce," she stated. "He'll be howling soon. It must be after noon anyway."

It was. When they returned to the cottage, Rice classes had adjourned for the day (except for afternoon laboratory sessions) and a gang was already in Sara Sue's living room. She introduced Roxie to the collegians. All of them chatted a bit and then Sara Sue and Roxie and Bounce ate lunch in the near dining nook.

"I think it's wonderful!" Roxie gushed, and meant it. "Don't you just have the most fun? I mean with your work and all. I should love it. The gang acts like a party. But tell me, Sara Sue, have any romances developed?" She giggled at the thought.

"Yes. I'm afraid so."

"Afraid? Didn't you advertise counsel in romance? I was thinking of hiring you, next time Jimmy and I had a fuss. I shall tell him you can get me a better husband."

"Oh, hush, Roxie. You know Jimmy worships you, and you worship him. But what I meant was I'm getting more romances than I can handle. I'm not as smart as I thought I was. Unfortunately I—I have likes and dislikes; prejudices, I guess."

"Oh!"

"Yes. Roxie, would you believe it—two of my best customers are in love with me! Me!"

"No! Why, Sara Su-u-ue!"

"Yes. And that's not all. The funniest thing—last night after I was already getting in the bathtub at 11 o'clock, Roxie, the door bell rang and there in the rain stood—Oh! I forgot. It is strictly confidential. He said so. And it should be, of course. Forgive me, Rox."

"Surely. But I'll admit my curiosity is popping."

"Nothing happened, honey. Really. It was just a funny coincidence. I can tell you a little, without mentioning names. This man, this customer—you'd never guess who it was— was so earnestly in love that it hurt. He wants my closest guidance. He—"

"What, three lovers? Why, Sara Sue!" Roxie laughed, beaming.

"NO!" Not in love with me! With somebody else. That's the funny part—I just hate the girl he thinks he loves, and I've got to help him make love to her!"

"I'd give a year's growth and wear freckles, to know who it is," said Roxie.

"I won't tell. I didn't mean I actually hate her. I don't believe in hating anybody. But I've got some sense, I hope, and I've met this girl once and I know a lot about her already, and one of the boys who is courting me used to be in love with her and she is still in love with him, and—oh, it's the most complicated thing!"

Roxie sighed elaborately. "I should say it is! Goodness! But aren't you just thrilled with it all? I mean, isn't it all fun? Goodness, Sara, at least you don't have to wash baby bottles and shange diapers and worry about croup! Croup is the most unromantic disease, Sara Sue!"

They laughed together gaily. Even young Bounce, sitting high on a kitchen stool and pillows in lieu of a high chair, contributed some laughter, spraying the girls and the table with most unromantic partly-chewed food.

"What will you do, though, honey? You've got to be fair to everybody. Yourself included."

"I am not in love with any of them," Sara Sue declared. "I wish they weren't in love with me, or didn't imagine they were. There's two—you won't tell, Rox?—and both are dears. Bob Towne is positively—"

"The football hero?" Roxie jabbed a spoon at her.

"Yes. And the cutest freshman, but he's so—"

"If it's that Bob Towne," Roxie interrupted, "then the other girl is Peaches Pomeroy, my darling! So there! Don't forget I went to Rice, and keep up with all the gossip."

That deduction, too correct, evoked more talk. More heart talk between good friends. Roxie promised to keep it confidential, and Sara Sue Davis was not shallow, nor dishonest in any selfish way.

When Roxie had to go home, Sara Sue was a different person, though. She had gotten away from the crowd for a while, and been intimate with a truthworthy friend. She had talked. She had regained strength and poise from that friend.

Vanishing Ideal About Home Life Is One of Greatest Causes For Unrest and Divorce; Youth Needs Greater Preparation For Future of the Family

A FAMOUS educator-psychologist asserts that 50 per cent. of the young women in the United States and 90 per cent of young men are not fit to marry because they know nothing, or next to nothing, about making a home.

Undoubtedly this is true. The youth of today look upon home as merely a place in which to change their clothes when they are rushing from one activity to another, and to go to when everywhere else shuts up. They were born in maternity hospitals; most of their time is spent in automobiles; they will be buried from undertaking parlors. Most of them have never lived in any one house long enough to remember its address.

The traditional home of song and story in which generation after generation lived and in which the family gathered of an evening about the lamp and whiled away the hours with conversation or music or reading, instead of Father and Mother stepping out to a night club and the children going joy-riding, is something that is just as foreign to their experience as would be a picture of domestic life in China or India or among the Hottentots.

And, take it from them, it must have been all mighty dull with nowhere to go and nothing to do but to sit up and look at your own folks and hear them tell over again the stories you cut your teeth on. Why, there wasn't even a radio then! Gosh, how did anybody stand it?

No one can doubt that the real reason for the enormous increase in divorce is because so many young people hold this attitude toward home life. They regard making a home as a bore—as a chore—and they are determined to have it cramp their style as little as possible. They are not willing to settle down and find their happiness within their own four walls. They want to go places and do things. They want to dance and flirt and play around just as they did before marriage. When they find that they cannot be both bond and free at the same time and that domesticity and philandering don't click, another marriage goes on the rocks.

No young man goes into any business or profession without preparing himself for it. No young man, for instance, would undertake to build a house if he knew nothing about architecture or carpentry or brick-laying or plumbing, but not one young man in a thousand ever even considers whether he has any talents or aptitudes for making a home.

Every day we see men marrying who could no more be domesticated than a wild lion could be. We see men marrying who know themselves to be so fickle that it isn't in them to be faithful to any woman. We see tightwads marrying who will begrudge their wives and children the very food they eat. We see tyrannical men and high-tempered men and grouchy men marrying and we wonder why they do not realize that they could no more make a happy home than they could build a China Clipper.

But if men know little of the art of homemaking, women are equally inept at it because they so often fail in the very first requirement of their jobs, which consists in making their husbands comfortable. Every man's dream of home is a place of peace and rest, where there will always be a clean-swept hearth and good food on the table.

Yet nowadays when the great majority of girls go from the school room to an office or shop the number of young women who know anything about running a house is infinitesimally small. They don't know tough meat from tender. They couldn't plan a well-balanced meal to save their lives. Their idea of a delectable dinner for a hungry man is assembling something out of a paper bag and a tin can.

Now when a girl marries she takes not only her husband's heart but also his stomach into her keeping. If she gives him dyspepsia by her poisonous cooking, she has only herself to blame when he sours on matrimony and considers home life blah.

The moral of all of which is that considering that virtually all young people expect to marry, and most of them do, they should give much time and thought to learning how to make a home as they do to preparing themselves for any other occupation. In everything in life it is the experts who win out.

The Stars Say...

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, November 26.

The lunar transits bearing rule on the affairs of this day indicate many exciting, intriguing and subtle situations. There may be much to promote the personal prestige and popularity, with progress and expansion in matters generally, although the smooth and harmonious current of events may be jeopardized by tempest, turbulence, self-indulgence and recklessness. Notable advantages depend upon tact, self-restraint, sagacity, craft or even intrigue.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of interesting and thrilling experiences, with those in places of influence and position cooperating in the increase of personal prestige and financial progress. These, however, may be imperilled by haste, rash or quarrelsome conduct, when diplomacy, stratagem or subtlety would be more effective.

A child born on this day may have many excellent endowments for success and notable achievements. It should be progressive, enterprising, and constructive, and have many subtle or intriguing traits that promise popularity and prosperity. Early discipline in temper and impulsiveness is advised.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Hanid and Knarf, the shadow-children with the turned-about names, were walking down a shady lane with their good friend, old Mother Goose. All at once, on turning past a tall hedge, they saw a sight which made them stop at once. It was the great shoe where all the children lived with their mother. It was as big as a house.

Suddenly a loud shout went up from the shoe. All the children who lived inside it had seen them. "Company's coming! Company's coming!" they all cried.

"There certainly are a lot of them," Hanid said to Mother Goose as they stood gazing at the shoe.

"I bet there are a thousand," said Knarf.

Mother Goose smiled. "There are exactly one hundred and one."

By this time the children's mother came to the door of the shoe-house. She was wearing a gingham apron and a dusting cap, for she was just in the middle of her housekeeping—or, rather, shoekeeping. She smiled pleasantly. But the two shadows could see that she was worried about something.

"Won't you come inside?"

"I'm glad you came," she said to them. "Won't you come inside for a moment? I've got something to show you."

So they went inside. Do you know what she wanted to show them? She showed them a big hole in the floor of the shoe, a big crack in the walls where the rain came in, and finally, she showed them how the whole shoe was tipping over because the heel was getting worn down.

"I'm afraid it's getting to be a very old shoe," she sighed.

"I'll get it fixed for you without any trouble," Knarf cried. With that he darted out of the shoe-house.

"My goodness! I wonder where he's going?" Mother Goose said anxiously.

"Don't worry about Knarf. He does funny things lots of times, but they almost all turn out all right," Hanid told her.

Hardly har she finished speaking when the children, who had crowded outside again, let out another shout. "More company's coming! Hooray!"

Hanid and Mother Goose and the children's mother hastily looked out of the window. They saw Knarf running toward them with a jolly, grey-haired man. "It's the shoemaker!" the children cried.

Sure enough, that's just who it was. He came up to the shoe. He took a careful look at it. "H'mm," he said. "Pretty bad....pretty bad. It needs a new sole and a new heel and a new outside, and a new inside, and new laces."

"Oh, dear!" said the children's mother. "It's going to take weeks and weeks before it's fixed."

But it didn't at all. It just took a minute. For that's how long it takes a Mother Goose shoemaker to fix a shoe. When he was finished, he got a great big rag and made all the children take one end while he took the other—and they polished it from top to toe.

Looking Back On This Date

Nov. 25 is in French Canada one of the home festivals of the year. It is St. Catherine's day, which corresponds largely to the Hallowe'en of the English sections of Canada. The custom of observing this festival in Canada undoubtedly came from France and was probably designed as a sort of welcome to the winter. It marked the beginning of that season of comparative leisure when the crops were gathered and there were only the ordinary chores to do; and it was made a family festival, one in which the children and the young grown-up could have their fun before the rigors of the Advent season began.

Times have changed. Fifty years ago the feast of St. Catherine was observed in the city homes as much as in the country, but now other things have distracted the home customs, though these survive, luckily, in some homes. Taffy is made; it is put out in the snow to cool, (if the snow is freshly fallen it is so much better); when it is cooled it is brought in and "la tire" is pulled, much to the delight of the children. The young women under the age of 25 look for tokens of a lover, in the sky, the tea cup and even in the events of the party, and many don the bonnet of St. Catherine in the hope of luring their heart's desire to ask the all important question. They who do this and fail are regarded as old maids. Once a girl has donned St. Catherine's bonnet she must not get angry if the epithet "old maid" is applied to her.

The French-Canadians do enjoy these celebrations! They certainly know how to have a good time, at home and abroad, no matter how poor. St. Catherine's day is never forgotten!

Deaf Boy Now Hears Radio

A mother of a deaf boy, Mrs. Mary Gamphier, Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I have used two bottles of AURINE EAR BALSAM for my boy, and now he hears everything on the radio. Before he used AURINE EAR BALSAM, he could not hear the radio." AURINE EAR BALSAM was created by a well known ear specialist for people hard of hearing, bothered by head noises, earache, ringing and buzzing. Get relief today with AURINE EAR BALSAM. Costs only a few cents daily. Your money back if you are not helped.

Sold at McDermid and Jury's Drug Store.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME.

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises, go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—(Advt.)

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Presbyterial Rally Is Held By Women's Associations

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 25.—An atmosphere of sustained interest, Christian fellowship, and a strengthened desire to continue to work together in a larger and more effective measure in the months ahead, featured the annual conference of the Woman's Associations of the Peterborough Presbytery, held in St. Andrew's United Church, Millbrook, on Tuesday.

The devotional period was in charge of St. James' W.A. of Peterborough, Mrs. M. H. Drysdale, Mrs. W. Rose and Mrs. Woodley conducting the service.

The treasurer's report was submitted by Rev. Mr. Wilkinson of Bridgenorth, and showed total receipts of $14.95, expenses $7.76, and balance on hand of $7.96.

Committees Named.

The following committees were named: Press—Miss Richarson, Miss Webster and Mrs. Drysdale. Resolutions—Mrs. M. C. Parr, Mrs. Fowler, Bridgenorth; and Mrs. Richard Matchett of Cavan. Nominating committee—Mrs. J. McKnight, Mrs. F. R. Samis, and Mrs. W. P. Hetherington. The address of welcome was given by Rev. A. L. Siscoe, pastor of the convention church, the faithfulness and loyalty of workers who make up the W.A. membership being stressed, as well as the fact that "you are all living for the things of the Kingdom." Reply was made by Rev. M. S. Lehigh of Kinmount, who brought greetings from the Lindsay Presbytery.

The roll call and reports brought an encouraging account of the year's activities, practically every society having the upkeep of the manse or parsonage as its peculiar care; giving substantial sums to the board of stewards of the various churches; helping with the renovation of the church where necessary; and raising its money by means of teas, catering for banquets, quiltings, and other sewing. "Sunshine bags," birthday offerings, lectures, fowl dinners, hot suppers, garden parties, hostess teas, pot luck dinners, etc.

Apsley reported paying the janitor's salary, and the insurance on the church and manse; Bethany branch gives 50 cents each Sunday in one of the church envelopes, raised $128.50 by a canvass instead of the usual fowl supper, and expects to have over $300 as its total before the year is out. Cavan also canvassed instead of the fowl dinner, raising between $140 and $150, and Millbrook followed the same plan, going well over the top as far as the amount cleared at last year's supper was concerned. Most of the societies mentioned having their meetings in the homes, Bailieboro telling of raising $70 to help redecorate the church, giving $27 to the church officials, $15 for repairs to the parsonage, and having a total of $120; Benafort had a total of $200, and Lakefield, with 75 members, has them divided into five groups with an allocation of $75 for each to raise, substantial aid with the new parsonage, and to the church officials being mentioned.

Millbrook has 60 members and gave $225 to the church board, besides doing a good work in renovating the church auditorium, and also needed repairs to the parsonage. Norwood has ten groups in its membership and raised $572; George Street, Peterborough, had a total of $1,450, with 111 members and many activities of a most helpful character, including relief supplies, and baskets of Christmas cheer sent out, this being also common to the other organizations, as well as visitation of the sick and shut-ins, and practical sympathy shown in times of bereavement. Mark Street reported every lady of the congregation a member of the W.A., and no fees asked, money being raised in other ways, and a total of $572 to its credit with $125 now on hand. St. James' reported visiting every family in the church once during the years, and $972.60 raised to date.

W.M.S. Greetings

Greetings from the president of the Peterborough Presbytery W.M.S. Mrs. W. H. Morton, were warmly extended as the speaker went on to show how co-operation between the two associations might be carried out with mutual helpfulness. Affiliation was recommended where no W.M.S. was organized, a place on the program each month for some mission study, and an offering for missions, being essential. "Thus you will share in a wider field of service."

After a solo by Mrs. M. C. Parr, Mrs. George Kelly of Lakefield being the pianist for the day, and prayer by Mrs. Austin Post, of Fairview, the session adjourned to the basement, where dinner was served by the local W.A. about one hundred delegates sitting down to the well laden tables.

The after-dinner speaker was Rev. Mr. Parr of Peterborough, whose theme "Idelaism and Service," was developed along the line of patterning life after the 'Divnie Blue Print' since "perfect loyalty to a perfect ideal can only come from the source of all ideals, even Jesus Christ."

The Norwood W.A. took charge of the devotional period at the opening of the afternoon session, following a sing-song led by Rev. C. Ferguson, of Bethany and Rev. F. W. Craik of St. James' church. Mr. Craik outlined the life of Florence Nightingale drawing the lesson that all W.A. members should be "the Lady with the Light," as everyone has the light of the gospel "and may God give you grace to let it shine."

A duet by Mrs. Clayton Telford and Mrs. W. Hepburn was much enjoyed, and Mrs. M. S. Lehigh of Kinmount, carried on a round table conference, answering the questions put in the box for that purpose, and bringing much practical information to the assembled W. A. workers.

Officers Elected.

The slate of officers for 1939 was brought in by Rev. Mr. Parr, who also conducted the induction service, assisted by Rev. M. Lehigh. The list is: Honorary president, the chairman of the Presbytery, Mr. Parr; president, Mrs. (Rev.) Fred Horton, of Fraserville; vice-presidents, Mrs. R. Matchett, of Cavan, and Mrs. Buck, of Norwood; recording secretary, Mrs. P. I. Bentley, Millbrook; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. McKnight, Millbrook; treasurer, Mrs. W. P. Hetherington, Peterborough. Other executive members are Mrs. E. Wand, Peterborough; Mrs. J. S. Tanner, Lakefield; Mrs. M. Drysdale, Peterborough.

The resolutions committee brought in the following:

Resolved, that as our W.A.'s work for the uplift of the church, we strive to contribute to the Fellowship Crusade fund;

Resolved, that a program of topic cards for the worship service in our regular W.A. meetings be prepared for use in the months ahead;

Resolved, that our annual W.A. conference be held not later than the first week in November next year;

Resolved, that there be a parsonage committee appointed within this Presbytery, to consider the minimum of parsonage furnishings.

The resolutions were adopted and the last named was left with the executive for further action. Three invitations, from George Street, Peterborough, Bridgenorth and Lakefield, were received for next year's convention, that of George street being accepted, as it came first into the secretary's hands.

After the usual votes of thanks, sponsored by the courtesy committee, the convention was dismissed with the blessing by Rev. A. L. Sisco.

Lambeth Walking—Under Water

Canada's former diving champion, Bill Lewin, goes in for the Lambeth walk, most recent dance floor novelty, but struts his stuff where he feels right at home, in the water. Not only in the water, but completely under the surface, Bill is seen with radio star Marion Tally, putting on the act in the swimming pool of a resort hotel in California. Some of the better jitterbugs, who practically make a marathon of every effort, would find themselves rather hampered by these surroundings. After all, one must breathe.

Suggests Clubs For Servants And Boy Friend

By Mollie McGee
Canadian Press Correspondent

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP)—One of the signs of "back to normal" in England is that the servant is again occupying columns in the press. Domestic servants in Greater London are demanding a central club where they can take boy friends on wet Sundays.

The recently-formed Union of Domestic Workers has the problem in hand and plans are to come up before the Union Council early in November. If the proposal is adopted the club will be run as an experiment and at first it will open on Sundays only. A small fee will be charged so that it can be self-supporting.

An investigating committee found "it is very rarely that a mistress will allow a young man to visit the maid at the house, so they are forced to walk the streets or not see each other at all. Their small salaries do not allow for more than one movie or such extravagance each week."

Drill women Drill

The largest women's club in London at the moment, however, is the new Territorial Army. It is an amusing and amazing sight to see more than 100 middle-aged—yes, most of them are—women drilling in the parade ground of the Duke of York Barracks.

At present they have no uniform. Some wear hats, some even have high heels and one bedazzling officer-to-be was out drilling the other day in a black velvet dress with diamond clips and diamond ear-rings.

Though their apparel is often incongruous they have impressed the harsh-voiced sergeants who actually add "please miss" to their commands. The beskirted army is going through the regular drill with no changes and the sergeants say they find them every bit as amenable as raw men recruits.

The Auxiliary Territorial Service, to give it its proper name, is following out the program of normal peace-time development on "full Territorial principles"—evening and week-end training, voluntary service, and modest financial allowance.

Lady Violet Astor has been appointed chief of the County of London district and in the City of London proper, Lady Trenchard, wife of the former police commissioner, is in command with General Liardet's wife as her assistant. Dame Helen Gwynne-Vaughan is superintending the drilling of officers in training.

Three motor-driven companies formed in the County of London for service with the army are complete both in officers and in members. Similar companies for service with R. A. F. units are to be organized.

There has been such response to the call for recruits the executive has published apologies asking applicants to be patient and to allow time for the examination of applications.

Work in Emergency

The National Council of Women set aside their usual program at their conference in London and discussed emergency resolutions as to women's part in Air-Raid Precaution and other services.

Lady Nunburnholme, who represents the National Council on the Central Committee of Women's Voluntary Services, suggested the tasks for women in cases of emergency: Assisting billeting officers to find accommodation, helping at railway stations and canteens, help in providing extra transport, provision of food, clothing and bedding.

Other topics discussed at the National Council meeting were the introduction of women police surgeons, the community care of epileptics, hospital provisions and the adoption abroad of British children.

DR. BENES WITHDREW

Dr. Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, was backed by Scottish Nationalists for rector of Glasgow University, but as he did not accept the nomination, his name with withdrawn just before the recent election which resulted in the choice of Sir Archibald Sinclair.

57th Regiment Chapter I.O.D.E. Meets

With the regent, Mrs. R. E. Clarke, presiding, the 57th Regiment Chapter I.O.D.E., meeting was held Thursday afternoon in the Armouries.

A chapter of the Empire Study Book, dealing with the people of India, was taken by Mrs. W. Ashby. Mrs. C. E. Newman reported on educational work, and Mrs. R. G. Cottrell, Mrs. S. Frape; and Mrs. McWilliams, with Mrs. Newman as convener, were appointed to look after the Christmas gift box, which is to be sent to the adopted school near Minden. An outstanding feature of the meeting was a shower of knitted goods, which will be included in this Christmas bale.

Mrs. W. Howden was appointed on the Hospital Committee in place of Mrs. W. Sharpe, who has been unable to carry on her duties because of illness. Mention was made of the very splendid work which Mrs. Sharpe had accomplished during her period of office. Donations were made to the Red Cross and Christmas relief, and the meeting closed with God Save the King. Tea was then served.

Children Attend Dress Rehearsal

A dress rehearsal of the Minstrel Show and one-act play which is to be given tonight under auspices of C.W.L. Immaculate Conception Parish included in an apreciative audience.

In the Minstrel Show, end men were Dan Leonard, Homer Lundy, C. Evans, J. O'Dette, L. O'Toole and M. Leonard. Solos were given by Mary Mongraw, Eric May, Adele McMurray, R. Mongraw, and E. Leonard (Interlocutor). A chorus was given by eleven young men and women, with special numbers contributed between the first and second part of the program by Walter Farr, Jack Flagler, vocal solos, and a tap dance by Patricia Primeau, accompanied by Miss Bernice Flynn.

"The Rascal Pat," a one-act comedy portraying the complications that set in when a servant attempts to serve two masters, has a cast of the following: Wm. O'Toole as Pat, the Irish servant; John Primeau as Charlie Livingstone, a poor young gentleman; James Scollard as Major Puffjacket, an irascible old gentleman; Nora Moher as Laura, the Major's niece; Louise Flynn as Nancy, Laura's Maid. As an added attraction in tonight's show, Morley Plunkett will be a featured artist.

Amateur Play Is Presented At Mark Street

First of the amateur plays to be staged this fall was presented in the basement of Mark Street United Church last night. The dramatic club of the church opened the first night of a two-performance stand, the other to be held to-night, before a large audience.

The play, "Home Town Girl," was enthusiastically received by the audience which almost filled the basement of the church despite chilly weather that dramatic club officials feared for a time would have an unfavourable bearing on the attendance. A comedy in three acts, the play was directed by William Hepburn and its presentation showed that the cast had spent long hours in preparation, perfecting themselves in their roles. Of a quality above that usually found in amateur plays, it reflected credit on its cast and director.

The play is perfectly adapted for presentation by amateur, contains no change of scenery, and has a swift-moving plot that culminates in complete happiness for almost the entire cast, except those characters for whom morality must preserve the lash of justice. The story concerns itself with the struggle of Marian Hastings (Ruth Murray) to marry Arthur Jennings (Bernard Pammett) despite the conniving of two English relatives, Mrs. Hastings-Smith (Mrs. W. Hepburn) and Leroy Hastings-Smith (Norman Hewitt). The plot includes interception of lovers' letters in an attempt to shatter young romance but all works out in the interests of the young lovers in a dramatic last act, well-acted by Miss Murray.

Mrs. Pitchford Is Hostess to Class

Mrs. Bert Pitchford, McGill Street, was hostess on Thursday night to about thirty members of the King's Own Bible Class of St. James' United Church. A short devotional service was led by Mrs. Hess, when the Scripture was read by Mrs. W. Prest and all joined in silent prayer in honor of their former teacher.

The business session was taken up by Mrs. G. Harris, when very fine reports were given by the various conveners. New plans included an "old-time" concert to be held late in January, and promises to be one of the chief features of class activities.

At these monthly meetings there is a commingling of the spiritual, the business, and a period of social enjoyment. Mrs. E. Kitney, in charge, led the hour with three peppy contests, with Mesdames Bristow, Doig, and A. Davis carrying off the prizes. A delightful group of vocal solos by Mrs. E. R. Frost, was accompanied by Mrs. E. Kitney, and very much enjoyed.

At the conclusion of this pleasing program, refreshments in charge of Mrs. G. Pearson and her efficient committee were served. The thanks of the class to Mrs. Pitchford, the hostess, and to the social convener, were voiced by Mrs. Rosborough and Mrs. Tate, and heartily endorsed by everyone present.

The December meeting of the King's Own Class will be held on the usual date at the home of Mrs. A. Davis, Prince Street.

Servants Called To New Rights

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP).—Many domestics object to being called by their Christian names and the "courtesy of address" should be extended to domestic employment, declared a spokesman for the National Union of Domestic Workers which has drawn up a "charter of rights" ratified by the general council of the Trades Union Congress.

Furthermore, the spokesman said, there was no reason why house workers should be compelled to wear caps which she considered a "relic of a bygone age."

The charter, which would set up a closed shop for domestics, demands regulation of working hours and wages and includes proposals regarding living accommodation, food, holidays, uniform and the manner servants should be addressed by their employers. An explanatory statement accompanying the charter attributes the present shortage of help to "unfavorable conditions" in household service compared with other employment.

The charter calls for a 48-hour week for employees over 18 years of age with a minimum wage of from 15 to 18 shillings ($3.49 to $4.18) a week for general workers in Greater London, and 25 shillings $5.81) for cooks. Separate bedroom, annual vacation of two weeks with board and wages, "reasonable facilities" for receiving visitors and other conditions of contract are asked for.

Famed Airman Takes New Bride

H. O. Loveless Is Elected President Of Deloro Dramatic Society

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 25—The annual meeting of the Deloro Social and Dramatic Society was held in Deloro Hall on Thursday evening, the retiring president, C. T. Nicholson, presiding over an attendance of thirty-six.

Secretary-treasurer J. H. English gave the financial report which show the funds to be in a healthy condition, the balance on hand at the end of the financial years being $243.

The president's report was followed with interest. Mr. Nicholson mentioned that the events sponsored by the society had been successful. He showed how the fees paid in by the members were allocated. In conclusion, he referred to the use of the hall by different organizations and also thanked all for their co-operation.

As the agenda called for the librarian's report, a motion was carried placing on record the society's appreciation of the late W. R. Reynold's services in this connection and the mutual regret at his passing. William Townson, M.C., giving his report, said that the dance practices had fallen off a little this past year but there was strong hopes of the attendances being raised again.

Officers Are Elected

Next came the election of officers resulting as follows: President, H. O. Loveless; vice-president, D. Rattray; secretary-treasurer, J. H. English (re-elected for eleventh term); librarian, Mrs. A. V. Yates; M.C., W. Townson; auditor, C. R. Quinn.

A motion was carried that the management committee consist of the officers and the president may add from the membership such members as he might think necessary.

Under general business a motion was passed that Mr. F. A. Bapty, who had been identified with the Christmas tree movement for so many years, be asked to take charge again this year. Friday, December 30th was ultimately decided as the date for the holding of the annual New Year's ball.

Dave Rattray then reported on the activities of the Deloro Badminton Club. He expressed appreciation for the use of the hall and hoped that it would be continued for the remainder of the year.

Before the meeting adjourned R. A. Elliott expressed thanks to the officers of the society who had carried on during the past year for their efficient work.

An Ocean of 'Mums Is Latest Curl

OTTAWA, Nov. 25 (CP)—The "upswept" effect may be a trying task for hairdressers but it appears to be a simple feat for Mother Nature in the display of curly-headed chrysanthemums on view here at the Experimental Farm.

Some are curled up, some curled down and others are just shaggy in the 40,000 heads forming a 200-foot wall of 'mums which range from minute pom-poms to toy balloon-sized "Majestic" exhibition varieties in the annual production of the horticultural branch of the agriculture department.

The master size of exhibition types have been named after celebrities. Sir William Clark, a former British high commissioner to Canada, is a bronze bloom whose petals curve round so tightly the deeper rust tone on the inner side of the petal is scarcely seen.

Lord Willingdon is a butter yellow mass of ringlets, the size of a man's head. Lady Willingdon is a smaller orange bloom with slender-pointed petals opening from a golden "Cushion" centre.

Less pretentious blooms are the anemone cluster single 'mums with as many as 10 blooms to one stem, varying in colors from pale cream to deep orchid and American beauty. Of the 140 varieties displayed this year 40 have been developed through research carried on at the Farm. Three years are required to develop and perfect a new variety.

Find Girls Keener Upon Geography

MANCHESTER, England, Nov. 25—(CP).—At the annual dinner of the Manchester Geographical Society, the president expressed astonishment at the lack of interest in geography by the modern boy. He said that a lecture on the 1938 attempt to climb Everest 80 per cent of the children who attended in the afternoon were girls.

Responding, Admiral Sir William Goodenough suggested that the reason for the schoolboy's indifference was the failure to introduce sufficient human interest. Who cared that Arabia was nearly a triangle, or even what the shape of Czechoslovakia was? The youth of the country was more interested in the human race and the effect that geographical conditions had on character.

A CLEVER RUSE

A Jewish banker brought his gold out of Italy by moulding it into fenders of his car and painting over the metal so perfectly that the frontier police were hoodwinked.

Successful Supper Held By St. Luke's Guild

Attended by a large crowd, the supper which St. Luke's Women's Guild held Thursday evening in the Parish Hall was a very successful affair.

Bowls of colorful fruit, ferns, and red candles decked the supper tables. Conveners of the cooking were the president, Mrs. J. W. Ebbs, Mrs. R. Lawless and Mrs. C. Joyes. Assistants included Mrs. G. J. Bousefield, Mrs. M. Burnham, Mrs. Bradshaw, Mrs. H. Starr, Miss E. Stewart, Mrs. A. Ebbs, Mrs. Thompson, Sr., Miss Phyllis Starr, Mrs. A. Mackin, Mrs. A. Davis, Mrs. R. Parsons, Mrs. R. A. Adams. Mr. R. Parsons and Mr. J. J Turner assisted in carving.

A fancy work table, where interesting and delightful novelties of every variety were on display to solve the problems of Christmas shoppers, was convened by Mrs. J. Burgess, assisted by Mrs. Gordon Maniece, who was also treasurer for the supper.

A candy table, always a centre of interest, was arranged with candy boxes done up in prettily colored paper, and was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Stewart, assisted by Shirley Wyatt and Kay Joyes. This table was under the auspices of the Senior Branch of the W.A.

Tickets on a Christmas cake and a chenille bedroom rug were sold by Miss Audrey Heap and Miss Jean McCauley for the Girls' Branch of the W.A. The cake was won by Miss Edith Wills, and the rug by Miss Armour. Tickets on a turkey and a doll were sold for the Junior Branch of the W.A. by Miss Joyce Wyatt and Mrs. D. Wyatt. The turkey was won by Mr. R. Turner and the doll by Mrs. A. Vass.

Mrs. Widdifield Speaks to Liberal Women

Hon. Senator Cairine Wilson, and Mrs. C. R. Widdifield, recently elected president of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association, and well known in this city as the former Marion Denne, addressed the Women's Liberal Association of Forest Hill on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Angus Fraser presided and greetings were extended by Mrs. J. Edwards of the South York Women Liberals; Mr. H. H. Donald, president of the South York Liberal Association; Mr. Daniel W. Lang, K.C., and Hon. Peter Heenan. Wives of cabinet ministers and members present included Mrs. Heenan, Mrs. L. J. Simpson, Mrs. Ian Strachan and Mrs. Harry Nixon.

Want Co-operation Taught in Schools

OTTAWA, Nov. 12 (CP)—A world-wide survey of the status of women now underway by a committee established at the 1938 League of Naticns Assembly at Geneva, is another step forward in the International Council of Women to elevate woman's position in the home, community and professional field.

Inaugurated in 1888 in Washington by a handful of suffragettes, educationists and pacifists, the Council has grown to include memberships from 36 national councils today. Co-operating with various organizations affiliated with the national councils, the International Council has steadily gained ground towards its objective.

Votes for women have been won, maternal mortality has been reduced, pre-natal care improved and investigations into migration, education and traffic of women have brought forth valuable contributions.

From the report of the honorary recording secretary of the council at the international meeting in Glasgow in July, comes an insight into the status of women 50 years ago. It discloses:—

People then did not think it unusual for a wife to be beaten.

If a married woman went into business every dollar she earned belonged to her husband.

A widow could not legally claim even as much as a dollar for her life-long service within the home.

The child belonged entirely to the father.

Prejudice hindered the medical woman's career.

With The Girl Guides

Our leaders have been busy looking for new headquarters. Perhaps you did not know our present one cost us nearly $200 per annum, and the time has come when we can no longer bear this expense. Incidentally, we are the only guides in Ontario who pay rent. Through the generosity and kindly interest of Rev. Father Kelly, we have a room in the Lyceum, which is being newly decorated for us and will be used by Guides and Brownies of 1st and 2nd Companies. This means so much to us, and we are indeed grateful.

Mrs. White, Brown Owl, is living up to her motto and "lending a hand" with 3rd Company in the absence of its Captain, Mrs. Douglas. Mrs. Whalon was a guest at the banquet on Saturday which ended the Scouters' Conference, and was very proud to be a witness of the presentation of the medal of Merit to Commissioner J. T. Hornsby—the guides of the city tender their heartiest congratulations to him.

TELLS OF AMAZING BENEFITS RECEIVED BY USING SYNTONA

Says: "Only Those Who Have Suffered As I Did and Have Regained A Normal Degree of Good Health Can Realize What It Will Really Do." Read Her Statement.

MRS. G. L. ROGERS

"Words cannot describe the way I suffered with rheumatic pains in my limbs and joints," said Miss G. L. Rogers, 863 Stedwell St., London, in a recent statement.

"My ankles would puff and swell and the pains in my back and limbs caused me to lose many a night's sleep. My circulation was so poor that my hands would turn white in cold weather. I was seldom without a headache. I had become badly rundown and had lost 12 pounds. My appetite was poor and what little I did eat would sour in my stomach causing acidity, heartburn and biliousness. Frequently I had dizzy spells, spots before my eyes; my tongue was coated and my complexion was poor.

"I feel deeply grateful to a neighbor who recommended Syntona to me for this medicine has proved a real blessing. After taking nine bottles my rheumatic condition has been cleared up and I feel healthier than I did for years. My weight is back to normal for my height and I feel so much better in every way. Only those who have suffered as I did and have regained their vitality and good health can realize what a fine medicine Syntona is."

Syntona is made only from the pure juices of selected herbs, roots and leaves. It produces these results by cleansing the system of excess acids and poisonous waste matter, and by aiding in the assimilation of the food for strength and energy.

Come to Elliott's Drug Store, Peterborough, and find out for yourself all about this grand new medicine that is helping so many people.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

New York Girl Photographer Gets Big Scoop

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (CP)—While the big Canadian saltbanker beat her way down the coast in rough weather from Lunenberg, N. S. to Boston to defend successfully her championship as Queen of Gloucester, a woman in dungarees could be seen scrambling across the slippery decks and climbing dizzily into the rigging to take photographs of the schooner crew in action. The Bluenose won 3-2 on the series.

Miss Doris Day, a New York photographer, signed on as dishwasher for the opportunity of making a complete record of the voyage. Between spells in the kitchen, she worked as hard and dangerously at her work as any of the crew.

"I felt this might be the last great race between these two beautiful schooners and I wanted to have a complete record," she explained on returning to her fashionable New York studio. "I wanted to get close-ups of the actual operation of the ship—the repairing jobs, recutting of sails and the hundred other daily details."

She has learned the technique for a woman to get along with "rough-handed, tough-spoken—but never rough-mannered — sailors." There are three points to remember, she said: "Watch for a chance to be helpful, never let them know you're tired, show them you can be one of them by taking everything to a certain point."

Miss Day is somewhat of a seasoned sailor-potographer. In 1932 she spent a month persuading the captain of the schooner Melbarlena out of Yarmouth, N. S., to take her to the banks. She riddled the belief a woman brought bad luck to a ship when the Melbarlena made the season's record catch with her aboard.

Institute to Buy Fire Equipment

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, Nov. 25 — Bethany will have a fire engine because of the efforts of the women's institute of that village. Purchase of a fire wagon, hose and pails was agreed upon at the last meeting of the organization and a committee appointed to procure them.

Meeting at the home of Mrs. Roy Jarvis, sixteen members were present and heard opening exercises conducted by the president, Mrs. R. W. Price. Correspondence was read regarding beautification of home surroundings. An appeal for help for fire sufferers was answered with a grant of two dollars. It was decided to make the usual request for the government grant.

Plans for an entertainment to be held in winter months were discussed and a committee was appointed to look after the necessary details. Mrs. Payne delivered an interesting address and demonstration on a "Buymanship" course which is to be held in Millbrook under supervision of Miss Collins of Toronto. Mrs. Herbert Fallis gave a demonstration on the making and protection of silk stockings which proved interesting and profitable. Lunch was then served by the hostess and group in charge. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. McCartney on December 11.

We Noticed

....For the person who invariably wears black, nigger brown, or navy blue because it is always smart, always safe, and accessories always match, here are some new color contrasts which would link up with the sombre shades and give them a new lease on life.

◇ ◇ ◇

....Magenta, primrose, candy pink, firmament blues...all strong favorites with navy blue. Don't spoil the effect by having too many color accessories and so making it "bitty." Have one splash of color, a scarf, revers, cuffs, flowers, etc., and leave it at that.

◇ ◇ ◇

....For brown, there are all the lovely terra-cotta-verging-to-rust shades, bright shades of green, and lilac to choose from. You can team two colors, terra-cotta and new forest green, to brown. With black, concentrate on cyclamen, turquoise blue, pillar-box red or violet-lilac, either together or alone.

Bridgenorth Union Plans Peace Talk

FAIRVIEW, Nov. 25.—The regular meeting of the Bridgenorth W. C.T.U. was held in the Fairview church on Monday afternoon with a splendid attendance. The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. J. Gordon Mann.

Interesting readings were given by Miss Olive Sidey, Miss Ferne Armstrong and Mrs. Elmer Milburn on Temperance and Peace. Mrs. R. D. Wright gave an interesting report of the recent convention, stating most encouraging facts of progress during the past year. Mrs. Albert Armstrong, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. Miss Lillian McGregor and Mrs. Harold Lewis sang a duet accompanied by Miss Margaret Milburn. It was decided to have an open meeting in the Bridgenorth church with lantern slides on "Peace" about the 9th of December. A hymn, "Take Time To Be Holy," was sung and the meeting brought to a close with the Mizpah benediction. Lunch was served by the Fairview ladies.

The young people held their regular meeting in the church on Monday evening with a large attendance.

Miss Anne Franks gave a most interesting demonstration on 'First Aid.' Miss Olive Bell and Miss Loretta McDougall of Peterborough rendered a lovely duet.

The ladies of Fairview who attended the W.A. convention which was held in Millbrook Wednesday were Mrs. Wilbert Rosborough, Mrs. Cephas Heard, Mrs. Austin Poast and Mrs. Wesley Bell.

Among those from this community attending the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto were Miss Dorothy Tully, Neil Tully, Earl Rosborough and Clarence Mann.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ferguson and family of Peterborough, have moved to the Fifth Line of Smith in Mr. Mullen's house.

BIG IN CHARM AND CHIC

By ALICE ALDEN

WHETHER the hair stays down or whether it takes a climb, there's always room on a smart head for a little hat casually tilted to one side. Small these hats may be, but they are big in charm and chic. Atop her gleaming locks, Kay Sutton, right, perches a neat felt pillbox that is adorned with a double choux of grosgrain ribbon. She wears a "choker" of turbaned heads in silver. Joan Fontaine, left, brushes up her blonde tresses and treats them to a Daniel Boone sort of hat. It is a high-angle-crowned model of black velour, with silver fox pompoms matching her jacket.

Presentation Made To Guild President

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, Nov. 23.— Miss Ivy Smith, retiring president of the Girls' Guild of St. Paul's Anglican church was honored at the regular meeting of the organization held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Earl Smith.

Miss Smith, who is retiring from active association with the Guild was presented with a beautiful set of sherbet glassware, by Miss Neta Palmer, and Mrs. A. R. Holden read an address. The latter voiced the appreciation of the members for the splendid work done by Miss Smith, and spoke of the harmonious relations which had been paramount during her term of office. She also expressed keen regret that Miss Smith was severing connections with the association.

Miss Smith, taken by surprise at this display of friendship and kindness, spoke with feeling in a brief reply. She said the associations which she had formed during her time with the Guild had been most pleasant, and she thanked the members and Mrs. Holden for the lovely gift.

It was decided no meetings would be held until the month of January and the secretary-treasurer was authorized to meet any outstanding debts.

The remainder of the evening was spent in games and contests, which included the language of the flowers and a contest on native birds. Rev. A. R. Holden and Mrs. Holden won the prizes in the two contests. The hostess, Mrs. Earl Smith, assisted by Mrs. Bruce Smith, served a dainty lunch as the program drew to a close.

Boston Domestic Under Agreement

BOSTON, Nov. 25—(CP)—In spite of the lack of organization, a number of household employees in Metropolitan Boston are working under a voluntary agreement formulated by three committees of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association.

The agreement has been in effect for nearly a year-and-a-half now and scarcely a day passes but the Y.W.C.A. has letters or telephone calls from employers or employees asking advice on the unexpected situations that always will come up despite the best of intentions.

One of the most recent was from a leading woman doctor here inquiring whether she should pay her nursemaid who was taken sick a week after she returned from vacation.

The agreement covers duties, working hours, time off, holidays and vacations. Total working hours are not to exceed 65 a week and a shorter week comparable to that of other workers is recommended. Two hours on call is considered the equivalent of one hour of actual working time. Time on call is defined as time when the employee may rest or follow her own pursuits but is not completely free of all responsibility.

Schedule Of Time Off

Time off may be scheduled in several ways, such as two half days a week beginning not later than 2 p.m. on weekdays or 3 p.m. on Sundays, or one day each week; occasional weekends following the forfeit of equivalent time; substituting equivalent time for extra evenings.

Four of eight holidays, or equivalent time, are given under the agreement. Vacations of at least one week with pay after the first year's work of a household, and vary in different communities. Overtime is compensated for by extra time off.

Comfortable living conditions should include three adequate balanced meals a day; private bathroom, possibly shared with another employee; private room, which may also be shared with another employee, adequate space for personal belongings and adequate heat.

The agreement is between employer and employee and is put in writing after two-weeks trial, a copy kept by both parties. Revisions are occasionally made by mutual consent.

Children Favor Royalty Films

LONDON, Nov. 25—(CP).—Child movie fans thoroughly dislike dictators, but "royalty" scenes are high in popularity. This is shown by results of a questionnaire issued to 142 managers of London theatres where special children's matinees have been established.

The likes and dislikes of children are analyzed. Of the 88 per cent. who dislike foreign dictators, 53 per cent express their feelings with boos. Three per cent boo society weddings and fashion parades. News reels as a whole are liked by 83 per cent.

Royalty scenes are cheered by 61 per cent of the children, military and naval scenes by 32 per cent, and sports items by 30 per cent. Airplane flights arouse a vocal response from 14 per cent.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"When some friend has proved untrue — betrayed your simple trust; Used you for their selfish end, and trampled in the dust—the Past, with all its memories, and all its scared ties, the light is blotted from the skies—for something in you dies."

—Patience Strong.

Dear Friends:

Which of us hasn't had that happen to us? Our hearts wrenched with pain, our illusions torn from us, our self-respect trod in the dust, and our love turned back on us.

It is a hard thing to bear alright. And some parts of the world are more addicted along these lines than others. It seems as if one or two infects the other, until there are few you can trust.

"One by one, Life deals its blow —we find that in the end—we are lucky if we have one good and faithful friend; one whose love has stood the test a hundred different ways; one good friend to walk with us through bright and stormy days."

Yes, when I hear or read of someone with a multitude of true friends, I wonder in my heart if there was one true friend amongst the many. One who would defend through thick or thin, one who loved them with all their faults.

For, we have many acquaintances, but few real friends. We have those who use us and cast us aside. Those who come to us in trouble, but who forget all about us when things turn bright again.

"Bless your false and faithless friend, just smile and pass along—God must be the judge of it: He knows the right and wrong.... Life is short—don't waste the hours by brooding on the past; His great laws are good and just; Truth conquers at the last."

I used to brood and search myself to see where the flaw could have been in myself, that anyone would be so vile towards me. Now I do not look for so much, and am never so disappointed.

I used also to feel resentment, but not any more. I leave them to God, and He takes care of it. We have a tendency, when we think of the quotation "He who sows must also reap," to think this only applies when bad is done.

But the good we have sown we shall reap also, just as the bad they have sown towards us will have to be reaped by them. If we did not reap from them, we shall surely reap from another.

It isn't always the one you thought was your friend who comes to your aid in time of trouble, but often the ones you apparently never did anything for who stand by you. Your own good that you sent out has travelled around to them, and so they must return it to you.

"Red and deep our wounds may be—but after all the pain—God's own finger touches us, and we are healed again....With faith restored and trust renewed—we look towards the stars—the world will see the smiles we have—but God will see the scars."

Yes, we must show smiles to the world, for if we complain there is often a look comes into their eyes as much as to say we must have done something to deserve this else it would not have come.

But I don't think it is that we deserve this, as that we give too much time and thought to those we love, and sort of make a god of them, and He said: "Thou shall have none other gods before me."

And sometimes we do make graven images of our friends, giving the homage where it doesn't belong. We let this friendship crowd out the best Friend of All, and so He turns them from us, that we may turn to Him.

We might think, "why does He do this? I have love enough for both," but did you demonstrate that? Did you give as much thought to pleasing Him, as much time to talk to Him? Think it over and you will not feel so bitter. Remember that I am always, Your Friend,

ROBERTA.

That silver of any description, no matter how tarnished, may be made like new if cleaned in this way? Damp a soft cloth with Olive oil and rub over the silver. All the tarnish marks will disappear. Then use a soft shining duster and dip in plate powder. This will dry off any oil that is adhering to the article, and you will find your silver glittering like new, and done in a few minutes with no trouble or bother.

To remove candle drippings from a living room rug, sponge with carbon tetrachloride and blot with fresh blotting paper. Remove any grease stain which remains by pouring the liquid through the rug.

WHY NURSES SCARCE

JOHANNESBURG — (CP). — Scarcity of junior nurses in South Africa was attributed by George Constable, president of the Transvaal Hospital Association, to "deplorable behavior" of some doctors and senior nurses toward the novices.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOMAS ROBINS.
(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Nov. 25. — Funeral service for the late Mrs. Thomas Robins was held on Tuesday afternoon at the family residence, Alnwick Township.

Mrs. Robins' death occurred on Sunday, November 20, after a lengthy illness. Before her marriage she was Maggie, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Linton, pioneer farmers of Alnwick Township.

Mrs. Robins was a quiet home-loving woman, devoting her energies to the care of her family, and her passing leaves a vacant place in the home and hearts of husband and family which only a wife and mother can fill. She was a member of the United Church.

The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott. Interment was made at Centenary Cemetery.

The pall-bearers were three nephews, Harry, Oliver, and Hilton Linton, and three grandchildren, Hilton Pringle, Basil Robins, and James Robins.

Mrs. Robins is survived by her husband, four sons, Clifford of Peterborough, William, Ora and Cephas of Alnwick, and three daughters, Mrs. A. Pringle, Roseneath, Mrs. Oran Campbell of Harwood, and Mrs. Lloyd West of Grafton. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Maud Carter of Cobourg, and four brothers, John, Cephas, and Robert Linton of Alnwick, and Ephas Linton of Haldimand.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up flat, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why fierce purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water surges through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of hard, poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, naturally, and passed out of your body. Then do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your druggist now—but if you're wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight!
(Advt.)

Yesterday's Deaths

London — Lieut.-General Sir Basil Burnett-Hitchcock, 61, largely responsible for demobilization of 5,000,000 troops at the end of the Great war.

Cleveland—Hayden Eames, 74, industrialist and a former officer of the United States army and navy.

New York—Henry Robert McClure, 64, a former editor of McClure's magazine and the McClure newspaper syndicate.

Dresden, Germany—Prince Johann Georg of Saxony, 69, brother of the late saxon king, the late Frederich August III.

Rome — Mrs. William J. B. Macaulay, American wife of the Irish minister of the Holy See.

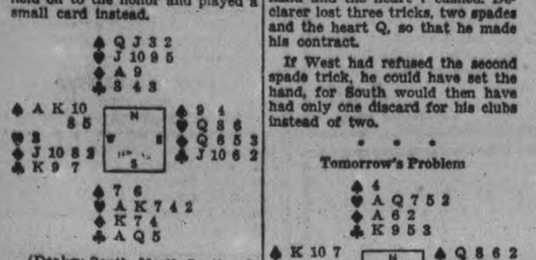
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

HASTE MAKES WASTE

IT DOESN'T PAY to be in too much of a hurry. Taking a trick, just because you are able to, may cost you two tricks later on. If the declarer plainly expects you to play your top card on one of his leads, it is frequently wise to speculate a bit about what would develop if you held on to the honor and played a small card instead.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable)

South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart, which West overcalled with 1-Spade. North and East passed and South bid 2-Hearts, which North raised to 3-Hearts and South took the contract to 4-Hearts.

After cashing the spade K, West switched to the diamond J, which South won with the K. The hearts A and K were taken, leaving East with the winning trump. Declarer then led the spade 7 and after winning with the A, West returned a diamond to dummy's A. East was then thrown in the lead with the heart Q. When he returned the club J, South went in with the A, ruffed the diamond 7 and on the spades Q and J discarded his two losing clubs. The club 4 was ruffed in the South hand and the heart 7 cashed. Declarer lost three tricks, two spades and the heart Q, so that he made his contract.

If West had refused the second spade trick, he could have set the hand, for South would then have had only one discard for his clubs instead of two.

Tomorrow's Problem

DRIVEWAY FOR KING

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—(CP). — The federal driveway and parks area in Ottawa should be named after Prime Minister Mackenzie King in recognition of his "vision and steady persistence which brought them about," George J. McIlraith told the Ottawa West Liberal Association in his presidential address last night. The driveway and parks bear no official name.

NAME APOSTOLIC DELEGATE.

LONDON—The Votican is expected to appoint an apostolic delegate to Great Britain for the first time in more than a century.

The Pope's representative will not be a nuncio and will not hold ambassadorial rank, but will be a laison officer between the Holy See and the Roman Catholic Church in this country.

THE CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

Drought-Killed Desert Now Habitable

KIMBERLEY, Nov. 25 (CP)—Into a one-time desert where South Africa's earliest known man struggled to obtain a primitive living the Union government is sending settlers to reap crops from fertile, irrigated land.

Sixty-five miles north of here lies an area in which 41 years ago hunters watched the greatest game migration in memory—saw animals heading north to escape encroaching drought as rivers and water holes dried up. Not far from there the Taungs skull was found, relic of the country's earliest man who is believed to have been overwhelmed by the fierce drought of his homeland.

Cecil Rhodes, the Empire builder, saw the country and expressed belief only irrigation would make it habitable. Some sought to settle in it before water was brought to it. Their children grew up and sometimes died without having seen a running stream all their lives.

Now the government has established 78 settlers and their families in land made fertile by diverted waters of the Vaal and Hartz Rivers. It plans to help many more find new homes in the area, giving each settler plots of about 60 acres each, moving them into comfortable prefabricated homes that reach the country "knock down" but ready for assembly.

Homes For 2,000

Eventually, the government hopes, it will be able to place about 2,000 settlers in the newly-reclaimed area. For the moment it plans to send them in batches of 50, picking each batch from as many as 1,200 applicants at a time and obtaining the best possible settlers. Preference is given married men who are placed on probation in the new land and ousted in five years if they don't make good.

The homes cost roughly $1,200, contain two or three bedrooms with provision for extensions as families grow. They have large kitchens, dining and living rooms and are built with two-inch cavity walls to maintain even temperature.

The government clears 20 acres on each farm land of heavy boulders and big trees, leaving the settler to complete the job. Each man gets six trek oxen, several cows, agricultural implements, $15 a month for his wife and himself, a little more than $3 for each child living with him and dependent on him, up to a maximum of $15.

In six months the cash allowance is halved, by the end of the first year it is cancelled unless the settler has a good reason for not being self-supporting.

Officials say the scheme will never pay for itself any more than Holland's dykes do. But they hope it and other schemes will check the unwanted trek of rural populations to cities.

Officers Try Rescue Of 200 Foreigners

SHANGHAI, Nov. 25—(AP)—An officer from the British gunboat Cockchafer, accompanied by a United States gunboat officer and a Japanese detail, attempted to-day to establish contact with more than 200 foreigners marooned at Kuling since mid-summer.

In refuge on Kuling Mountain, about 15 miles south of Kiukiang, the refugees still were reported safe despite the fighting that had raged around them in recent months. Kuling is about 130 miles south-east of Hankow.

The expedition to Kuling left Kiukiang last night. Plans were said to be indefinite, but it was possible that the British and American officers would attempt to remove the foreigners, among them invalids, women and children.

It was reported that 5,000 Chinese soldiers still held the mountain, despite encirclement by Japanese.

The Japanese guard detail, headed by an army officer, was to escort officers to a Chinese outpost somewhere on the mountainside.

Japanese authorities were said to have promised safe conduct of the refugees through their lines if the foreigners were able and wished to leave the mountain. Presumably the British and American officers would carry that assurance to them.

Premier Hepburn Sanctions Showing Quints At New York World Fair

Says However Tots' Guardians Must Agree, Dr. Dafoe Sidesteps Issue And Allan Brown Objects Outright

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP).—Whether the Dionne quintuplets should be exhibited at the New York World's Fair appeared today to be a question for the quints' guardians to decide. Overtures already have been made by officials of the exhibition for an appearance of the famed five sisters when the fair opens next year.

Premier Hepburn, whose government originally stepped in to establish a guardianship over the quints, admitted last night that representatives of the fair had approached him, but he referred them to the guardians. Since then he has heard nothing more of the proposal.

Mr. Hepburn said his government would have no objection, "if the guardians, including the doctor (Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe) and the father (Oliva Dionne,) deem it advisable." Other guardians are Percy Wilson, Ontario's official guardian; and Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay.

Called by long distance at Callander, Dr. Dafoe parried questions regarding the proposal, saying he knew nothing of it "except what we see in the papers." Asked whether there was a possibility of the quints going to New York, he said: "Not without the consent of the Ontario government."

It was understood Keith Munro, business manager for the children, conferred last night with Mr. Hepburn, but the subject of their discussion was not disclosed.

Brown Opposes It.

Meanwhile Dr. Allan Brown, consulting physician to the Quints, came out flat-footed against the New York offer. While admitting it would be a matter for the guardians, he said: "I am confident the guardians wouldn't make the grave mistake of sending the children to the World's Fair. After all, they are not exhibits."

A possible factor in the New York proposal is the coming visit of the King and Queen. Their Majesties will tour Canada in May and it has been suggested that they might go to Callander to see the quints.

Only this week the children have resumed public appearances in the yard of their home. They had been recuperating from operations for removal of tonsils and adenoids two weeks ago. The operations were described as successful.

Colony Yielding Split Empire

HARLOW, Essex, England, Nov. 26—(CP-Havas)—The British Empire will be split from end to end if the government yields to Germany's colonial demands and hands over "helpless native peoples" to the Nazi rule of "terrorism and concentration camps," Winston Churchill declared last night.

"It is quite certain that no such act of baseness could be committed without splitting the Conservative party from top to bottom and—what is of larger consequence—dividing the British Empire from end to end," the Conservative veteran—a critic of the Chamberlain government—said in a speech here.

"Whereas a few weeks ago a lot of influential people were taking it for granted that the former German colonies or their equivalent would be handed over to Hitler in order o appease him for the time being, there has now been a very decisive rally against any surrender and betrayal of trust."

Indications of the temper of the country on the colonial issue could be seen in by-elections, he said. The candidates of both sides "have all declared one way or he other against handing over the helpless native populations to the men who have been organizing the recent progroms in Germany."

Furthermore, he said, a statement in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Chamberlain, in which he declared there was no question at present of returning the former German colonies, make it plain that the British people would not condone any such methods of "appeasing the Reich."

No Aggression

"In my view we should have faithful and correct relations with the Nazi leaders," Mr. Churchill said. "We seek nothing from them except their avoidance of aggression and we hope they seek nothing from us except that we should dwell side by side with them in a peaceful manner. That we indeed desire to do."

Declaring he was entirely in agreement with the Marquess of Zetland, secretary of state for India, who recently assailed the Nazis' anti-semitic persecution, Mr. Churchill said:

"The cruelties inflicted on the helpless Jews of Germany and the stealing of their property and money is not at all different from what has been going on week by week in Vienna since it fell into the grip of the Nazis.

"That is why I could not believe that the piece of paper signed at Munich by Herr Hitler and Mr. Chamberlain altered in any decisive way the facts of the world in which we live.

"We ought to arm night and day to put ourselves in a position of safety. We ought to join ourselves for mutual protection to other countries who, like us, desire to dwell in peace but who are determined not to fall under the nazi yoke.

Pontiff Rallies, Sits Up To See Cardinal

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 26 (A.P.).—An official communique said to-day that Pope Pius XI. had "returned to a more or less normal condition" after a heart attack which had caused grave concern.

The communique said:

"The Holy Father passed a calm night, resting without any disturbance. The improvement which was noted yesterday evening continued, happily, so that this morning His Holiness has returned to a more or less normal condition."

Vatican sources said the 81-year-old Pontiff, although still weak, was able to get up from his bed and receive Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State.

He first received Cardinal Pacelli in his bedroom, sitting in an arm-chair which made breathing easier. He then had himself carried in the chair from his bedroom to his official audience chamber on the third floor of the palace where he continued his conversation with the Secretary of State.

The communique said the Pope's chief physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, "taking into consideration the state of weakness resulting from yesterday's attack advised several days of rest before the august Pontiff should resume his customary rhythm of life."

Receives Cardinal.

..."Therefore," it added, "His Holiness limited himself this morning to receiving only the Cardinal Secretary of State."

Cardinal Pacelli's visit was for the purpose of getting authorization to receive a group of newly-weds and a Hungarian pilgrimage to whom the Pope was to have granted an audience.

Monsignor Carlo Confalonieri celebrated Mass this morning in a room near the bedroom of the Pontiff who listened to the Mass and took Communion.

The communique brought reassurance to the thousands who had been concerned over the Pope's condition yesterday and last night. Many had feared that his advanced age and weakened condition might

Oshawa Girl Sinking

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP).—The condition of Lois Melly, 11-year-old Harmony, Ont., girl, ill in hospital here with pneumococcic meningitis, was described as "very poor" today. Dr. D. A. Axsmith, resident physician, said complications had developed in her case.

German Nazis Turn Pawn Brokers, Aid Jews Liquidate Treasures In Paying Fine

BERLIN, Nov. 26 (AP)—German Nazis today opened a glorified pawn-brokerage business to help hard-pressed Jews raise funds to pay the $400,000,000 fine imposed for the assassination of Ernst Vom Rath, German embassy attache in Paris, by a Jewish youth.

The Berlin chamber of industry and commerce started a bureau on behalf of the economics ministry to take over jewels, art works and other valuable objects from Jews throughout Germany.

The fine's first installment due Dec. 15 is to be mostly cash. Many Jews have been assessed 20 per cent of their wealth as part of the fine and will have to liquidate much of their personal property to raise the money.

It was explained this central bureau was established to make it easier to convert their possessions into cash, after appraisal by experts.

Charcoal Making

Two Unemployed Men Launch Charcoal Industry At Apsley Village

Ready Market Is Assured For Product As First Kiln Is Lighted Large Quantity Of Waste Wood Available

(Examiner Correspondence)

The hitherto deplorable waste of wood to be found in the wake of the woodcutters' operations in logging and the cutting of cordwood, bids fair to become a thing of the past in the northern part of Peterborough County, if an industry just launched in Apsley should prove a success; for it will utilize, besides slabs from the sawmills, limbs, culled logs, fallen trees and other waste wood which is generally left in the woods to rot and decay.

The industry is an ancient one, dating back to primitive times—that of charcoal burning, and its establishment in Apsley is due to the enterprise of two men, Nels Hanson, a Swede, 65 years old, and Russell Mace, a young man residing at Burleigh Falls.

These men worked together last summer on highway construction, and when the work shut down Hanson suggested charcoal burning, which he had worked at in Sweden in his youth, as a means of livelihood. Mace was impressed with the idea and at once sought for a location where wood could be obtained economically. He found Apsley with numerous sawmills in the surrounding vicinity a favorable prospect, and purchasing all the slabs available from the nearest sawmill, the two men at once started building a charcoal kiln on the centuries-old principle.

This was completed and lighted last week and is working perfectly. It has to be watched carefully night and day. While this is burning, a process which will last about two weeks in this case, a second one is being built and will be ready to burn when the first is consumed.

The kiln is circular in shape, is 36 feet in diameter, 9 feet high, and contains about 40 cords of elm slabs, and is expected to yield about 9 or 10 tons of charcoal. The pile of slabs is covered first with a layer two inches thick of rotting bark, then five inches of spruce boughs and sawdust and afterwards completely covered with a layer of earth six inches deep, with vents at regular intervals in the base to furnish necessary draft.

The charcoal will be bagged, shipped, and distributed in Peterborough, Lakefield, Port Hope, Oshawa, and other centres, and a contract has been secured to supply the C.N.R. A steady market is assured for all the output.

Chased From Tie Shop Burglars Return Get 7,200 Second Trip

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP)

YOU probably can't tie the persistence of two burglars who police chased from a Loop shop three weeks ago just after they had sawed through the window bars. Miss Shirley Silverman, 23, the owner, replaced the bars with stronger ones. Last night thieves—she thinks the same ones—sawed off the new bars, took 600 dozen neckties and all equipment movable except the showcases.

France Orders Agitators Be Expelled

PARIS, Nov. 26—(AP).—Government authorities, declaring strikes in northern France "virtually terminated," today disclosed 12,000 striking miners had been mobilized and that all occupied factories and mines had been evacuated without disorder.

Officials said military and police action had reduced to less than 10,000 the number of strikers and that all had been forced to quit their plants.

Apparently accepting the fact that strikes are not permitted by the government, Labor representatives issued orders for miners of he great Anzin coal basin to begin work Monday as usual and for metal workers to go back to their jobs Monday provided no penalties are exacted by employers.

Special instructins from Paris to Valenciennes authorities ordered "immediate expulsion" of foreigners who engage either in strikes or in agitation. This would affect principally about 8,000 Polish coal miners who work in the region.

Military authorities declared 506 railway workers on the Anzin line, who did not comply with mobilization instructions yesterday, would be tried by newly-set up military courts.

General Strike Wednesday

Army leaders were summoned to confer with the premier on measures to cope with the general strike called for next Wednesday by general confederation of labor. The confederation has 5,000,000 members. Generals Victor Bourrest and Jules De Camp were instructed to have the army in readiness.

Growing seriousness of the domestic crisis, which started as a protest against the premier's financial decrees raising taxes and abandoning the 40-hour work week, was stressed by the former Socialist premier, Leon Blum.

Bluntly telling Daladier to "get out" or face the possibility of a revolution, Blum wrote in the newspaper Le Populaire "You have chosen a route with only one exit—violent social conflict."

Blum's warning came after deputies reported Daladier was planning to arrest Blum if Labor agitation increases, and also to take into custody Maurice Thorez, Communist leader, and Leon Jouhaux, president of the general federation of labor.

They said he was ready to apply a state of siege to the country, meaning control of the entire country by the army.

Incoming and outgoing cables and telegrams were subjected to censorship.

Hundreds of strikers were jailed throughout the country on charges ranging from disorderly conduct to "armed rebellion."

Fruit Stocks Mount

OTTAWA, Nov. 26. — (CP).—Stocks of canned fruits and vegetables on hand Oct. 1, amounted to 1,492,378 cases compared with 912,221 a month before and 1,407,296 cases on Oct. 1, 1937, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported to-day. Included in the figures were stocks held by canners, wholesale dealers and chain store warehouses.

Plans Are Laid To Bring Jews To Canada

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., Nov. 26—(CP).—A plan to bring 10,000 Jewish refugees—two thousand families—from Europe to settle on community farm lands in the Medicine Hat district is under consideration. Government sanction would be required to permit entry of the refugees into Canada.

Announcement the plan was being considered was made by Harry Veiner, prominent Jewish resident of Medicine Hat, who conducts extensive farming operations at Dysart, Sask.

It was indicated funds for the big colonization scheme would be raised among the Jewish citizens of Canada. No government assistance would be sought.

If sanctioned by the government, the European Jews would be settled on land in the Ronalane-Redcliff district, near here, where 250,000 acres are available for settlement.

Storm Kills 84 Across U.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(A P)—Clearing skies and slowly rising temperatures today speeded the task of mopping up after the worst November storm the United States has experienced in years—a tempest of wind and snow that claimed at least 84 lives.

Frigid weather prevailed generally, however, from the east coast to the rocky mountains. Snow-packed roads remained a menace to weekend travellers, particularly in rural areas. Airplanes and trains moved on schedule. Bus transportation was still slowed somewhat by snow drifts in the east, but main highways in all states were open.

Traffic accidents on ice-glazed streets and deaths due to overexertion added to the toll of lives.

The storm caused 25 deaths in New York and 22 in New England. Michigan had two.

In New York City, streets blanketed by the heaviest November snowfall in 40 years were swept clean by a force of 40,000 laborers. Ski fans planned week-end excursions to nearby resorts.

On the other side of the continent, temperatures which ranged down to 40 degrees below zero a week ago in interior Alaska soared unseasonably high. A general thaw began, and the temperature at Fairbanks rose to 36, four above freezing.

Military Changes

OTTAWA, Nov. 26 — (CP). — Transfer of Brigadier R. O. Alexander, from District Officer Commanding Military District No. 4 (Montreal), to the command of District No. 2 (Toronto) was announced at National Defence Headquarters here to-day.

At the same time the promotion to the rank of Colonel (temporary Brigadier) of Lieut.-Col. F. Logie Armstrong, to succeed Brigadier Alexander in the Montreal command, was also announced.

Brigadier Alexander succeeds Brigadier W. H. P. Elkins, who was recently appointed Master General of the Ordnance.

Mother Nature Obliges Sends Snow To New York Wheat

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)

GOTHAM'S heaviest November snowfall since the Spanish-American War was good news for Grover Whalen and the other big city farmers at the New York World's Fair. Three months ago they planted a patch of winter wheat on a section of the fair site—it's now the only wheat field in New York city's concrete acres. It began to grow too quickly. Just after a freight car load of snow was ordered to chill the green wheat sprouts, nature obliged with an eight-inch snowfall. The order was cancelled.

Girl Clerk Shot Fleeing Widower Lover

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP).—An attractive young red-haired woman was shot and killed today on the seventh floor of the Grand Central Terminal building in the heart of the midtown section as she fled from a man described by police as a disappointed lover.

The man then shot himself through the right temple. He was dead when police arrived.

The woman was identified as Marion Wheeler, 32, of Yonkers, N.Y., a clerk in the office of L. V. Porter, comptroller of the New York Central Railroad. Her slayer was identified as John McNeal, 52, a widower.

Police Captain Patrick Kenny said fellow employees of Miss Wheeler's told him McNeal had urged her in vain to marry him, and lately had become so abusive that she was in fear of her life.

Bren Probe Report Ready In 3 Weeks

OTTAWA, Nov. 26 (CP)—The report by Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada on his inquiry into the Bren gun contract possibly will be submitted to the government within three weeks, it was indicated here today.

The inquiry ended last Thursday after a 36-day hearing. The royal commission investigation was set up after Col. George Drew, Toronto author-lawyer, in an article in Maclean's magazine criticized the contract between the national defence department and the John Inglis Company of Toronto for 7,000 Bren machine guns.

The report might be made public before Christmas or the government might not disclose its content until it is tabled in the House of Commons some time after parliament meets in January.

$12,000,000 In Cars

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 26 (A.P.). A shipping executive estimated today that $12,000,000 worth of new automobiles—fresh from Detroit assembly lines—had been been unloaded from Great Lakes steamers in Buffalo in the last two weeks.

The new cars were transferred here to trucks in a last minute rush to get them to east coast dealers before winter disrupts highway traffic. F. L. Hewitt, Jr., assistant vice-president of the Nicholson Universal Steamship Company, said his company docked four ships, bearing about 1,800 cars, and unloaded them all in the last 24 hours.

Rich Nazi Ukrainian State Mooted In Berlin As New Source Of Food

Scheme Would Call For Poland Relinquishing A Minority Of 97,000,000 But With Warsaw In Partial Control

By Geraud Jouve
(Copyright, 1938, by the Havas News Agency.)

BERLIN, Nov. 26 (CP-Havas).—Generally well-informed Nazi circles said today an attempt may be made next spring to create a Ukrainian state, federated with Poland, under the slogan of the self-determination of peoples.

While this possibility has not yet been discussed in the German press, it is being talked of in political circles, as a result of Berlin's success in preventing Poland and Hungary from obtaining a common frontier by cutting off the Carpathian Ukraine from Czechoslovakia.

If the suggested move were successful Poland would relinquish its Ukrainian minority of 7,000,000, but would be compensated by the fact that the new state, created under German leadership and combining the Polish and Czechoslovak Ukrainian minorities, would be federated with Poland.

Germany would gain by having a new source of food supplies and raw materials. The Poles now have a common frontier with the Soviet Union.

Poland still holds the corridor between East Prussia and Germany, has a German minority of about 1,000,000, and has interests in the free City of Danzig.

Retention by Czechoslovakia of the Carpathian Ukraine, which would form the kernel of the proposed new state, is important to German plans because the Czechoslovaks are collaborating with Germany in building motor roads which will offer a speedy route towards the Ukraine. The Ukraine proper, which belongs to Soviet Russia, would not be affected, but the existence of a contiguous Ukrainian state undoubtedly would revive the Ukrainian independence movement there.

Wind Aids Crews Stem Fires In California

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26—(AP).—Shifting, capricious winds which for three days alternately have fanned, then almost halted the spread of Southern California's two disastrous forest and brush blazes, today appeared to be aiding fatigued fire fighters in the Santa Monica and San Bernardino Mountains.

Neither blaze was under control, but officials who late yesterday feared additional millions of dollars damage was inevitable, took encouragement from reports of progress in several areas.

Most dangerous point apparently was in upper Mandeville Canyon, in the Santa Monica Mountains west of Los Angeles. Ralph Scott, city fire chief, ordered concentration of 800 men along a six-mile front to keep the blaze from breaking across Mulholland high way and into the fertile San Fernando Valley.

The sheriff's office announced, after a survey, that 80 residences in the two canyons and adjacent areas of Las Tunas and Big Rock were destroyed, with a property loss approximating $150,000.

In the San Bernardino Mountains, changing winds enabled workers to start a backfire which, at least temporarily, halted advance of the flames on 4,000 cabins in the Crest forest area. Residents who evacuated such communities as Crestline and Pinecrest before the roaring menace yesterday returned to their homes.

Toronto Trading Lowest Since May

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP)—Trading dwindled this week on the Toronto exchange to the smallest volume since May last and the decline of action was attended by a moderate price recession, noticeable chiefly in the industrial shares.

Thanksgiving holiday in the United States on Thursday put a damper on trading on the Canadian markets but throughout the week there was in evidence a tendency to avoid the interlisted industrial and mining issues.

Decision of some of the big copper producers to go back to the restrictions on output, because of the recent rise of supplies, gave the base metal shares a firmer tone for a few days but they were inclined to ease off again towards the week-end. International Nickel held a minor net gain, Noranda finished $1 higher and Hudson Bay firmed 65 cents. But there was enough weakness among the cheaper issues to give the exchange index a small net set-back. Silvers showed little change in the period.

McIntyre was the leader of the senior group on the up side, adding $1.25 and Braiorne also stood out with an advance of 30 cents to close yesterday at $9.80. Lake Shore lost some ground.

Official announcement that British American Oil Company had marketed $3,000,000 worth of treasury stock failed to move the quotation from its level of $21.50. All the big oil issues closed yesterday off only one-eighth of a point for the week. Changes were narrow pretty well down the list. A few exceptions were losses of $1 or more for Montreal power, and Loblaw A and a gain of similar size for building products.

Expect 22-Ounce Baby To Live

DRUMHELLER, Alta., Nov. 26.—(C.P.).— In al electrically heated apple box incubator, Canada's smallest baby Mollie Alice Carruthers, six days old, was given "every chance" for life to-day.

The baby, who weighed only 22 ounces at birth early Monday, has lost an ounce, the scales showed, but this caused no apprehension. It was considered a normal loss.

"She is still thriving," Dr. G. M. Gibson, attending physician, said last night. "That is all we want."

A modest, rural practitioner, Dr. Gibson is keeping constant watch on his midget patient and in between maintaining his regular practice throughout the district.

Every half hour is feeding time. From an eye dropper, mother's milk and dextro-maltose, fed alternately, with a drop of rum for a stimulant, are given the mite.

But the tiny daughter, Mollie Alice, will remain in hospital many weeks if she lives.

Dr. Gibson corrected an erroneous first report. He said the baby was perhaps two months premature, not four months.

He said she was considerably less than a foot in length. First reports said she was only five inches long.

"But she hasn't been measured yet," he added.

All the attention given his tiny daughter didn't stop the father, a mine stable boss, from his daily duties.

He was on the job yesterday in the stable far below the surface in the mine "telling the boys" about the new arrival.

"I guess we're world famous," he remarked to a newspaper man.

Want No Jews

QUEBEC, Nov. 26.—(CP).— Quebec city council last night passed a motion requesting the Federal government to take necessary steps to ban immigration into Canada, protesting "particularly against admission of Jews."

All Work No Romance In Pioneer Police Days Says Mountie Musing Rum Raids, Hangings

LONDON, Nov. 26 (CP)—James Fullwood, oldest survivor of the Royal North West Mounted Police, says there was no romance in Western Canada police work in his day—it was plain hard work.

Fullwood, spry despite his 88 years, was Constable No. 160 in the first detachment of 300 that went to the prairies in 1874 to help suppress arms and liquor dealing among the Indians.

The liquor traders, he told reporters here, "used to supply the Indians with alcohol which had only been slightly diluted with water. Indians had a craving for it and I have known a brave to give his headdress and furs for a small bottle."

"The traders worked at night and we usually had word from the Indians themselves that they were afoot," he continued. "A patrol of five of us would gallop into the traders' camp and hold them up while we searched them for arms. One of the first things we did was to smash the bottles of alcohol.

"Our commanding officer had the powers of a magistrate and he used to try to sentence the men on the spot. If a man committed a murder he would be taken to the nearest town and hanged."

Pay in those days was "rotten," Fullwood says. He got 75 cents a day, ate little but buffalo meat and slept where he could.

3 Ships Flung Ashore Off Scotia

Fourth Is Crippled, 15-Foot Drifts In New Brunswick

HALIFAX, Nov. 26.—(CP).— The storm-battered Maritime Provinces emerged to-day from the worst blizzard in years to survey heavy property damage and crippled communication services. One death was blamed on the storm which roared across the eastern provinces last night.

The gale that reached an 80-mile-an-hour peak drove three vessels ashore and left another wallowing helplessly in mountainous seas off Cape Canso, N.S. Prince Edward Island was cut off entirely from the mainland for several hours as telephone and telegraph lines were blown down.

A heart attack caused by exertion in trying to move a truck from a snow drift in Charlotte county caused the death of Theodore W. Reid, Saint John, N.B., lumber operator.

The little town of Shediac, N.B., on Northumberland Strait reported 150 persons homeless when the highest tide ever seen there flooded cellars and swept some dwelling into the bay. High tides at Sydney, N.S., drove three families from their homes.

New Brunswick and Southwestern Nova Scotia felt the full force of the storm. Practically all lines were down west of Kentville, N.S. In New Brunswick bridges were washed out and hundreds of small craft were torn from their moorings along the shore.

Warehouse Into Sea.

Milton Little, a Halifax salesman, who drove from Yarmouth to Halifax, said he had seen a warehouse blown into the sea at Wood's Harbor near the western end of the province. Further on he watched three fishing boats trying to make the shelter of a breakwater at Shag Harbor. When he last saw them, they were being blown seaward.

Up in Northumberland Strait the wrecking tug Foundation Franklin was breasting heavy seas as she steamed to aid the Norwegian freighter Nandi, ashore in the Prince Edward Island side of the strait.

The North Sydney schooner Gaulotis was stranded on New Brunswick side and the 72-ton Halifax motor vessel Nova IV. was torn from her moorings at a wharf at Margaretsville, Bay of Fundy port, and flung ashore 100 yards away.

Fallen trees and poles blocked the Nova Scotian highways.

Snow piled up in drifts 10 to 15 feet high on New Brunswick roads.

Cold weather followed in the wake of the storm and temperatures dropped as low as 17 degrees in some places.

B.C. Quashes Move To Curb Press

VICTORIA, Nov. 26—(CP)—A Co-operative Commonwealth Federation amendment which would have permitted press censorship in connection with misdeamors of inmates of British Columbia industrial schools for boys and girls, was withdrawn in the Legislature yesterday after Government and Opposition members questioned its validity and necessity.

Introduced by Harold Winch, C.C.F., Vancouver East, the amendment read:

"The Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may from time to time make rules and regulations permitting of prohibiting newspapers or any other publications reporting misdemeanors of juvenile delinquents who have been committed to such schools."

Mr. Winch said publicity given the escape of three inmates of the Vancouver girls' school early this year had reacted unfavorably on work of the matron who had instituted a system of training girls in domestic work and later securing positions for them.

"Remember the Alberta legislation dealing with press censorship," said R. L. Maitland, K.C., leader of the Conservative Opposition. "This is a small matter but who knows how far it will go, if we interfere with the freedom of the press?"

"Reporters won't report such things if they are asked to co-operate," said Dr. G. M. Weir, provincial secretary.

Winnipeg Mart Has Dull Week

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26.— (CP). — Featureless operations by outside grain markets that brought weakness, together with a decided lack of interest on the part of Winnipeg traders, resulted in the dullest Winnipeg market in many months during the past six days.

Only a fine export trade estimated at 2,000,000 bushels, prevented the week's sessions from being totally without feature. Otherwise, every session found trade virtually at a standstill with occasional unimportant flurries.

Quotations withstood lack of interest remarkably well and the decline was only 1⅝ to 1¾ cents during the week. November closed Friday at 59 cents, December 53¾, May 61-61¼ and July 61⅜-⅞ cents.

First deliveries since Nov. 8 through the clearing house on November wheat were reported Uov. 24 with the total of 62,000 bushels believed Garnet grades. Country marketings totalled 3,414,000 bushels during the week against 1,740,000 bushels the corresponding week last year.

Canada retained her dominant position in world wheat exports despite subsidies and extremely keen competition in overseas' markets. Statistics for world trade for the first 11 weeks of the crop year place Canada in the lead with total shipments of wheat and flour of 29,600,000 bushels out of International trade of 118,500,000 bushels. Russia and Australia with 26,000,000 and 20,000,000 respectively. United States totalled 18,800,000.

During three months ending in October, 112,583 cars of grain were inspected. Only in 1922, '25 and '28 have grain inspections exceeded this number of cars in the last 25 years.

Coarse grain prices fluctuated rather widely most of the week with oats closing Friday ⅛ cent lower to ¼ higher, barley ¼ lower to ¾ higher. Flax ⅝ higher to ½ lower and rye 1⅞-1¼ cents lower.

Three Mayors Given Acclamation

TORONTO, Nov. 26—(CP)—Scores of Ontario municipalities plunged into one-week election campaigns today as candidates presented qualification papers for the positions of mayor, reeve, alderman, deputy-reeve, councillor or school trustee.

Some communities, including Toronto, will go to the polls New Year's Day but most urban centres called for nominations yesterday, qualifications tonight and elections Monday, December 5. London held nominations Monday and Sarnia's deadline for qualifications came last night. In both cities, however, voting will be on Dec. 5.

At Windsor, where a bitter campaign has been waged for many days, heated meetings were staged last night. Many rural municipalities went about nominations in the old-fashioned way, with night meetings as which nominees either announced their candidatures or declined to stand.

Alderman Norman Perry, a football star with Sarnia Imperials until his retirement three years ago, was elected mayor by acclamation last night. The Sarnia mayor-elected was named after three other candidates withdrew.

William Morrison acclaimed mayor of Hamilton, became the first mayor in that city's history to receive three successive acclamations. A former Conservative member of the provincial legislature, he has been mentioned in connection with the Ontario party leadership.

His Eleventh Term.

Mayor H. J. A. MacEwan, staunch supporter of a paved highway along the shore of Lake Huron, was elected to an eleventh term at Goderich when the only other nominee, G. L. Parsons, withdrew. Mayor MacEwan has been in public life for 30 years.

For the first time, a woman entered the aldermanic fight at Woodstock with the qualification of Miss Jean Ogilvie for the voting. Mayor R. G. Clowes, recently appointed Children's Aid Society inspector for Oxford County, will not seek re-election but former Mayor W. M. MacArthur, and Aldermen Bert Lewis and Gordon Harper will run for the post of Woodstock's chief magistrate.

Three opponents were named for Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa but there was no indication how many would stand. Mayor H. A. Stewart was certain to have opposition from Dr. W. W. Sands at Kingston and possibly from Alderman J. F. Rowland.

Much Opposition.

Big fields were nominated for the Mayoralty in some cities. There were seven possible opponents for Mayor Thomas E. Henry at Stratford, seven for Mayor John Rudd at Sudbury, eight for Mayor Robert Rowe at North Bay, four for Mayor R. K. Serviss at Galt and seven for Mayor Dr. John R. Mencke at Fort Erie.

A straight fight loomed at Chatham between Mayor J. J. Zink and W. J. Easton, veteran political campaigner.

Hecklers broke up a nomination night meeting at Windsor, held in support of Mayor E. S. Wigle, who has claimed the support of the Provincial government in his fight with David Croll, M.L.A., former Mayor and former Provincial Minister of Welfare., Labor and Municipal Affairs. A third candidate is Roy C. Haight.

Numerous civic financing projects will be voted on in plebiscites. Brantford ratepayers will decide whether they are to have buses in place of street rars, Ottawans will vote on a by-law authorizing construction of new city offices and citizens of the neighboring municipalities of Kitchener and Waterloo will decide on proposals for new artificial ice rinks.

Freighter Grounds; 3 Craft Stand By

NEW YORK, Nov. 12 — (AP). — Three United States coastguard craft stood by to-day as the 251-foot freighter Falmouth, with 24 men aboard, was pounded by a 40-mile gale on the lee shore two miles east of Green Ledge, near South Norwalk, Conn.

Coastguard officers at Eaton's Neck said the vessel was in no imminent danger and was waiting for high tide before attempting to work free.

The 165-foot icebreaker Icarus, a motorboat from the Eaton's Neck station and a 75-foot coastguard boat were near the stricken freighter.

Earlier, coastguard officials had sighted another craft being taken in tow by a private vessel and had mistaken it, in the snow mist, for the Falmouth.

Bonus Of $30,000 To Be Distributed

Bonuses totalling approximately $30,000 will again be distributed this year to the permanent staff of the Loblaw Groceterias Co., Limited. All permanent, full-time employees who have been with the firm since before June 1 are eligible to share in this amount.

Employees who have been with the Company for a full year will be entitled to one week's wages and those employed for a full six months, one-half week's wages.

The distribution is being made in appreciation of the loyal service of its employees, which has contributed greatly to the Comapny's' successful operation.

Marmora Reeve Is Returned

MARMORA, Nov. 26.—Nominations for Marmora and Lake township held on Friday afternoon seem to indicate that an election is looming. For Reeve—John A. Bell, Lindsay E. Neal. For Council—C. Kelly, W. J. Park, A. Tompkins, G. Davidson, I. McCoy, W. Hamilton, Joseph Shannon, Bert Inkster.

The present reeve John A. Bell is being opposed by ex-reeve Lindsay E. Neal.

The first four nominees for council comprise the retiring council.

In The Village

Nominations for Marmora village council were held in the evening resulting as follows:

For Reeve—W. R. Linn (acclamation).

For Council—T. R. Warren, H. B. Smith, W. A. Sanderson, R. E. Neal, retiring councillors and Clayton Potts and Lewis Phillips.

For Hydro Commissioner—F. R. Walls (acclamation).

For School Board—P. Gray, D. Marett and T. E. Neal.

It is expected that acclamation will be accorded last year's council.

Contest Is Assured In Chandos Township

(Special to The Examiner)

APSLEY, Nov. 25. — Municipal nominations for Chandos council here Friday indicated the probability of an election next week. Four of the township ratepayers were named for the reeveship Allan Caldwell, whose term is now expiring. Robert Scott, who has had considerable experience in the reeveship, Fred Bullied, also a veteran of the service, and Albert Hall. It seemed to be generally understood that the contest would be between Caldwell and Scott.

The nominees for the council were the four present members, William Johnston, John Reynolds, Charles Weast and Owen Montgomery, and two others proposed were George Tanner and Marshall McCauley.

Soloist To Feature Marmora Song

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 26—Mr. W. J. Cottrell has received word that his song "Contented Valley," sung thrice over C.K.O.C. by Howard Jerome of Hamilton, will be featured by Jack Reid, tenor soloist, during the musical interlude to be heard over C.F.R.B. at 6 p.m. on Wednesday.

Those who experienced difficulty in hearing the sonk over C.K.O.C. through station interference, will welcome the more favorable opportunity to hear this delightful number for which Charles Wellinger composed the musical setting.

Winnipeg Voting

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26 — (CP). — second choices for re-election as election ballots proceeded to-day, with John Queen needing only 1,375 second choice for re-election as mayor.

OBITUARY

MISS MAUD E. EASON

The death of Miss Maud E. Eason, 190 Barnardo avenue, occurred at Nicholls Hospital on Friday afternoon after a short illness.

Well known throughout this city as an ardent horticulturist, Miss Eason was extremely fond of flowers, and had many unusual and some unique varieties growing in her garden, where she spent a great deal of her time. She was born in Keene and came to Peterborough twenty years ago from Prince Rupert. Her parents were the late George Eason and Jane Chamberlain. She was a member of George Street United Church. Surviving is one brother, F. A. Eason of Keene.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock from her late residence, Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

Reeve Anderson Is Bereaved

A member of one of this district's most distinguished families died last night in the person of Mrs. Mary Anderson, widow of the late William Anderson, once member of parliament for East Peterborough riding, and mother of Reeve W. A. Anderson of Otonabee.

Mrs. Anderson died at her home at 134 Park street, in her 87th year. She had been ill only a short time.

She was born in Dummer township, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Drain, and come to live in Peterborough six years ago from Otonabee township. She was a member of the United church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Annie Chambo of Peterborough, and two sons, Reeve William A. Anderson of Otonabee and Fred Anderson, of Saskatchewan.

A private funeral service will be held on Monday afternoon from the family residence with interment at Keene cemetery.

Lions Club Rally Is Held In Port Perry

Six members of the Peterborough Lions Club attended the zone meeting of district 3A delegates in Port Perry Friday night and enjoyed a venison banquet.

District Governor J. J. Brown, of Bowmanville, was guest speaker and the meeting was in charge of District Dep. Dr. Stewart Mills of Whitby. Delegates attended from Port Hope, Cobourg, Whitby, Port Perry, Bowmanville and Peterborough.

Keith Braund and Ken McCannon, two of the local delegates, were half an hour late and besides being fined by the chairman, had to sing. The other delegates were Fred Cripps, J. E. Girven, Jim Dutton, Jr., and Jack Armitage.

Talk among officials in this district indicates they favor the formation of a Lions club at Lindsay and one at Marmora, with members from Havelock and Madoc, the three towns combining in one club.

Doubly Trailed

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 26.—(AP).—The thief who stole a pair of handcuffs from Anthony Souers' automobile had two Police Departments on his trail to-day. One was Souers himself, who's the one-man force of nearby Freemansburg. The other was the Bethlehem Police, to whom Souers appealed for aid.

A baby was born to Mrs. Mary Clarey at St. Helens, England, at the Thatto Heath police station, at which she and her husband stopped to call a hospital ambulance when she became ill.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26 — (CP). — Canadian wheat export sales, estimated at 300,000 bushels, gave wheat futures a strong undertone here yesterday. At the final bell values were ¼ to ⅛ cent lower, November 59b, December 58⅜ a, May 61 to 61⅛, and July 61¾ to ⅞ cents.

Generally traders had little to do. Lack of outside market influence and narrow fluctuations at Liverpool, Buenos Aires and Chicago accounted for a dull session. Minor seaboard buying offset thin offerings at the start. Later routine trades were scattered.

Liverpool closed unchange to ⅞d down with distant futures easier on selling encouraged by cheaper new-crop Argentine offers. Demand for Manitoba wheat and sale of one Australian cargo to India was reported.

Marmora Pupils Honor Newlyweds

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 26.—The home of principal and Mrs. E. J. Gale was the scene of a pleasant gathering on Thursday afternoon when pupils representing each form of the Marmora High School accompanied by Misses G. Quigley and P. Wilson of the teaching staff made a presentation of a table lamp to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Berry in honor of their recent marriage.

The presentation was made by Donald Prentice. Mr. Berry made appreciative reply after which afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Gale.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Gale gave a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Berry upon their return this week from their trip to the Capitol city following their recent marriage. Misses Pearl Wilson and Gertrude Quigley, members of the High School staff were also present.

The staff presented the newly married couple with a small gift in token of their appreciation at the conclusion of the dinner.

THE POWER OF CHRIST

"That the power of Christ may rest upon me."—2 Cor. 12:9.

POWER. How the word thrills the soul. "I wish I had the power," you exclaim. St. Paul has passed through much trouble and affliction but he rejoices in them because through his weakness there flows into him the power of Christ. He uses a rare word for power, only found here in the New Testament. The marginal readings give its various meanings: "Cover me," "spread a tabernacle over me."

A master commentator of this epistle writes: "There is certainly nothing out of place in the thought of Christ's power making a kind of earthly home or shrine in the heart of a Christian. The enshrinement of a divine power in human nature. This is the essence of Christian revelation as well as the secret of a noble character."

The power of Christ comes in response to a courageous acceptance of suffering and sorrow. His will is not only our peace but our power. One of the obvious marks of the second century christians was the fact of a strange moral power making the sinful pure; the selfish loving; the shrinking brave even unto death, transforming thousands of people into saints and heroes. The explanation is the power of Christ has come upon them. It is the expulsive power of a new affection.

It is a Divine Invasion. The Invader is a spiritual Person Who will not force Himself upon you. He will only enter when you open the gates. It is an invasion. An invasion implies disturbance, tumults, rebellions, agony, fightings within. The Invader knows all the problems He has to face. He only asks you to invite Him, He will do the rest. The mystery and marvel of the Christian religion is that the Invader is God veiled in human flesh. He draws near to heal you of your spiritual sickness and touches you with hands derived from human mother. He looks on you and loves you. If you will love Him ever so little and invite Him His Spirit will overshadow you, "cover you," "spread a tabernacle over you" and in very truth that holy thing that shall be born of you shall be called a son, a daughter of God.

"If any man love Me My Father will love him and we will come unto him and make our abode in him."

'Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

—Rev. Edward R. James.

They Wanted The Church

By ROY L. SMITH
Pastor of First Methodist Church, Los Angeles

The Blanks were an average Protestant family, of good character and reasonable earning ability. They had been members of the Methodist Church for a good many years, and though their attendance was rather irregular they did call themselves Methodists in good standing.

The finance committee was having difficulty in meeting the bills that were coming in at the church office and had decided to ask all the people who were not contributing regularly to make some kind of a definite pledge, even though that pledge had to be a small one. It seemed like a business-like way of supporting the church.

In the course of the canvas a couple of the men of the church called on Mr. Blank. They found him in a comfortable home, surrounded by some comforts but no luxuries, and broached the matter of a weekly pledge to the church. He met them courteously, and agreed that the affairs of the church must be conducted in a businesslike way, but said, "My business is in such a condition that I do not feel like making a pledge. We will give what we can when we are able to attend, and as long as you get the money that is all that you care. You see, I don't like to make pledges." And that was the best response they could get from him. It was a very pleasant visit, there were no hard feelings, but Mr. Blank did not make any contribution, nor would he give any assurance that the family would be more regular in their attendance at Church.

Heard Strange Noises.

One night, several months afterward, Mr. Blank was awakened by strange noises, and discovered Mrs. Blank in an unconscious state, and desperately ill. She was hurried to the hospital, and early the next morning the pastor of the church was called. He arrived soon afterward and found the family in a terrible state of alarm. There followed a period of prayer, some comforting assurances, and for weeks thereafter the pastor made regular calls in that home.

This little touch with the pastor had inspired Mr. Blank with confidence in his judgment and therefore, when the oldest daughter was in a rather serious difficulty her father came to the church and had a conference of more than an hour. The preacher promised to do what he could and was actually able, after a few weeks, to bring about a rectification of some of the conditions that had been so alarming.

When school was out that spring, the eldest son of the family graduated from college and was badly in need of work. Without consulting the preacher, he gave his name as a reference, though he had not been inside one of the young people's meetings for nearly a year and was only in church about once in three months. The pastor really knew very little about the personal habits of the young man during the four years of his college course, because the boy had almost completely deserted the church during that time.

The mother of the home recovered from her illness and in the course of time was deeply engrossed again in the work of the club of which she was a prominent member. One day, in the midst of an especially crushing load, the pastor was called by Mrs. Blank who said to him, in a most charming fashion, "Doctor, I have never forgotten what a blessing you were to all of us at the time of my illness, and I am so anxious for the women of my club to meet you. I wonder if you would be willing to speak for us two weeks from this afternoon. I am awfully sorry that we have no funds to pay you a fee, but it will be a splendid opportunity to meet a fine group of wonderful women." And the appointment was made, though it meant the necessity of spending considerable time in preparation.

Wanted Sunday With Family.

About this same time Mr. Blank asked to be excused from teaching a Sunday School class of boys because he "was sure someone else could be found who could do it much better." Besides, his business took him out of town a great deal, and Sunday was the only day he ever had with his family.

Mrs. Blank was not interested in missions, and did not belong to any of the women's societies, because she wanted to get something that had a broader outlook.

The young college graduate did get his job because of the recommendation of the preacher, but he did not think to write a note to the preacher telling him of the successful outcome of his interview which had been made possible through the preacher's note of introduction.

Someone on the finance committee who happened to know a good deal of the story, expressed himself rather freely to his wife. "The Blanks are fine people. They have been members of our church for a good many years. But I wonder how they are able to justify themselves. They want the church open when they want to attend, but they do nothing to guarantee that it will be open They want the services of the pastor when they are in need of something, but they do nothing to help keep him on the job, and they cannot be depended upon when he needs the inspiration of a congregation that fills the house. They want him to help them get jobs, but they do nothing to help bear the expense. They want him to help solve problems, but they never help the finance committee solve any problem. They will not make a pledge, but they expect the church to make a pledge to them that its services will always be at their disposal, no matter what their loyalty and helpfulness may be.

Yes, the Blanks wanted the church, but they did not want it to ask them for anything.

Wandering Emblem

DECATUR, Ill., Nov. 26—(AP)—A Masonic emblem, found on a battlefield of France 20 years ago, has been returned to its owner—who never has been in France. The emblem, which came into the possession of Charles Borchers of Decatur, bore the inscription of the Brooklyn, N.Y., chapter. The chapter found the owner who said, in a letter to Borchers, he lost it 20 years ago—not in France, but in Brooklyn.

The Golden Text

Exodus 20:15—"Thou shalt not steal."

Honesty In All Things

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Noveber 27 is Exodus 20:15; Matthew 19: 16-22; Luke 19: 1-10, 45, 46; 20: 9-16, the Golden Text being Exodus 20:15, "Thou shalt not steal.")

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

"THOU SHALT not steal" is the Golden Text for today, and the story of the lesson is about Jesus and the little man who wanted so much to see this great man about whom everyone was talking, that he climbed into a tree so that he could see over the heads of the people. This tree is thought to be a fig-mulberry which was a common tree in the Jordan valley. It has low spreading branches, which make it easy to climb.

Now Zacchaeus, the little man who was so anxious to see Jesus, was a publican—a tax collector who was rich and very much hated. Jesus, however, saw him and liked him. He called to him to come down from the tree, because He was going to stay at his (Zacchaeus') home. You can imagine how proud and pleased Zacchaeus was. The Great Man was to stay with him, a man whom everyone disliked. He must have known how honest, and good Jesus was, for he immediately told Him that he was going to give half his goods to the poor, and that if he had been dishonest with any man he would make it up to him "fourfold." That proved to Jesus that He was right in His estimation of the man.

We all like to own things. It is a mark of man as distinguished from the animals. The latter havea family feeling of ownership so that the male beast will protect his mate and the mother her children. But aside from that they do not understand such things as yours and mine. If they are hungry they take what they need wherever they find it. We call it stealing when foxes kill our chickens and eat them, and other animals take things they need to satisfy their hunger. But it is not stealing from their point of view. They are obeying the only law they know—that of hunger.

There is always a great deal of stealing. We think the "crime wave", as we call it is dreadful, and stealing is a large part of the crimes committed. But in the middle ages stealing—highway robbery and theft generally—was so bad that thieves, when caught, were put to death. Travelling on the highways was very unsafe.

There are many ways of stealing besides breaking into houses or holding people up on the street. One of the very worst is to steal another's good name; to tell discreditable things about persons, or insinuate that they are not good. That is the meanest kind of stealing. Can you recite the poem which says, "Who steals my purse steals trash ...But he who filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him and makes me poor indeed"?

You are stealing when you cheat in your lessons; when you do not do your work well, whether it is school work, helping mother, or a job for which you are paid. If you loaf you are stealing time. In an orderly world there are some things that are owned by all of us and for which we pay by taxes—streets, street lights, public buildings, waterworks, fire departments and police deparemtn. But each of us also has private property—homes, furniture, some money, jewelry, etc. It is a great hardship and wrong if these are taken from us. But people steal sometimes by damaging other people's property.

On Hallowe'en a few weeks ago, many automobiles and house and shop windows were smeared with soap or tallow. Some things were broken or carried away. Was that honest? Would good citizens do such things?

Jesus was "meek and mild," according to the Bible. But he could grow angry at injustice and stealing. When he found that the sacred temple had been turned into a trading place, where cheating was going on, He made himself a whip of small cords and drove the traders out. He told them that the temple was the house of prayer, "but ye have made it a den of thieves."

Bitter Persecutions Of Modern Times

At the evening service in St. Andrew's church on next Sunday the minister will deal with the topic of greatest interest in the world today, the Jew, a tragic figure in history.

Within the life of this generation there has been at least three instances of inhuman and brutal persecution, apart from actual warfare.

One was the callous attacks of the Turks against the unarmed Armenians which led the late Rev. Joseph Parker of the City Temple, London, to say before a crowded audience "God damn the sultan."

The second was the almost forgotten Congo atrocities perpetrated by the late King of Belgium which awakened so much indignation in Britain and America.

The third has taken place during the past few years, it is the persistent and bitter persecution of the Jews in Germany. Mass meetings have recently been held in most of the cities of Canada to protest against these terrible atrocities of the 20th century.

Several questions are in this connection. Is there any justification for the ill usage the Jews have received from other nations and races? What is the connection, if any, between the cry of the Hebrew priests at the cross of Christ "His blood be on us and on our children" and the present persecutions by Christians? How far has Shakespeare by his creation of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" contributed to the antipathy against the Jews?

What can we Canadians do to relieve the distress of this sorrow stricken race?

No Jail Wedding

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP).—Wedding bells won't ring in Cayuga jail. Joseph Taylor, who was to be married to Anne Brown, 23, of Toronto, was on his way to Kingston Penitentiary today. With him were George C. Pierson, sentenced to five years, and James Wilson, facing a three-year stretch. Taylor has three years to serve also.

They were removed from jail early today and it was learned that the order for their transportation to Kingston was speeded up.

Cmemee W.A. Meets In Deyell Home

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE, Nov. 26.—The monthly meeting of the Women's Association of Trinity United church was held at the home of Mrs. H. Deyell on Thursday with a good attendance of members present. The president, was in the chair.

A letter of appreciation was read from the family of the late Rev. Stillman. Plans were made for the usual treat for the children at the Christmas concert which will be held Tuesday, December 20.

A piano solo was given by Miss L. Race, readings were given by Mrs. S. Rea and Miss Marion Deyell.

Mrs. W. Connell kindly offered her home for the December meeting. A dainty lunch was served by Misses Marion and Roberta Deyell and a social hour enjoyed.

Cathedral Musings

We spoke last week of the essential duality of the spirit of man, that man, in his inmost and true Self is the Son of God, for the True Light, we must remember, lighteth every man coming into the world, no matter of what race or religion he may be outwardly. We tend to forget this and we do not realize that this true Self, our Divine Centre, being of God, is the only thing about us that is eternal. It existed before creation and will continue to exist when even the phenomenal universe has been resolved into nothingness. Our great problem is to so unite our consciousness to the Divine that we are conscious partakers of the Life of God and the first step is to remember that this earthly personality is not permanent except so far as it has developed spiritual values that may be woven into the fabric of the True Self. This is the laying up of treasure in Heaven that the Master spoke of. The world is against us for, from our very childhood the stress is all upon the outer self and the development of the objective faculties. We are forced to think from without to within and not from within outwardly. The Cosmic Light within us, as the years go by, becomes more and more fettered and hindered from expressing, more powerless to guide us aright. Hence the child state of man if often more near to God than the adult trained and so-called brilliant mind, for, to paraphrase the Master, with the children their inward selves continually behold the Face of the Father within them. But this going from God into the far country of this world is but the phase of involution, the descent into matter. It is the downward arc of the circle of life. There is also the upward swing, evolution, the return of man to his Father's House. When we left the starry realms we were innocent of the knowledge of either good or evil. When we return we will no longer be ignorantly innocent, for we will have known both good and evil. We will have conquered evil by experiencing its utter worthlessness. Tried and tested in the fires of our self-desires we will have overcome and conquered ourselves and we will "love good for its own sake and not because we must do so. For God did not create helpless puppets, for He coerces no-one. He must be loved and served for His sake and not for ours, for even as He loves us, so will we love Him.

A National Message

A Lost Document Found—1.

"Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement, whom I have put away?"

The above is a question as to the whereabouts and possession of a legal document of the utmost importance to the Israel peoples and to the world.

Under the Israel law, divorce was permitted—"because of the hardness of your hearts"—and when a man for cause divorced his wife, he was required to give to her a bill of divorcement.

This bill of divorcement set forth several things.

First, that the divorced woman, who is named in it, had occupied the position and enjoyed the rights of the wife of the person who had put her away.

Secondly, it showed that she had been put away by legal procedure, and, therefore, was still endowed with certain privileges, such as the custody of the children.

Thirdly, she would be entitled to any settlement which the husband might see fit to include in the bill of divorcement; the equivalent to the modern "alimony" granted by the courts under present British law.

In this instance, the decree of Bill of Divorce was a "nisi" decree, which does not carry the right of marriage to another. Such a Bill of Divorcement was granted to the ten-tribed nation, Israel.

Honesty in All Things — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Exodus 20:15; Mat. 19:16-22; Luke 19:1-10, 45, 46; 20:9-16.

when He came to Jericho that Zacchaeus. So many people crowded around Jesus being short, couldn't see Him at all.

So Zacchaeus being an important person and used to getting his own way, climbed a tree so he could see.

Zacchaeus not only saw Jesus, but Jesus saw him and called to him, saying He was going to lodge with him.

Entering the temple, Jesus found it filled with traders, whom He drove out. (GOLDEN TEXT—Exodus 20:15).

The Profit System

York County Council at its last session managed to get sufficiently off the beaten path to discuss the making of munitions in Canada and the general policy of creating a sufficient defensive force. Nearly every participating speaker turned to the theme that there must be no profit in the making of war supplies, and even the word "graft" found its way into the debate. It was stated that "profiteering was rampant last time, and the government should make sure it never happens again."

Canadians learned a good deal from their experience during the previous war years. If profits were high then wages were on the same plane. People made money the like of which they never secured before or since. Prices of produce of all kinds went up to records which have not since been approached. If the makers of munitions were securing profits then so were thousands of other people.

The plan for making munitions without profit needs some explaining because every kind of business operating today depends on the profit system to keep it going. When there are profits things go well; when there are no profits then employment becomes scarce and business drags along until it halts entirely. People may protest against the profit system if they wish, but it is well to remember that under our present organization we have no other system. Nor have we ever had any other.

When plants were through with their munitions orders in Canada in 1918 there were plenty of them with tremendous amounts of special equipment on their hands, and the question uppermost then was what to do with it. Enormous sums had been spent for precision machinery and much of it was not of a sort which could be turned to anything else. There were firms which had neglected their own regular business because there was so much work to be done making munitions. Their old business had gone elsewhere. They may have made large sums during the years of war but they were called upon to take large losses immediately following because their plants were idle.

Just how munitions are going to be made without profit is something we would like to see explained. If the Government were to undertake it then it would be necessary to secure and equip plants suited for the work, and we have no evidence that a government can turn out a finished product for any less money and of any higher quality than a private manufacturer or a corporation.

Ready All The Time

The Red Cross is making its annual appeal for funds, and it is one of those organizations which appears to keep itself in readiness to do things which demand attention on short time.

When the recent fire broke out in Northern Ontario people were driven from here to there, trying as best they could to reach a place of safety. Many of them brought out nothing at all in the way of possessions, clothing or equipment.

At a time like that the Red Cross is the only agency of which we know that is ready to go in at once. It seems to be always ready as though living in anticipation that something like that was going to happen.

We dare say there are a good many people in the community who would have gladly given something to aid the fire sufferers, and by giving to the Red Cross one is making certain that an agency is being sustained which is ready for anything, fire, flood or whatever the need may be.

When The Whistle Blows

There have been a number of opinions expressed about noise in this city, and objection has even been taken to the blowing of factory whistles. Perhaps they do offend some sensitive people but they serve their purpose.

We can recall several cities during the years when the depression was at its worst when several factory whistles did not blow, neither was there any smoke coming out of the tall stacks. Nothing to pollute the atmosphere and nothing much to annoy the ear. It ought to have been a rather ideal condition. But it wasn't.

The people whose hours used to be regulated by the blowing of the whistle were for the most part just staying at home; it is correct to say they were miserable and they were only hanging around because there were no other factories to which they could turn for employment and gainful occupation.

We recall quite well the morning one of the whistles let loose its deep-throated message once more. People not only heard it but what is more important they felt it because it was saying something to them. It was telling them that there was work and pay once more instead of idleness and want and perhaps visits to the relief office.

So that's why we are not opposed to factory whistles. We would much rather have them blowing and in that way giving notice that the plant is in operation than to have them silent as a token that there is nothing to do.

Our New Canadians?

An inquest was necessary in order to determine how John Bulbuk had died. He had been attending a wedding celebration at Noroski's farm when he was killed, and Dr. L. Kobrinski conducted the inquest. At the same celebration there was a general fight in which furniture was thrown through the windows and William Michaliuk spent a week in hospital with broken ribs and cuts. In all twenty persons were injured.

Reading that report one might take it for granted it was in some mid-European country; the names would suggest that. But it took place in Saskatchewan not far from the town of Sturgis, and it leads one to question seriously enough just what sort of citizens we have in that section. Apparently they have brought along with them a number of the habits and foolish tendencies of their own land, and they neglected to deposit them when they crossed the border of this new land. A wedding there apparently means a prolonged spree with a casualty list like a minor war-time engagement. Perhaps it takes all sorts of people to make a nation, but we could quite well do with the minimum number of these folk.

They All Know How

Bernard MacDonald of Holstein, Ont., offered to sell his eye for $5,000. He is a farm worker and with the $5,000 he planned to secure special treatment for a stomach disorder.

So far Mr. MacDonald has not received a single offer for his eye although stories about his desire have been printed in a good many papers. People who long for a new eye and have the $5,000 to settle with the Holstein man appear to be lacking.

But he has not been left alone. We learn that people from many parts of the country have been sending him many preparations which they are certain will cure his stomach trouble. If all the people in the country who have some pet remedy for anything which happens to the stomach were gathered together in one place then there would be something like a multitude.

We are moved to hope that MacDonald of Holstein is not possessed of a too great love for experiments. If he takes to gulping down everything which the mail man or native runners bring to his domicile the pain of the future may well be greater than the agony of the present.

He'd Shoot The Teacher

A boy of 13 years attending school at Battle Creek, Mich., was reprimanded by his teacher. When he returned to school for the afternoon session he had with him a .22 rifle with which he announced he was going to shoot the teacher and any others who interfered with him.

We cannot recall having heard of such a case before. Certainly a generation or so ago no boy would have done a similar thing. Taking a gun to school to shoot the teacher!

Where would that lad of 13 get such an idea? Had he been attending some movie where there was a good deal of shooting being done, or had he managed to come across some loose reading matter where the man with the gun was gloriously portrayed as a heroic strong man? Our belief is that the idea of shooting the teacher did not originate with a boy of 13. It is nothing which would be taught to him at school, and we are certain his parents would not suggest that he should take a .22 to school for the purpose of blowing up the teacher.

We have no hesitation in suggesting that if that boy of 13 had listened to some of the crime plays on the radio he might well have received the suggestion on which he was moved to act.

May Be Closed Out

A first glance one might find it difficult to understand what Britain and United States had to protest about when they exchanged notes with Japan regarding shipping rights on the Yangtze river in China. That is a great inland stream, some 2,500 miles long and it virtually cuts China in two. It is in no way connected with coastal trade to which the vessels of foreign nations are generally—if not entirely restricted. For instance a British vessel going to United States lands at some sea port, but does not go ahead and compete in the carrying trade on the Hudson between New York and Albany. Nor would a United States ship be inclined to try its hand running excursions on the Thames. Thus the Yangtze is an inland waterway of China and yet British and U.S. vessels have for years plied their trade there.

But in China things have been done differently and foreign nations have enjoyed privileges there which they have not secured elsewhere. It may not be generally known that foreigners maintain their own law courts in China, and they also have special concessions and settlements. There was a time when China, largely influenced by Russia, resented these concessions, and the truth is there was considerable gun-boat diplomacy used to secure them in the first place. But making use of the navigable waters of the Yangtze was something about which China was never able to do much. It was largely a matter of racial pride which caused rather anaemic protests to be made, and China was quite well aware that she did not possess vessels to carry on the trade which those of foreign register were bearing.

There was not a thing in the concessions giving to United States or Britain a monopoly in shipping on the Yangtze. It is expressly stated in the British agreement that any British steamer with the consent of the owners could be transferred to the Chinese flag at any time.

The big question now is whether United States and Britain are going to be able to do business with Japan regarding the use of the Yantze as they have with China. Japan claims bluntly she is now in control of the situation and says in effect that it might be just as well to forget about what has taken place in the past. Japan has plenty of vessels to attend to the trade and show no disposition to share it with others. What's more, Japan is prepared to fight for the maintenance of her claims, and that of course is a new element in the situation as China never seriously took that attitude as she had so little with which to fight. If the Yangtze is closed to Britain and United States permanently it will mean the loss of prestige and profitable business. And it looks very much as if that is exactly what will take place.

Said a Great Deal

If Wilfrid Heighington becomes leader of the Conservative party in Ontario it would appear that the province is in for some of the staunch variety of denunciation. Speaking at Welland the other evening, Mr. Heighington is reported as follows:

"We have witnessed, throughout the period of the Hepburn government rule, the besmirching of the dignity and detachment of the Crown, the repudiation of the solemn obligations of the province, vindictive and discriminating taxation, one form or another of legislative piracy and the most open and violent betrayals of the elementary principles of responsible government."

Whether that all came out in one breath we are hardly prepared to estimate, but the shot rained heavily on Mr. Hepburn's cabin roof while the onslaught was in progress.

The old Whitney phrase: "The most heinous crime ever perpetrated on an unsuspecting public," is rather mild in comparison.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Report from Brooklin says thieves damaged the door of a bank in that village. Or it may be a customer banged it after the manager said NO.

Kingston citizens will vote on the two-year term for aldermen. For a good man two years would not be long enough; for a poor man it would be too long.

Our police reporter noted he counted eight lawyers around magistrate's court the other morning. At the time we intended to ask him what the charge was.

Chinese burn cities they leave so they will be no use to the Japanese. And if the Chinese ever recapture any of them they won't be much use to them either.

Toronto police are looking for a man who phoned a citizen and demanded $2,000. We can't help much on a case like that but we could furnish quite a long list of people of whom it would be quite useless to make such a request.

Gratton O'Leary of the Ottawa Journal made a speech in which he referred to the decline in intelligence of members of the House of Commons in the last 30 years. Mr. O'Leary will be right there in the city when these men of diminishing intellect gather for the session. We'll wait and see if any person asks him over to the Parliamentary restaurant.

LOSS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Neighbor A eight weeks ago, informed me that his funds were low, and debts hung like a stone; he didn't tell me much, but ended with a little touch, and asked me for a loan.

¶ My neighbor was a goodly friend, with whom I'd borrow things and lend, we gossiped now and then; I'd trust him anywhere he went, I'd scrape for him my last red cent, he walked with goodly men.

¶ I used to see him every day, and walked with him upon my way, I knew him well indeed; and now and then when he'd drop in, I put the coffee on for him, we had an onion feed.

¶ But since I let him have that loan, I never see him round his home, nor meet him as I walk; I look in vain for him to come, when I am dusting back at one, gaze on an empty block.

¶ Nor does he drop in any more, nor open up the kitchen door, to see if I'm at home; at times when things are rather flat, I'd like to have a little chat, but I sit there alone.

¶ Can't understand my Neighbor A, perhaps he can't afford to pay, perhaps he's reached the end; perhaps there's nothing in his purse, but what to me is even worse—I've also lost a friend.

GERMANS BLUNDERED AGAIN

Orillia Packet: The British and French Governments announced yesterday that there would be no cession to Germany of colonies for which they have accepted mandates. The treatment accorded the Jews probably had something to do with strengthening this decision and making it public.

"All right officer, don't shoot again. I'll come quietly."
—Humorist.

• Sees Prophecy Coming True

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir, — The fast revolving trend of events in Central Europe is to the thinking mind a clear indication of the weighty issues that are therein involved. I refer to the inhuman brutalities to which the Jews are being subjected in Germany today.

Under the comparatively inexperienced leadership of Hitler whose fiendish hatred of the unfortunate Jew is finding expression in atrocities more characteristic of the "Dark Ages" than of this so-called era of advanced civilization these helpless sons and daughters of Abraham are being punished because of a relationship the choice of which was not their own.

That such an attitude of ferocious animosity is as unreasonable as it is cruel is clearly evident from the fact that he stubbornly refuses to divulge his motive if such he possesses for actions so horrifying to the entire world.

In the year 70 A.D. some forty years after the crucifixion of our Lord, for which act the Jews assumed entire responsibility as evident from the significant words "His blood be on us and on our children" (Matthew 27: 25), the city of Jerusalem after a long seige and fearful carnage fell to the Romans who fought under the leadership of Titus.

Driven from their home after that terrible defeat they were scattered among the nations where for 1800 years and more they have roamed as strangers, and that until recent years without national consciousness.

How comprehensive was the prophecy uttered more than 2,000 years ago.

"For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image and without an ephod, and without a teraphim. Afterwards shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and His goodness in the latter days."—Hosea 3: 4, 5.

Israel's present position is well expressed in the poet's language:

"Tribes of the wandering foot and weary breast,
How would'st thou flee and be at rest.
The wild dove hath her nest, the fox his cave,
Mankind their country—Isarel but the grave."

Just as the Gulf Stream flows from the Gulf of Mexico as a mighty river 70 miles wide and 3,000 feet deep, and reaches the British Isles without mingling its pure fresh waters with the brine of the mighty Atlantic, so Israel has maintained her national integration. (Numbers 23:9).

Her heritage, though now well-nigh obscured by the dark clouds of persecution that are enveloping so many of her race, is nevertheless her own as evidenced by the words "To whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants and the giving of the law, and the service of God and the promises; Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, Who is over all God blessed for ever." (Romans 9: 4, 5).

Israel's restoration was prophesied long before her present humiliation in the words of Zechariah 12: 9, 10:

"And it shall come to pass in that day that I will seek to destroy those nations that come against Jerusalem. and I will pour upon the house of David and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication: And they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for Him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him, as one is in bitterness for his first born."

Then as Israel once more comes into her own: "It shall come to pass that ten men shall take hold, out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you; for we have heard that God is with you." (Zechariah 8:23).

How deeply humiliating it will be in that day for all Hitlers, Mussolinis and their followers!

Not only theirs, "but every knee must sooner or later bow to Jesus, and every tongue must confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father," (Philippians 2: 10, 11).

Thank God it is our privilege to take that humble place now, and renouncing all claims to any righteousness of our own, accept the Lord Jesus Christ as our only and Eternal Saviour—the one who without any effort of ours is able to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him. (Hebrews 7: 25).

Meanwhile the day is fast approaching when the rule of men shall give place to that of God for "The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and of His Christ and He shall reign forever and ever." (Revelation 11: 15).

RADIO TRICKS.

(Sydney Post-Record)

THOSE PLEASANT little Martians that came jumping out of a 40-year-old book and began shooting rainbows at mosquitoes in the Jersey meadows one fine Sunday might have accomplished one thing for the general good.

The public caught by both ears in the invasion suddenly realizes that "flash" and "bulletin" have been badly shop-worn.

News simulation is an old trick, antedating the radio as applied to hackneyed ideas grown jaded in service. Now the heads of the three largest broadcasting companies have met with Chairman McNinch, of the Federal Communication Commission and agree the two words should be used with great discretion in broadcasts.

The public is entitled to more than that. Both words have earned a long rest and it is hoped they will again return to the dignity they once enjoyed in the newspaper business.

MORE BROKEN BONES:

(Providence Journal)

BOTH the carefree motorist and the jay-walking pedestrian would have profited if they could have heard two Kentucky doctors describe to the clinical congress of the American College of Surgeons in New York some days ago the influence of automobile design on the treatment of fractured legs. The increase in motor vehicle power and speed, hence in force of impact upon any object getting in the way, has resulted in uncommonly severe and crushing injuries to bones, muscles, blood vessels and nerves. The difficulties of treatment and the time required for healing and restoration of function are greatly increased.

LIVE LONG AFTER HITLER

Chatham News: Mendelssohn's music is being banned in Germany. But Mendelssohn's music will live long after Hitler and his associates are completely forgotten.

HE TAKES IT BACK.

(Westbrook Pegler, Columnist)

WHEN WORSE PIECES are written than mine of the 8th inst. regarding the flying services and the exclusiveness of the officers' corps of the navy they probably will be written by the same hand. Impatient of compromise and half-measures, when I'm bad I am lousy, and I didn't need telling that I had fallen on my face, although several naval officers have been good enough to say so, in case you don't know.

I think it was as bad in its flippancy, which imparted an unintentional tone of rudeness and seeming contempt for the officers' corps, as in the lack of technical information about flying skill; equipment and organization. This lack was total but for the sort of reading that any layman puts his eye to in casual browsing. And, although I began by saying that I seemed to be at my best when writing of things which I knew nothing about, and therefore should be pretty good that day, it was effrontery to sound off.

So I take my wigging without smirk.

FOOTBALL IS WORK.

(New York World-Telegram)

A HALFBACK dropped from the Louisiana State University football squad charges the reason was that he told his fellow players they needed a labor union to protect them against overwork and long hours.

This will strengthen the suspicion of many people that football is more toil than play. We don't know what it would do to the romantic features of the great American college game if all the teams were organized by the C.I.O. or the A.F. of L.

But we're pretty sure that football wouldn't be as completely demoralized as bull-fighting has been in republican Spain, where it is announced that, for reasons of economy, toreadors hereafter are to fight in overalls and take their pay in meat from the bulls they kill.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

NO MAN can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?—Matthew vi, 24, 25.

ABSENT-MINDED.

(Glasgow Bulletin)

AN AUTHENTIC absent-minded professor story is told of Professor Samuel Alexander, of Manchester University, who died recently. He used to relate how, stopping in the street to light his pipe, and turning round to shield it from the wind, he then walked straight on and eventually found himself back at his starting point.

Professor Alexander was one of those men who believe that cycling has no age limits. When 75 years old he received a legacy of £200 from a friend, who hoped he would use the money to pay taxi-cabs, but the professor preferred to continue using his bicycle.

TIME FOR DRIVING.

(Trenton Courier Advocate)

WHEN you are on a long trip at what hour of the day do you like best to drive? With us, it is between twelve noon and one o'clock. And this all centres around the old saying that "some men live to eat, while others eat to live." We eat to live and we don't make no boast about it, so acting on a bit of observation and knowing men, we find the road at the noon hour practically deserted.

Any meal time would be a good time to drive, but as we rarely ever drive at night and perhaps don't get up early enough in the morning to do much observing we fall back on the noon hour when most men would sooner eat than drive and we would sooner drive than eat.

THE BACKBITER.

She is so pleasant to your face,
So friendly and so kind,
You scarcely can believe that she
Has a malicious mind.

She goes to church, she says her prayers
Devoutly every day,
And picks her friends to pieces
In a most relentless way.

She has a lively wit that makes
The cruel things she tells Sound only clever at the time,
And so her wares she sells.

She accepts your hospitality,
She has no scruples vain,
Though likely she'll go home and laugh
At the way you entertain.

A foe who fights you, you can fight
Because he is your foe,
But a friend who fights in friendship's name
Can deal a deadlier blow.

You wonder why she does it,
And yet you'll not deny
That you and I do just the same
Sometimes—yes, you and I.

"Sorry, miss," Tommy replied, "I thought you said pub."

Poultry Farming Safer Venture, More Profitable, Brethen Says

F. E. Ellis, formerly of Farm and Dairy staff in Peterborough, relates in this week's issue of Family Herald and Weekly Star, of a recent visit "to my old friend, G. A. Brethen of Norwood."

"His Hillcrest Farm was once known far and wide as the home of great Holsteins. Who of the black and white fraternity has not heard of Countess and Rauwerd? Then the White Leghorn came in. Poultry profits seemed to come a little easier than dairy profits. The cattle began to decrease as the chickens increased. Now the 50 acres of Hillcrest Farm are producing the hay for a working staff of three horses and all the grain goes to feed the chickens—still mostly Leghorns but with a few hundred New Hampshires as well.

Mr. Brethen is convinced that poultry farming is a safer venture and a more profitable one when combined with a productive farm. Conversely he does not see why fertility cannot be as well maintained by turning crops into eggs and poultry and carrying the manure back to the land as by feeding to Holstein cattle. He finds, too, that the work on the land and the work with poultry do not interfere too much thus insuring efficiency in the use of labor.

The pullets were grown this year on a limited fenced range, following roughly the pasture system developed by Dr. Graham at Guelph. They were good pullets, too. Cafeteria mashes are fed. A hatchery in keeping with the size of the flock is an important sources of income and hatches over a period of years have been high The eggs are shipped to Montreal and a premium price is obtained.

A. McNeil's Poultry

While in Norwood, Mr. Brethen took me around to see Anthony McNeil, who is making a wonderful success of a backyard flock of New Hampshires. Left a widower with three boys to care for, Mr. McNeil had the misfortune to lose an eye while helping a woman crank an old car. He had an insurance policy that helped for a time, but some work he could do was essential. He purchased chicks from Mr. Brethen and with the assistance of his advice started to rear a flock of New Hampshire pullets. As far as I can remember he had less than 400 pullets last year and cleared over $700. He had to buy all his feed. He sold the cockerels as broilers and light weight roasters, and the eggs went to Montreal. He is rearing his pullets on very limited range on a large lot in the village and is planning to follow the annual pasture system of cropping the range. And is he enthusiastic about his poultry? Mr. McNeil would be a real tonic to any dispirited poultryman."

For Sunday, November 27

SUNDAY'S horoscope favors relations with superiors or those in high places who may best be approached for favors or support, rather than commonplace influences. Spiritual, emotional and cultural affairs of a deep, secret or curious nature, possibly romantic feminine intrigues or secret affairs, are under excellent auguries.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year in which rather singular, secret or unusual circumstances may come to the front and have direct bearing on their prestige, popularity and success. While there are testimonies of advancement and favors from superiors, the emphasis seems placed on peculiar, intriguing or secret situations in the affectional life.

A child born on this day may be capable and ambitious, attracting its superiors who should be helpful in increasing its prestige and personal popularity.

For Monday, November 28

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a rather contradictory one. Much may be gained by direct and drastic action, while at the same time such tactics and aggressiveness might precipitate defeat and devastation. The sudden and irregular might prove upsetting to very important projects, whereas tact, cleverness and approch through tacit understanding and quite methods might assure major advantages.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great promise for putting over new matters of prime interest and importance. The energies may be keyed to such high pressure that overzealous tactics might prove more detrimental than effective.

A child born on this day may be aggressive, high-powered and ambitious. It may try to take all before it by stress and storm, whereas subtler tactics might prove quite as successful.

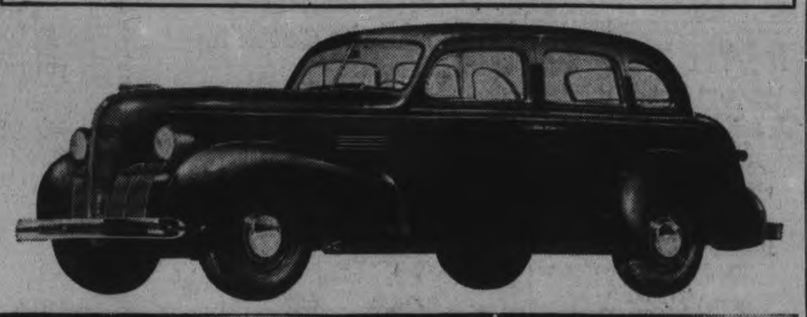
1939 Pontiac in Two New Series



Pontiac is introduced to the Canadian motoring public for 1939 in two new lines—the "Arrow" (top) and the slightly larger "Chieftain" (lower left). Complete and striking new body styling features the many innovations, both structural and mechanical, while the new Handi-shift gear control on the steering column is obtainable on both lines. The distinctive new Pontiac emblem (lower right) also serves as a hood catch and radiator ornament.

ROMANCE INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

Read This First:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him....then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Gurley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displeases Towne; but Bob accepts it gracefully. Sara Sue finds her affairs growing complicated, but feels much better after confiding her troubles to a close friend, Roxy Powell.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER 10

THE FACULTY meeting of the Rice Institute was called to order at 4 p. m.

First item of business:

"Mr. Sam Konomos requests permission to speak to the faculty, sir."

President Edgar Odell Lovett of the Rice Institute looked at his secretary.

"Konomos?"

"Yes, Dr. Lovett. He is proprietor, I believe, of the Houstex Inn, located across Rice boulevard from the campus."

"Um. Well, it is in no way connected with the university, but conceivably Mr. Konomos has legitimate business here. Ask him to come in, please."

Mr. Konomos would have been completely in atmosphere inside a prize fight ring. Indeed, he had once been a prize fighter. He weighed 205 pounds, and he was hairy, and his skin was dark, and his nose was flat, which caused him to wheeze a trifle. He smelled a little of alcohol and cheese.

On the other hand, the faculty chamber in the Rice administration building in one of the most beautiful rooms in Texas.

"It is an honor to welcome you, Mr. Konomos," said Dr. Lovett, who is about the most gracious gentleman imaginable. "Will you have this seat, sir?" He indicated a chair, and Sam slid into it, wheezing, glancing right and left.

"I ain't got too much time," Sam began.

"Quite so, sir. We shall endeavor to move swiftly. Proceed."

"It's about this widow, this Davis. She's ruin my business."

Nobody said anything to that.

"She's take all the trade," Sam went on. He turned to glare at the professors, instructors and assistants. "She come here with soft soap. She put up the fresh sign. She make love with everybody, ha! She is ruin my business, this romance house!" Sam's muscles bulged noticeably and he got up excitedly. "I have been in business three year. Is not fair she cut in!"

There was much more talk, with some questions from the faculty. Nobody voiced an opinion, however, until Mr. Konomos departed.

"So far as I am concerned," one faculty member spoke out then, "I cannot see that it is any affair of ours. But personally I can testify that the Houstex Inn is anything but savory in reputation. I hope she puts him out of business!"

Applause, and smiles, closed the discussion.

✧ ✧ ✧

Next item of business:

Report from Mr. James Britt, football coach.

"I have nothing unusual at this time, gentlemen," said Coach Jimmy, who had just come in. "The squad seems to be progressing nicely. You are already aware of the high interest in football this fall. I am doing everything possible to stress scholarship, as we previously agreed here. If any of my lads show signs of falling down in studies, please let me know promptly and I will take up the matter individually. The team morale seems to be exceptionally good. For one thing, I am getting some valuable co-operation from a person who, it appears, has a rather remarkable personality and influence. It is a Mrs. Davis, a widowed lady, of whom you may have heard elsewhere. She operates a new, ah — service, across Main street. I find her quite a help, when I had feared she might be a distraction."

"Um. Thank you, Jimmy," said Dr. Lovett. "Please meet with us as often as you can."

✧ ✧ ✧

Next item of business:

"The faculty is herewith presented with a brief written report from Mr. Wasson, the dormitory manager," said Dr. Lovett's secretary. "It reads as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"My records for the week show all rooms occupied, three illnesses of which one required hospitalization, and disbursements of $84.75 for supplies and repairs, invoices attached. This is exclusive of the mess hall.

"The general survey indicates, however, some minor disturbances are resulting from students trading in memberships in a new social club. Demand for these memberships, which seem to be limited in number, apparently is very great. Memberships which cost $3 initially have sold for as high as $30 in a few cases, I learned. I will make further investigation, if you so request.

" 'Respectfully submitted,

"JACOB WASSON.' "

The dean of the institute arose from his chair at this point.

"I move you, sir," he addressed the president, "that Mr. Wasson and the student government counsel be asked to meet at once with a faculty committee to investigate this matter. As you well know, Rice has maintained strict taboo on fraternities, sororities and such social clubs as function in a secret manner, tending to destroy the freedom and democracy we have cherished here. Perhaps it is just some of the new students, not acquainted with our traditions, however, so I think there is no cause for hasty action."

At that juncture Loren Dall Rogers, Ph. D., took the floor. Dr. Rogers, instructor in English literature, was smiling.

"I think I can allay the dean's fears," he announced. "I happen to room in the faculty tower myself, near the students. This 'club' to which Mr. Wasson refers is no threatened secret order, nor fraternity. It is simply the same one already mentioned — the Cottage club, organized by one, Mrs. Sara Sue Davis, who resides across Main boulevard. I have heard interminable discussion of it in the dormitories. I think the matter will evolve its own solution satisfactorily, but I shall be glad to look into it and report further here."

✧ ✧ ✧

Next item of business:

"A telegram," said the president's secretary, "has come from The New York Journal-American

" 'Gentlemen:

" 'Our Houston correspondent has sent a most interesting article concerning a new Cottage Plan for developing individual and group social life in Rice Institute, sponsored by Sara Sue Davis, a matron. Are we authorized to say that Mrs. Davis is ex-officio a member of the Rice faculty, or that she operates independently, but with your guidance and approval? You can understand how this would have added weight if it carried faculty endorsement, at least. Apparently Mrs. Davis' plan is rather distinctive, in that she offers personal guidance. Eastern colleges have been striving for some means of combatting the unwholesome roadhouse type of social attraction for students, and we are prepared to give full display to Mrs. Davis' enterprise, but would like to have your exact relationship to the plan there.'

"The telegram is signed by the managing editor, who requests that we telegraph him a reply, collect," the secretary concluded.

"Um," said Dr. Lovett.

He peered over his spectacles at his colleagues. Could he be detecting twinkles in his eyes that normally were serious, dignified?

"Ahem!" the president rumbled it, quite seriously. "It is almost time to adjourn this faculty session, and we seem not to have accomplished a thing. Have you gentlemen observed that every item of business so far has centered around, or at least led up to, some consideration of this Davis woman? Lady, perhaps I should say; I do not know her. I understand she is a widow. One of you mentioned that she is red haired, although what significence that holds in these discussions, I cannot see. But is it true that an entire faculty session must be given over to a young lady in no way connected with this university?"

A youngish looking professor, wearing horn-rimmed spectacles, took the floor.

"Mr. President!"

"Dr. Holgate," the chairman acknowledged him.

"I, of course, lament the crowded condition of our business calendar this afternoon, but I do wish to declare, emphatically, that Mrs. Davis is a most estimable young woman, and one, I think, of extraordinary—"

After considerable further discussion, the faculty meeting of the Rice Institute adjourned at 6 p. m.

Haliburton Lakes Begin Freezing

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Nov. 26.—At a session of the police court Friday the case of Sydney E. Gall, charged with fraud in connection with the Canada Lime Company, of Coboconk, was adjourned for one week. V. J. McElderry, K.C., Crown Attorney of Peterborough, requested the adjournment on the grounds that an important witness for the Crown was unable to be present. C. G. Frost, counsel for the accused, did not entirely agree with the adjournment. The charge against Gall was laid when it was alleged that he falsified the books of the Canada Lime Company while employed there by the National Trust Company.

Kushog Lake at Haliburton village is frozen over and Thursday night the young people enjoyed their first skate of the season. Sheets of ice covered sections of Sturgeon, Cameron and Balsam Lakes Friday and it is expected that Saturday these waters will be completely ice bound.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

The other morning, very early, before the children were up, Knarf and Hanid, the two shadows, found a message from their friend, Jack Frost. It was a picture drawn on the window in ice.

They gazed at the picture very carefully. They could see a tall tree and a little pond. Under the tree they could make out a tiny figure, all in white, with a tall cap and tassels.

"It's Jack Frost. He's waiting under the oak tree down at the pond" Knarf exclaimed.

Doesn't Like Sun.

"Hurry!" urged Hanid. "We mustn't keep him waiting too long. The sun will be getting warmer. Jack Frost doesn't like to stay in the warm sun."

So they hurried out through the garden door, ran across the garden, past the hedge and down the long slope to the edge of the pond. And there, under the oak tree just as they expected, was their friend, Jack Frost.

He was dressed all in white and was wearing a tall cap with tassels.

"I'm glad you got my message," he said as he greeted them. Then he sighed.

"Why, Jack! What's the matter?" they both asked him in surprise. Usually Jack Frost was very jolly.

"Just look!" he replied, motioning with his hand at all the dried leaves which had fallen off the oak and were lying scattered on the ground. "Just look what has happened to my beautiful leaves!"

"But leaves always fall off just before the winter," said Hanid.

"I know that. But this time I had hoped they wouldn't. You don't know how much time I spent on those leaves, painting them such beautiful colors. And now they're all lying on the ground. What a pity!"

"Yes, it is a pity," the shadows agreed.

"And to make things worse, just

"You won't be able to see me."

look how untidy they are, all in heaps and bunches! They're spoiling the whole side of the hill. They must be swept up at once."

"Swept up!"

"Yes. That's why I left the message for you. I want you to borrow a broom for me right away. I'll have them swept up before the children get up."

So the two shadows ran back to the house and got a broom and brought it to Jack Frost. The shadows couldn't wait any longer, for the children were getting up and they had to go back. "We'll watch you sweeping up the leaves from the bedroom window," they promised.

Then Jack smiled. "No, you won't be able to see me. I'll be invisible. But the leaves will be swept up just the same. Now run along."

And off they went. And when they reached the bedroom they watched out of the window. Sure enough, the leaves were being swept up, all along the slope of the hill. But they couldn't see their friend, Jack Frost. No, he was invisible. He swept-swept-swept just like the wind, and perhaps that's what he was: The wind.

Janetville Pays Departing Pastor Honor On 21 Years Loyal Service

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Nov. 26.—In honor of the consummation of 21 years of loyal service rendered in the Janetville Presbyterian Church by Rev. W. H. V. Walker and Mrs. Walker, a farewell gathering and presentation was held at the home of the Misses Margaret and Sara Johnston on Wednesday evening when the members and adherents of the church were present in large numbers, every family being represented with the exception of two who were unavoidably absent through illness.

While the guests were assembling crokinole was enjoyed and afterwards Charles McNeil acted as chairman for the following program: Orchestra selection and encore; reading, "When the Minister Comes to Tea," Miss Myra McGill; vocal duet, "Ivory Palaces," Misses Verna Wright and Norma McGill; reading, "Housecleaning," Mrs. W. Hanna; piano accordion and guitar music and encore, Harvey McGill and Leonard McNeil; vocal solo, Grant Earle; reading, "On the Eve of His Departure," Miss Ione Porter; humorous reading, "The Minister's Mistake," Mrs. H. Johnston; vocal solo, Harry Latham.

At this time the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Walker and sons Jack and Rowan were called forward and Mrs. W. Fitze read a well-worded address of tribute and appreciation of the 21 years of faithful and loving service rendered. Mr. and Mrs. Walker were presented with a lovely occasional chair and table, while Jack and Rowan each received a set of military brushes and combs in leather cases. Mrs. Lawrence Wright, Miss Audrey McGill, John Byers, and Ross Carron made the presentations, while Mrs. Walker also received a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums at the hands of little Miss Ruby McGill.

Each of the recipients although deeply touched, made fitting reply, and invited all to visit them in their new home at Stirling. All then joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows."

After several musical numbers, a contest was sponsored by Mrs. J. Capstick, and later lunch was served and a final and memorable social hour between pastor and people was enjoyed.

OBITUARY

AMOS HONEYWELL.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CENTRETON, Nov. 26. — Funeral services were held at Blacklock Funeral Parlors, Grafton, on Tuesday for Amos Honeywell, who passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Johns, Port Hope.

The late Mr. Honeywell had been a Haldimand Township farmer nearly all his life, retiring from the farm in 1936. He was born in Haldimand Township 85 years ago on the farm now occupied by his daughter-in-law Mrs. Smith Honeywell.

Mr. Honeywell suffered a broken leg some two years ago, and had been in bed since that time. During the past twenty-two months he lived in Port Hope.

His wife, Mary Ann Cochrane, predeceased him on March 11, 1937. He was a member of the Baptist Church Eddystone.

Fraternally he was a Mason, being a member of Colborne Lodge, A.F. and A.M.

Those left to mourn his loss are one daughter, Mrs. Henry Johns, Port Hope, and one son George and one grandson Wilfred Jones of Port Hope, and one brother Thomas Honeywell of Marysville, Washington. The remains were interred in the family plot in Eddystone Cemetery.

SEMI-FINAL EVENT PROVES POPULAR WITH GRAPPLE FANS HERE

Chilly Weather Scares Fans And Slim Crowd Turns Out For Three-Bout Grapple Card

Full nelsons, flying mares, tackles, bearhugs, crotch holds, jacknife grabs, kicks in the slats, body slams, pulled hair, elbow smashes, double-barrel grips and the rest of it, were dished up in profusion last night in the Brock St. arena as the mad matmen held forth before a small crowd of fans.

The amateur wrestlers turned on the heat for over two hours to warm the enthusiasm of the slim gathering on a cold night. They were a little late starting but did not wind up till well after 11 o'clock, and the crowd stuck it out to the finish. Plenty of heated action was on display in the three grappling bouts, and the crowd made up in noise what it lacked in size. The low temperature kept many fans away.

While all the wrestlers were from out of town, the local Riverview A.C. sponsored the show and barely broke even, owing to the attendance of about 200 mat followers. Charlie Kumf was in charge of the grunt-and-groaners and his gang put on a real show, despite the poor audience. Norm Bowler and Harry Low of the local club were promoters, with Charlie Kumpf the referee, and Terry Low the time-keeper for the evening.

A Hot Number

The semi-final on the card stole the show. Frenchy LaBelle and Ren Gazelley of Toronto dished up a hair-raising scrap that held the fans bellowing all the way through. They booed the villain, LaBelle, and cheered the hero all the way and the grapplers turned their bag of tricks inside out in a wide-open contest that nearly went the time limit. This same pair had met here before and it ended in a deadlock, but last night saw Gazelley winning the last two falls, and LaBelle winding up with a strained back—and he was writhing and groaning with the sore back for some time after the bout in his dressing-room.

The prelim saw Shackleton win over Landers in a fair exhibition of the mat game, and the final event of the evening went to The Mask over Moffatt in a good bout, though it was tame in spots. Neither bout measured quite up to the exciting semi-final joust between LaBelle and Gazelley—the fans' choice of the night—but they were quite lively in spots and held the gathering right to the end, despite the chill weather.

In the preliminary bout, Spider Shackleton and Frankie Landers, Toronto middletweights, mixed it up. It was a fair bout with a lot of mat work, just straight wrestling, and the odd mixture of the latter brand of devil-may-care grappling. They excited the crowd a few times but were more inclined to hang onto their holds for protracted periods. Landers opened up finally to soften his opponent with a series of tackles, slams and smashes to the kisser, finally pinning the Spider in 22 minutes to draw a hand.

The semi-final was plenty warm all the way between two well-matched and rough individuals. Gazelley proved popular to the paying customers and Frenchy raised their ire with rough tactics and careless waves of the arm toward the crowd, defying them to boo and bust. A series of jolting elbow smashes to the whiskers put Ren in a nice juicy spot for Frenchy to measure him eventually, and the Frog did that handily after some 30 minutes of mat messing. Frenchy had been out of the ring several times and had drawn more boos than Hitler, but what does that mean in the mat sport? The second round didn't last long until Ren applied a torturing full nelson and Frenchy fell under the punishment, straining his back. He had to concede the fall, rather than rise and take some more. It went about five minutes and 17½ seconds. They came out again but Gazelley picked his rival up high, spun him around and smacked him into the resin, and the referee mercifully awarded it to Ren—mercifully for Frenchy and the fans.

The main event saw The Mask triumph over Buck Moffatt in the first and third falls. The Hooded Horror—and his legs showed, of all things!—hails from Winnipeg, and it serves them right, while Moffatt is from Mount Dennis. He is supposed to be the strongest matman in the game in this province, but a goat was seen near a rasslin' show one night and there are doubts. However, these huskies put on a lively scrap most of the route, though not as open as the semi-finalists. It seems that Buck partially strangled himself and was hors de combat in the final round in rather short order after they had brutalized each other considerably, with The Mask rated the villain. Right away Buck made the blindfolded bird concede a fall when he slammed him so hard his grandmother's store teeth bounced out in her soup! They mixed it again and The Mask emerged the victor with a double-barrel (but they were both empty) and a rousing slam that shook the dust off all the pictures in parlors from Water St. to Aylmer, along Brock. And that ended the proceedings and the huge crowd ankled home.

Backbone Of Team

He's been the backbone of Jack Adams Detroit Red Wings for some seasons past and it looks as if he will remain that. Ebbie Goodfellow is his name, former high-scoring forward, but of recent years a close-checking defenceman who still packs a scoring punch. The Red Wings have been getting under way slowly this year, but already Ebbie has scored two goals in one game twice.

Caught up with a fellow off St. John's team and he said that the East City Greenhorns sure deserve to be where they are.

"It was a pleasure to see the way they played." Apparently the Ashburnham squad are showing some form. They have been within the top for some year. Maybe they will make the grade this time.

The Lightning Macks are coming back into form again and may be heavy contenders for the top honors.

Why not give the president's cup playdowns serious consideration so that we can get the games going early in the new year.

Just a suggestion—The Christmas season is on us and there is one of our old friends down in Toronto bed ridden in a hospital. I mean our old friend Sam Worsencroft. Why not make it your job to write him Christmas greetings, or maybe we could all get together on the matter and send him a fine bouquet. Let me have your suggestions.

Pains In The Back

Tell of deranged kidneys

Pains in the small of the back tell of kidney derangements.

Other symptoms are pallor, loss of weight, dryness of the skin and swelling of the limbs.

Backache is the most certain warning that the kidneys are failing to filter the poisonous uric acid from the blood.

You may also have frequent headaches and aching limbs, for acid poisons always cause bodily pains and aches.

If you want to remove the cause of such ailments, it is advisable to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For half a century they have proven their success as an effective means of restoring the health and activity of the kidneys, the liver and the bowels. It is because of their direct and combined action on these organs that they prove effective when ordinary medicines fail.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THIS BEING SATURDAY, we'll devote a few paragraphs to rugby. We note an item in the Windsor Star telling of a press football fray recently in which the "west" section of Canadian Press scored a glorious 24-6 triumph over the "east" division. The glory was in no way lessened by strategy employed by the winners, who took the office ball two weeks before the game and refused to loan their rivals the pigskin for practices. Naturally, no newspaperman can borrow or afford to buy another football. The C.R.U. might well be interested in some of the rules injected into this historic contest, there being no tackling permitted, nor deadline kicks and no field goals. But forward passing was allowed by anyone anytime in any part of the field. They opened up the game considerably, tossing the ball forward, backward and upward with much abandon, and playing in 30-minute quarters. It is recorded as an amazing spectacle, with the doughty athletes of the pen and pencil being so worn out at the finish that they could hardly lift a stein.

* * * * * *

TED REEVE, Queen's coach and Toronto scribe, comments on some senior O.R.F.U. angles. He points out that Hi Living really wasn't eligible to play for Sarnia—though he was finally okayed by the Union—and that he cannot play for the Imps if they enter C.R.U. playoffs. Ted feels Montreal Nats had no business having six of their men named on the all-star squad, and says he voted for Loucks of Peterborough. He also believes that Nats or Beaches would give Argos a tougher battle than Sarnia will. Ted adds that a Big Six group next year seems out "because Peterborough came in to the O.R.F.U. on a three-year plan or something of the sort and can be expected to build, and the Cubs weathered their sad season in Montreal and have the backing to be stronger next year." All the strong clubs had a good financial season, Reeve states, and "all are somewhat obligated to their allies." He concludes by suggesting a Big Eight to give fans a real run for their coin, and it's certainly worth a thought.

A One-Sport Centre

ADD TOWNS that are one-sport centres: Orillia. Take away lacrosse and what have they got for followers of the athletes? Fans there, used to seeing grand lacrosse games—a right rugged sport—should go for hockey in a big way, but they get no chance. Possibly lacrosse backing is so expensive in that burg there is no dough left to promote the ice game—and Orillia has no O.H.A. entry, not even junior "C". And little or nothing the rest of the year, except the gutted-stick game. They can have their senior "A" lacrosse—we'll take a variety of sports in preference any day.

* * * * * *

LOCAL FANS may not have so many titles come here (though a few), but at least they see a whale of a lot of keen competition in all sports the year 'round. We have senior ball of the "A" variety, senior football, senior "B" lacrosse and hockey, first-rate tennis, golf, boxing, rasslin', soccer, water sports, curling, bowling badminton and what not. And not just a little of those, but heaps. Too much hockey this winter, for instance, for the rink accommodation. Crowds of 2,000 at baseball, lacrosse and hockey games, with 3,000 turnouts at football. And 600 or 700 at softball scraps and mitt shows. And plenty of Peterborough teams in provincial semi-finals and finals. This is no one-sport centre; it's the city of 101 sports, by golly!

Call In The Cops!

BARRIE EXAMINER scribe writes us saying that Auggie Ferguson of Barrie was not the Auggie Ferguson who lost a bout to Nick Orlando here a short time back. On account of Auggie is but 23, has sandy hair and weighs 140 pounds. And has won 37 straight bouts, with no losses. He had been asked by a Toronto man to fight in Peterborough but had declined, owing to work, so he remained in Barrie that Friday eve. What this chap wants is for us to point out to Peterborough pug fans that Auggie Ferguson of Barrie did not lose a fight in Peterborough at any time. We will gladly do so, and it shapes up as a bit of skull-duggery by the Toronto promoter who advertised down this way that Auggie Ferguson would fight and, when he found out too late that Ferguson wasn't available, shipped in some veteran middleweight in his place—terming the new basher Auggie Ferguson. The real Auggie says he never heard of another boxer in Ontario by the same monicker.

* * * * * *

ART HUNTER, who used to be a good bantam boxer around these parts, conducts a class twice a week in the "Y" training ambitious young boxers. Every Monday and Thursday, with the "Y" sponsoring the instructions in the manl yart of self-defence. It's open only to Y.M.C.A. members and most of the pupils have no intention of taking up pugilism—they merely wish to learn how to handle their dukes properly. Skipping rope, light bag, heavy bag, shadow boxing and the rest of it, makes up this instruction—and Art says he has about a dozen boys training. It's a good game to learn, but not always advisable to go on exhibition before howling fans.

A Lot Of Emptiness

SEVERAL THOUSAND rassle fans stayed away from the Brock St. arena last p.m., no doubt taking a firm grip on an easy chair by the fireplace, but three lively mat bouts were dished up anyway. Hardly 200 customers saw Frank Landers larrup Spider Shackleton in the prelim, with Ren Gazelley pinning Frenchy LaBelle twice in the semi-final, and The Mask emerging on top of Buck Moffatt in the main event. The semi-final stole the show by a mile and a quarter, and the slim crowd did a noble chore in chucking high vocal notes up into the rafters. Frenchy LaBelle is another Kasakoski with a mean villainous disregard for all the higher things in life, and a contemptuous wave of the arm at booing fans. The rest of the rasslers were well-built, clever and willing to work their heads to the bone for a little loose change. Brrrr, but it was cold!

* * * * *

COMING around 8.30 last eve at the rink, Norm Bowler and Harry Low—who could grin despite a financial setback facing em—had grave fears they wouldn't have enough coin to cover the rasslers' expenses. They told Promoter Charlie Kumpf of Toronto this and, without batting an eye, that hard-boiled gent said: "That's okay, you take the risks and we'll do the same; the boys will go on as billed and they'll shoot the works, too." Well, they went out there in the cold before a small crowd—and not knowing if they'd get any money for their night's work and travel—and they smeared each other around for two hours and a half! Ya gotta give those guys credit—and we want to see the boxer who would have done it! We're glad to report that the merry matmen and their boss were paid off at the end, and that the local lads didn't lose their shirts—though they may have lost one sleeve. The arena boss will never wax wealthy on his cut, either, but he didn't squawk.

Gehringer Signs With Detroit Team

DETROIT, Nov. 26 (CP)—Charlie Gehringer signed his 19th contract with the Detroit Tigers yesterday.

Gehringer was the first Tiger regular to sign. He walked into the office of Walter O. Briggs, Sr., club owner, blushed and said "hello."

Mr. Briggs handed him his contract, btsinessman Charlie read the contract, grabbed a pen and signed. That's all there was to it. No terms were announced except the length of the contract.

PREPARE FOR OLYMPICS

HELSINKI, Finland — (CP). — "Olympic Village" now being erected at Kapyla near here is planned to accommodate nearly 3,000 athletes in about 30 three-storey buildings.

He Did All the Catching

Ceferino Garcia, ABOVE, was outpointed by Henry Armstrong last night in New York, the colored clouter retaining his welter title handily in 15 rounds before a big crowd. Hammerin' Henry gave away 12 pounds to his hard-hitting opponent but threw so many punches at Garcia over the route that the bigger boxer had few chances to wind up and do some pitching. He was the catcher in this ball game and Armstrong showed no sign of weakening in the late innings.

Midget N.H.L. Is Drawing Plans For All-Ontario Playdowns

(By Tommy Munns.)

TORONTO, Nov. 26. — Plans are well under way for all-Ontario playdowns in Midget National Hockey Leagues—one of the greatest organizations ever devised for budding young athletes. I'm in receipt of a letter from Gordon Alcott, the Frank Calder of the Midget N.H.L.'s, who organized Ontario's first circuit of that kind in Georgetown, giving the details.

As I wrote some weeks ago, Alcott has another midget loop in Copper Cliff, where he now resides and where he carried out a similar plan in baseball. The winners will play off with Sudbury, Creighton, and Haileybury to declare champions to meet winners of Southern Ontario playdowns.

Playoff Conditions.

Briefly, the playoffs are open to all Midget N.H.L. teams, representing leagues of three or more entries. Each local league picks an all-star team. Ages of players are ten to fourteen years by January 1, 1939. Entries must be in President Calder-Alcott's hands by January 1, the playoff series being planned for February.

The Ontario Midget N.H.L., carrying out the idea of giving teams and players National League names, will provide a "Stanley Cup" to go to the winners of a two-game series in which the southern champions will retain the Howie Morenz Trophy now held by Georgetown.

This type of hockey provides a worth-while activity for Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis, and other service clubs, and there is no reason why centres without Midget N.H.L.'s shouldn't have them this season.

Also of interest is the "farm club system" developed by Alcott. At Copper Cliff the Midget N.H.L. has 108 boys under contract, playing for four teams—Maple Leafs, Canadiens, Bruins and Rangers. The younger boys play for the farm club teams of Syracuse Stars, Providence, New Haven and Philadelphia.

This keeps the two leagues vitally interested in one another. The Leafs can draw talent only from Syracuse and so on, and next year the farms will fill the places left by graduated players.

It is nothing, writes Alcott, to hear boys saying: "I have been sent to the minors for seasoning."

The Contracts.

Above I mentioned that the players all were under "contract." So they are, and here are the terms of the contract they sign:

"I promise to live up to the following rules and regulations:

I SHALL NOT

(1) Smoke.
(2) Drink harmful beverages.
(3) Say or do anything harmful to the players and league executive.

I SHALL

(1) Do everything to help and encourage players and league executive.
(2) Keep up my studies.
(3) Be in bed each night not later than 10.30.
(4) Act in a sportsmanlike way, on or off the ice.

Peso-Passer?

TORONTO, Nov. 26—(CP)—Police tonight arrested James Brown, 26, Toronto, on two charges involving the passing of worthless Mexican peso notes. Brown is alleged to have passed one five-peso note on Louis Slotsky and later attempted a similar fraud on Solly Kay. Kay did not have change for what he believed to be a $5 Canadian bill and returned to his employer for change. The employer became suspicious and called police.

MAY TOUR ENGLAND

WELLINGTON, N.Z.—(CP)—The New Zealand Rugby League is considering an invitation from the English Rugby League to send a team to England in 1939. Financial details suggested are said to be satisfactory.

SPORT SPICE

(By SID FEDER)

NEW YORK, Nov. 26 (A.P.). — This corner is about convinced that the guy who beats Henry Armstrong will have to lug a cannon into the ring with him....Even then it's liable to be a draw....The "eyes" had it—and how—after last night's tangle....Both of Garcia's were sliced like steak, and the Hammer's left optic looked like a total eclipse.

As soon as Promoter Mike Jacobs announced the Ambers-Armstrong welterweight title go for next March, Al Weill, Lou's pilot, began beating the tom-toms for his boy to do the trick....Well, y' gotta show us, Toots....Don't know if you've heard it, but Armstrong's only "lucky charm" is a little white Bible.

If you think baseball isn't still the United States national pastime, get a load of the Evangeline League attendance figures—the eight towns in the Crawfish Loop have a total population of 78,045, and the "gate" for the season was more than 400,000 paid....And speaking of attendance, Wisconsin's snappy football Badgers drew 124,189 to four home games this fall.

All the sports boys in town were sorry to see Hugh Bradley leave the New York Post—as sports columnist—and glad that 'twas a nice guy as Jack Miley who took over....Little Tony Conzoneri is still the gallery gods' favorite....When he was introduced from the ring last night it brought down the house among the cheaper seats.

Seems the Mid-west colleges are finally getting around to discovering they had some pretty good home coaching talent that got away....For instance, Wisconsin brought Harry Stuhldreher back from the East, Michigan did the same with Fritz Crisler, Notre Dame yanked Elmer Layden out of Duquesne....And now Ioway grabs Eddie Anderson from Holy Cross.

The fight game gets funnier and funnier....Listen to this one. Little Dado and Small Montana were named by the New York Commission as leading contenders for the flyweight title....Now they are matched for Oakland, California, for the end of the month....But it's doubtful if the local fight fathers will recognize it because California only permits 10 rounders and here they demand 15 heats for any title.

360 m.p.h.. Spitfire Creates Sensation

LONDON, Nov. 26 (CP-Havas). Sensation in London aerial circles is the new Spitfire pursuit plane, specifications of which have just been revealed. It has an official speed of 360 miles an hour, carries eight machine guns, and is controlled by a single pilot.

Shortly to be exhibited to the public, the Spitfire travels faster than the Hurricane model, whose official speed is 335 miles. These are the two types of pursuit plane to be constructed in large numbers for the Royal Air Force.

Lord Nuffield has contracted to build 1,000 planes of the Spitfire model. A large number will be built by the Vickers plant at Southampton.

Construction of these models is to be completed by 1940, when they will replace all other types of pursuit planes of less recent make.

Technicians hope to devise even faster models while these are being constructed.

Sam Snead vs. Henry Cotton Would Be A Golf "Natural"

By ANTHONY PUGLIESE
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Replete with thrills for top rank golfers as well as the lowly dub, a gold match between Sammy Snead, West Virginia slugger, and Henry Cotton, former British open champion, would have just about everything to satisfy the appetite of the hardiest linksmen.

Henry Cotton

With Cotton definitely coming here in the spring the match, if arranged, would be played on some Long Island course next spring or summer in conjunction with the 1939 World's Fair to be staged here. It would be contested over the 72-hole route, with a fat purse being awarded to the winner of the hand to-hand duel.

At first glance, selection of a probable winner of such a match, if worked out, would be a herculean task.

Sammy Snead, the gangling, hard-hitting pro from the West Virginia mountains, has cleaned up in almost every worthwhile event this season. His total winnings from tournament competition already this season have passed the $17,000 and as the sporting gentry has it—"that aint peanuts."

Snead, who hits the longest accurate drive in the business, has won or been runner up in most top-crust money tourneys in his brief but brilliant golfing career. Only the U.S. open title has eluded his grasp, and that too seems destined for his trophy chest.

On the other hand, Cotton has amassed a rather marvelous record in his campaigns over fairways of the British Isles and on the continent as well.

Winner of the British open in 1934 and 1937, Cotton has proved himself a remarkable match player. Now 31, he started his professional career at 17 and has become one of Great Britain's all-time golf wonders. Last year at Walton Heath, in Britain, Cotton won the £5,000 News of the World "World Championship" match from Denny Shute, who had held the U.S. P.G.A. title for two successive years. He also won the German and Czechoslovakia opens last year.

In mastering the cool and efficient Shute, 6 and 5, Cotton did what the best American play-for-play golfers were unable to do for two championships.

Snead has made most of his fortune—and his winnings are just that if you ask his fellow professionals—in medal play tournaments, topping the haul off with the $5,000 first plum in the Westchester 108-hole marathon.

Sam Snead

Sammy's murderous driving was not sufficient to take the U.S. P.G.A. final match from short-hitting Paul Runyan, so possibly Cotton would have a match play edge.

It is futile to sit back and speculate on the relative merits of two stylists in golf. They might better get together in a face-to-face match and settle the issue—at least temporarily. That's just what will happen if the New York world's fair people have their say.

Clinton Marksmen Take Rifle Meet

MONTREAL, Nov. 26:—The largest rifle competition of any kind ever to be held in Canada saw the little town of Clinton emerge victorious as Ontario champions according to first round results of the 1938 Dominion Marksmen. 22 Sporting Rifle Competition announced from Montreal today. Over one thousand marksmen on 210 teams, representing 118 towns and cities in Canada, participated in the monster tournament, chalking up such sensational scores that in some cases it was necessary to decide winners by the highest number of shots registered within the rarely used x-ring within the bullseye.

Shooting a perfect score of 1500x 1500, the entry of the Clinton Rifle Club nosed out the No. 2 team of the Frontier Rifle and Revolver Club of Windsor by an x-ring decision, and gained eligibility to compete in the Dominion championships against winners in eight other provinces and one from the North West Territories. Third place ended in a three-way tie between the Bracebridge Rifle Club, the Ryerson Press Rifle Club of Toronto and the No. 1 team of the Frontier Rifle and Revolver Club of Windsor, all of which scored 1497 x 1500.

Remember When—

Toronto Balmy Beach gridders won the Eastern Canada rugby title at Toronto 11 years ago today with a 9-6 decision over Hamilton Tigers. It marked the first championship for an Ontario Rugby Football Union team since 1912 when Hamilton Alerts won. Beaches won again in 1930.

Local Youngsters Lambaste Cobourg

A local young rugby team, which won here a few weeks ago, played a return exhibition tilt with a young Cobourg crew last weekend on a chilly Lakeshore gridiron. The home team was coached by Joe Begley, who played for the Orfuns here last year. Following is a comment on the game by Prince Gordon, columnist of the Cobourg World, a weekly newspaper:

We have heard about cold snow covered gridirons but last Wednesday we really saw one. The Sacred Heart School from Peterborough came here to play the local St. Mike's and the game was played in Horseshow park on a frozen field with snow patches and a whistling cold gale that just about froze everyone there. The Liftlockers came from behind to run away with the tussle 25 to 5 but not before we had seen a long run of forty-five yards by 'Jimmy' Oulahen who also scored his team's only touch. The visitors uncorked a fine passing attack once uncorking a toss for thirty-five yards that resulted in an easy touch for the losers. Paul Leonard was a mighty atom tearing hither and yon with no regard for his bigger opponents or the cold weather. Murray and Lavis also played very well for the locals, while Gus Bambridge took part in the last play, he kicking off after a touch and making a sensational tackle of the receiver just as the whistle blew for time. Coach Begley stated after the game between chattering teeth that next year it would be different and with wind howling we forbore to argue.

UNITED STATES LEADS

HELSINKI, Finland — (CP). — United States occupies first place and England fifth in world athletics, says the newspaper Hufvudstadsbladet, quoting ten best results of last season in 23 recognized track and field events.

There'll be a C instead of N.Y. on the cap worn by Johnny Broaca, ABOVE, next year. The temperamental New York Yankee hurler has been sold to Cleveland Indians for the waiver price. Johnny is the party who up and left the Yankees in mid-season of 1937, complaining of a sore back. His action resulted in suspension, but he was recently reinstated.

HENRY ARMSTRONG RETAINS THE WORLD WELTERWEIGHT TITLE

Filipino Makes Good Rally In 12th Round

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 26—(AP).—Henry Armstrong, the tough little fellow who holds the lightweight and welterweight titles seems scarcely a real person. The historians of the ring will know the Negro puncher as a superman of the ring and he took nothing away from the legend that will surround him when he defeated Ceferino Garcia in his first defense of the welter crown.

Garcia, whose "bolo" punch is supposed to strike men speechless, lifted Henry clear off his feet with several terrific belts in Madison Square Garden last night, but all it got the husky Filipino was a beating he will remember long after he has returned to the sugar cane fields.

Armstrong, who at 134 pounds looked like a wisp before his 146½ pound rival, practically knocked the daylights out of Garcia.

He won nine of the 15 rounds by wide margins and lost only five, one of which was taken from him by referee Arthur Donovan because of a low blow.

Now that that's settled, there remains only one opponent in sight for Henry and that is Lou Ambers, from who he won the lightweight crown some months ago. They will go at it again at the Garden in February or March, for the welterweight toga.

Almost 16,000 fans braved icy pavements and chill winds to watch Henry turn back Garcia's challenge and they get their $80,000 worth.

Decision Unanimous

The decisio nwas unanimous, and even Garcia's dressing room protests that he deserved the duke were feeble.

At that, he looked a little better than Armstrong today. Henry's left eye was closed tighter than a drum from a furious right that pipped him just before the end of the 14th round. The Filipino was deeply gashed over both eyes and his hands were swollen. Armstrong's mouth was bruised and cut.

As he said he would, Armstrong closed in on the bigger fellow and made life miserable for him. The dusky David didn't have a slingshot handy, but he used everything else in the book, including his head, shoulders and elbows. His tactics drew scattered boos, but the general feeling seemed to be that he had conceded so much weight that he had a right to employ a few extra weapons.

Alice Marble Turns To Warbling In Night Clubs

New York, Nov. 26 (A.P.).

ALICE MARBLE gave out the news to-day that she'd blossom out next week as a night club singer (Waldorf Astoria Hotel) and that, said she, makes her the first women's tennis champion to become a professional singer.

But she isn't going to let her singing interfere with her court career.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association, it seems, has bestowed its blessing on her vocal ambitions, and she still has her eye on Wimbledon and Forest Hills next year.

Alice says she's taking up singing because you've got to earn a living.

Gracie Is Sold To Black Hawks

CHICAGO, Nov. 26 (A.P.). — Chicago Black Hawks announced last night the outright purchase of Bob Gracie, centre, from Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League.

Gracie, who is 28, and has played seven seasons in the National Hockey League, will join the Hawks in New York, where Manager Bill Stewart plans to use him to-night against the Americans and Sunday against the Rangers.

Trudell, Goupille Go Down.

MONTREAL, Nov. 26 (C.P.).—Still further changes in the rapidly shifting personnel of Montreal Canadiens were hinted late yesterday by Coach Cecil Hart, who previously announced Bob Gracie was up for sale "for his poor showing" in the Frenchmen's tied game with New York Americans on Thursday night.

Coming out of a conference with Ernest Savard, president of Canadiens, whose lone point is the loot garnered so far in the National Hockey League schedule, Hart announced Gracie was up for sale. And at the same time he said Louis Trudell and Cliff Goupille would be sent to New Haven Eagles.

Campbellford's Netters Retain Trophy

ABOVE is shown members of the Campbellford Tennis Club, displaying the coveted Graham Trophy which they won for the third time this past season, and which they now retain as a permanent decoration for the club's trophy room. District rivals have found keen competition and a high calibre of tennis play when they opposed the Campbellford players across the net. Back row, LEFT to RIGHT: R. C. Ramsden, Miss Grace Cairns, Donald Meyers, Miss Lois Meyers, and Miss Eleanor Ferris; front row: Paul O'Sullivan, Wilbert Kingston and Kenneth Kingston.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, this has been a dull week in the local sports arena, with the rassling matches in the Brock Street Rink being about the only doings of note in the home district and it was so cold up there, the folks what went tell me, that they was danger of 1 or them grapplers freezing in midair during a flying tackle. As for me I figgered a air version of the Armstrong-Garcia fisticuffs would be even more exciting and certainly could be followed in a much warmer place than sitting around the local ice box watching a bunch of human pretzels get in and outa knots. And that musta been quite a bout Mac, judging by the no. of blows announced over the air and the way the crowd in Madison Square Gardens was rooting.

She's Nearly Over.

Well, old timer, the football season which ended for our teams several weeks ago is beginning to draw to a close. They will be 2 champions decided this Sat., and I think it will be the Argos and the Sarnia Imps what will come through and when them 2 teams clash I'll go right out on the far end of the well-known limb and call the Hayman brigade to turn the trick and capture the Eastern honors.

The Crazy Argonauts.

Then Oarsmen certainly don't play their football cards close to their vests; on the other hand they take all kinds of chances and fling the old pigskin around until they have the opposition thinking about 3 footballs is being used at the same time. Miss Ted Reeves, which knows his rugby backwards, forwards and vertical sez they uncorked the most versatile attack last Sat. he has ever seen and it must be admitted he has seen plenty. The Argos play the kinda football that makes rugby enthusiasts outa folks what couldn't get a thrill at all outa watching the old 2 bucks and a kick stuff so many of the team of to-day use, and because they have been adding brightness and color to the gridiron game all season I'm pulling for the Oarsmen even if they do represent Toronto.

Some Funny Things.

If you're interested in pro hockey, old timer, you gotta admit they is some funny things already this season. 1 of course is that the Flying Frenchmen, otherwise the Canadiens, played over 3 weeks before they had a single point to their credit. Another is that the scoring race is led by Mister Tommy Anderson of the Americans, a lad that was never mentioned before when hockey sharp-shooters was being talked over. Of course Mister Anderson may only be a flash in the pan, but anyway there he is at present writing up at the top of the ladder and you can't take that away from the lad. Incidentally, Mac, the Amazing Amerks has 3 men in the Big 7 in the scoring race and that, neighbors, is something.

Well, old timer, that seems to be about the works for the nonce, so we'll break off here.

Sportfully Yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

U.S. Football May Adopt Rouge Play

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—(CP).—The time has come, in the opinion of some expert observers, for Canada to repay the United States for the forward pass by giving American football the rouge—one of the fundamental plays of the Canadian game.

The slight talk there was early in the season to eliminate the single point—and there was some talk in eastern football circles—has been rebutted solidly by hosannas hurled at it by three Americans in close touch with the game. Bud Shaver, vice-president of Detroit's professional Lions, and Vic Hanson, former head coach at Syracuse University, came right out for adoption of the play into American rules.

Reg Threlfall, head coach at South Dakota, until taking charge of Winnipeg Blue Bombers this season, joined the chorus of applause. Threlfall and Hanson gave the rouge unstinted praise as a thrill producer after watching Toronto Argonauts defeat Ottawa Rough Riders 9-1 in an Interprovincial Union playoff.

Threlfall and Hanson saw the play at its best in the early minutes of the game. Ottawa's Eddie Rocano kicked far behind the line to Art West and the fleet Argo half squirmed his way through several tacklers to the 20-yard line. Under American rules, if a kick goes past the goal line the ball comes out 20 yards automatically.

West's run was a thriller. Describing it, Hanson said:

"It was terrific and anybody who wants that rule wiped out should have his head examined."

The rouge was a strong scoring factor in the East's three Senior Unions this season. Punters of the Interprovincial, Ontario and Intercollegiate Unions accounted for 125 points, better than a sixth of all the points scored during the season.

Figure Senators Out For Trades

By Eady Gilmore
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—(AP).—Clark Griffith won't admit it, but the early winter word is that the president of Washington Senators will haul a cargo of baseball-trading material to the American league meeting next month.

The only thing the old fox will admit outright about baseball is that Walter Johnson was its best pitcher, but these players might figure in winter trading:

Cecil Travis, one of the game's 300-hitting shortstops.

Al Simmons, outfielder who hit 300 last season.

Zeke Bonura, the fence-busting first baseman.

The entire Washington pitching staff with the exception of left-handed Joe Krakauskas, the slow-talking Canadian with the fast ball who learned his baseball in Hamilton and Brantford, Ont.

Catcher Rick Ferrell, if Washington can get another receiver.

Simmons is almost certain to go—he and Griffith waged a heated word battle at the end of the season and they don't fight with Griff and take his pay.

Port Colborne And Falls O.H.A. Winners

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP)—Brantford haven't won a game in the senior division of the Ontario Hockey Association this season, but their showing has established them as definite threats for the spring playoffs.

Brants lost 5-3 at Niagara Falls last night after a great display of fighting spirit in the last two periods that brought them all their goals. They trailed 4-0 at the end of the first frame. It was Brantford's third loss and Niagara's first win in three tries.

Port Colborne Sailors won their first game in three, defeating St. Catharines Chiefs 4-2. Here another great rally was staged—this time bringing victory—when Ports counted three goals in the last period to overcome a 2-1 lead.

Old Goney McGowan, centre ice veteran, notched one of the Port Colborne goals on a penalty shot. The shot was awarded after Ossie Carnegie, Toronto negro with the Indian Chiefs tripped Lloyd Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald, George Wade and Gal Gallinger were other Sailor scorers. Carnegie and Lorne Rombough tallied for St. Kitts, both in the opening session.

Jack Dyte, Pete Peterkin, Chet Steele and Steak Morrison gave the Falls a four-goal lead over Brants in the first period. Keith Cooper started the Bird rally in the second with two clever goals, and Ebby Edmison, on a pass from Cooper, made the count 4-3 early in the third.

Brants pressed hard for the tying tally but the veteran Steele made a Falls victory certain with a clever goal with one minute of play remaining. George Grigor, a Toronto product, made the play.

Barbara Scores Triumph In Stella Dallas

The poignant story of the tawdry, vulgar woman who rises to magnificent heights through her sublime love for her daughter is interpreted by Barbara Stanwyck and a stellar cast with a realism that is breath-taking in its intensity.

In Stella Dallas, opening Monday at the Capitol, Barbara Stanwyck in the title role gives a performance that will undoubtedly be hailed as one of the finest of the year and should rocket her to new heights of film fame just as the characterization of "Stella Dallas" in the silent version produced by Samuel Goldwyn twelve years ago catapulted Belle Bennett into sensational box-office prominence.

"Stella Dallas" carries a terrific appeal to the emotions in its simple and powerful story. It depicts the love life of Stella, a beautiful and pleasure-starved mill girl, who after a brief romance marries Stephen Dallas, outside her social sphere. They soon discover that they are definitely mismated. Their baby is born, and Stella's only redeeming quality seems to be her understanding heart expressed in her love for her little daughter Laurel. Her coarse manner of living becomes more pronounced and her flirtation and friendship with Ed Munn, race track tout, and his loud companions further alienates her husband.

On her eighth birthday Laurel is humiliated when her schoolmates refuse to come to her birthday party because of the gossip created by her mother's vulgar behavior.

Later Stella, who idolizes her daughter, takes her to a fashionable resort to meet some of the better people. Her mother's garish attire, and flamboyant attitude, however, invites ridicule, and Laurel, who has just met her first sweetheart, Richard Grosvenor, is so ashamed she insists on going back home.

Have Refined Home

A conversation which Stella overhears on the train enroute for home brings the horrifying realization that she is standing in the way of her daughter's happiness. She decides to permit Stephen to divorce her providing he marries Mrs. Morrison, an old sweetheart, so that Laurel can live with them and have the advantages of a refined home.

The fierce loyalty of Laurel to her mother and her refusal to go with her father and Mrs. Morrison are poignant sequences that play on the heartstrings. But the mother is determined to sacrifice herself for her daughter's sake. How she finally turns her child from her and hides the love for her that is tearing at her heart is the most deeply moving situation that has ever been filmed.

Barbara Stanwyck's portrayal of the mother, showing the gradual breaking down of her moral fibre and her transition from the light-hearted mill girl to the disillusioned and lonely woman, is a triumph of dramatic artistry.

John Boles as Stephen Dallas has one of the strongest roles of his career. Anne Shirley registers a distinct hit as the loyal little daughter who despite her mother's shortcomings refuses to leave her. Alan Hale is superb as the roistering Ed Munn, whose boisterous flirtation with Stella leads to the break up of the Dallas home. Other members of the cast who distinguish themselves in important roles are Al Shean as Mr. Lieber, Stephen Dallas' employer, Barbara O'Neil as Mrs. Morrison and Tim Holt as Laurel's sweetheart, Richard Grosvenor. Supporting players include George Walcott, Marjorie Main, Bruce Satterlee, Anne Shoemaker, Halan Briggs, and Etta McDaniels.

Those superlative production values which are an intergral part of every Goldwyn production are strongly evident. The superior photography by Rudolph Mate, ace camerman—the notable screen treatment by Victor Heerman and Sarah Mason and the flawless direction of King Vidor, who made "Street Scene" for Mr. Goldwyn, combine with the perfect cast and compelling story to make one of the outstanding productions of this or any other season.

Appearing In Stella Dallas

John Boles and Barbara Stanwyck, appearing in "Stella Dallas" at the Capital Theatre, starting Monday.

Y's Men's Show Be Worthwhile Entertainment

Last evening in the Y.M.C.A. a cast of sixty enthusiastic performers saw for the first time the Y's Men's "Front Page Frolics Revue" in its entirety. This mirth-provoking two-hour performance moved through very smoothly with each actor, singer or dancer picking up their cues expertly, and with several more rehearsals yet to be held before the show opens in the Collegiate Auditorium next Wednesday evening.

The director is satisfied that "Front Page Frolics" will prove to be worthwhile entertainment.

It is with pride that the Y's Men's Club announce that possibly the two best voices in Peterborough will be heard in their show. Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie will sing two appropriate numbers while George Coleman will be heard to advantage in "Glory Road."

A dramatic offering entitled "The Gordon Knot" which has been very well received in other centres will be presented here by four talented players and features Don Crawford

Farce Comedy

Another highlight of the production is the farce-comedy skit, "Mrs. Snobleigh Entertains," in which we find such notable players as Ivy James, Mrs. Arthur Nelson, George Nicholls, George Moore, Arnold Lillow, Harold Coleman Cliff Cruikshanks and Clifford Hall.

Another colorful and sprightly scene will be found in the cabaret sequence in which forty singers and dancers will carry you into the realms of swing where you will be entertained in a song-fest topped off by the mirth-provoking antics of the waiters and bellhops.

This plus a personality chorus, will give you some idea as to what you will witness when you attend this charity show sponsored by the Y's Men's Club.

In the knowledge that the proceeds from this production shall be used to purchase shoes for underprivileged children the Y's Men respectfully solicit your patronage.

Reserve seat plan opens Y.M.C.A. Monday, November 28 at 10 a.m.

Most Dangerous Game Of All

Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD— More than 1,000 fans have written the Warner Brothers studio suggesting that the recent steam-scalding death of convicts would make a dramatic subject for a film expose on prison conditions. Scenarists were working on the idea before the first letter arrived and the dark chapter in American prison history will be written into the script of "Each Dawn I Die", the new co-starring picture for Cagney and Robinson.

But the extraordinary thing is that a studio should get fan mail. It means that Warners' pratice of grabbing stories out of headlines is winning recognition from theatre-goers.

Columbia tried its best to get Norman Scott Powell to play "Baby Dumpling" in the "Blondie" series. Joan Blondell and Dick Powell said thanks but both the children are going to lead normal lives until they are able to make their own decisions on careers.

When Mickey Rooney returns from the Omaha premiere of "Boystown", he'll find himself the owner of a five-acre ranch in Encino. It has walnuts trees, a house, stables and a corral. Mickey's mother bought it as a present for him. The deed will be in Mickey's name.

Freddie Bartholomew also will have a nice suprise on returning from his personal appearances—a dressing room in the men's section at M-G-M. Freddie's appeal that he is getting too old to be in the feminine stars' building won enormous support from the fans.

Have you any objection to blonde heroines in western pictures?

Harry Sherman, who produces the Hopalong Cassidy series for Paramount, says that the bulk of fans won't accept them and that he is using brunettes exclusively from now on. He recently tried a blond in one of the series and got dozens of protests. Paramount probably won't admit it, but Joan Bennett's appearance in "The Texans" drew lots of objections, too.

Hollywood is laughing over the true story of a newly-made producer on one of the big lots. He has turned out two sports pictures and now he has athlete's feet. ....Gable received 100 cigars from a Cuban high offical but they are so strong he can't smoke them.... Vicki Lester and Dick Purcell were holding hands at La Conga. Their spat is all forgotten.... To all of you who have written: Peter Lorre pronounces it "Lorry".... A bit sad to see Dick Arlen having a birthday lunch with his son, Ricky, and Jobyna Ralston not there to help celebrate.... To date, R-K-O has spent $75,000 feeding the location company on "Gunga Din". ....There's a real Judge Hardy in Brantford, Ill. He has written asking for an autographed picture of Lewis Stone, who plays the role in the M-G-M series.

Much Arguing

PHILADELPHIA. — Arguing with a friend over the attitude toward Jews in Germany, Patrolman Morris ... gesticulated violently to emphasize a point. Something snapped. At a hospital, physicians discovered he had wrenched his shoulder.

Obliging Bear

NEW LONDON, Wis.—August Bonnin climbed atop a pile of brush near Three Lakes to watch for deer while his hunting partners were beating the bush for him. The pile of brush heaved, and a growling black bear made tracks for the tall timber. One shot from Bonnin's rifle brought the bear down, and the second killed it. Bonnin also got his buck.

Canada's Greatest Need Is Courageous Leadership Cecil G. Frost Tells Tories

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 26 (Special). —Cecil G. Frost, K.C., president Ontario Conservative Association, who recently withdrew as contender for the party leadership, told a gathering of Conservatives Friday night, "the greatest need of the country is courageous leadership."

He hoped the forthcoming convention at Toronto would pick a leader who could lead and that he would gather around him men and women from all over the province determined that under proper leadership present-day problems can and will be solved.

Mr. Frost spoke in the Memorial Hall to a gathering of Lakefield and Smith township Conservatives at a meeting presided over by Gordon K. Fraser, president of Peterborough Conservative Association, and referred to unemployment and the depressed state of agriculture as major problems needing immediate attention.

Present A Challenge

He declared, "these problems present a challenge to the Conservative party," and charged, "the present government does not appreciate the problems confronting the nation and has no means of dealing with them." Putting 100 men to work on a highway was no cure for unemployment, he challenged.

Mr. Frost advocated a revamping of the political and municipal setup, complaining the present cost of administration is too high and the service inefficient. He pointed to mounting taxation which he declared, is stifling industry.

His proposed revision would shift the burden of educational costs from municipal taxation and would encourage home building.

Suggests Means

He believed if people were encouraged to build their own homes, it would help to defeat unemployment, revive the wheels of industry and bring about renewed faith by giving Canadians a "stake" in their own country. Such a course, he further believed, was a sure antidote for all the "isms" and other ills from foreign countries that are at present finding fertile breeding grounds here.

Mrs. J. Cridland introduced Mr. Frost, and spoke on the responsibility facing women voters in the exercise of their franchise. J. F. Strickland, K.C., was also included among the speakers.

With a view to reorganizing Conservatives in the village and Smith township, chairman and executives were named by the meeting. They are:

Lakefield: Honorary presidents, Dr. J. R. Fraser and James Ridpath; president, Frank L. Erskine; executive, Mrs. E. H. Northey, Mrs. W. J. Charlton, E. H. Northey, Sam Charlton, Harold Hamblin, George Spence and E. W. Bailey.

Smith: Bruce Fitzgerald, chairman; Mrs. Andy Wilson, Young's Point, vice-chairman. Pole 1, R. Batten, chairman; Poll 2 (vacant); Poll 3, William Bickle; Poll 4. Gordon Fitzgerald; Poll 5, J. N. Brown; Poll 6, Fred Armstrong.

Following the conclusion of the business session, Jack Marshall's 6-piece orchestra played for dancing.

Stores Closed Dec. 27

BRANTFORD, Ont., Nov. 26. — (CP)—Brantford merchants will observe Boxing Day, December 27, as a holiday if they follow the advice of the merchants section of the Board of Trade, which endorsed a resolution asking that Dec. 27, be observed as Boxing Day and stores closed.

It means that store employees will have a three-day holiday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Comedy-Drama Presented At George Street

A play that set a high standard for other amateurs this winter was "Wild Ginger," played before nearly five hundred spectators in the auditorium of George Street United church Sunday school, Friday night.

A three-act comedy-drama, the play was more extravagant in plot and scenery than is usually found in amateur productions, and a swift pace kept audience interest at a high pitch throughout the entire performance. The play moved rapidly through the lives of its chief characters, reached a clever climax that found every member of the audience intensely interested. The production showed evidence of extremely capable direction by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil R. Wasson, for every member of the cast played his or her part for everything it was worth, and not a hitch in the entire three acts was noticed.

An attractive feature of the evening was the playing of the Salvation Army Saxaphone party, who were enthusiastically applauded.

Plot of Play.

The plot of the play was rather more secure than most, concerned a miser, his wife and daughter. The wife departed for parts unnamed in early matrimonial life, leaving the daughter to grow up with his father. "Ginger," the daughter, led a miserable life until she won contests which enabled her to launch upon a brilliant college career. Hatred and a misery existence made the daughter's existence as miserable as that the mother had led, until the father was finally brought to his sense by a series of incidents welcomed by the audience. The play ended upon a happy note with "Ginger" engaged to the young man of her fancy, and with mother and father together once again, with the added knowledge reaching the audience that the mother had kept a careful watch over her daughter through all the years.

Presented by Class.

The play was presented under the auspices of the Rainbow class of the Sunday school of George street church, and was a decided financial success. Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wasson directed; Mr. Wasson was stage manager; and script girl was Betty O'Brian. Lillian Hardie, Adele Armstrong, Marjorie Reid, and June Armstrong were in charge of make-up.

The cast included Hugh Arnold, Douglas Hough, Joe Weir, Melville Akers, Wally Crouter, Cecil Wasson, Catharine Edwards, Myrtle Deyell, Dorothy Smith, Edith Burnham, Roberta Killingbeck. Those playing the chief roles were Hugh Arnold as the miserly father; Douglas Hough as the juvenile lead; Catharine Edwards as "Ginger," the miser's daughter; and Myrtle Deyell as the mother.

RICE LAKE FROZEN

Duck hunters report that Rice Lake was frozen over from shore to shore Thursday night but opened in the middle again yesterday. It froze again Friday night and possibly the old belief that winter never sets in until Rice Lake has frozen over three times may be verified by having the freezing take place on three successive nights.

DEMONSTRATE FOR FROLICS

If the Y's Men's club's Front Page Frolics is as good as the two representatives who visited the Kiwanis club Friday, club members are agreed the show will be an unqualified success next Wednesday and Thursday nights. Tap dancers Audrey Patterson and Jimmy Gosselin won great applause from members of the club at the weekly luncheon of Kiwanis when they tapped through a distinctive dance. Proceeds from the Frolics will go toward purchase of shoes for underprivileged children.

Poppy Fund Used To Help Veterans Who Are Jobless On Their Way

Two applicants for help from the Canadian Legion Thursday were men who had survived the great war, one from Prince Edward Island, and the other from Prince Edward county. The second one arrived by chance only five minutes after the first one left. Citizens who buy poppies on Poppy Day may be interested in knowing that the fund their contributions create is used primarily to assist local ex-service men, and also to help unemployed comrades on their way, wherever they may be going. Perhaps it may be bed and breakfast, or only a meal, and if there is an sign of booze it means that the appeal will receive no attention.

Scarcity Of School Teachers Seen

Signs of an approaching scarcity of public school teachers are beginning to appear on the pedagogic horizon according to impressions formed by trustees, inspectors and other school authorities.

At the present time only sixty-one students are in training at Peterborough Normal School, about three-fifths of the usual attendance. Classes have generally averaged about one hundred young men and women, although there has been some decline from that number during the last few years.

A recent meeting of Public School Inspectors from a wide area of Central Ontario afforded further evidence that there is not floating surplus of teachers. Of the fourteen inspectors at that meeting, which included two Peterborough inspectorates, only two reported teachers who were not engaged.

No Supply Available

Peterborough county inspectors have had to assist trustee boards recently in obtaining two supply teachers, both of whom are married, and who had retired from the profession.

It is also said that although trustees advertising for teachers this year generally received a large number of replies, they found that the available applicants for the most part faded out of the picture by signing up with other schools.

These are some of the indications which lead to a rather disturbing impression that a scarcity of school teachers is now in process of development. Quite a number of teachers in the primary schools have sought a higher education for their own advancement and virtually have graduated from the ranks of the public schools.

No Rush of Applications

According to these signs and evidence, trustees are not likely to be swamped with applications when next they advertise for teachers, the Examiner was told today. Student attendance at the Normal training schools, as shown in Peterborough, probably reflect the impression of young men and women that the teaching profession was overcrowded, salaries unattractive, and that their future should be cast in some other direction. Qualifications of teachers throughout this part of Ontario are said to be higher than they have ever been. The new ideas in teaching are now practically established, and have met with an enthusiastic response from the teachers with corresponding interest by pupils in the primary schools.

On the other hand, however, it has been pointed out that the remuneration of teachers has declined substantially on the whole in the last eight years, and now a scarcity of teachers seems to be the latest trend of a condition that cannot be readily corrected.

WINTER IS HERE

Winter arrived, officially, for the police department Friday night when orders were issued that long winter overcoats and fur coats were to be taken into wear.

OSHAWA'S RELIEF BILL

Oshawa's relief bill for October was $35,464.58 a new high for that month since October 1933. The total number of persons receiving relief was 4,343, but that number had decreased considerably up to the middle of November.

SNOW PLOW OCCUPIED.

Probably it was just tuning up the pipes to make sure everything was in order, with no other significance to the smoke pouring from the tin chimney of the C.P.R. snow plow this morning.

NO POLICE COURT

There was a blank docket at police court this morning and the regular attendants who filed in at the usual hour filed out again. There were no arrests during the night and no cases had been adjourned until this morning.

IRISH SETTER WINS.

Mona Longfield, an Irish setter, two year old female, owned by Jim Dutton, Jr., won second prize in the limit class at the Royal Winter Fair. It was the only dog entered from Peterborough. Last year the same dog took second place in the novice class. Oscar Pierson was the handler.

COUNTY COURT SITTINGS.

Judge L. V. O'Connor or Cobourg, will preside at the sessions of the county court which opens here on December 6. He will exchange jurisdictions with Judge Smoke who will occupy the bench for the Northumberland and Durham December sittings.

TRAPPING IS POR.

Indians from the Curve Lake reserve reported to-day that trapping so far this year had been poor. Few foxes have been taken in snares and minks are also scarce. The Indians believe that a good fall of snow would bring results as it would facilitate the locating of runways.

SIX EX-MOUNTIES

Six men now living in this city have served on the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, some of them completing more than the regulation three-year period. They are as follows: Fred Marshall, Frank Barrett, Ross Payne, Provincial Constable David Silvester, W. R. McIntosh and George Hendren, who operates a fox farm near Highway 28. A few of the six are active members of the R.C.M.P. Veteran's Association.

GETTING INSIDE

The wintry weather has driven the transients still on the road into the police station for shelter these nights and Friday night saw quite a collection. Among them were two French-Canadians who said they had been in North Bay district looking for work and were headed back for their respective homes in Cornwall, Ont., and Sorel, Que. "Don't let anyone tell you things are good in the north," one of them declared. "We are glad to be going back home."

Young Hunter In Leaky Boat Gets Ducked Trying To Rescue Duck–Now Has Bad Cold

One young man in Peterborough is suffering from a severe cold these days, all because he wanted a duck so badly he went in swimming for it. He is Frank Millard, clerk in a brokerage office, and he admits that despite all his efforts the only duck he got was the "ducking" took in the Otonabee river.

Out hunting early one cold morning this week Frank shot a wild duck and saw it fall into a dense marsh near the shore on the opposite side of the river to the one from which he was shooting. He had no dog with him but determined he would find that duck.

He knew where there was an old boat close by and went after it. But he found the punt had not been used in years, had cracks so wide in the bottom that he could put his fingers through them. Undaunted, he stripped to his underwear, prepared for a wetting and climbed into the boat and pushed it off from shore. He rowed like mad in the hope he would reach the duck before the boat sank. The water climbed up in the boat and fifteen feet before he reached the marsh it settled to the bottom of the shallow water. It was not deep enough to make him swim, but nevertheless thoroughly drenched him.

Then, to make matters worse, when he was still determined he should find his lone duck, Frank found he was unable to push his way through the dense marsh, and he had to return home without it, chilled to the bone, his teeth chattering. Now he's snuffling.

65 Children Entered Spelling Bee

All is ready for the Kiwanis club's Spelling Bee in the Collegiate auditorium on December 9 and 10, and dozens of youngsters throughout the city and district have worn their spelling books dog-eared in their efforts to win a championship. Entrants have been declared from each school in the district and all is ready for the great duel. On Friday, December 9, a champion of rural schools, a champion of urban or village schools, and a Peterborough city champion will all be declared. The Rambling REPORTERS

ABSENT-MINDED TRUCK DRIVER.

Stories of absent-minded folk forgetting things are an old affair but it must be admitted that when a truck driver can leave behind on the road a ton and one-half of hay and drive away without missing it, a new peak in absent-mindedness has been reached. That is what happened Friday afternoon at the intersection of the Chemong Road and Stewart street. The whole load of hay slipped off the truck at this point but the driver kept right on going until he reached his destination before he realized that his cargo was no longer with him.—C.

Santa Arrives Friday Night

(Special to The Examiner)

NORTH POLE, Nov. 26. — Santa Claus' plans for his pre-Christmas visit to Peterborough were completed this forenoon. He will leave here by sleigh and reindeer in time to arrive in Peterborough about 7.30 Friday evening, December 2. In the event that there is not sufficient snow, arrangements have been made whereby Santa Claus will be picked up, sleigh, pack and all, and placed on a huge float from which he will be visible to everyone along the triumphant parade route.

The Route

Coming along Charlotte street the parade will turn north on Water to Hunter, then west to Aylmer, south to Charlotte again, then east to George and up George to Murray, turning east at Murray and proceeding to Victoria Park. Santa will be officially welcomed at the band stand from where he will give a message to all the children of the city and district.

It is expected that the earlier hour together with more and better lighted floats, will mean a welcome for Santa that will even surpass last year's tremendous ovation.

TALK ON NEPHELINE

J. Duncan, secretary of the Canadian Nepheline Company will be the speaker at the luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club on Monday and will tell the club members something about Peterborough county's newest mining industry.

Blindness Said To Be Caused By Extreme Lack Of Vitamin A

If you suffer from "night blindness"—if glaring headlights bother you to an extreme degree when you are driving, or if it takes your eyes a considerable length of time to accustom themselves to a change from bright to dim light—then you may be suffering from a slight lack of vitamin A. This is according to Dr. Chant Robertson of Toronto who spoke to lunching Kiwanians on Friday on "Nutrition."

She said that extreme lack of the vitamin may cause total blindness, but that such extremes are not found in this country. Vitamin A is found in cream, butter, whole milk, and in colored vegetables such as spinach, carrots, peas, also in liver and kidneys and in cod liver oil.

The speaker stressed the importance of a balanced diet, complete in vitamins A, B, C and D, to the life and prosperity of a nation. She told of the direct effect food has on the health of a nation, giving as an example Holland during the Great War. Her food supply cut off by the British blockade, the country's death rate from tuberculosis rapidly rose on limited foods, nor did it drop until the blockade ended, when it returned to normal, she related.

She ascribed the difference in height and weight of a group of poor and a group of middle-class children who had been under observation, directly to the food eaten by the two groups. With better food, the middle-class children were taller, better formed.

Many poor families spend entirely too much on meats, not nearly enough on vegetables, she said. Poor cuts of meat may be just as nutritious as expensive cuts if they are cooked to a proper tenderness.

Education on nutrition is extremely necessary at the present time and might well be taken up by the Kiwanis Club in conjunction with its work among underprivileged children, she said. For she maintained that often children are undernourished because of an improperly balanced diet, rather than because of insufficient food. By training mothers of the children who attend Jackson Park Camp in the proper purchase of food, she though much good could be accomplished.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. F. C. Neal, and Dr. C. M. Scott moved a vote of thanks. Dr. C. B. Waite was chairman and the meeting was under the Underprivileged Children's Committee of the club.

Settlers In Rainy River Area Made Homeless By Fire Re-established In New Cabins

Settlers in the Rainy River district made homeless by a disastrous forest fire a month ago, are now comfortably re-established in new cabins, and ready to face the winter. The story of their rehabilitation and the indomitable courage shown following the disaster was told on Friday at a meeting of the Red Cross in the Armouries by N. R. Vinton, field secretary of the Ontario Division.

Describing the conflagration that swept 50,000 acres of virgin timber and more than a hundred farms, Mr. Vinton said it started on Thanksgiving Day. Settlers, he said, were permitted to set out fires to assist in clearing their land, and many of these all under control were burning when unusual weather conditions developed. Humidity was high and a gale started to suddenly ignite the entire distrcit.

17 Lost Their Lives.

The fire travelled at the rate of a mile in fifteen minutes, and twelve children with five adults were burned to death. The terrific drought of the preceding weeks had the timber lands like tinder, and it was impossible to stop the wall of fire. Cabin homes nestling in clearings along with barns, live stock, and implements all were lost. The settlers who escaped were in despair as they saw the work of thirty years swept away in a single day.

Mr. Vinton told of one woman who went back to examine the ruins and kept a stiff upper lip until she looked into the cellar of what was once her home and saw all of the preserves and pickles a tangled mass of melted glass. Her summer's work was lost, and the heart-broken woman sobbed like a child.

Red Cross officials arriving early on th scene at the request of the Prime Minister received a liberal grant from the Federal and Ontario Governments. An appeal for clothing brought tons of it.

Committee Formed.

A committee of forty was formed and lumber and other building materials purchased at less than cost and shipped in. With winter near at hand, immediate construction of homes was imperative and while this work was being done, the refugees were quartered at Fort Francis. A large boarding-house and the municipal tourist camp were commandeered and the people were fed by the relief authorities.

Sixty cabin homes rose from the ashes almost overnight as the men, all competent in the art of building pitched in and finished one home before moving on to the next site. Thirty-five barns also went up as if by magic. The essentials for housekeeping were obtained by the Red Cross along with some live stock for each farmer and the settlers who a few days before were bewildered and heart-broken, started life again with renewed strength and courage.

Now Better Off.

A great many of the settlers are now better off than they were before but others lost possessions that takes years to acquire. Eleven new farms in different locations were purchased and the homeless settlers moved in. Among the families who refused to return to the burned area were those who had lost children, parents.

Mr. Vinton said the work done by the Red Cross, and rapidity with which it was accomplished was a perfect illustration of the manner in which the Red Cross works in times of disaster. He said this work was going on twelve months a year and paid tribute to the splendid although unostentatious work being done by the local branch.

Mr. Vinton was introduced by Mrs. Reg. Turner, president of the Peterborough Red Cross who presided at the meeting. In his first remarks he described this city as a friendly place, and said the reception one receives here is truly refreshing.

Work Is Reviewed.

Prior to Mr. Vinton's address, Mrs. Turner reviewed the work of the National Red Cross during the past year, then briefly referred to the different branches of work done by the local branch. The Visiting housekeeper service carried on under the convenership of Mrs. C. J. Ray, Mrs. S. O. Shields, Miss H. Munro, and Miss M. Hamilton was lauded. Other lines of endeavor which have been successfully worked out were care of transients, returned soldiers work, Christmas work, Home nursing, nutrition classes, Jr. Red Cross and Imperial United Service fund. Conveners responsible for the various branches are Mrs. Frank Lynch, Mrs. W. Perks, Mrs. C. G. Graham, Mrs. C. B. Muir, Mrs. Girdwood, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Alderman R. M. Glover and Doug. Loomis.

Mrs. John Mills distributed cards to each member which will be used this coming week in the drive for funds to carry on the work. The association has set an objective of $2,500 and the drive will get under way at once.

Dewan To Be Speaker

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 26.—The Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario will be guest speaker at the Farmer's Night program being sponsored by local Rotarians. The club will make its annual pilgrimage to Petherick's Corners on December 8th and an extensive program is being arranged for the occasion. It is expected that the ladies of Zion United Church will provide the banquet.

Indian Family Harvested 500 Pounds Rice

A narrow counter in Hamilton's grocery store became, in a sense, a crossroads spot in the world as products from far away places converged today as they often do on their way to ultimate consumers in Peterborough.

Fresh pulled figs from Turkey, Cochin ginger from China, new crop Tunis dates from northern Africa, in fact from the fringes of the great Sahara, wild rice from our own Rice Lake, glazed fruits and fancy biscuits from London England, an attractive and appetizing display incidentally suggesting the approach of Christmas.

The Hiawatha cereal sells at 50 cents a pound with only a small stock on hand. Information earlier in the season reported that the rice crop had suffered from too much wind when it was ripening, and a lot of the grain was blown into the water, an asset for the future to the extent that it is nature's way of providing for future crops.

On the other hand it was learned hthat one family over at the Alderville reserve sold 500 pounds at 35 cents a pound, another 300 pounds at the same price, and so on. Days of rain after the harvest had been brought in from the rice beds on the lake forced a home-drying plan. Wild rice was laid out on every available floor of one house. It was even spread beneath the beds, with only a narrow path left to the pillows. Of course that condition was unusual, and contined for only a short time until the rice was dried.

The Hamilton rice was specially selected from Indians on the Hiawatha side of the lake, and is full-sized kernels. The Examiner was told that a lot of the Alderville crop was sold as seed supplying a demand from some quarters where beds had to be built up by bringing in seed from this district.

Bowling Club Has Business Meeting

The Carpet Bowling Club of St. Andrew's United Church held a social meeting on Friday evening at the close of the usual games.

Mr. J. W. Morrison, secretary-treasurer, gave a monthly report. There were, he said, thirty-four members and eight teams. The amount taken in initial fees was $6.50, in weekly fees $5.00. Mr. George Tremain, games secretary, reported that new teams would be selected before Christmas, with five ladies acting as skips, and the present men skips as leading players. Several suggestions were made by the members for the welfare of the club. It was decided to admit some additional members in order that teams might consist of five players instead of four. The usual games are to be played on Friday night of next week.

Shannon—Howard

CENTRETON, Nov. 26 — A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Cobourg Baptist Church on Wednesday when Lila Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard of Cobourg, formerly of Haldimand became the bride of William Joseph Shannon, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shannon, County Tyrone, Ireland. Rev. T. J. Haire, pastor of the church officiated.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns and chrysanthemums. The bride given in marriage by her father, proceeded down the aisle of the church to the strains of the Wedding March played by Miss E. M. Tapscott. She wore a cord silk taffeta gown and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Dorothy E. Langford of Warkworth who wore a gown of turquoise blue and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums. Mr. T. R. Howard of Toronto was groomsman. Mr. Grant Erskine and Mr. David Carr acted as ushers.

During the signing of the register, Miss Loretta Deane of Toronto sang, "Because". Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the guests were received by Mrs. Howard, mother of the bride who wore black and white pebble crepe. The bride's table was decorated in pink and white and was centred with a beautiful bride's cake.

Later the happy couple left for a trip to points west. The bride wore a pearl gray suit with black accessories for travelling. Upon their return they will reside in Toronto.

Farm machinery trade in Mexico has slumped.

Lyceum Club Holds Art Exhibition

Of great interest to Peterborough art lovers is the exhibition of arts and crafts which the Lyceum Club Women's Art Association held in the Y.W.C.A. Green Room Friday afternoon, and which is open to the public again today from three to six p.m.

Original in design in most cases, the display embraces handicrafts ranging from tiny leather covered buttons finished with diminutive leather rosettes to Jacobean embroidered dining room drapes. Of linen crash, and worked with beautifully blended wools into a clever and original design, these drapes are easily the highlights of the exhibition. A handsome cushion and firescreen of the same type of embroidery is also attracting much attention.

Costume jewelry, in popular demand this season, is fashioned of pewter into bracelets, buttons, and buckles, rounded or squared, and delicately etched, or of lovely-hued suede decorated with expertly made leather flowers in contrasting shades. Colorful gourds, some of them lacquered brightly, fill a quaint wooden oxencart that is complete even to the yoke. A table in the centre of the room displays unusual bridge tallies; Christmas cards that are miniature water colors, silk screen prints of two designs, or square white cards expertly appliqued with bright bits of felt; embroidered luncheon sets; woven purses; sprays of felt flowers in delightful shades; and samples of macaroni weaving.

A wide variety of pastels, oils and water colors are shown this year. Particularly lovely is a water color of trilliums in a blue jug, their white petals faintly touched with pink; a winter scene where trees see themselves reflected in a winding stream, and a delightful pastel, done by a member, of her home.

A Frener Canadian scene copied from a magazine makes an unusual wall hanging that was woven on a "weavette," and another interesting piece of weaving in rust, beige, and black, is from a Swedish design. Something different in a rug is one executed in the lock stitch without the use of a frame. Another rug which is receiving much admiring comment is round, with an original design worked in exquisitely blended shades against a buff-grey background. Crocheted bedspreads, and a quilt in a "daisy" design, are also an outstanding part of the exhibition.

Tea was poured during Friday afternoon by Mrs. Walter Blackwell, and assistant hostesses were Mrs. Wharry, Mrs. H. L. Bamforth, and Mrs. B. V. Moore. A rose damask cloth covered the tea table, which was arranged with ivory tapers, and a lovely centrepiece of chrysanthemums in delicate shades.

Mrs. J. E. Munro is convener of the exhibition, and the treasurer is Mrs. A. E. Chalmers, assisted by Miss L. Belleghem.

Art contributors are as follows: Miss Cameron Edwards, Mrs. F. C. Neal, Miss G. Reinhardt, Miss L. Brownscombe, Mrs. H. Foote, Mrs. W. Tinker, Mrs. J. E. R. Munro, Mrs. H. Anderson, Mrs. H. M. Yelland, Miss L. Belleghem, Mrs. Connolly, Mrs. B. Moore, Mrs. W. Hardwicke, Mrs. J. Seels, Miss Betty Runnett, Mrs. W. A. Conner, Mrs. E. G. Hiland, Mrs. J. Wharry, Mrs. W. B. Bletcher, Miss Emily Hand, Miss Amy Matthews, Mrs. F. Hooper, Mrs. Walter Blackwell, Mrs. S. Thompson, Mrs. H. Wightman, Mrs. C. Saunders.

Wive Makes a Grave Mistake When She Objects to Her Husband's Family Coming to Visit; Mothers-in-Law Can Be Great Helps to Any Household

DEAR MISS DIX—My wife's family is always made welcome in our home, but my family has the door barred against it because its members are "in-laws who would tear our home to pieces if they were allowed to do it." My mother is gracious and well-bred, not a hysterical neurotic, as the psychologists seem to think all older women to be. She has a keen sense of humor and laughs a great deal. She is friendly and has a host of friends. She has been a grand mother to me and I love her devotedly. Nevertheless, in the five years we have been married my mother has been but three times in our home. My wife refuses to accept invitations from my mother and hits the ceiling when she hears that I have been to see her. She says that if she "permits my mother to drop in at any time she takes a notion that our marriage would go on the rocks, and that a son who wants to keep seeing his mother after he is married is a sissy and is not mature." If I let my wife know that I have been to see my mother, there is a row, but this sneaking out to see her once in a while makes me feel like a spineless cad, and I cannot accept this isolation from my family any longer and keep my self-respect. The result is that I am losing my affection for my wife. I am getting to look upon her as spiteful, petty and jealous determined to separate me from my family at all costs. I am sick unto death at the lack of character that makes her do the things she does and am going to get a divorce if things don't change. Unless the time comes when all male children will be reared by the State, thereby severing all ties of association with their natural mothers, I am afraid wives are going to have to accept their husbands' mothers with some show of tolerance and grace.

AN EXASPERATED HUSBAND.

ANSWER:

I don't wonder that your are exasperated and that you are contemplating leaving a wife who seems to have as little brains as she has heart. If she had any intelligence at all, she would know that there is nothing that a wife can do that so surely alienates her husband from her as for her to mistreat his mother. On the other hand, nothing so endears a wife to her husband as for her to make friends with his people and be one of the family that she has entered of her own accord.

Your wife's assumption that your family is taboo and must be kept out of the house is too silly even to discuss. Not all in-laws are poison. Not all mothers-in-law are home-wreckers. No doubt there is an occasional mother who is jealous of her son's wife and a trouble-maker, but these are few and far between.

The average mother-in-law knows that her son's happiness depends upon his getting along amicably with his wife and thinking her a paragon, so she does nothing to disillusionize him. More than that, she knows that unless she can make friends with her daughter-in-law she loses her son, so she does everything to propitiate the young woman her son has married.

If the wife is wise, she meets her mother-in-law halfway in establishing this mutual cordiality. For no one can be a better friend to the young wife than her husband's mother. If John's mother thinks that John's wife is all right, John thinks so, too. And if John's mother sides with John's wife in any family argument, the wife wins out.

Of course, it is nothing but jealousy that makes a wife want to separate her husband from his mother. She can't bear to think that there was some one he knew and loved before her, some one he still loves and depends on, some one who was a part of all his early life, and she would like to blot her out of his existence.

She forgets that this cannot be done, and that when she attempts to do it she does so at her peril. She forgets, also, that the man who can be weaned from the mother who bore him, who can return ingratitude for all the sacrifices she made for him, is so poor a creature that he is not worth any woman's having.

I think that a man who lets his wife treat his mother as your wife treats yours and who lets his wife shut the door of the house he supports in his mother's face shows very little strength of character and manhood. The sooner he calls time on her, the better.

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—When I was about 17 I had my first and only sweetheart. Our parting was due to the fact that after studying psychology I concluded that there was no such thing as love. Since then I have only looked at women with a critical eye and I have found none perfect. Now I have decided that I would be much happier married and I have tried to accept this thing called love, but instead of perceiving women's attractions I still see only their faults. I have numerous dates, but generally I become disgusted before the first hour is complete, for I cannot find the woman who can thrill me or come up to my ideal. So the question is: Shall I marry one of the girls whom I think would make me a good wife, or continue to search for the one who will produce the complete thrill? X. X. X. X.

ANSWER:

Perhaps the fault is with you; that you are not one of the romantic and thrilling types of men. Not every man is a sentimentalist. In fact, there are just as few men capable of being great lovers as there are of being great artists, or actors, or singers. But that doesn't keep them from being able to have a very sincere and lasting affection for a woman.

Or perhaps it is just that you haven't met the right woman, the one who has that peculiar something about her that appeals to a man's imagination and fires his blood. Don't give up looking for her until you are at least 50, because she is liable to turn the corner at any moment.

But if you are waiting to find your ideal, the woman who comes up to all your expectations, you are slated for old bachelorhood. There is no such animal.

MAGAZINE DESTROYED

LONDON — British newsdealers today destroyed their copies of the December issue of Cosmopolitan magazine to avoid legal action by Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, estranged husband of the former Barbara Hutton.

The count raised objections to an article called "The Truth About Barbara Hutton," one of a series by Elsa Maxwell, New York society's noted party thrower.

Liberal Women Pay Tribute To New President

A tea and muscale was given by the Ontario Liberal Women's Association in the King Edward Hotel Friday afternoon in honor of the new provincial president, Mrs. C. R. Widdifield. Many out-of-town Liberal women were included in the large gathering of guests present.

Receiving the guests were: Mrs. Harry Nixon, representing Mrs. Hepburn, charming in a wisteria gown, sequin trimmed, with matching hat and corsage of roses; Mrs. Widdifield, in black velvet embroidered in silver beads, small black hat with veil, and corsage of Sweetheart roses; Mrs. W. F. Bradwin, convener of the social committee, in an imported black frock with touches of French blue echoed in her smart black hat; Mrs. W. H. Fox, immediate past president, in a long black crepe gown, visor-brimmed hat; Mrs. F. S. Greenwood, of St. Catharines, gowned in black, with fox fur, small black hat, and veil, white corsage; Mrs. A. H. Beaton, in a green wool crepe gown with matching hat, and Mrs. Annie Hall, in black with matching hat.

The tea table was unusually attractive with huge yellow and white chrysanthemums, tall ivory candles in silver holders. Presiding were: Mrs. Harold Kirby, in cinnamon silk faille; Mrs. J. L. Simpson, in blue crepe with matching hat; Mrs. Peter Heenan, in Copenhagen blue with gold accessories; Mrs. Gordon Conant, Mrs. A. C. Macnaughton, in blue with rose hat; Mrs. A. S. Rennie of Tillsonburg, in grey with lavender hat and accessories; Mrs. R. W. Gladstone, Mrs. H. M. Lay of Barrie, Mrs. Harry Johnson.

TRAMPLED TO DEATH

WINDSOR, England—(CP)—Alfred Sharples, 21-year-old English jockey thrown from his horse in a race here, was trampled by other horses and died 10 minutes after admission to King Edward VII Hospital.

Fashions

Could you think of anything more pleasing than any one of these dainty undies for Christmas gifts?

The pattern includes the princess step-in combination, the brassiere, and the French pantees with inset gusset at the crotch.

They are surprisingly easy and inexpensive to make. The remnant counters are just stacked full of lovely suitable silks that cost just a mere trifle.

Bias self-material binds give these undies a nice tailored look and make them very practical for ordinary wear.

For a more elaborate effect you can indulge in lace trim or hand embroidery. The brassiere may be made entirely of lace.

After you've finished sewing your Christmas gifts, you'll want to sew lots of them for yourself.

The pattern and material is another suggestion for Christmas.

Style No. 3005 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. Size 36 requires 1½ yards of 35-inch material with 3 yards of lace for combination; and 1¼ yards of 35-inch material with 1½ yards of bias binds for brassiere and pantees.

Do You Know?

A tie should never be washed until the lining, or padding is carefully basted? This will prevent lumps from forming. Basting should be removed before ironing.

◇ ◇ ◇

Fat that has formed on top of soup may be quickly removed if a piece of ice wrapped in cheesecloth is passed over the surface? All fat will adhere to the cloth.

◇ ◇ ◇

The person who gives his body the proper amount and kind of exercise will seldom have a cold? Nothing is better than walking in the open. Step briskly hold head erect, let the arms swing and breathe through the nose.

Monograms Add The Personal Touch

IT isn't a bit too early to shop for the Christmas gifts you intend to have monogrammed or to start finding out just which kind of perfume or cream or lotions the women on your list really perfer.

Among the beauty items that lend themselves nicely to monograms is a little flat envelope case of silk moire with waterproof lining and compartments inside for compact, lipstick and comb. Any woman who is pretty weary of having to search through envelopes, pencils and other bottom-of-the purse debris every time she wants to use her compact or lipstick will appreciate one of these.

Also nice are sachet lingerie cases in three sizes—for handkerchiefs, slips and nightgowns.

Gifts For Hostess.

For the guest room of your favorite hostess, consider a case containing about a dozen small puffs of cotton in various colors.

Sure to be appreciated, too, are a couple of exquisite handerchiefs in a handkerchief case. Or a set of bottles for the bathroom shelf. There are plain crystal ones on which monograms can be etched.

A monogrammed travel case, completely equipped with all the beauty aids and cosmetics she'll need on a trip, is the gift de luxe for any woman, of course. And, for her husband consider an unfitted case with waterproof lining into which he can put his own favorite toilet articles.

Caledonians Enjoy Musical Evening

Caledonians met in the Paragon Hall on Friday evening for a musicale and dance. A good program and a jolly crowd provided a splendid evening's entertainment.

R. Veitch, president, welcomed the guests. W. Petrie acted as master of ceremonies, and introduced the Otonabee Ramblers, which provided the music for both new and old-tyme dances.

A good musical program was given by the following: Song, "I like my own home town," R. Hendry; song, "I lose a lassie," W. May; song, "Ye Banks and Braes," Mrs. O. Sugden; song, "Bonnie Mary o' Argyle," W. Petrie; Highland Fling, Edith Millar; song, "They are far, far awa'," Mrs. A. McKinlay; quartette, "Annie Lawrie," Mrs. R. Hendry, Mrs. W. Petrie, Mrs. O. Sudgen and R. Hendry. Mrs. J. Harrison, Mrs. R. Hendry, A. Milne and A. Clark acted as accompanists.

A short talk in broad Scotch, and entitled "Scotch Friendship and Characteristics," was given by A. Murray. Many of his reminiscences caused great merriment as judged by the laughter which his humorous talk produced.

After the program and dancing refreshments were served before dispersing.

W. Petrie moved a vote of thanks to all those who had contributed to the program, and reminded the members that a business meeting and social evening would be held on December 9.

Presentation Made To Mrs. Harrison

STEWART HALL, Nov. 26.—The Women's Missionary Society of Stewart Hall held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Gordon Savigny on Thursday. It took the form of a "grandmother's meeting" which was in charge of the president, Mrs. G. Hanbidge. The opening hymn was followed by the Bible reading given by Mrs. O. Stewart, and Miss Gertie Thompson led in prayer. Mrs. Beecher Matchett gave a missionary reading. It was decided to send a bale of clothing and Christmas cheer to the west.

Rev. Mr. Rowland spoke a few words to the grandmothers present. The presentation of an electric reading lamp was made to Mrs. R. Harrison, a former member of Stewart Hall church, who has moved to Peterborough. A short address was read by Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. J. Whittington presented the gift.

Mrs. J. Thorne and Mrs. Taylor favored those present with a duet, after which "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" was sung and the benediction pronounced in unison.

Lunch was served by the hostess, and a social hour enjoyed by all.

On Thursday evening the Y.P.S. held its regular meeting, which was in charge of the missionary convener, Gertie Thompson, and her group. Cecil Downs of South Monaghan, who won the cup in the public speaking contest, gave his very interesting speech on "David Livingstone."

Branch Notes

ST. LUKE'S BRANCH.

The meeting on Thursday evening took the form of a theatre party, when the members of the cast of the recent play were entertained. Everyody enjoyed the picture very much.

Sunday next is Advent Sunday and as it is also the fourth Sunday of the month, which is A.Y.P.A. Corporate Communion day, the executive would like to have a large turnout of members at this service. Please try and attend.

Art Sayers' group will be in charge of the meeting next week. As there are several important matters of business to be settled at this meeting it is hoped there will be a full attendance

ST. JOHN'S BRANCH.

St. John's were hosts to St. John's branch, Port Hope at the Wednesday meeting. About 35 motored up and were welcomed by a large turnout from Peterborough. The evening was opened with a short prayer service. Canon W. P. Robertson welcomed Port Hope and wished all a happy time. E. F. Borbridge, member of the legal firm of Peck, Kerr, McElderry and Borbridge a former member of the Sunday school, delivered a very interesting and inspiring address on "The Development of English law during the Anglo-Saxon period". This was followed by a Mock Trial in which the plaintiff, a fair lady, recovered $5,000,000 from the defendant as compensation for his jilting her, but he couldn't pay so the judge married the reconciled pair. Being a breach of promise suit it provided many an opportunity for mirth and fun. Bert Graham was "His Honor," Walter Howell, lawyer for the plaintiff and Everett Gibbs for the defendant. Gertie Lemming as plaintiff sued Don Howell who had jilted her. Victor Coleman was clerk of the court. Helen Owens, Eileen Gynane, George Crompton, Fred Willison, Iris Williams, gave evidence for the plaintiff and Jack Howson, Charlie Jefferies and Bill Wheeler were the defence witnesses.

A fine vocal solo was rendered by Adam Hawley, accompanied by Fred Hooper. Everyone then partook of refreshments provided by Eva Clark and her committee. After a short period of dancing the party broke up and Port Hope began their journey homeward. All members are requested to be present at next week's business meeting.

ST. GEORGE'S BRANCH

The guests at Thursday evening's meeting were the members of the A.Y.P.A. branch at Lakefield. They received a hearty welcome from the president and members.

A hearty welcome was also extended to the new incumbent, Rev. T. H. Floyd and Mrs. Floyd, who were introduced by the president, T. Alcock, to the visitors and members.

Mrs. T. Alcock and her committee were in charge of the program. Games and dancing were enjoyed with Mrs. R. King as pianist.

On behalf of the Lakefield branch, Miss P. Earnshaw, president, thanked the A.Y.P.A. fr an enjoyable evening.

Miss Audrey Pilling and Tom Maudsley were elected to represent the A.Y.P.A. on the district council executive. The singing of the National Anthem brought an enjoyable evening to a close.

Splendid Cough Remedy Easily Mixed at Home

It's So Easy! Makes a Big Saving. No Cooking.

To get quick relief from a distressing cough, mix your own remedy at home. Once tried, you'll say it's your favorite cough medicine, and it's so simple and easy.

First, make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. A child could do it. No cooking needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. This is a compound containing Norway Pine in concentrated form, well known for its prompt action on throat membranes.

Put the Pinex into a 16 ounce bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make 16 ounces of very efficient remedy, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It tastes fine and never spoils.

And for quick, blessed relief, it is splendid. You can feel it penetrating the air passages in a way that means business. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded. (Advt.)

YOU OWE YOURSELF MORE LEISURE!

Think of how many things you want to do—you could do—if you freed yourself of washing and ironing drudgery! Let us do it for you, satisfactorily and thriftily.

Busy Sessions As Cabinet Nears Opening

OTTAWA, Nov. 26—(CP). — The government was occupied today with intensive preparations for the forthcoming session of parliament and with determination of a definite policy regarding Jewish refugees from Europe.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King told newspapermen last night after Cabinet meeting he would not be in a position to announce the opening date for parliament until next Tuesday's Cabinet Council. It is expected to be January 12. In an effort to get the legislative program in shape for the session the Cabinet will meet at least twice a week until the Christmas holidays.

Details concerning the visit of the King and Queen to Canada next spring also are being worked out and the Prime Minister said progressive announcements will be made as the plans are completed. The itinerary must first be approved by Their Majesties.

Mr. Mackenzie King said Canada's attitude to the Jewish refugee question will be decided only after the most careful consideration has been given the problem and information is received from other countries concerning measures to be adopted.

A delegation representing Canadian Jewish societies in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa have interviewed both the Prime Minister and Resources Minister Crerar, who has jurisdiction over immigration, mainly to assure the government the Jewish communities in Canada do not desire to embarrass the administration but to help in any way possible.

Cabinet Discussion First.

The Prime Minister said he could give the delegation no assurance concerning government policy until the whole matter had been thoroughly reviewed by the Cabinet.

With the Bren gun inquiry concluded, interest in governmental affairs has switched to speculation on what legislation the government plans for next session and what special committees the Senate will set up.

It is believed that the Upper House will undertake a study of Canada's constitution. The Senate law clerk, W. F. O'Connor, has been examining legislation connected with the British North America Act and will report to the Senate when parliament opens.

The railway committee, which featured the Senate's work last session, probably will resume its work. Last session the committee recommended that the question be further explored. Discussion generally revolved around propasals for and against unification of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways.

1,000 Left Refugees After Avalanches

CASTRIES, St. Lucia, Nov. 26 (CP Cable).—The government of this British West Indies island today faced the task of caring for more than 1,000 refugees after a series of landslides spread death and destruction across inland areas. Police counted 70 known dead and 24 injured in slides which blocked the main trans-island highway.

Rain, blamed as the cause of the disastrous avalanches, stopped yesterday after falling intermittently for two weeks. It gave rescue workers a chance to bury the bodies recovered from the debris. Threats of further slides prevented continuation of their search.

Two villages were in the path of the landslides when tons of earth first broke away from mountainsides Monday. Endangered areas were evacuated and hundreds of refugees were quartered in military barracks and school buildings. Soup kitchens were installed and officials constructed make-shift hospital wards. Clothing was distributed to 700 refugees.

Population Of 104,007

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 26—(CP)—Windsor's population jumped 1,168 this year, bringing the total to 104,007 Assessment Commissioner Harry Webster announced today. Population increases were shown in each of the five city wards. Windsor's population has increased steadily since amalgamation in 1935 when the total was 101,157.

IN MEMORIAM

SHEARING.—In loving memory of my dear father, Robert Shearing, who passed away November 26, 1935.
In Pine Hills peacefully sleeping,
Where the flowers gentle wave,
Lies the one I loved so dearly,
The one we could not save.
And deep in my heart is a picture
Worth more than silver and gold;
It's a picture of you, dear father,
Whose memory will never grow old.
—Ever remembered by daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. Bedding, and grandchildren, Lillian, Rose, Edward.

GIMBLETT.—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. George Gimblett, who departed this life November 26, 1930.
Eight years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon her grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for her who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.
Peaceful be thy rest, dear Mother,
It is sweet to brathe thy name;
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
—Ever remembered by Mr. and Mrs. George Gimblett and Mr. and Mrs. James Gimblett.

SHEARING.—In loving memory of my dear husband Robert Shearing, who met his death in the Quaker Oat Plant, November 26, 1935.
I have lost my soul companion,
A life linked with my own.
And day by day I miss him more
As I walk through life alone.
O happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still,
But Death has left me loneliness
The world can never fill.
I know you never said Good-bye,
Will always bring regret,
But the hearts that always loved you
Are the hearts that won't forget.
Three years have passed since that sad day
The one we loved was called away.
God took him Home, it was His will;
But in our hearts he liveth still.
We know that he is happy
In our Saviour's Home above.
Take him in Thy arms, dear Lord,
Till I reach the shining shore.
—Ever remembered by his loving wife, daughter and grandchildren Irene, Bobby and Harold Gandy.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. John McIntosh, Lakefield, wishes to extend her sincere thanks to all her neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown her during her sad bereavement.

MICHAEL MURTHA

DOWNEYVILLE, Nov. 26.—The funeral of the late Michael Murtha was held from his late residence Georgina street, Lindsay, Wednesday morning to St. Mary's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father McCarney at 8 o'clock and the funeral cortege then came out to Downeyville where the remains were laid to rest in the family plot. Rev. Father McCarney also said the prayers at the cemetery.
The pall-bearers were Messrs. William Lehane, Bernard Murray, Joseph McGuire, Neil Powers and Frank Robe, all of Lindsay, and Thomas Murtha of Downeyville.
The funeral was very largely attended showing the high esteem in which the late Mr. Murtha was held.
Michael Murtha was born and lived here in Emily until a few years ago when he moved to Lindsay. He was 81 years of age. He was never married and leaves to mourn his loss two sisters, Mrs. Frank Robe and Miss Mary Murtha, both of Lindsay, also several nieces and nephews all residing in Emily.

RICHARD WILSON

He was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Wilson (nee Susanna Sutton) and his entire long and useful life had been spent on the same farm which is located at Lot 13, Concession 10, of Manvers. He was educated in a frame cottage school house east of the present Lifford School in the days when the number on the roll exceeded the one hundred mark and young men and women in their latest 'teens attended during the winter months. His first teacher was Mr. Leath of Clarke township.
As Mr. Wilson is the last pioneer son residing at Lifford he has handed down to posterity, history which will long be treasured.
In conversing with many a neighbor and friend he has frequently recalled the days when his farm home formed a part of the largest village (Lifford) in the township, which in his younger days boasted one grocery, one general store, a post office, harness shop, shoemaker's shop, tailor shop, two blacksmith shops and a hotel. There were also two carpenters, a weaver and wagon maker. The township hall stood at Lifford rather than eBthany in those days. When Mr. Wilson was a lad trains were new and cars unheard of, the mail being brought by "Pony Express" from Orono to Lifford.
The late Mr. Wilson was a staunch church worker and supporter. The former Methodist church stood on the corner of his farm and when its doors were closed fifteen years ago and it was subsequently demolished, Mr. Wilson joined the Fleetwood congregation and has been an elder for several years past.
Mr Wilson was married March 30 1880 to Harriet Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Evans. The marriage took place at the home of the bride (now the farm home of Mr. Wilson's son, George, at Yelverton) and was performed by Rev. Whitlock, Bible Christian minister of Janetville. During their happy years of married life there were seven children born, all of whom survive with the exception of one son, Stanley. They are George E. Yelverton; Norman J., Sarnia; Archie E. at home; Mrs. J. J. Clarke (Ada), Bethany; Mrs. Austin Fallis (Mabel), Ballyduff; Mrs. Walter Henry (Winnifred), Peterborough. There are sixteen grandchildren. Mrs Wilson left the family circle suddenly June 22, 1927, since which time Mr. Wilson had continued to reside at the family home with his son, Archie. His four brothers and five sisters have passed on, and his parents each lived to the ripe age of ninety-one years.
Until within the past few months Mr. Wilson had enjoyed assisting his son with farm duties being particularly active for his years and maintaining all his faculties. For the past fourteen weeks he had been confined to his bed.
His son, Norman, teacher, of Sarnia, who has recently suffered a severe illness was prevented unavoidably from being at the bedside of his father.
The funeral service was held at the family residence on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock with interment in the family plot at St. Mary's cemetery one mile east of the Wilson home. A large number of friends from far and near gathered to pay a last tribute of respect to "Lifford's grand old man."

MRS. MARGARET NATHAN.
(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 26.—After an illness of seven weeks' duration, Mrs. Margaret Nathan passed away on Thursday evening. Born in Warkworth seventy-nine years ago she was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Hearn. Her husband pre-deceased her fifty three years ago. She came to Campbellford in 1899 where she has resided ever since.
She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. George O'Sullivan, Booth street. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church this morning; Rev. Dean O'Sullivan of Peterborough celebrated requiem mass and interment was made in Warkworth. The Pall bearers were the three grandsons of the deceased, Messrs. Frank, Paul and Joe O'Sullivan also Messrs. Robert and Frank Lee and Mr. John O'Sullivan.

Looking Back
On This Date

Students of political history must often wonder how men of bitterly opposed political views manage to get along in council. We have had two outstanding coalition ministries in Canada, that of 1864-5, when George Brown sank his political differences for the time to join in the unification of the provinces and the union cabinet of 1917-19. As to the latters, Sir Robert Borden, in his memories, makes some references to friction at cabinet meetings, indicating that often he found himself more in sympathy with, and received the support of, the liberal ministers such as Hon. N. W. Rowell, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Hon. F. B. Carvell, and Hon. J. A. Calder, than with the old Tory members of his party cabinet, who found it difficult to "get along with the Grits."
Mr. Brown, while decided that he would always co-operate with Macdonald and Cartier until the union had been accomplished, had his moments when the coalition was a little irksome. In a letter to John A. Macdonald, written at Quebec Nov. 26, 1864, the editor of the Globe and Reform leader in Upper Canada, wrote: "Of course, it is painful to both of us to find ourselves in a government with gentlemen who have not perfect sympathy; but had you or Galt or Cartier been in my present case (he was complaining because his name had not been mentioned in a dispatch to the colonial office) I think I would have insisted upon your names being referred to in the handsomest possible manner.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

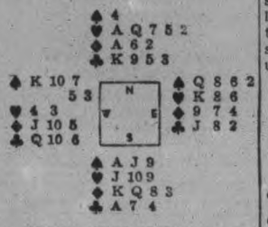
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOWING THE SITUATION

WHETHER TO RETURN the top, or the fourth-best of the suit led by your partner against a no trump game — that is sometimes quite a question. Ordinarily, unless your cards are so high they threaten to block the suit, your fourth-best is the favored return. It enables your partner to count the number held by the declarer and govern his own play accordingly.



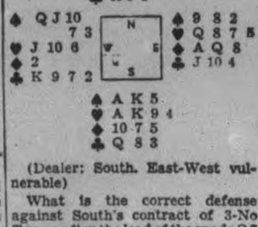
(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable)

One Diamond was South's opening call on this deal, to which North responded with 1-Heart. South then bid 1-No Trump, North 2-Hearts, South 2-No Trump and North 3-No Trump.

Against this bidding, West led the spade 5. East covered with the Q and as declarer saw no hope in holding up, he went in with the A. His next move was to finesse the heart J, which lost to East's K. East then returned the spade 8, South covered with the 9 and West won with the 10. Not being sure that the K would drop the J and preferring to put East in the lead to come through South, West switched to the diamond J. This play enabled South to cash ten tricks instead of being set.

East should have returned the spade 2 to his partner to show his length in the suit and then when the K was played by West, he should have thrown his 8 so as to unblock for West.

Monday's Problem



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable)

What is the correct defense against South's contract of 3-No Trump after the lead of the spade Q?

California Fires Jump Lines In New Threat

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 26—(AP)—Fanned by an increasingly brisk wind, flames jumped across the fire lines in the San Bernardino Mountains today and ate into timber near the highly developed community of Pinecrest.

Charles Plummer, chief dispatcher for the United States forest service, said the situation was "extremely serious."

"We have reports that the fire is in the settlements of Horseshoe Bend and Valley View," Plummer said. "We have stationed men throughout the Crest forest district to assist in evacuation if that becomes necessary."

Pinecrest is in the centre of a recreational area visited annually by nearly 2,000,000 persons, stretching for five miles across the crest of the San Bernardino range overlooking the valley.

Between Pinecrest and Crestline, three miles away, the twisting mountain road is lined with cabins and residences. Four thousand cabins are in the Crest forest district.

200 More Fighters Called

Two hundred civilian conservation corps youths were rushed into the endangered district to augment crews already totalling more than 500.

Fifteen fire trucks, all that could be spared from other sectors of the blaze which already has destroyed the $750,000 Arrowhead Springs Hotel, were in the area, Plummer said. He added the direction of the wind was carrying the flames away from Lake Arrowhead and other resorts to the east.

The latest break in Southern California's most serious forest fire situation in years came at a time when thousands of exhausted fighters apparently were nearing success in their efforts to control blazes in four counties, which already have caused damage estimated at about $5,000,000.

Sergeant's French Surprises Burglar To Confess

Guelph, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP).

SERGEANT Elmer Simmen's linquistic ability proved of decided value last night, when a short time after he and another officer discovered a burglary, they found a transient who could speak no English, but who, after the sergeant spoke to him in French, admitted the theft.

In police court today, Camil Marchand, 21, of Noranda, Que., pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering and theft of R. L. Craigs store and was sentenced to 12 to 18 months in the Ontario Reformatory.

Principal Urges Children Be Given Schooling

NORWOOD, Nov. 26—(Special)—"It is a selfish attitude on the part of parents in not letting their children attend high school," S. S. Breckon, principal, told a capacity audience in the town hall here last night on the occasion of the annual high school commencement exercises. "Books for a school year up to the fifth form cost less than $5 and there is no excuse for parents in the town or country not giving the young people a break, in receiving a high school education to prepare them to go out in the world," he continued. "Last year the cost of secondary school education at Norwood high school was 26 cents per pupil each day." This was an enviable low rate compared to other high schools in the district, he said.

One Act Play.

The event was featured by a fast moving one act play entitled, "The Trunk From India." Those taking part were: Olga Metcalfe, Yvonne Finlay, Jessie Reynolds, Nona Breckon, William Thompson, Lester Bongard, David McNeil and Wilfred Buck. The gymnastics presented by the senior boys of the school was a first class performance and was also a feature of the evening.

Presentations by the junior and senior glee clubs were well received by the audience. Anthony Petticrew, as master of ceremonies of a minstrel show act, staged a pleasing performance ably assisted by a proficient cast. Leslie Sargent of Westwood was presented the Strathcona medal, emblematic of best marksman of the school on the rifle range. Marion Hope of Villiers and Olga Metcalfe, Asphodel township won Canadian history prizes. John Baldock was awarded the entrance prize.

Prize Winners.

Following are the students who won prizes and diplomas:

Field Day Champions — Rachel Elmhurst, senior girls; Bernard Puffer, senior boys; Isabel Birdsall, junior girls; Murray Thomas, junior boys; Doreen Graham, juvenile girls.

Jackie Saunders Prize Winner Amateur Night

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 26.—Contestants of all ages vied for honors Friday evening at the big amateur show staged in the Havelock Town Hall auditorium by the Havelock Albion Club, and more than 350 persons attended the entertainment. This was the fourth amateur night which the local club has sponsored and successfully carried through.

Little Miss Jacqueline (Jackie) Sanders of town was declared grand prize-winner of the evening's show and will be the guest of the club on a trip to Toronto, where through the courtesy of the sponsors of Ken Soble's Amateur Hour she will be auditioned to appear on one of their future Sunday programs. Miss Spencer won first place singing and tap-dancing to "Alexander's Ragtime Band." She was daintily attired in a pretty yellow costume and executed her tap-dance on a specially built pair of steps, which were placed upon the stage, for her number.

Competition in the junior competition (12 years and under) were exceptionally keen, but the spotlight was captured by two sets of twins, both performing their respective song and dance numbers with excellent ability. First prize in this section was taken by little Misses Jean and Joan Quinn of Havelock, dressed in very pretty red and silver costumes, danced and sang "A Tisket, A Tasket." The Young twins, Wallace and Wayne, also of town, were a very close second, singing and dancing an Irish number, with appropriate green costumes.

Top honors in the senior competition went to Miss Florence Bertrand of Campbellford, who captured first place tap-dancing to "Top Hat." Second prize in the adult section was taken by Miss Minerva Isaac of Havelock, who in a very lovely soprano voice sang a number entitled "Giannina Mia."

Winners on a previous Ken Soble Amater Contest, Messrs. Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds of Marmora, were introduced to the audience and presented several numbers during the evening's program. The instruments included guitars and mouth organs.

Well-Handled Job.

Mr. E. J. Leeson very kindly acted as master-of-ceremonies for the program, doing a splendid job, while Mr. Arnold Bates of Campbellford played the accompaniments for several contestants.

While the committee were totaling the contestants' points, Mr. Bates delighted the audience with several popular numbers on the piano.

Judging was done by Mrs. H. L. Scott, Mr. W. D. Duncan, and Mr. D. F. Miller.

Others who competed in the contest but who failed to place were: Juniors—Little Misses Dorothy Ann and Shirley Holdcroft, Havelock; song and dance; "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town"; Liverne Mathews, Lakefield, step-dance; Peggy Brown, Peterborough, song; Leonard Cooper, Peterborough, song. Senior competition—Phyllis Ellis and Gayle Polock, Havelock, song, "Down By The Old Mill Stream"; James Cross, Peterborough, song, "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life"; Bill Rylott, Havelock, Violin solo; Seven boys from North School, song; Randall Ellis, Havelock, violin solo; Margaret Johnson, Havelock, song, "When The Dew Is on The Rose"; Clifford Robinson, Blairton, "Stranger of Galilee"; Ruby, Eileen, and Viola Cassan, Preneveau, piano, violin and guitar selection; Meryl Clarke, Ted Fleming and Ralph Young, Havelock, guitar and mouth organs; Randall and Thelma Ellis, Havelock, violin and guitar; Winnifred Gilliespie, Havelock, song, "In That Old Fashioned Town"; Lois Wilson and Dora Ketchen, Havelock, piano duet, "Chariot Race"; and Frances Wells, Peterborough, piano solo, "The Kangaroo."

make it difficult for him to recover.

Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, Chief Penitentiary of the Church, gave the Pope absolution yesterday when those close to the Holy Father virtually despaired of his survival.

One of the few persons admitted to the Pope's apartment said, however, that extreme unction—the last rite of the Roman Catholic Church—had not been administered.

Persons who saw him during the night said his voice was extremely weak. Between his fainting spells, his mind was described as extremely active. His physicians were said to have found it difficult to enforce on him the quiet he needs.

He was able to take some broth last night, but had eaten no solid food since he was stricken.

Hudson Is Stressing Style and Safety

Many more than one hundred factors enter into motor car safety including such items as styling, comfort and roominess for the driver. In designing the three 1939 lines of Hudsons, that Canadian maker has considered all of them. All cars, even those in the lowest-priced field, now carry the Hudson name. Among the models announced today is the smart and spacious Hudson six Victoria coupe for five passengers, 96 horsepower, 118-inch wheelbase, shown at the TOP. The front end of the 1939 Hudson One-Twelve is sleek and has the new safety hood, as seen at LEFT. The touring sedan, shown here, has 86 h.p. motor and 112-inch wheelbase. At the RIGHT, is another of the exclusive Hudson features, auto-poise control, a patented method of keeping the car on its course, straight ahead, even in bumpy going.

Literary Meeting.

The second Literary meeting of the year was staged last week by Forms Va, IVa, IIa.

The program was made up of several interesting features. It opened with selections by the school orchestra. Alex Young, president of the student's council was master of ceremonies for the meeting.

Swinging into a truly modern style of dancing, the Lambeth Walk, a new dance craze was demonstrated. About 30 students took part in the number which was accompanied by Merrill Smith, pianist. Bill Moorhead and Jimmy Lillico, violins and Bob Graham and his son.

The second number on the well arranged program was a play depicting the story of ultra-modern times where the Boomer munitions factory controlled the armament supply of the world and had invented a highly poisonous gas. With this gas the Boomer Company controlled the world and finally pluged in into the fiercest of all World Wars.

The movements of the munitions company were told to the world through the head office of a world-wide newspaper syndicate. The part of the editor of this famed paper was played by Henry Sharpe who was supported by a well-trained reporter, Ray Borland.

The whole play proved to be as fantastic as H. G. Wells latest thriller, telling of the attack of Mars on the Earth.

Among the players were Elfie Saunders, Sylvia Boorman, Warren Trotter, Bill Davidson, Jim Harvey, and the two newspaper men, Sharp and Borland. The closing feature was a short, one-act bit of tom foolery supplied by that mad chemist and junior columnist Hugh Kenner and his victim Bob Crocker.

The meeting ended with the National Anthem by the School Orchestra under the direction of Mr. A. J. Weames, B.Sc.

Basketball.

The girl's basketball team has been practising hard now for several weeks. The team is again coached by Miss D. E. Brisbin and should prove to be very successful. A number of last year's stars are again with the team. Among them are Marion Juby, Linden Reid, Joan Ottewell and Elfie Saunders. There are about 20 others fighting for a place on this team. Basketball, by the way, is the only girls sport which is supported in the school. And then their is only one team. Isn't there a place for a junior team in the grouping?

The two boys teams are now drilling for the coming winter season. Mr. H. A. Craig and Mr. H. L. Bamforth are coaching the Junior and senior teams again this year and we are looking forward to seeing some good basketball this year from what will be three good cage teams.

Gym Party.

The Junior Girls gym party was held in the gymnasium this week under the supervision of Misses Brisbin and Bailey. A good crowd of girls attended and were served refreshments after a lively program of gymnastic features.

Motion Pictures.

Cameramen Ben Ackerman and John Hooper have been at work again. This time they have produced a real good film—pardon the pun! It shows the big parade previous to the football game a couple of weeks ago. These pictures were taken from the top of one of the buildings on George Street and prove to be very interesting. They also show several highlightsof the game which regretfully calls back the sad loss to Bowmanville. Ah well—'tis over now.

Hockey

If this weather continues it will not be long before P.C.I.'s amateur puckists dust off the blades and try them out on the slippery stuff.

The school hockey team, which won the Junior City League championship last frost time will have many of its old squad back. The ace front line of Parnall, Morron and King is still intact with Ward and Leether of gridiron fame ready to do the rearguard work.

One team, however, is not enough for a school the size of P.C.I. and we would like to see a regular four or six team league formed in the school. With a little help from players and teachers this could easily be done, thus creating more interest in hockey, which is Canada's National sport, in the school . . . Why not give it a try this winter . . . more on this later . . .

Dramatic Club.

P.C.I.'s latest venture into the field of higher arts in the forming of a dramatic club under the direction of Mr. R. L. Hale, head of the English department of the school. At the initial meeting the election of officers was held. Vote was taken by show of hands and when it was all over, Miss Olga Westbye was installed as president, Bill Davidson as vice president and Jean Moore as secretary.

This is a new idea to most of the students of P.C.I. and should prove quite interesting as well as a great help foward the production and betterment of the annual play.

Campus Flashes.

The moving pictures brought here by the student's council, and featuring Mr. Hamilton Jones, of nation-wide photographic fame, were shown to a well filled auditorium. Many tickets were sold in the school by the students. It was a very interesting and educational show. . . . Isn't it about time for another popular song to be introduced into the morning assemblies? . . . And where has the morning entertainment disappeared to? . . . The decoration committee for the annual at home has been organized but as yet we have no definite word as to who will supply the music. We have heard such names as Bob Lyons and his Serenade in Blue and Mel Hamil mentioned. Either of the two would be tops. . . . Have not heard any comment on our suggestion for the school song which appeared in last week's script. . . . Let's heard from you. . . . Maybe we can introduce it to you some morning as a form of entertainment or would it be . . . It is understood that there will be no examinations in the middle and upper school till the end of January, so help me . . . Just 19 more school days till Christmas . . . It was just one year ago next Saturday that the P.C.I. senior football team won the Provincial championship. . . . The strike is over. The student sof P.C.I. began working full time this week. Owing to a lack of football the school dismisses at 4.00 instead of 3.30.

Toronto Girl Sits Beside Roosevelt

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 26 (CP). — Margaret McCausland, 23-year-old Toronto Girl, sat next to President Roosevelt last night as he and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts at a gala Thanksgiving turkey dinner given for crippled children and adults at this colony of infantile paralysis sufferers.

Frances Clare, 14, of Montreal, was another of the lucky 11 who sat at the President's table.

Since all the 80 patients undergoing after-treatment here could not be seated at the table with Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt, they drew lots from a hat for the privilege.

The happy gathering of 500 sat down to four long tables in Georgia Hall, administration building of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation.

Britain Stands By Balfour Decree But Cannot Flood Holy Land With Jew Refugees

LONDON, Nov. 26—(CP). — Government spokesmen told the House of Commons Thursday that while Great Britain stands by the Balfour declaration giving Jews a homeland in Palestine, it cannot open wide the Holy Land to the flood of Jewish refugees from Europe.

Earl Winterton, Chancellor of the Ducy of Lancaster and chairman of the Inter-Government Refugee committee, said that the government stands by the Jewish national home plan and that declarations by previous governments still were in effect.

He closed a general debate on Palestine. Earlier Malcolm Macdonald, Secretary for tthe Dominions and the Colonies, said Palestine did not hold the solution to the refugee problem.

Lord Winterton said it was unfair to suggest Britain should force large numbers of Jews upon Palestine without regard to local conditions or the difficulties of the Holy Land situation.

"The policy of the Inter-Governmental committee," he said, "is not to thrust in refugees blindly wherever there is an opening, but to induce various countries to admit refugees willingly on their value as citizens so that they can contribute materially and intellectually to their adopted country."

Taking Responsibility.

Mr. Macdonald said he had every sympathy with the views of both Jews and Arabs in Palestine and that the government would do all it could to reconcile Jewish and Arab rights. It would take full responsibility for governing Palestine if the coming round table conference failed.

Winston Churchill, Conservative, charged that the government had no positive program for Palestine.

"Where are we?" he asked. "We have to look for something else and so the right honorable gentleman (Mr. Macdonald) comes forward and says: 'I have another idea. Let's have a conference, commissions are worn out. We have exhausted their virtues. But it is some time since we had a conference'."

Mr. Churchill offered his own suggestion. A 10-year plan which would permit Jews to enter the Holy Land in proportion as the Arab population increased. This would give Jews an incentive to encourage Arab growth and should pave the the way to immigration of between 30,000 and 40,000 Jews annually.

Only Bad Charlie Horse

DETROIT, Nov. 26 — (CP). — Charlie Conacher left hospital Friday with his injuries, suffered last night, diagnosed as a bad charley horse, not a fracture that was at first feared by club officials. Conacher was injured when checked by Phil Besler of the Chicago Blackhawks during a National Hockey League game with the Detroit Red Wings. Conacher's injury was the only jarring note in the Wings' 4-2 victory over the Hawks.

Keeping Girl's Watch Costs Month Jail When Culprit Caught

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP)

MURRAY BOYD failed to appear in court today in connection with the disappearance of a wrist watch owned by a Guelph girl and as a result was sentenced to one month in jail. A warrant was issued for his arrest.

Boyd had been told to report to court today to explain why he had not paid the girl's expenses from Guelph to Brantford when she came here to regain the watch which Boyd had admitted keeping. The watch later was pawned and Boyd first appeared in court in connection with the case last week.

No Jew Baiting Japs Indicate

TOKYO, Nov. 26—(AP).—Japanese and German governments signed an accord on cultural co-operation to-day but, the foreign office spokesman said, "the agreement does not mean that Japan is going to persecute the Jews."

The accord recognizes the respective "racial principles" of the two countries (Nazi culture is built upon the thesis of a pure German race). Many Jews in Japan, a large number of them teachers, had expressed apprehension.

The foreign office spokesman, answering questions whether Japan could subscribe to "the characteristic features" of German culture without embarking upon a program of anti-semitism similar to that in Germany, said Jews attached to schools would not be asked to resign.

Specifically, he said, "the agreement does not mean that Japan is going to persecute Jews."

Details are to be determined later but the practical phases of the agreement are for coporation among youth groups, an exchange of professors, students, books, periodicals, objects of art, films and radio broadcasts.

Committees for cultural work are to be established. A statement explaining the pact declared it "clearly affirms in the preamble that the characteristic features of both countries shall be the basis of future cooperation."

The pact was concluded at the instance of the German government, the foreign office spokesman said.

Two Tons Of Black Rice Were Harvested At Rice Lake Sold At 35 Cents A Pound

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 26. — Rice Lake Indians received a top price of 35 cents per pound for wild black rice obtained from the marshes of Rice Lake this fall. The price last year was 35 cents per pound. It has been estimated that more than two tons of the wild cereal were gathered this fall.

Merne Brown, Roseneath merchant, said the supply was not nearly large enough to satisfy the demand. "I could have sold at least two tons to buyers in ton lots this past two weeks," he said. "Americans have purchased practically all the rice available for sale."

Denies Wheat Problem Born In West

Analysis By Hepburn Misleading - Bracken Charges

By Carl Reinke
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (C.P.).—Premier John Bracken of Manitoba today "defied" any man to prove that the wheat problem confronting Canada at present had its origin in the Prairie Provinces, as suggested by Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario last May before the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations.

"Since the major part of the expansion of wheat acreage in Western Canada took place during the war as part of Canada's great national effort at that time, is Mr. Hepburn entitled to say 'the Prairie Provinces are themselves the makers of their own and other people's misfortunes (through overproduction?'" Premier Bracken asked the Commission to-day.

"Was the West's part in that crisis 'bad judgment'? I leave that issue to any fair-minded Canadian."

Mr. Bracken noted that Mr. Hepburn had made no mention of international forces, generally held responsible for the world wheat problem, in his discussion of the matter.

The Manitoba Premier appeared before the supplementary sitting of the Commission to introduce Manitoba's additional presentation and, specifically, to reply to some arguments presented by the Ontario Government before the Commission. (The Ontario Government criticized sharply several angles of Manitoba's original submission.)

Mr. Bracken stressed the dire urgency of a more rational Dominion-Provincial financial relationship of inequities were to be reduced and the spirit of disunity aggravated no further.

Drastic Readjustments

He re-affirmed "most positively" that if no action resulted from the work of the commission that "the Province of Ontario and the Dominion of Canada may just as well make up their minds now as later that there will have to be a drastic adjustment of public debt burden in more than one province in Canada and in many additional municipalities."

Premier Bracken told the commission that, in the opinion of the Manitoba government, Premier Hepburn "went out of his way to make an attack upon the wheat industry

Lawson Ready To Take Tory Nomination But Won't Campaign

Toronto, Nov. 28 (CP)

HON. J. EARL LAWSON, Conservative member of parliament for York South, today said he would accept nomination as a candidate for leadership of the Ontario Conservative party at the provincial convention here Dec. 8 and 9.

Mr. Lawson was an unsuccessful candidate for leadership of the national Conservative party at their Ottawa convention in July. The Toronto lawyer said he would not conduct a pre-convention campaign, but would leave the choice of leader wholly to the delegates.

He added he would relinquish all other interests if he were elected leader.

Rescue Nearing 100 Hunters Caught In Snow

AURORA, Me., Nov. 28.—(AP)—Rescuers from three sides today fought their way into the snow-isolated wilderness of Northern Maine to bring food to 100 hunters and civilian conservation corps youths reported cut off by huge drifts piled up by two blizzards.

Early today state police reported one unit of the rescue parties had broken trail to Mopang Lake, five miles east of Beddington, while a second detail approached Eagle Lake, several miles to the north. Police did not learn how many hunters were found at Mopang. It was said several women were among the group at Eagle Lake.

While tractors and huge trucks, manned by state police, United States National Guards and game wardens pushed through drifts they reported eight and 10 feet high in places, airplanes were made ready at Bangor and Augusta to fly over the isolated hunting camps and lodges with food supplies.

Names of only a few of the marooned were known. Among them was Captain H. R. Greenlee, 57, acting commandant of the Portsmouth, N.H., navy yard and two other Portsmouth navy officers.

The widespread rescue operations began last night at the direction of Governor Lewis Barrows, after he was informed a number of hunters who had entered the woods for the Thanksgiving Day holiday, Nov. 24, and during the weekend had failed to come out.

One blizzard buried the isolated, lake-dotted area in snow Thursday, and a second which began last night was reported still raging in some section.

Most of the hunters were believed to have only enough food supplies to last until Saturday or Sunday.

2 Kidnapped As Cover For Gunmen

Police Car Crippled By Bandit's Shot In Michigan Chase

PAW PAW, Mich., Nov. 28 (AP).—Two Michigan men were abducted today by gunmen fighting their way across the southern part of the state in an attempt to elude a cordon of state police and sheriffs' officers.

Those seized by the gunmen were Henry Matty, a Vicksburg farmer, and Claude Mennis, a gas station attendant employed near Vicksburg. Both men presumably were abducted to cover up the trail of the gunmen as they switched automobiles, refueled and sped on their way. At least one of the fugitives was believed wounded.

The chase began shortly after midnight when a state police cruiser crew spotted at Mottville, Mich., near the Indiana line, a car for which they had been watching. Instead of obeying an order to halt the occupants of the car opened fire on the police. Trooper Carlos Hurley returned the fire.

A shot from a rifle disabled the motor of the state police car and put it out of the chase.

Find Blood In Machine.

The fugitives were next heard from when Matty was abducted, his car taken and the original car abandoned. An examination of the original car disclosed blood.

It was believed the fugitives numbered three, one of them possibly a woman.

Shortly after Matty was seized it was reported that strangers had stopped for gas at the station attended by Mennis and that he was missing.

Only possible clue to the identity of the persons sought was that Benny Dickson, 27, wanted for felonious assault, was headed into Michigan from Topeka, Kan. It was while acting on that tip that Trooper Hurley and his companion first attempted to stop a car and was answered with a rattle of gunfire.

Hepburn Scores Croll In Letter

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 28.—(CP)—A letter from Premier Hepburn of Ontario, attacking David A. Croll, Windsor mayoralty candidate, was published today as a full-page advertisement in the Windsor Daily Star by supporter of Mayor E. S. Wigle.

Croll, mayor from 1931 to 1934 and a former minister in the Hepburn government, is campaigning for a five-cent street railway and bus fare. Wigle as supported statement of Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway Company that present 10-cent fares cannot be reduced.

The Premier's letter was addressed November 25 to W. H. Furlong, chairman of the board of the street railway company and was in reply to a letter from Furlong, text of which was not published.

The Hepburn letter follows in part:

"I have your letter of the 24th and have read the extracts from speeches reported to have been made by Mr. D. A. Croll in the election campaign with respect to you and your administration of the railway.

"To say the least, I am shocked and amazed that any man aspiring to public office could be guilty of uttering such falsehoods and making such false promises which are known to himself to be impossible of fulfilment.

"In conclusion I may also say that any man making the false statements which have been brought to my attention with respect to you and your administration of the S. W. and A. railway has forfeited any confidence that I ever had in him, and he is not deserving the support of the voters which he seeks, and I regret very much that a member of parliament should make an appeal to the electors on such false statements and promises."

Cold Wave Settles Over Eastern U.S.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (A.P.). — Clear weather but cold settled over the eastern half of the United States to-day in the wake of a double-barreled preview of the 1938 edition of winter.

Sub-freezing temperatures were general as far south as Georgia and as far west as Kansas City, and the north-eastern states braced themselves for another storm that was swirling up from the Central Atlantic region.

On top of the hard crust of ice and snow from last Thursday's blizzard lay from one to five inches of fresh week-end snow. In Virginia, where the total snowfall last year was only 17 inches, 7½ inches of snow was on the ground.

New England dug out from five inches that pelted down in the second storm. New York only got about two inches, but New York City reckoned its snow removal cost at $1,000,000.

Second Blizzard In 48 Hours Hits Maritimes Does Million Damage—4 Ships Overdue

HALIFAX, Nov. 28 (CP)—The Maritimes estimated damage at more than $1,000,000 today after the second blizzard in 48 hours swept the seaside provinces. Most losses were counted in New Brunswick but western Nova Scotia suffered heavily.

The second storm roared in from the seas yesterday piling up snow on highways opened after a blizzard battered the three provinces Friday night. It was not as severe as the first storm.

Fears were held for the safety of two Prince Edward Island fishermen. Believed caught in the gale as they sailed in open boats up the north shore Friday night. At the northwest end of the island the Norwegian freighter Nandi was held fast on a sandbar. A wrecking tug stood by the vessel which ran ashore Friday. Seven ships reached Halifax, battered by heavy seas of the Nova Scotian coast. Four others were overdue. Officers of the West Indies freighter Lillemor said they had run through a 100-mile-an-hour blow.

2 Shot, 5 Die In Road Crashes In Weekend Toll Of 12

Season's First Touch Of Wintry Weather Brings Scores Of Accidents;

TORONTO Nov. 28 (CP).—Twelve persons were killed in Ontario during the weekend, traffic accidents being responsible for five deaths. Two men were found shot. A child was burned to death and another died from scalds. One man was killed in a fall from a tree and a second died from injuries suffered in a fall from a tractor.

The season's first weekend of winter weather, with low temperatures and snow, was responsible for scores of accidents throughout the province.

William Rushlaw, 27-year-old service station attendant, died in hospital at Ottawa last night from injuries suffered when his motorcycle struck the curb and threw him to the pavement.

Mrs. Harry Cosnell of Chatham died in hospital Saturday at Stratford of injuries suffered in a head-on collision on No. 7 highway. An automobile driven by Robert Douglas of Hamilton crashed into the car in which Mrs. Cosnell was driving.

Seven-year-old Solomon Litchy of Kitchener district died yesterday in hospital of injuries suffered when struck by a truck near his home. Bobby Easton, eight, of Curries in Oxford County, was killed by a truck in front of his home.

Six-year-old Donald Zavitz was struck Saturday by an automobile driven by Cecil Hinge of Mossley while walking along a road near the Middlesex-Oxford boundary and he died yesterday in hospital at Ingersoll.

Two Tots Victims

Robert Ernest Chappell, 20-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Chappell of London died yesterday in hospital from scalds suffered when a coffee percolator upset over his head. Allan Garetto, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Garetto, perished in a fire that partially razed the home of his parents at Pembroke yesterday.

William Fancy, 76, of Thedford died in hospital Saturday from injuries suffered when he fell from a tree at his home. He was born in England and came to Canada at the age of 15 years.

The body of Dan Harper, 45-year-old Lanark township farmer, was found yesterday in the bush near his home at Perth, the head apparently blown off by an accidental discharge of a shotgun he was carrying. He had been missing since

Engineers Hold Council Meeting In City

For the first time since the organization of its local branch in 1919, the council of the Engineering Institute of Canada held a meeting here Saturday afternoon, and in the evening the visitors, men highly placed in the industrial affairs of this country, were guests at the annual dinner of the Peterborough engineers at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club.

Of special interest to Peterborough sentiment was the presence of former residents of this city, including Alex J. Grant of St. Catharines, Chas. E. Sisson and W. E. Ross of Toronto and W. H. Munro of Ottawa.

Dr. J. B. Challies of Montreal, assistant general manager of the Shawinigan Power Company, and president of the Institute of Canada, was chairman of the afternoon meeting, and also the guest speaker at the dinner. Others present were: E. P. Muntz of Hamilton, president of the Ontario Association of Professional Engineers, and immediate past president of the E.I.C.; A. J. Grant of St. Catharines, also a past president; L. Austin Wright of Ottawa, general secretary; and three Vice-Presidents, E. V. Buchanan, Dartmouth, N.S., J. A. McCrory, Montreal; R. L. Dunsmore, Dartmouth, N.S.

Also Councillors: W. E. Bonn and O. Holden of Toronto; H. A. Lumsden, Hamilton; A. B. Gates, Peterborough; J. A. Vance, Woodstock; R. H. Findlay and J. L. Busfield, Montreal; and P. H. Buchan, Vancouver, B.C.

Branch representatives at the council meeting were: Major L. F. Grant, Kingston; Mr. Muntz of Hamilton; Prof. D. S. Ellis of Queen's University, Kingston; W. E. Ross, Toronto; W. P. Dobson, Toronto, president-elect of the Ontario Association of Professional Engineers; W. H. Munro, Ottawa; John Spence, Toronto, C. E. Sisson, chairman of the Toronto branch of the E.I.C.; H. G. Conn, secretary of the Kingston branch, and the following members of the Peterborough branch: W. A. Logan, Ross L. Dobbin, R. H. Parsons, B. L. Barnes, B. Otwell, W. T. Fanjoy, I. F. McRae, A. L. Malby, A. L. Killaly, A. L. Dickinson, E. R. Shirley, V. R. Currie, W. C. Ackerman.

W. T. Fanjoy, president of the Peterborough branch, was the dinner chairman. He spoke of the honor paid to the branch by the first meeting in Peterborough of the council, whose sessions are usually held in the larger cities, chiefly Toronto and Montreal.

The Branch Dinner

Mr. Challies, introduced by Mr. Dobbin, gave an account of his present tour of the branches of the E.I.C. in which he visited all but two

Last Minute News Flashes

HALIFAX, England.—The "Phantom Slasher" who has terrorized this North England town for a week struck again tonight at the first of his 11 victims, Mary Sutcliffe, 21, wounding her in the chest. Police surrounded the district and closed streets in the neighborhood of the attack but the assailant again escaped.

BELLEVILLE.—Byron Seeley of Roslin, Percy T. Marshall of Marlbank, F. L. Palmer of Ivanhoe, T. K. McKnight of Inverary, J. D. Henderson of Milford and D. M. Sandford of Sharps Corners, won special prizes in connection with the Empire Cheese Exhibition here, it was announced today. Their entries won awards for the highest average score from May 1 to Oct. 31.

Canada Finds Her Bonds Are Popular

New 40 Million Issue Snapped In U.S. At Slight Premium

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (CP).—Trading in the new $40,000,000 Dominion of Canada 30-year, three-per-cent. bonds in New York last week "indicates the confidence the financial world has in the economic soundness of Canada," Finance Minister Dunning said today.

The demand for the issue from dealers and investment houses in the United States was such that not only was the entire issue taken up, but in the open market the bonds have been at a slight premium over the price they were offered to the public, the Minister said.

At the close of Saturday's market the bonds were quoted at 97⅝ to 97⅞ with sales around 97⅞. This slight premium over the original offering price of 97¼ is significant as it represented the market's opinion of their value after the underwriting syndicate which offered the bonds was wound up. The bonds were delivered and paid for last Tuesday.

"The splendid reception the new issue received from United States investors and the advance in Saturday's market over the original offering price indicates the confidence the financial world has in the economic soundness of Canada," Mr. Dunning said.

Borrowing Cheaply.

"No country in the world is borrowing money today at lower rates than is the Dominion of Canada. Our recent issue in New York, which was for a term of 30 years, was offered to the public at a price to yield the investor only 3.14 per cent. of maturity. If an adjustment is made for the tax-free feature of United States government bonds, it will be found that the Dominion government issues are selling in the United States market on a basis as attractive as that of the obliga-

Jewish Roundup Is Unabated

BERLIN, Nov. 28 (A.P.). — Jewish quarters said to-day they had evidence from various parts of Germany that arrests of Jews were continuing.

Many who stayed away from home during the big arrest wave in the anti-Jewish drive that followed the killing of Ernst von Rath by a young Jew in Paris now are being quietly rounded up, these sources said.

Word also came from the Nazi-dominated free city of Danzig of large scale raids in search of Jews within the past few days.

All Jewish boarding houses, hotels and homes in Danzig, Zoppot and Oliva were said to have been searched. It was reported Jews who could not prove they had regular employment or who could not produce passports were pushed across the border of neighboring Poland.

"Two-Gun" Madman Escapes Hospital

MONTREAL, No. 28.— (CP). — A mentally deranged farmer, who terrorized the village of Contrecoeur a month ago, was the object of a police searc hto-day after his escape through a wash room window from St. Jean de Dieu Mental Hospital here.

Forty-four-year-old Moise Handfield, who frightened villagers in his home town by driving up and down the streets discharging two guns, gained freedom last night from the institution at nearby Langue Pointe. Handfield once before detained at the institution but released six years ago, was described by police as "very dangerous."

Police said attendants only noticed Handfield's absence about an hour and a half after the farmer entered the washroom. They found the small washroom window open.

In the recent affair at Contrecoeur Handfield barricaded himself in his home and withstood a siege for nearly three hours before his capture was effected. One of his children was in the house at the time, although his wife and other youngsters had fled.

A verandah light aided Handfield in stalling off police, but it also finally led to his capture. For a long while it gave Handfield vision to send volleys at police attempting to creep up on the home. Eventually a police sharpshooter smashed the bulb with a shot and in darkness officers were able to approach the house.

Rob Nut Shop Of $13

TORONTO, Nov. 28— (CP)— An armed robber today held up the Variety Nut Shop at the corner of Yonge and Bloor streets and escaped with $13. Police said the description of the man tallied with that of a thief who robbed a nearby hosiery store Thursday.

Sculptor Murderer Gets 134 Years For Triple Slaying

New York, Nov. 28 (AP)

ROBERT IRWIN, eccentric young sculptor who pleaded guilty to the 1937 Easter morning triple-slaying of Veronica Gedeon, attractive model; her mother, and Frank Byrnes, a boarder, was sentenced to 134 years in state's prison today by Judge James Wallace. He will be taken to Sing Sing prison later in the day.

Trial of Irwin, specifically for murder of Byrnes, was interrupted by Irwin's plea of guilty before the jury was completed. Irwin's lawyer, Samuel Leibowitz, in offering the plea, told the court the sculptor was "crazy as a bedbug."

Four Convicted Of Kidnap Claim Frameup

OLYMPIA, Wash., Nov. 28 (AP).—Charges of "frameup" and promises of a grand jury investigation today followed the conviction of Dr. Kent Berry, society physician, and three others in the torture-kidnapping of Irving Baker, whom the doctor accused of attacking pretty Mrs. Berry.

The 50-year-old doctor, facing possible life imprisonment, charged he was the victim of a frameup and said he would appeal his conviction on first degree kidnapping charges. His three co-defendants likewise planned appeals.

Dr. Berry was accused of plotting the kidnapping and torture of Baker, handsome 37-year-old former coast-guard officer, after alleging he raped Mrs. Berry, 27, after a weekend party. Baker denied attacking the woman.

Life In Prison.

After the Superior Court jury returned a verdict yesterday recommending life imprisonment for Berry, William McAloon, 55, former town marshal; James Reddick, 27, taxi driver, and Albert Smith, 32, dairy farmer, Berry shouted:

"The prosecution rigged up this whole thing. Of course we'll appeal. If there ever was a frameup, this is it."

He referred to a proposed defence of "entrapment" in which his attorneys offered to prove county officials told Berry to beat up Baker after refusing to issue a rape warrant for his arrest. The court ruled against admissability of such evidence.

Prosecutor Smith Troy said he would ask for a grand jury investigation of these charges. He said he believed the inquiry was necessary to clear himself and other officers.

Dr. Berry, McAloon and Reddick also were held guilty of first degree assault, for which maximum punishment of 20 years in prison is prescribed. Smith was convicted of second degree assault, a 10-year offence.

The four were tried for forcing Baker from his home August 19 and torturing him with a belt and pliers while he lay bound hand and foot in an isolated gravel pit. Smith may receive leniency because of testimony during the trial that he dissuaded Berry from emasculating Baker.

Chamberlain To Visit Mussolini

January Visit To Rome May Be Followed By Call Upon Berlin

LONDON, Nov. 28 (CP Cable).—Prime Minister Chamberlain and Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, will visit Premier Mussolini during the early part of January, it was announced at 10 Downing Street to-night.

The announcement was made in the following words:

"At the meeting in Munich Signor Mussolini suggested to the Prime Minister that he should at some future date pay a visit to Rome. As an opportunity for making such a visit might occur during the forthcoming parliamentary recess, inquiries were made as to whether a date in the first half of January would be suitable for Signor Mussolini. His Excellency has stated he would in principle welcome a visit from the Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary at that time."

May Go To Berlin.

The trip to Rome will follow the Prime Minister's recent consultations with French statesmen and may be followed at a later date by a trip to Berlin.

The purpose of the trip is to further Mr. Chamberlain's general appeasement plan but one of the subjects certain to be discussed is the Spanish civil war. Although Mussolini withdrew 10,000 infantrymen as a necessary prelude to the Anglo-Italian treaty becoming effective he left large numbers of troops, many planes, and vast quantities of military supplies in Spain.

Mr. Chamberlain may attempt to persuade Mussolini to bring pressure to bear on General Franco to accept the British plan for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Spain.

The announcement of his Italian visit came shortly after the Prime Minister had told the House of Commons Great Britain had not committed herself to send an expeditionary force to France in case of war.

Saves Children

COLDWATER, Ont., Nov. 28.—(CP)—Mrs. Leaman Howell led her four children to safety when fire destroyed her home here early today. The family was forced out into a snowstorm but neighbors provided shelter.

Nine-year-old Douglas Howell arose early to light the kitchen stove after his father, a stone worker, had left for work. The stove fell over and within a few minutes the frame building was aflame. Mrs. Howell led her children through flames and smoke to safety.

"Ontario Municipal Credit Rating Best In Years—No Worry"—Cross

TORONTO, Nov. 28 (CP)—Ontario municipal credit stood today at its highest level in many years with $58,000,000 refunded of $104,000,000 in default. Ontario municipal board plans call for refunding of an additional $19,000,000 in the near future.

Hon. Eric Cross, Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs, in a statement last night said that as far as municipal credit is concerned there is "nothing to worry about." He said there had been a general improvement as to municipal debt through the province and noted that a 1933 debt of $494,433,956 was reduced in 1937 to approximately $430,000,000.

"As evidence of the improved position of the municipalities in default we have had the example in recent months of some of these municipalities, after refunding had been completed, selling their bonds at par," Mr. Cross said.

"This is an indication of the confidence that has been restored in the municipal finances of these municipalities, and is also an indication of the increasing confidence that prevails generally with respect to municipal credit."

Refunding Centres

Niagara Falls, Sudbury, Windsor, Kingsville, Leamington, Leaside, Mimico, Midland, New Toronto, Pembroke, Trenton, Weston and Etobicoke, North York and Calvert townships are municipalities where refunding has been affected.

Those with refunding plans pending are Fort Erie, La Salle, Riverside, Thorold and East York, Sandwich East and Sandwich West townships.

Municipalities under preliminary survey, prior to refunding are Blind River, Eastview, Hawkesbury, Long Branch, Penetang, Sturgeon Falls, Tecumseh, and Scarborough, York and Dysart township.

Mr. Cross said that in recent months, some of the municipalities after refunding had been completed sold their bonds at par. The town of Leaside, suburban Toronto, sold $600,000 worth of bonds at a slight premium over par, while North York township completed a sale of $260,000 of its bonds at par "a few days ago."

"The township of Etobicoke, it is anticipated, will complete a sale of $116,000 of its debentures at par, 4½ percent," he said.

Britons Really Shocked Over Victoria's First Train Ride

London, Nov. 28 (CP)

ONE of the greatest thrills experienced by Queen Victoria during her reign was her first trip on a steam train from Slough to London in 1842.

The story of the journey which "profoundly shocked" many of her subjects, was related by the Duke of Gloucester.

Jap Munition Men Urged To Expand Plants As War Official Sees Break With Russia

Urging upon munitions manufacturers a rapid expansion of the arms industries, the vice minister for war said "Japan must have sufficient armaments to fight a vast war on two fronts as there is every possibility Russia and China may band together as soon as the Soviet completes preparations."

"There is no doubt that the Soviet is hastily replenishing heavy industries and bolstering armaments in preparation for a Soviet-Japanese conflict that apparently is inevitable," he said.

He charged Great Britain was concealing enmity toward Japan and said "Occasional vestures of friendship should be interpreted merely as protecting British rights and interest—they mean nothing."

While the United States attitude was neutral, he continued, "I must call attention to the fact that the United States government is sticking to old treaties and is unwilling to recognize the changed situation in the far east."

Phantom Slasher Terrorizes Towns, Attacks 11 In Past Week

HALIFAX, England, Nov. 28 (AP)—Women of this north England town today were ordered to remain indoors after nightfall because of a "phantom slasher" who strikes unseen along darkened byways.

The slasher added an 11th victim to his list early this morning, slipping up behind Mrs. Constance Wood, a mill worker, only a few yards from her doorway. He knocked her down, hacked through her heavy coat to inflict two gashes in her left arm, and escaped.

Police have been unable to trace the slasher who has attacked 11 persons within the past seven days. All but two of the victims are women. None are seriously wounded.

Screams from one of two women who were slashed last night brought firemen to the rescue. Crowds leaving church joined the hunt but without success.

It was feared "the phantom," who so far only has wounded his victims with a sharp-edged weapon, might suddenly turn murder.

Women of this industrial town—at least those brave enough still to venture out at night—were arming themselves with large hatpins, bags of pepper and walking-sticks for self-defence. Patrols of Boy Scouts were pressed into service.

Some believed the attacks might be the work of three persons who, as one police official put it, were "revelling in publicity."

Since the majority of those slashed were women, another theory was that "the phantom" might be someone who had been supplanted in his job by a woman.

The only clue to the slasher's identity has come from one of the women victims who described him as having "staring eyes and a big mouth" which she said she would recognize again.

Mysterious Pink Light Scares Scores At Prairie Cemetery

Esterhazy, Sask., Nov. 28 (CP)

A MYSTERIOUS LIGHT, reported regularly at midnight at Tabor Cemetery, has created fear in the superstitious. It comes up quickly and appears pinkish in color, and then after coming at the watcher with terrific speed it disappears suddenly, reports say.

It has been reported seen by hundreds of persons in the last three weeks and has been investigated by police. No explanation has been found. Autoists seeing the light approaching have taken to the ditch quickly.

Society of Screwballs Organizes In A Hole, Begins By Sending Hitler Word Of Advice

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP)—"SOS," the society of screwballs, was organized in a hole yesterday and immediately elected President Roosevelt as "patron saint" for his sustained sense of humor and cabled a word of advice to Chancellor Hitler.

"If the German masses ever regain their sense of humor run—don't walk—for the nearest border," the SOS counseled Hitler.

The president was praised and "all dictators" were denounced in a resolution unanimously adopted by the 275 attending the foundation ceremonies broadcast from the unfinished 35th Street excavation of the new 6th Avenue subway.

Johnson of Olsen and Johnson said in the "keynut" speech: "This is the first organization that started in a hole instead of ending up in one."

Pope Recovered, Receives 400 Pilgrims

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 28—(AP).—Tension over the illness of Pope Pius relaxed today as another night passed without incident. Papal associates indicated the Pontiff passed a quiet night, after a relatively strenuous Sunday.

The Papal household was relieved that he pomised a week free from audiences because of his weakened condition after a heart attack Friday. Vatican officials continued to spare him as much as possible from the conduct of church affairs and his physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, remained near and alert for any signs of relapse.

The pontiff with surprising strength talked for 10 minutes Sunday to 400 Hungarian pilgrims after he had seated himself unaided on the papal throne. One of the pilgrims said he was "very pale but he appeared the master of his strength and unhesitating in his motions."

The Pope had been borne into the throne room in his portable chair. After being assisted from the chair, he motioned the assistants away and walked the few steps to the throne which he mounted alone.

In the afternoon he went to bed for about two hours but asthma bothered him, members of his household said, and he arose to sit in an arm chair until 6 p.m.

From a secluded part of the official apartment he listened to sermons by Cardinals at the annual spiritual exercises of the papal court. They ended at 7:45 p.m. and the Pope went at once to bed.

Rebel Aircraft Bomb Own Men

HENDAYE, France, Nov. 28.—(AP).—Insurgent troops went over the top at dawn to-day in the Nules sector, renewing the long-dormant insurgent push toward Valencia on Spain's eastern seaboard.

Military dispatches reported savage fighting after the insurgents cut passages through the government's barbed wire defences during the night and launched a surprise attack.

Government advices said the insurgents were pushed back in hand-to-hand fighting.

The drive toward Valencia was halted five months ago when a government offensive in the Ebro river region diverted insurgent forces to that front.

Government dispatches said insurgent aircraft had bombed their own position by mistake at Camanea, south of Teruel, apparently causing great damage.

Government commanders said the bombing was intended to herald the start of a new offensive on the Teruel front.

Free Rides For Him

DETROIT, Nov. 28 (C.P.).—Floyd E. Bell, the last man in the service of the Detroit Street Railway who drove a horse car, will retire Thursday after 47 years' service with the city street railway system. He hasn't had an accident since the first morning he drove a car, when the horses ran and crashed into a milk wagon. He will get a gold badge entitling him to ride free on all city cars.

Looking Back
On This Date

It is 340 years today since the great Count Frontenac died at Quebec in his 78th year. He was more of a soldier than a colonizer, fought the Indians and the British with vigor, and at times was at odds with Bishop Laval and the Jesuits who secured his recall in 1682, after 10 years of service. But his successors made such a mess of things that seven years later King Louis was glad to send Frontenac back "to finish his work." He was an expansionist, founded Forts Frontenac (Kingston) and Niagara, and otherwise laid the bases of that chain of French influence which was not destroyed for nearly a century.

Parkman, the American historian of the French period, had a high opinion of Frontenac: "Versed in books, published in courts and salons, without fear, incapable of repose, keen and broad of sight, clear in judgment, prompt in decision, fruitful in resources, unshaken when others despaired, a sure breeder of storms in time of peace but in time of calamity and danger a tower of strength, it was he who saved the colony and led it triumphant from an abyss of ruin."

Apart from his military record, Frontenac is noteworthy because he was the first to try to give the settlers some voice in the administration of the colony. It was on Oct. 23, 1672, that there assembled in the Jesuit chapel at Quebec the "three estates of Canada," summoned by Frontenac's proclamation. The nobles, clergy and merchants were there to a number of nearly a thousand, as optimistic Frontenac had surmised. He first made a counterpart of a speech from the throne and then exacted the oath from every member of the Three Estates, who pledged themselves to service for the state.

Frontenac sent to France an enthusiastic report upon his departure but in return received a chilling response from autocratic Louis in the form of a despatch from Colbert: "Since our kings, for a long time past have thought it inadvisable to summon the states-general in France, you should seldom, or, to be more precise, never assemble the people of Canada together in that way!"

Frontenac's attempt at a parliament was replaced by a sovereign council. Right up to the time of the conquest Canada had no semblance of representative government. It is noteworthy that the first overseas parliament that ever assembled at the call of a governor-general was unique in being mainly French by language. All previous oversea legislatures had been those of mere provinces or individual colonies of a purely provincial kind—as, indeed, this parliament of lower Canada was itself in a territorial sense. But the governor-general, qua governor-general, assembled it; while the parliament of Upper Canada (though not more essentially provincial in other ways) assembled at the call of its purely local lieutenant-governor.

Blame Icy Roads For Two Crashes

The icy conditions of the streets over the week-end is blamed for two traffic accidents in Peterborough, in both cases drivers claiming that their cars skidded into intersections when they tried to stop at "stop" signs.

When Arthur Pond, 498 Elm street, was driving south on Park street, on Saturday afternoon his car collided with a truck, owned by Bruce Parker and driven by N. Reynolds. Pond's car had both headlights smashed, and the hood, radiator and left front fender damaged. The truck escaped without injury and neither driver was hurt.

There was a simalr accident at Reid and McDonnel streets when cars driven by J. M. Garrett, 717 Elcome Crescent street and Jos. Connolly, 491 Murray street, collided. Both cars were damaged and a chest on the side of Connolly's car was smashed. The drivers escaped without injury.

tions of the United States government.

The Canadian loan was to refund a three-year banking credit which comes due next January. The Finance Minister decided to refund it with a 30-year loan in order to take advantage at low interest rates.

The new loan was floated in New York for various reasons, including the saving in interest charges and the fact that the old issue which has to be refunded is payable in New York funds. Flotation of the new loan in Canada would have involved the difficulty of transferring $48,000,000 to New York with the consequent adverse effect on foreign exchange.

In his budget speech last June 16, Mr. Dunning said that in spite of an increase since 1930 of slightly more than $1,000,000,000 in Canada's total outstanding debt, the annual interest charges which represents the real burden of this debt, was $117,063,000 last March 31. This was less than the corresponding figure at the end of any other fiscal year since the close of the war, with the single exception of the year ending March 31, 1930.

Burden Eases.

Furthermore, when allowance was made for the interest received by the Dominion on certain active loans and investments made since 1930 as a result of new borrowings, the net interest burden on the funded debt was actually less than in any year since the Great War.

"In spite of this record," Mr. Dunning said today, "one still finds occasional voices raised in this country lamenting that Canada has not followed the policy of arbitrary conversion of her internal debt which was adopted by Australia at the low point of the depression.

"These critics appear to pay no attention to what the actual facts are. As at June 30, 1931, before the interest rate on Australia's internal debt was cut by an average of 22½ per cent. the average rate of interest on that outstanding debt was 5.25 per cent., and as at June 30, 1937, it was 3.93 per cent., a decrease, therefore, in the average rate of 25.1 per cent.

An 1800 Cent

Apostolic Delegate

Monsignor William Godfrey, rector of the English college in Rome, has been appointed apostolic delegate to London by Pope Pius. Vatican sources reported it was the first time since the 16th century reformation that such an appointment has been made. Italian press reports from London said the Vatican's action was believed to be a move seeking British support in the Roman Catholic church's conflict with Germany over the treatment of German Catholics.

The Mission Circle Girls had as their guests members of the W.M.S. and others who came to hear the guest speaker, Miss Hazel Atkinson, public school teacher of Campbellford, who gave an interesting talk on her trip to Europe during the past year.

Impounding Of Cars To Be Continued

TORONTO, November 28—(CP)—Attorney-General Gordon Conant to-day directed all Ontario Crown Attorneys to impound automobiles of drivers convicted for drunken driving. The machines are to be held for three months.

Ontario statute provides for such actions, but Magistrate Donald Menzies of London last week said he had not power to order vehicles impounded. He said he would submit his reasons for the declaration at a later date.

Mr. Conant said to-day the law is mandatory, and an order from a magistrate is not necessary to effect seizure. The point had been argued by several lawyers defending persons charged with drunken driving. They claimed the law was ultra vires of the Ontario Legislature.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28 — (CP). — An export business estimated at 500,000 bushels was the dominating factor in a firm trend in Winnipeg wheat futures prices to-day. Early steadiness at Liverpool accounted for an early boost and values closed a rather quiet session unchanged to ⅛ higher. November at 59⅛c, December 58⅜c, May 61⅜ and July 62⅛ cents.

Cash wheat trade was dull owing to the fact November goes off the board to-day and an adjustment of spreads will follow. Pit trading in coarse grains also lacked pep although some support showed for barley. Prices generally remained unchanged.

Caldwell, Scott To Battle For Reeveship

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CHANDOS, Nov. 28.—Nomination day brought out a long list of aspirants for municipal honors in Chandos Township. The following were nominated: For reeve, Allan Caldwell, present reeve; Robert Scott, Albert Hall and Fred Bullied. The last two resigned, and the fight for the 1939 reeveship will be between old rivals. Scott ousted Caldwell in 1926, and was himself in turn defeated by the latter in 1927, and after eleven years has decided to stage a comeback.

Those nominated for council include the present four, namely: John Reynolds, Owen Montgomery, William Johnson and Charles Wease, also George Tanner, Marshall McCauley and Albert Wease. The last named nominee resigned, leaving six to run for the four councillorships. The Rev. C. A. G. Spence, the township auditor, presented the financial statement, and also presided at the meeting following the nomination, when all candidates were given the opportunity of airing their views. The election will be held on December 5.

in Western Canada" in introducing Ontario's case before the commission.

He said he would try to show that Mr. Hepburn's analysis was "inadequate and that it can only have the effect of misleading the public of this country as to actual situation existing in Western Canada." He knew from personal experience several statements by Mr. Hepburn regarding western farmers were thoroughly unjustified."

Where Premier Hepburn had spoken of the "capitalized wheat growing interest of the west" beginning to drive for crop insurance, Premier Bracken said it was "difficult to comment appropriately.... and still keep within the amenities of public discussion."

In the past seven or eight years western Canada had been through considerable hardship and some provinces had made big sacrifices to maintain their institutions and credit, thereby helping to maintain the Dominion credit, Premier Bracken said.

"In the face of these efforts, no spokesman for Western Canada can remain quiet while the Premier of the largest and wealthiest province in Canada publicly refers to the 'capitalized wheat growing interests of the West beginning a drive for crop insurance'," he said.

Lotteries Taboo

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 28.—(CP).—Oshawa youth council has approved a motion whereby the organization will refrain from using lotteries as a means of raising funds, Malcolm Young, president of the organization has announced.

The council has also expressed itself as being in favor of city council conducting a survey to ascertain the number of young Oshawa people who are unemployed, the reason for such conditions and possible means of alleviating the situation.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Muriel Peer Weds Charles Elliott

Bethel Hall, Belleville, was the scene of a wedding of interest on Saturday afternoon, November 26, when Muriel Edith, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Peer, of Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Charles Elliott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Elliott of Lang. The father of the bride officiated. Mrs. Hedley James was at the organ, and Mr. Archie Currie and Mr. Cecil Davis were ushers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. O. G. Moynes of Gardenville, wore a gown of white net over ivory satin, with finger-tip veil, and carried a bouquet of pale pink roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothy Peer of Belleville, who wore a gown of delf blue taffeta with gold accessories, and carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums. The groomsman was Mr. Stuart Myers of Lakefield.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and afterwards the couple left on a motor trip to the United States via the Thousand Islands Bridge. For travelling Mrs. Elliott wore a navy crepe suit.

Bazaar Shower Is Held At Tea

Mrs. F. W. Craik, St. James parsonage, was hostess at a delightful tea and shower on Friday afternoon held under the auspices of the W.A. of St. James' United church.

Crowe—MacDonald

A quiet wedding ceremony was solemnized at the Mark Street Church Manse by the Rev. E. W. Rowland on Friday evening, November 25, when Dorothy, eldest daughter of Mrs. Coral F. MacDonald, became the bride of David H. Crowe, son of Mr. Jordan Crowe of Niagara Falls, Ontario.

The bride wore a grey rayon chiffon dress and corsage of sunset Talisman rosebuds, green hat, and accessories. She was attended by Miss Nora Smith, who wore a frock of rust crepe velva with harmonizing accessories, and a corsage of Talisman rosebuds. Mr. Robert Sagar attended the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful cameo necklace.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's mother to immediate relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Crowe will live in Niagara Falls.

St. Andrew's Church Has W.M.S. Service

The annual W.M.S. service was held on Sunday in St. Andrew's United Church with the president, Mrs. Allan Pilling conducting the service. The scripture reading was given by Mrs. B. W. McClennan; a chorus was given by the Mission Band under the direction of Miss Bella King, superintendent, with Mrs. H. A. Radford as the accompanist; prayer was offered by Mrs. H. Tremain; a solo was given by Miss Isobel Weddell, and the offering was taken by eight C.G.I.T. girls.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Young gave an address on the work of the society in Canada and eight of the mission fields outside of Canada.

The Afternoon Auxiliary, the Elizabeth Bell Auxiliary, the C.G.I.T. members, the Alpha Mission Circle, and young people of the Mission Band occupied seats in the front of the church.

DOROTHY DIX

Every Girl Must Make Her Own Decision as to What She Wants Out of Her Married Life, and When She Gets It She Should Play Fair With Her Husband.

A GIRL asks: Is it better to marry the man you prefer or the life you prefer? It depends upon the individual taste of the woman and whether she hankers more for romance or the fleshpots. Much is to be said on both sides of the question, but if a girl is an incurable sentimentalist, love is her dish. Her sweet tooth will always water for lollypops. She will always crave pie rather than roast beef. No matter how good and kind her husband is, nor what luxuries he lavishes upon her, she will be unhappy and dissatisfied unless he is her heart's desire.

Such women must pick out their mates with their hearts instead of their heads, because their emotions are all that count with them. It is folly for them to marry for money, or position, or because a man is sober industrious and reliable and could be relied upon to be a good provider and not run off after blonde goddesses.

And it is worse than folly, it is downright idiocy, for a man to think that he could ever marry a woman of the goo-goo type and win her by making a doormat of himself for her to trample on or buy her affections with matched pearl necklaces. It can't be done. She must see the man she marries as the Fairy Prince of her dreams, or else matrimony is cinders, ashes and dust.

Very often a poor girl gets tired of poverty and pinching and counting pennies and decides she will marry a man who can give her charge accounts at the best shops instead of the lad who makes her heart go pit-a-pat every time he looks at her. She reasons that romance is fleeting, but a home on the avenue is a permanent asset, and that she can get just as much thrill out of the love-making of a husband who says it with cash as she could out of one who quoted poetry to her. And she expects to be happier as Mrs. Millionbucks, riding in her limousine, than she would be Mrs. Poorman, pushing her own baby carriage.

But it seldom works out that way. Our wishes have a way of turning into boomerangs that annihilate us. Only too often we find that the thing we sold our souls for we don't want after we get it. Lobster Newburg and champagne cease to be treats when we have them every day. Fine clothes and jewels get to be a burden when we have too many of them. Parties are a chore when they are a part of the daily grind. So the woman who craves love and who marries without it in order to get the kind of life she prefers finds that she has fallen between the stools and that she has neither.

On the other hand, there is an entirely different kind of woman: The hard-headed, hard-boiled, practical woman to whom the only things that matter in life are the material ones. She regards sentiment and romance as attractive themes for novels and motion-picture scenarios, but as something that a girl should not let influence her when she comes to the serious business of picking out a husband.

To her it is not a man's curly locks, or his broad shoulders, or his persuasive way of making love, or his burning kisses that are important. It is what he can give her. It is whether he is a go-getter or not. It is whether he can give her the kind of life that she wants.

It is perfectly safe for this type of girl to marry a man with no warmer feeling for him than just respect and liking if he can give her the luxuries she craves. She may not love him individually, but she has a deathless passion for the things he can give her. The ease and comfort, the place in society, the beautiful gowns and jewels, the swanky cars, the travel. So long as she has these she will be perfectly happy and satisfied.

So whether a girl should marry the man she likes or the life she likes depends upon her temperament. Before she makes her decision she should look well into her heart and try to see what is there and whether she most desires love or luxury.

It is certainly most unfair for a woman to marry a poor man and then be peevish and fretful and reproach him because she has to do her own cooking and washing and baby-tending instead of rolling around in splendor as rich women do.

It is equally unfair for a woman to marry a man for his money and then berate him because he isn't a great lover and satisfy her craving for romance by having affairs with other men. When a woman makes her choice between love and money she should be a good enough sport to stick to it and play the game.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"To be silent, to suffer, to pray when we cannot act, is acceptable to God. —Fenelon.

And this: "The darkest shadows of life are those which a man makes when he stands in his own light." —Lord Avebury.

Dear Friends:—

When things are not going well with us, we have all a tendency to stand in our own light. For we are so close to our own troubles that we cannot get a proper perspective. Which means a true view of things as a whole)

We see the immediate problem, which may be an acute lack of sufficient money for our needs, or the sickness of a loved one, or the lack of work, or worry over what our husbands, wives, or children are doing just then.

And so, as we peer closely at things, our own shadow dims the light for us. Maybe you have wondered as I have done, how you could advise others so well, but could do little for yourself?

We read of where it was said to our Lord, "Physician, heal Thyself." And, "He saved others, Himself He cannot save." But, we do not think those words can apply to us.

For, it is given to us to be able to help others much more than ourselves, and we can see the solution to their problems more easily because we are not involved in them.

Our own hardest problem is, when we have done all we can, when we have sent our prayers winging to God, and our wishes out into the ether, hoping He will answer, and our wish land where it will do the most good, and no results show in any direction.

And we are at a standstill, so that all we can do is to suffer in silence, keep on praying, hoping against hope, and WAITING. Now, I don't know how it is with you, but waiting is one of the hardest things for me.

If I am busy, if I can see some result for all my prayers and my hopes, and some return for all my labor, I can go ahead with a song in my heart, for I feel I am GETTING SOMEWHERE.

But simply waiting, that gets me down more than any other thing. It seems so futile, so wasteful, for time is slipping by and waiting blindly seems like a form of death in life.

Yet we are also told, "He also serves who only stands and waits." And it might be that we have hurried so much that we are ahead of our appointment with God, and so we must wait.

And for standing in our own light, then is the time when we need a true friend who can help us out of our own shadow, who can remind us of the times when all looked just as black, yet we did not go down.

I will grant you that it is a horrible feeling when you can neither shove an obstacle out of the way, nor seem able to overcome it. But, just as a fever must run its course before convalescence can begin, so must our troubles run their course before better times set in.

And, just as the patient finds the hours and the days tedious beyond belief in this time of waiting, yet still must wait, so also do we find it wearisome in the extreme, yet we also must wait.

When you have done all you can, when you have pushed and shoved with no results, it brings a sort of a peace to relax and wait, taking each day as it comes, making the best of it, with no more striving, no more anxiety.

When you come to the end of your tether, there is either a letting go, or a reaching out for the beginning end of the rope, and who knows but what this is the end of one phase of our life, and we are getting a breather before starting the next phase. It's a thought anyway.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Mission Band Holds Jolly Weiner Roast

The November meeting of the St. James' Mission Band took the form of a jolly party when a good representation of members enjoyed a weiner roast and a short program of games. The opening worship service was in charge of the leader, Connie Wagar, assisted by Mrs. H. F. Doig at the piano. A short singsong of familiar hymns followed the call to worship and the Scripture lesson, Psalm 23, was read by Wanda Deyell. "Prayer" was the theme for the service and many fine definitions were given by the boys and girls, while the story "A Loving Father" by the leader, further emphasized the central theme. A prayer poem was read by Ruth Young and the offertory prayer by Mary Morrison. Rev. Mr. Craik told an appropriate story which was much appreciated by the Band members.

Business included plans for a doughnut day to be held in December, with some of the members already reporting a good number of orders received. Everyone entered heartily into the games and social time which closed the meeting. The treat for the children, provided by the leader and her assistant, was a complete surprise to them, and in the service of the refreshments Rev. Mr. Craik, Mrs. Craik, and Mrs. E. J. Wagar assisted. The singing of a hymn brought to a close a very happy gathering.

Does Your Food Cause You Distress?

The impairment of the stomach is often of serious consequences, for only by properly digested food is the system nourished and sustained.

It helps to stimulate the secretion of saliva and gastric juice, the main factor in digestion, neutralizes acidity, tones up the lining membranes of the stomach, and restores the natural, healthy process of digestion.

Put your stomach right by taking B.B.B. and see how quickly you will start to enjoy your meals free from digestive troubles.

Has Britain Declined?

Great Britain and France have been discussing the serious business of what each nation will do in case a European war should start. It is announced from London, although not officially, that Britain declined to pledge that an army would be sent to France in case of hostilities.

There is a growing feeling in the Old Land that the time has arrived when Britain should be attending more to the affairs of the British Empire and less to the troubles of the world in general. There has been an incessant demand for years that Britain take a hand in any situation which developed. When the mandates were being handed out at the conclusion of the World War it was to Britain that the tough ones went. The trouble in Palestine today is an outgrowth of that move. If there is danger in Europe it is to Britain that an appeal is made to do something about it. If the nations become bankrupt it is to Britain that a visit is made to see how negotiations would succeed for a loan.

The contention has been advanced in London many times that it is not possible for Britain to keep on being so deeply involved in European affairs and that her security for the future rests in the development of the British Empire. If the report that Britain has declined to pledge France that she will land an army there in case of war turns out to be authentic, it may be the first step in a new policy.

Please Pay This Bill

People now and then have made the discovery that it may be rather embarrassing to have individuals calling around and presenting bills for payment. Particularly so if the neighbors or other folk happen to become aware of the nature of the visit.

Something like that has been happening to the gentleman in Europe, Herr Hitler. Within recent months he made a glorious sort of march and took in Austria. There was not a thing under the sun to prevent him doing so. He merely scooped up the country and all that was in it and proceeded to run the place as he saw fit.

But Austria of old owed debts. In Washington Uncle Sam thumbed over his ledger and found an account for some $35,000,000 which is a fair enough amount even for a century which has a nation debt of 40 billion. So a note was sent to Hitler suggesting that when he took over Austria he had also taken over its debts. The reply which was a long time coming was not a good one. It apparently said everything except what Uncle Sam desired to know.

Now he has forwarded another letter of collection, and each time the dunning process is repeated it all gets in the papers. There is much in the note about international law and equity, but whether Herr Hitler understands what such things means is another question. One guess may be as good as another regarding the outcome, and at the moment ours is that Uncle Sam can keep on writing letters but the debt will remain just where it is today—unpaid.

A Confusing Method

Most people regard a year as being a year. That is, 1938 began on the first day of January and will conclude on the 31st day of December.

But it is not so simple as that when people run a government. What is called our fiscal (or financial) year terminates on March 31. In addition to that we also have another way of reckoning what we call our wheat year, and that ends on the 31st day of July. Recognizing such a date became necessary when the government took over the handling of the Western wheat crop.

Latest word from Ottawa is that participation in the wheat business will cause a loss of as high as $65,000,000 by reason of having guaranteed a price for wheat which was above that prevailing in the world markets.

Months ago Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, predicted his next budget would show a deficit of $35,000,000.

But this deficit would be for the fiscal year ending the 31st of March, and therefore would not include the $65,000,000 deficit on wheat because the wheat year will not end until the 31st of July.

One can probably appreciate without much effort that years for various purposes may end at different dates, but the practical effect is not so good. It is confusing. When we are informed in the 1939 budget speech that we have a deficit of $35,000,000 that will be the official figure of our shortage, and yet if that $65,000,000 wheat fund shortage turns out to be accurate we will actually have gone in the hole to the extent of $100,000,000, although it will be necessary to wait another year to have the fact officially admitted. It would be better to have that $100,000,000 figure staring us in the face as soon as possible. And better still if our government would then cut its garment according to the cloth it possesses.

Being Married In Jail

Joseph Taylor, 26, had planned to marry Anne Brown, 23, and the wedding was going to take place in the county jail at Cayuga, as Taylor was there waiting to be removed to Kingston, where he will have to serve out a term for shopbreaking. The young lady did make one trip and had with her the necessary papers, but found it was necessary for three days to pass after the granting of the authority. She went home to Toronto and was to have returned but did not, the reason being she had not the necessary funds to make the second trip. Meantime Taylor has been moved to Kingston, and if a wedding is performed there it will require the sanction and consent of the warden and chaplain.

This is not a new situation nor an isolated one. People for years have argued back and forth about such weddings, the contention generally getting down to (1) it is evidence of love and sacrifice on the part of the bride, or (2) it is sentimental nonsense which would cool or disappear upon mature reflection.

We admit it would be evidence of devotion and faith for a young woman of 23 to enter a prison and marry a man who is not coming out for many months, but marriage functions best when there is a degree of common-sense attached to it. The young lady did not make her second trip to the jail at Cayuga because she did not have the money to pay her way. If she had married Taylor he would not have been able to contribute anything to her support because he is and will be in jail. When he comes out he may find it hard enough to get going again as that is the common experience of those who have served time.

The young lady in this case is plainly in a position where for some time to come she will have to look after her own finances. Whether she is working now we do not know, but she probably will have to, and her chances will be better as she is than if she had participated in a wedding ceremony in a jail. If she still wants her man when he is released that will be entirely her own affair. Meantime she'd be well advised to remain single.

They Did It Themselves

Most people when searching for employment depend on some person to provide that employment. We do not believe it is an exaggeration to say that few of us have the ability to plan how to make our own employment, and therefore we depend on our ability to search for it.

That is why it is interesting to find two men engaged in the old business of charcoal burning near Apsley. Two men had been engaged in road-making operations in that district and when that work ceased for the season they needed something else to do.

Nels Hanson, a Swede of 65, was one of them, and he had learned all about charcoal burning in his native Sweden. There is plenty of the needed material in Apsley district, and when it had been collected Hanson was able to supervise and the pits are now in operation. Of even more importance — it looks as thought it were going to be possible to sell all the charcoal produced at Apsley.

Perhaps you contend that does not amount to a great deal, as it affects but two men. But it demonstrates a principle which the Canadian is a trifle slow to recognize—that of starting something himself with the material at hand and providing his own employment.

It Suggests Something

Ald. William Croft of Toronto reports having had a strange experience when he went to the deer country near North Bay. He had a gun license which he pinned on his jacket but he had no license to shoot deer.

The alderman had not done much shooting and went with another gentleman to try his hand at it. He had his gun but the cartridges were on the kitchen table in his summer home. Then it was he met a game warden who wanted to know about his license to shoot deer. The alderman did not possess such a document and the omission cost him $12.75, although he could not have shot a deer if one came and stood in line before him.

That of course is a rather exceptional case, but it might well cause one to ponder. If the same sort of energy were directed toward finding people who go about with revolvers in their pockets for which they have no license then we might be making some progress toward getting rid of the chief strength of the thug—the hidden and illegal gun.

Leave Them Alone

Premier Hepburn says the Ontario government will have no objections to the Dionne children being exhibited at the New York fair next year if their guardians are agreeable.

We do not think much of the proposal for several reasons:

Putting the children on exhibition there would, no matter what the surroundings, be placing them in the class of a side-show exhibition. And they do not belong there.

New York in the summer months is a vastly different place to Northern Ontario, to which climate the children have become accustomed.

The Dionne children form the best attraction Ontario has to offer to tourists from United States. For years they have been coming in thousands, and as business venture it is profitable to this province to keep the tourists doing what they have been doing in the past—driving long distances to see the Dionne quintuplets. Taking them to New York would be cutting off a lot of provincial revenue.

Our idea would be to leave them just where they are and inform the New York promoters to look elsewhere for prize exhibits.

NOTE AND COMMENT

John Queen, seeking a fourth term as Winnipeg's mayor, was almost elected on the first count. Evidently in Winnipeg politics Queen is king.

Man appearing in court at Chatham pleaded guilty to a charge laid against him and asked that he be whipped rather than sent to jail as he had a wife and children to support. Well, why not?

It is said that the average cost of a Christmas dinner in Canada is $6.95, which prompts the thought that it should be possible to accumulate a considerable amount of indigestion for that sum.

Two men in the glass business in Detroit found business dull and hired a couple of chaps to go out and break windows. The thing worked fine until the men had to appear in court and pay one.

Lieut.-Col. George Drew says he welcomes a libel suit which has been launched against him, indicating that the gentleman has a palate tuned slightly different to that of the average individual.

Strange way we have of doing things. Now that Hon. R. B. Bennett has announced his intended departure from Canada a good many politicians of opposing faith have joined in saying what a splendid person he actually is.

They are going ahead with the manufacture of Bren machine guns in England at a rapid rate but the only thing rapid in this country has been the piling up of evidence and exhibits at the inquiry.

Now it is suggested that pedestrians figuring in traffic accidents should be given the blood test to see whether or not they were intoxicated. Still there is nothing on record to show that any drunken pedestrian ever ran over and killed a motorist.

Two sisters who had been separated for fifty years met in Toronto a few days ago. There would be a great deal about which to talk and it might have taken quite a while to arrive at the "Do You Remember When . . ." style of conversation.

Fire in California which destroyed millions of dollars worth of property is said to have been caused by a man dumping live coals from a stove, believing they were dead. At this season of the year it might not be a bad idea for our Ontario people to think this over.

In Taylorville, Ill., 118 business men signed their names to a letter to drunken drivers and had it published in the newspaper. In one place the letter said: "Brother, you're not the big shot you think you are. You're just a fuzzy-brained liquored-up obstinate ass with about as much right to drive as a monkey from the zoo." All of which suggests that if the business men expect to get results from writing letters they might well employ some person who understands that vitriolic expression and exaggerated invective do not produce results.

CHRONIC

(By A. B. K.)

¶ I don't think there's a pain or ache, that doesn't visit Cousin Jake, and bother him a spell; I really can't recall the day, when I have heard my cousin say, that he was feeling well.

¶ Jake's stomach seemed to be upset, no peace he found with things he et, his misery was profound; and when you heard him in his home, why all he did was roar and groan, a most unlovely sound.

¶ Next week his liver got the blame, and life to Jake was dull and lame, and work was tough on him; he chanted words of pointed hate, turned up his nose at things he ate, and found he was too thin.

¶ Jake wiggled too complaining tongue, the trouble then was in his lung, his days were almost past; for he could tell the way he'd feel, that he was slipping at the heel, not very long he'd last.

¶ Jake's heart is poor he's sure of that, and he has pains beneath his hat, he's losing too his sight; and he gets pains around the knees, and lots of times he starts to wheeze, for nothing is quite right.

¶ Three times a day he cleans his plate, for meals my cousin's never late, and he is never sick; if all Jake's ailments go away, he wouldn't waste another day—but finds another quick.

Jews Wandered For Centuries

DURING the last 400 years of persecution the world's Jewish population has increased from 2,000,000 to 15,000,000. In Germany, the seat of the latest outbreaks of anti-Semitism, there were 600,000 Jews when Hitler took over. About 50,000 had escaped up to 1935. Jewish population of Palestine has mounted since the war from close to zero to 300,000-odd. Just now, there are about 4,250,000 Jews in the United States. In Canada there were 155,614 in the census of 1931.

It is still obscure who first oppressed Israel, historians say, but subjugation came to them after the Pharoahs gave them permission to graze their flocks in Egyptian territory.

Biblical tradition holds that they struggled to positions of some wealth and power and became too numerous to suit the ruling Egyptians. The first born of every Jewish family soon was marked for death to keep down the birth rate, and finally the Israelites were driven back across the wilderness, possibly during the reign of Rameses II.

Then followed the bloody conquest of the other tribes of Palestine. Before Jewish ancient history was completed all this ancient land, including Jerusalem, was nominally under their sway. In Jerusalem, the great ancient temple was built. Palestine became the crossroads of the world.

Even though the Jews held local power, they were harrassed by distant kings, Egypt, Babylonia, Greece, Syria, Persia, and finally Rome demanded tribute as the price of peace and freedom to worship. The second persecution of the Jews came from Babylonians, about 500 years before Christ. Many Jews were forced to work like slaves. Others escaped to exile along other Mediterranean shores, to return a half century later under a more benign Persian rule.

Jerusalem was then restored and the Jewish empire rebuilt. But strife cut the advance short. The Syrian, Antiochus, interpreted one civic war as a revolt, moved in his army, reduced Jerusalem, and took advantage of the ancient Jewish rule forbidding fighting on the Sabbath.

About 11,000 Jews allowed themselves to be murdered by the Syrian soldiers. After that the Sabbath ban was removed. The great Judas of pre-Christian times then appeared to reconquer Jerusalem for the Jews and rebuilt the temple.

✧ ✧ ✧

OUTSIDE, the Romans were marching to world conquest and when Pompey and his Roman legions appeared in Damascus, two rival brothers presented their cases to him. He nominated one to rule as a vassal-prince. But, as this did not stop the bloodshed, he captured the city. Some 1,000 Jews perished in the ensuing massacre, and Rome became master of Jerusalem. Within a few years some 30,000 Jews had been enslaved.

Caesar's coming restored peace, but his death was the signal for renewed war of Jew against Jew, until the Roman general, Vespasian, under Nero, destroyed Jerusalem in 65 A.D., amid scenes of unparalleled horror.

ON TO RHINELAND

By this time, the migration of the Jews had become a habit. Colonies flourished in Mesopotamia, Cyprus, Alexandria and by A.D. 400 they were established in Spain and the Rhineland—the same Rhineland where they now have their backs to the wall. Jewish slaves were scattered through the Roman Empire.

The coming of Christianity heralded another era of persecution. The church kept adherents of Judaism out of positions of authority and restricted social intercourse with them. Discrimination degenerated into oppression, Western law became saturated with the idea of Jewish inferiority. A wave of enforced conversions and baptism swept over Europe.

But the mass of Jews went to Germany, Russia, Poland, Turkey and the Ukraine, where they met new persecutions. The massacre of Chmielnik, Poland, in 1648, drove them back into Western and Central Europe.

THIS TIME the Jews stuck in the face of all persecution. Commercial expansion, for which the Jew had a genius, and democracy—implying liberty, equality and fraternity, for all—had come.

Russia alone held out against complete naturalization of the Jews. A great wave of bloody pogroms, or massacres, occurred in that country at Kiev. Terrible persecution followed at Warsaw and Odessa. Anti-Semitic societies felt the Jew was multiplying too fast and achieving too many positions of wealth and influence.

From 1881 to 1914, 3,000,000 Jews fled Central and Eastern Europe, 2,000,000 of them finding a haven in America. Then, during the Great War Britain offset German propaganda among the Jews with the promise to help them get their home in Palestine under the League of Nations mandate. But the Arab also resents the Jew. Thus has been much bloodshed.

To complete the tragedy, the War left great Jewish populations without any nationality—unwanted by both victors and vanquished. Thousands lost their lives in new pogroms. To cap the climax the United States slammed the immigration door in 1924.

NO SUCH THINGS.

(Trenton Courier Advocate)

THERE is no such thing as a "tame" wild animal, and wild animals have no place except in a zoo. Deer will strike and kill. Even the raccoon, probably the cutest and cleanest of pets, will bite the hand that feeds it. There is no such thing as a tame wild animal.

And no wild animal which is penned up probably much against its will as freedom is the very life of these things, can be trusted. Ask any fox breeder if his foxes will bite. He will tell you. And if you will remember back a few years, a wolf at the Soo bit a child. And wolves are the most cowardly animals on the face of this continent and when trapped will whimper with fear at the approach of man.

• Back To the Good Old Days

THOSE GOOD MEN who see in Colonel George Drew the hope of the Conservative party in Ontario, says the Ottawa Journal, will be cheered and encouraged, we imagine, by his summing-up speech in the Bren gun inquiry. There was malediction in the grand manner of the old-fashioned political speech: such fine phrases as "notoriously extravagant", our old friend "ad nauseam", "very grave suspicion", "carefully planned deceit", all leading up to that magnificent peroration:

"It was conceived in sin, born in iniquity and cloaked in fraud."

Many, no doubt, will look forward with eagerness to the clash of words when Col Drew, if he is chosen party leader next month, meets Mr. Hepburn on the hustings. That, if it comes, will be a battle of masters of invective and the resounding phrase. It will be a duel with naked swords and, for Mr. Hepburn, the odd experience of fighting somebody who fights back with the same—or sharper — weapons. Col. Drew's vigorous address to a Royal Commission is only a mild sample, we should imagine, of verbal onslaughts he will make on Mr. Hepburn when the time comes—and as Mr. Hepburn has distinct gifts in the same line a good time should be had by all.

This is the style of oratory that takes us back to the old days when politics was a serious business and a candidate's opponent just naturally was a horse-thief, a scoundrel who probably went about robbing babies' banks and beating up small children. Those were the days of oratorical flights, which were impressive gifts in the hands of the expert but dangerous weapons for the amateur—long ago we heard a candidate declare defiantly and eloquently, over some long-forgotten local issue, that he denied the allegation and defied the alligator.

Political speeches then were frank and earnest performances, with highlights of denunciation that aroused excitement and enthusiasm. Every contest was a battle between the angels and the other fellows. There were no shades and tones, but only black and white. On the one side—the side to which one belonged, of course—were ranged the righteous men, the patriots, the high-minded statesmen guided solely by the public interest; and on the other the poor, miserable, selfish, depraved, iniquitous gang of cut-throats doing the public business, or wanting to do it, for their private gain—men full of schemes, as Colonel Drew said, "conceived in sin, born in iniquity, cloaked in fraud." Some of the old-timers would have paid handsomely for that priceless bit.

Then it was the style to answer rhetoric with rhetoric, charges with graver charges. Now the defence is more subtle. One of Col. Drew's learned friends, Mr. L. A. Forsyth, observed the "obstetrical" note to the Drew peroration and it almost, he said, "makes an old horse like me who ought to know better want to take a gallop in the fields of rhetoric." So he contended the statement was nonsense, that there was "no sinful conception," no iniquitous birth, no fraudulent garments.

Mr. Hepburn, however, is not of the subtle type. He likes a good, slashing battle with lots of crackers and red fire, and the indications are that Col. Drew is just the man to make the party of the second part every battle demands.

• People Become Useful At 40

(Detroit Free Press)

THE IDEA that men and women who have reached the age of 40 are no longer assets in industry is scoffed at by the American Legion re-employment director.

And he cites studies made by the Labor Department, the American Association of Manufacturers and university researchers to show that because of his maturity and greater stability and sense of responsibility, an average worker at 40 years of age is just reaching the prime of his usefulness.

Common sense and industrial experience reach the same conclusion.

A job in which physical brawn and stamina alone are required naturally can be better done by men who have not passed the peak of their physical strength. And yet even here no arbitrary age limit can be set. A man at 60, who has taken care of himself, will be able to stand the physical test better than a man of 40, who has dissipated his strength in riotous living.

There are many jobs in industry, though, where physical strength is a secondary consideration. And it is in these jobs that employers have discovered that men and women over 40 are as valuable as, if not more valuable than, younger persons.

At the age of 40 men and women, if they are worth anything at all, usually have acquired family responsibilities. They are likely, therefore, to be less radical and more loyal. They have experience and maturity of judgment, which come only with years. They cannot be replaced by boys and girls without temporary loss to their employers.

All this is so well known to business men and industrialists that it is rather surprising that it should be felt necessary, at this late date, to tell the country that "useful life begins at 40."

• Dogs Are Rather Clever Things

A MAN in Atlanta, Ga., taught his collie to carry a coin to a nearby bakery to buy himself a biscuit. One day, having no small change, he wrote an order on a piece of paper and gave it to the dog, telling him to take it to the bakery for his usual biscuit. As this was a more convenient procedure, the man continued the practice.

When the baker's bill arrived the dog's master protested that there were many more biscuits on it than he had ordered. While this dispute was going on, the collie came into the store with a blank piece of paper in his mouth. Investigation revealed that whenever the dog had wanted a biscuit, he had picked up a piece of paper and taken it to the bakery. After the first two or three written orders the baker had not bothered to look at the paper which he dog had carried in.

A man who lives in England owns a dog that can count sheep. One day, as a test, he told the dog to go over to a certain field and count the sheep, although he knew there were exactly 25 in the flock.

The animal returned shortly, and the man started to count aloud: "One", and the dog barked; "two", and the dog barked again; "three", and another bark, and so on up to 24. But when he said "25", the dog was silent. Repeating "25" several times brought no response.

Certain the dog was in error, the man nevertheless went over to the field to count his flock. Sure enough there were 25. He returned to his house sadly disappointed in his pet's mathematical ability. But his sadness quickly changed to joy when his young son informed him that while returning from school he had found a ram outside the fence and had put it back with the rest of the flock. From that day on the man never questioned his dog's ability to count.

MAKE AN OFFER.

A COLORED PREACHER in Kentucky was delivering a lecture with the title, "I Am Worth a Million," and he went on to say: "This arm is worth $100,000. This leg is worth another hundred thousand. My dear wife is worth a million."

Then a bright idea struck him. Pointing to a man in the audience he asked, "Brother, what is your wife worth to you?" Now this man was, what in the south is called a "sour puss" and his wife sitting beside him looked as if she had been weaned on sour pickles. The couple had just had a row before they came to the meeting and the trouble wasn't yet over. The preacher repeated his question. "Brother what is your wife worth?" The man arose slowly. "Make me an offer," he said.

Framers Of Versailles Treaty Blamed By Forum Speaker For Present European Troubles

Premier Chamberlain was not to blame for the crisis that developed recently in Europe, it can be laid at the feet of the statesmen who framed the Versailles treaty and to British diplomats of former years, Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M.C., and second in command of the Prince of Wales Rangers told the Open Forum Sunday afternoon. Major Hicks-Lyne spoke on "Canada's need for adequate defences" and in the course of his remarks lauded Chamberlain for the way he handled the situation which culminated in the Munich Pact.

The speaker was introduced by Lt. Col. J. Dewart. He sketched Major Hicks-Lyne's military career which he described as brilliant and related that the speaker had been severely wounded at the Front and was awarded the Military Cross for bravery. He also obtained his rank of Major on the field, and on returning to Toronto assisted in organizing the Toronto Scottish. "Major Hicks-Lyne is typical of those thousands of young men who left England, and carried the fine ideals of the British Empire to all corners of the world." He lauded his colleague for the keen and active interest which he took in all city affairs and activities aimed at the general welfare of the community and its people.

God Used Force.

Major Hicks-Lyne prefaced his talk with the statement that the Church is the basis of our civilization and the matter under discussion is in keeping with the church's teaching in that its aim was the preservation of our democratic institutions. "Some may contend that it is unlawful to use force, but the answer is that God saw no fault in the soldier's profession and He used force to clear the money changers from the temple. The Christian can be a good soldier and the soldier a good christian."

"In 1913 learned men said war was a thing of the past, but in 1914 we had the explosion. Since 1926 when Britain started to disarm the world has seen five major conflicts, and the last 10 years has brought nothing but war. During that time it is estimated that directly and indirectly five million people have died from the wars in Spain, Ethiopia, China and in other countries."

"I don't think we can look to the League of Nations as something that will stem the tide of land hungry nations. It is a frightful commentary when you consider that force is the only language which the dictators of the world understand.

No Time to Disarm.

We must be realists. The last 10 years and conditions today have taught us that moral suasion is a poor brand of security. Today we enjoy a life of freedom, a normal happy existence, but there is the great danger of taking too much for granted.

Rev. Robert Laird in a recent address said the Japs might just as easily have attacked Canada as China. Canada is a marvellous prize for any of the overpopulated mid European countries with their tremendous armies. It is a known fact too that the dangerous isms which originated on the continent are making insidious gains in the Latin nations of the continent and to the south.

It is a tragic thing to say but peace seeking nations realize it is not time to disarm.

Canada by virtue of the Westminister statute has a clear cut responsibility in the matter of defences. It is also well to remember that whether you or I wish to go to war, Canada and the Empire would be drawn into it if Britain were to become involved in conflict.

Pacifist Is Right.

The ideal of the pacifist is correct, no man wants to fight unless it is necessary, but I feel that the majority of thinking Canadians realize the need for adequate defences in our own country. It is true that their is a glaring lack of defences at the present time. The public is not to blame, rather they are not properly informed.

We are rather a long piece from Europe but that is changing with the rapid advancement in modern transportation. To illustrate the change of opinion in the United States on the question of defence, Major Hicks-Lyne quoted a statement made recently by Senator Norris who has been recognized for years as an extreme pacifist and one who opposing the entry of the States into the World War. This man now not only approves but urges building of the United States fighting forces to the point where they would be on a par with Japan, Italy and Germany.

Canada's Outlay.

The speaker gave defence costs of other countries to show where Canada stood on the list. The figures are the latest official statistics available and are for the years 1935-36 and give the per capita cost for armaments in each country. Great Britain, $14.14; South Africa, $4.53; Australia, $4.37; New Zealand, $2.38; Canada, $1.41; Brazil, $1.31; Peru, $1.32; Mexico, $11.3; U.S.A., $7.11.

This year Canada's per capita cost will be about $3.15 while Great Britain's will have jumped to between $34 to $38. Canada's total appropriation for defences was $34,000,000 but if Canada was a part of the United States and paying their ration of costs, it would amount to 124 millions, if paying at the same rate as Great Britain it would be 344 millions.

Conscription Repugnant.

Conscription is repugnant to the Anglo-Saxon mind. It has been voted down in parliament but I sometimes wonder if there is not danger walking hand in hand with voluntary enlistment.

The armies of the democratic nations are small. Great Britain has a total army of 550,000 of which 200,000 are regulars. The United States has 474,000. Of these 166,000 are permanent force and the remainder are in the National Guard. In comparison the continental nations have tremendous nations. Russian has 19 million soldiers, Italy over six millions, Germany and Japan both over three millions. In addition to these armies we must remember there is a tremendous man power behind them, trained men who could be called up because compulsory military training exists.

Our Guns Old Fashioned.

In 1913-14 Canada trained 55,000 men over a 9-day period, at a cost of $2,029,000. In 1936-37 we train a little over 24,000 at a cost of $1,600,000. In Canada today we have a permanent force of 4,000 all ranks. In our navy there are 1,300, all ratings backed up by a Royal Naval Reserve of 1100. When the present ship building plan is complete, Canada will have six destroyers and 5 mine sweepers.

Our guns are the same as in the last war with the addition of a few anti-aircraft guns which are fast becoming old fashioned.

The non permanent force of active militia has been sadly neglected. The men are spending their time and money from a sense of duty, and I must stress the fact that the citizen soldier in Canada represents 92 per cent of the Canadian army.

Canada is the fourth trading nation in the world and I must say that we hardly realize how fortunate we are that Britain maintains a large navy to protect the trade routes".

J. E. Smith voiced the thanks of the audience for the splendid address and Charles Elliott, president of George Street Forum conveyed the thanks to the speaker.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, November 29

A VERY lively and propitious state of affairs is predicted by the predominant stellar operations. There is a sign of much gainful activity in business, with the assured co-operation of those in places of power and standing, who may demonstrate their friendly interest with substantial generosity. This is bound to expand the financial status and enhance personal popularity and prestige. But discretion in all private correspondence and other relations is enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a very properous and interesting year, with business increased and personal prestige and popularity definitely enchanced. Influential persons figure in this, with promotion, friendly personal interest or financial co-operation. But discretion is enjoined, especially in writings and intimate contacts, as dangers lurk.

A child born on this day may be talented, progressive and ambitious, and with its large ideas, expansive objectives and pleasant disposition, it is assured notable success.

ROMANCE ING

BY OREN ARNOLD

—WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION—

READ THIS FRIST:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley, ungepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him....then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Gurley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displeases Towne; but Bob accepts it gracefully. Sara Sue finds her affairs growing complicated, but feels much better after confiding her troubles to a close friend, Roxy Powell. At a meeting of the college faculty, it is evident that Sara Sue Davis, Inc., is playing a prominent part in campus life.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER 11

DR. THORNTON HOLGATE had meant exactly what he said when he called on Sara Sue Davis, Incorporated. Truly, love had come to him. Or so he felt. When he had left her cottage late that night, Sara Sue had promised sincerely to help him all she could in his campaign to win Peaches Pomeroy.

Now, therefore, he was back in her private office for more definite advice, and Sara Sue was giving it to him.

"You say that you are backward, Dr. Holgate. I imagine you are just unnecessarily shy. So, I am ordering you to go to the freshman ball, mingle with the crowd, dance with the prettiest—"

"But, my dear Mrs. Davis, I do not dance!"

Sara Sue smiled.

"That's history, Dr. Holgate. Hereafter you definitely do dance. You are, in fact, going downtown to a dancing academy at once, and take a course of quick private lessons."

"But—um. Very well, madam." His expression was that of a martyr.

"If you will permit it, the learning process will be fun."

"I hope it will be!"

Sara Sue laughed outright. "No!" On the contrary, Dr. Holgate, just let it be, can't you? You can't force pleasure. Just relax. Be yourself. Be more—er—undignified. You see what I mean? Pick the prettiest girl and take her to the freshman ball. Dance just the simplest slide-slide steps, it won't matter. Nobody cares. But smile. Laugh. Talk. Tease the girls. Anything."

Oh! Oh, my!"

She repressed her laughter this time. Not that she was laughing at him derisively, but because he was honestly amusing in his naivete.

"First, though, I have some other instructions. They will be a little easier, although they are very personal, Dr. Holgate."

"I am not easily offended, I am proud to say."

"That's fine! Proof that you can be popular, if you will. Now listen—I have studied you very carefully, analyzed you thoroughly. You have needed a sister or two, I fear, so you must obey me implicitly. Remember, you are under contract to accept my services!"

He managed a polite smile at that himself. And he nodded eagerly.

"Frist, then, discard this suit. The trousers are out of style. The cut of the coat is—last year's. Go to any man's shop and get a snappy outfit, Dr. Holgate."

"Thank you. I shall."

"Get some fashionable shirts, ties, sox and oxfords—goodness, young men do not wear high-top shoes, Dr. Holgate!"

"But I am of the faculty, madam, and have been—"

"Hush! You may be all that, but you are human ,too. Mind me now, get smart new oxfords, and another pair of lighter ones for dancing, too. Stick a gay hanky in your coat pocket, snap your hat brim down, and come to see me again. That's the assignment for today. Good-by."

She took a certain pleasure in handling the interview as a teacher would. Actually customer No. 100 was proving to be a lot of fun.

Dr. Holgate let no grass grow under his feet. As soon as classroom requirements permitted, he hastened downtown on a shopping tour.

He purchased three suits, donned one of them in the store. The clerk told him, truthfully, that he had a very good figure. "I have loved to swim," Dr. Holgate explained. "It is strengthening, invigorating, and it permits one to engage in meditation undisturbed."

The rather heavy purchase caused the salesman to take a hearty interest in him, so that the professor was fitted in really tasteful details. He emerged from the store looking something like a male model. But he insisted on carrying his two extra suits, boxed under his arm.

He wanted to show these to Sara Sue, and so he went directly to her cottage. That was at 5 p. m., however, and a crowd was there, so he tried to back out the door and go away.

"Dr. Holgate!" Sara Sue spied him.

She dragged him back into the entrance hall. "Won-der-ful!" she complimented, whispering. "Leave the parcels here, now, and come on in and mingle with the bunch."

He beamed, and he blushed, but he had no chance whatsoever to hold back or say no. All at once he was in a crowd, and the collegians were singing. In his new outfit, Sara Sue was quick to observe, he was more presentable than any of them. He stood near the group, staring.

"Get in it," Sara Sue murmured in his ear, smiling. "Laugh, talk, anything. Do you sing?

"I do, yes! In fact, I have done some choral work, in Massachusetts. Twice in the Presbyterian choir I was asked to sing solos, but I—"

That was enough for Sara Sue. She was determined to break the professor's shell if it cost a life. She interrupted the gang and addressed them.

"Listen, fellows," she said gaily, "do you know we have a real singer here? Sure enough! Thornton Holgate has agreed to do a solo. What'll it be, Thorny?"

He gazed at her in consternation.

Thorny! No one had called him that since he was a high school student! And whatever could he sing that would appeal to these students?

He swallowed hard, twice. Sara Sue took pity on him.

"How about something we can all join in on a chorus?" she suggested sweetly. "Not your classical pieces, but—can you do "Home On the Range'?"

A chorus of approval answered her. The gang all knew it, of course. All liked it. Automatically the pianist, a junior girl, began playing the accompaniment.

Sara Sue poked Dr. Holgate in the back, not too gently, and shoved him near the piano. He was quite flushed, but nobody noticed. Like a novice about to take his first parachute drop, he cleared his throat and pitched in—"O give us a home, where the buffalo roam—"

The crowd listened — with increasing respect. He faltered a trifle at first, but he got into the swing of it rapidly. By the time they had joined him in the first chorus and he had moved into the second stanza, self-assurance had returned.

He caught the zest of singing now and boomed out with a really good baritone.

"Yip-pee, ride 'em cowboy!" some youngster shouted, and the chorus came again.

He leaned over the pianist then, to read the words of the third and fourth stanzas. Quite naturally and matter?of-factly a couple of fellows put their arms over his shoulders and joined him. The harmony was good. Something in him tightened for a second at their contact, but at once he relaxed and sang even better. When it was done he laughed, quite spontaneously, then looked hastily at Sara Sue. She winked at him, and nodded.

"What did she say your name was? Holgate?" a student asked.

"Ah—yes. Holgate. Thornton Holgate."

"Hadn't met you, Mine's Wilson. Glad to know you, Thorny." The lad extended a hand. "Thought I knew all the seniors. You must be a transfer, or a post-grad?"

"I—ah—yes. I am new here." Dr. Holgate stammered, shaking hands. "Thank you. Thank you, indeed. It is a pleasure to meet you, ah—Wils."

"Spike's the nickname," Spike grinned, friendly. "Well, come on, let's raid Sara Sue's kitchen. Ought to be some nourishment out here."

When they drifted back to the big living room, however, the pianist began banging an irresistible dance rhythm. The girl nearest Dr. Holgate instantly started swaying her shoulders and body and humming a little, and in quite natural, routine manner moved in front of him and put her arm around him, waiting for him to dance away with her. Three other couples glided off in that instant, too.

Dr. Holgate's mouth dropped open.

He had never danced in his life. He had this afternoon shared a brief dance companionship more precious than anything he had ever known before, and he wouldn't have broken its spell for a billion dollars and ten years of his life. But he didn't even know how to grasp the girl.

A terrifying, choking sensation swelled within him.

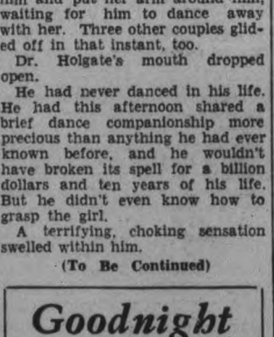
Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Mother and the two children—and, of course, Knarf and Hanid, who were the two children's shadows—had come into town to have lunch with father.

They went into the office building, which was big and crowded with people hurrying in an out. Mother had the children by the hand. Finally they all stopped in front of a big door. It wasn't a regular door. It was tall and separated in two parts down the middle.

"Is this the door to father's office?" Knarf whispered to Hanid. The children didn't hear him. Shadows can't ever be heard when they speak.



"It goes up and down."

"No. This is the elevator," Hanid answered.

"Elevator? What's that?"

Like a Room.

"It's like a little room. It goes up and down. Father's office is on the fifteenth floor of this building. If there wasn't an elevator to take us up, we'd have to walk up."

At that moment the elevator door opened. Sure enough, it was just like a little room, for there were walls, a floor and a ceiling. There was also a man in it, dressed in a blue uniform.

"He looks like a soldier," Knarf whispered again. "Is that what he is?"

Hanid shook her head. "He's the man who makes the elevator go up and down. Hurry—we're going in."

Mother started in with the two children, and Hanid and Knarf hurried after them. The moment they were all in the man in the uniform shut the door. Then he pushed down a handle and up went the elevator.

"O-oh! This is wonderful!" Knarf exclaimed. "I hope it never stops."

"But it has to stop. We'd never get to father's office if it didn't stop!"

He Likes It.

"I like it here. It's just like a regular room only it goes up. I'm going to live here. I'm going to ask that man to let me. He won't mind." Then Knarf started shouting: "Mr. Elevator Man, will you let me live here? I won't take up much room. I won't make any noise. Please let me live here."

"Knarf, you're silly."

But all the elevator man said was: "Fifteenth floor!" Then he opened the door and mother and the two children and Hanid went out. Oh! did Knarf stay? No, he had to go out, too, for a shadow must go where his master or mistress goes. Poor Knarf!

Held For Murder

Eight years ago Antonio Godon, ABOVE, was a crown witness when a member of a religious order was charged with the murder of eight-year-old Simone Caron in Montreal. The accused man was convicted of the brutal crime and then freed by a court of appeal, and now Godon has been arrested on the same charge following a secret police investigation.

Five Years HAVE MADE Sales History

DURING this period, the London Life has found methods of determining a man's fitness for the life insurance business before accepting him as a representative. A rating chart developed as the result of extensive research has eliminated guesswork as to men's abilities.

The days of engaging those who want to try life insurance selling are a thing of the past. We accept only those who we believe aim to make the business a lifelong career and who rate high in the necessary qualifications for success.

There has been an improvement of 35% in the average production of London Life representatives in the past five years. This record applies to an organization of 1,130 persons.

Two facts, (1) the high calibre of London Life representatives, and (2) the low net cost to policyholders of its insurance, constitute good reasons to select this Company for your next life insurance.

Price Of Eggs Declines Farmers' Market

A drop of about twelve cents last week in the recent prices of eggs was reflected by a sharp recession on the farmers' market here Saturday. Two weeks or so ago the first grades were quoted at 48 cents; but at the week end the top price was 38 cents, the range was from 30 cents up, and most of the sales seemed to be from 35 to 38 cents.

With the clipping of the wings of egg prices, potatoes marking time and the poultry plentiful, the market dropped into the groove and ran along to the end of the morning as if it had the notion to ease off with the approach of noon hour. After 11.30 o'clock you could buy some chickens as low as 15 cents a pound. However, that was not the average for the day.

A sprinkle of snow was final evidence that winter was moving in on the market to make selling uncomfortable. Several of the outside regulars took themselves to the indoors, and several of the producers adopted the covered wagon mode of individualism. Rollie Dixon of Otonabee had a top on his truck, a light affair with an oil stove that afforded considerable protection against the weather.

Buyers had no inclination to linger between the outdoor rows on Saturday. Some of the apple growers were missing, but on the whole the attendance was quite satisfactory. More fresh meat was offered than at any other time since about last March. The prices were generally 13 and 15 cents a pound for front and hind quarters.

Potatoes were quoted at 25 cents a peck, and from $1.10 to $1.25 a bag. An unusual incident and an authentic one was experience of a buyer who paid $1.15 to a potato grower, and when the bag was delivered this grower collected another $1.15, that meant $2.30 for one bag of potatoes. Probably that farmer forgot the collection of the $1.15 on the market. At any rate he is being given the benefit of a doubt for the next week or two, because his name and the township he comes from was written on a card on the bag. In the first reaction that episode did not leave a favorable impression, and it suggested the idea that the best practice may be to pay for goods only on delivery.

Butter Averaged 23c

Butter prices for the morning ranged from 21 to 25 cents, with quite a supply being offered at 23 cents. Dairy farmers would probably envy the price butter is selling for in Russia, $1.50 a pound. From all accounts the planned economy of the Soviets seems to have neglected the manufacture of butter, and even if it is scarce that condition will hardly worry those who are depending on an average wage equivalent to $18 to $20 a month. Ontario butter should be on the way up during these months of declining lactation, but it can't jump over the warehouses bulging with accumulated stocks. At 11.30 o'clock the general price was 23 cents.

Fresh lamb was 15 and 20 cents a pound, for front and hind quarters; respectively. Turkeys were more numerous at 27 cents to 30 cents the pound; geese 20 to 22 cents, and prices of chickens extended from 15 cents to 25 cents.

The market seemed to be oversupplied with poultry. Ducks were 20 to 22 cents, and the average price of chickens after 11 o'clock was around 20 cents a pound.

Banana Apples

Run of the market prices in other commodities were: Snow apples 35 cents a peck; McIntosh Reds 40 cents; Russets, 40c; Talman Sweets, 40c; Spies, 35 to 40c; Pippins, 30 to 40c; and winter Banana apples, for both eating and cooking, $1.25 a hamper.

Turnips 3 for 10 cents or 50 cents a bushel; cabbages 6 for 25 cents; parsnips 60 cents a bushel; cauliflowers from 5 to 20 cents each; onions $1 a bushel; carrots 50 cents a bushel; another dealer's parsnips $1 a bushel. No broccoli and no spinach from local gardens.

of them in Quebec. Accompanied by Mr. Wright, the new general secretary, Mr. Challies said he started for the west on Otcober 21, called on some of the engineering associations in Detroit, Chicago, Seattle and Los Angeles on his homebound itinerary south of the border, but otherwise spent all his time in conference with E.I.C. groups from Port Arthur to Vancouver. Mr. Challies unfolded his travelogue at an easy going pedestrian pace, and with sustained interest, in shocking contrast with a subsequent explosive interlude staged by the local junior branch who gave a vivid impression of what the blasting of the Club house from its foundations might be like. However, it was only a noisy prank with a cue from the dining room by Hubert Sills in a little monologue about push buttons.

Control of electricity, revolutionizing man's mode of life, was directed by push buttons, from turning on lights to launching great ships, opening of bridges and generally getting all big events under way. And as the visit of the E.I.C. council was a big event locally, Mr. Sills said, it should be graced with a push button's magic. Accordingly he handed Mr. Fanjoy a gadget, and requested him to push the button. Immediately the lights went out and the playful juniors loosed their thunderbolts.

Mr. Challies paid a graceful tribute to A. J. Grant, to whom he referred as "The Chief," the man who would go down in the history of the engineering profession of this country for the completion of the Welland canal.

"We all feel complimented that the Chief came down from St. Catharines to be present with us, and we feel very grateful to him," Mr. Challies said. His address was a recital of the recent progress of unifying and co-ordinating the engineering profession, putting it on a sound licensed basis as the medical profession has done for the protection of the public.

Mr. Challies added that he wished to avoid politics, but he desired to express appreciation of the engineering body to Premier Hepburn for appointing "an engineer like Tommy Hogg as chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of this province. That act washed out all the feeling of resentment we had over the cancellation of the power contracts. We know the Hydro Commission is going strong with one of the great men of our profession at the head of it."

Mr. Wright, the three Vice-Presidents, and several others of the visitors, spoke briefly. J. J. Duffus, M.P., a guest of the local branch, extended a welcome to the distinguished visitors "to the best of the smaller cities in Canada," and the evening concluded with a broad skit entitled with more or less appositeness "The War of the World" by Artesian Wells by four of the juniors who know all about high voltage, Jack Watts, Al Drynan, Bill McMullen and John Whitbeck.

30 Years On Coast For One Operator

FLAT ISLANDS, Labrador, Nov. 28 (CP)—When the Labrador's "Old Man of Wireless" goes home to Brigus in Newfoundland this fall, he will have completed his 30th season as a summer radio operator in the north.

John Donovan is 70 years old and he has had a trick at almost every wireless key on the Labrador. Still active, and a good sender and receiver, he is one of the oldest men in the employ of the Marconi service.

Held In $250,000 Swindle

Marmora Reeve, Council Returned But Election On In Township

MARMORA, Nov. 28.—Last year's Reeve and Council of Marmora Village have been accorded acclamation, the two new nominees for the Council, Clayton Potts and Lewis Phillips, failing to qualify. The Reeve was unopposed.

The Council for 1939 will be:

Reeve, W. R. Linn. Councillors—T R. Warren, W. A. Sanderson, H. B. Smith, and R. E. Neal.

Fight in Township.

Marmora and Lake Township for the second successive year will have an election with practically two contestants for each seat. Polling will take place on Monday, December 5. One nominee for a seat on the Council, Joseph Shannon, did not qualify.

The candidates are:

For Reeve—John A. Bell, retiring Reeve, Lindsay E. Neal, former Reeve. For Council—W. J. Pack. C. Kelly, A. Tompkins, J. Davidson (last year's Councillors), I. McCoy, W. Hamilton, and B. Inkster.

Find Flying Boat Wrecked

LONDON, Nov. 28.—(AP).— Imperial Airways to-day announced the flying boat Calpurnia had been found wrecked in Lake Ramadi, Iraq, with one of the crew dead, three missing and two injured.

A searching party recovered the body of Wireless Operator B. B. Rees and gave first aid to Steward D. E. Anderson and Station Officer Harrison, who were injured.

Pilot Captain E. H. Attwood, First Officer A. N. Spottiswoode and Flight Clerk F. G. Ubee were missing.

A Royal Air Force rescue party sent news of finding the plane to the air base at Habbaniyah, about 15 miles distant. The plane was found smashed in eight feet of water.

The Calpurnia left Southampton Nov. 25 with mail and cargo for India. After hopping from Tiberius, on the Sea of Galilee, yesterday, the plane was last reported at 6.32 p.m. Sunday nearing Lake Habbaniyah.

Friday when he went into the bush to cut wood.

The body of James Shafe, 53, was found Saturday in the bush near his home at Quadeville, 20 miles south of Eganville in Eastern Ontario. A rifle was found beside the body and the head was pierced by a bullet.

Mystery veiled the death yesterday of a man believed to be Alex Belanger or Baker, 45, of Warren. Police reported his body was found on the road between Westreet, northwest of Sudbury, and Shining Tree. The head was badly battered and a shoulder was broken. Police were unable to determine immediately whether he was the victim of foul play.

Walter Hands died in a train that was rushing him to hospital after his neck was fractured when he fell between the wheels and frame of a tractor he was using near McKirdy, 100 miles east of Port Arthur. The accident happened Friday.

Lad Missed in Smoke

PEMBROKE, Ont., Nov. 28—(CP).—An inquest may be opened today into the death of five-year-old Allan Garetto, who was suffocated in a fire which partially destroyed his parents' home here yesterday.

Samuel Garetto, father of the boy, was in hospital with a fractured rib and right shoulder, suffered when he jumped from a bedroom window after an unsuccessful search for his son.

Garetto and the boy, the only ones in the house at the time, were sleeping on a bed in an upstairs room when the father awoke to find the room in flames.

Garetto told Fire Chief R. P. Dey he was unable to find his son in the smoke-filled room and thought he was downstairs but could not get through the flames to the stairway. He smashed a window and jumped to a verandah below, being knocked unconscious by the fall.

The body of Allan was found in the room from which his father jumped to safety. It was found lying within 10 feet of the window where Garetto escaped.

Jury Urges Closer Plane Checkup After Regina Fatal Crash

REGINA, Nov. 28 — (CP). — More rigid inspection of trans-Canada Airlines planes and more accurate records of both plane and crews during the Regina stopover were recommended by a coroner's jury investigating deaths of Capt. David Imrie, 28, and first officer Jack Herald, 29, killed when a T.C.A. plane crashed and burned near Regina Nov. 18.

A verdict of accidental death from injuries received in the crash, cause of which is yet unknown, was returned last night by the jury which heard 11 witnesses and deliberated 25 minutes.

Dr. Maurice Powers, director of the scientific laboratory at Royal Canadian Mounted Police headquarters, who performed autopsies on both men, testified death in both cashes was due to crushing wounds in the chest and that he believed death in both cases was instantaneous.

Examination of blood specimens showed no carbon monoxide content, Dr. Powers said, indicating the men had not died by fire.

The verdict said:

"We find that David Imrie and Jack Herald came to their deaths at or about 1:10 a.m. Friday, Nov. 18, at a point approximately two miles west of the Regina Municipal Airport through injuries received in an airplane crash, the cause of which is unknown to us.

Better Records Kept

"We would recommend a more rigid inspection and accurate records kept of both machine and personnel upon arrival and departure of aircraft at this airport."

The recommendation in regard to the plane's crew arose from questions by the jury in regard to physical condition of the two victims. Airport and T.C.A. men on duty that night testified both appeared in excellent health and spirits, and that both were known as exceptionally thorough and careful in their work. The jury felt some record of physical fitness should be kept at Regina.

Elphick had charge of the police investigation.

He produced as exhibits bits of clothing, one burned shoe worn by Imrie, a shirt collar bearing the initials "J.H.," a leather wallet containing $13, and other items.

William Kerr, automobile salesman and eye-witness of the tragedy, testified he saw the plane take off and pass "very very close to the fence" on the west boundary of the port.

The ship didn't appear to rise as high as other planes of the same type he had watched take off, Kerr said, and he told of getting out of the car to watch its progress west.

Kerr thought the motors sounded "as if they lacked pep." Withers also said he thought the motors sounded as if they lacked "pep." He said he had long experience with internal combustion engines.

New Candid Camera Field Opens, —In Operations

Pittsburgh, Nov. 26 (AP) THE PERSON who likes to talk about "my operation" may soon be delivering illustrated lectures. A new instrument perfected by Westinghouse engineers permits the diagnostic physician to take candid camera shots of patient's inner organs in "photo finish" speed style. The ton and one-half machine, explained F. M. Hoben, Westinghouse official, is designed to combine the processes of fluroscopy (looking inside a person without taking pictures for the record) and radiography.

Mind Of Child 8 Says Experts Of Mrs. Kenny

TORONTO, Nov. 28—(CP).—Mrs. Matthew Kenny, Charles Vance Millar "baby derby" consolation prize-winner, was described in court Friday as a mental defective of the moron category, with the mental age of a child of eight years and 10 months.

Mrs. Kenny, facing a charge of being mentally defective, heard public health nurses and welfare officials tell Magistrate John L. Prentice they had observed examples of strange behavior on the part of Mrs. Kenny during a period of years.

Three psychiatrists said they had examined Mrs. Kenny while she was under observation in psychiatric hospital, following hearing of an arson charge laid after the Kenny home was razed by fire last month.

They found Mrs. Kenny to be "very immature, inclined to weep frequently, although her grief was very superficial." They swore she was so mentally defective that she should be placed in a hospital for care and protection.

Defence Counsel I. E. Weldon said at conclusion of the hearing that Mrs. Kenny would be called to testify in her defence when hearing is resumed Monday.

IT'S THE GRANDEST SOAP I EVER USED—A LITTLE GIVES OODLES OF LONGER-LASTING SUDS. A 10-MINUTE SOAKING LOOSENS ALL DIRT—SAVES HARD SCRUBBING. CLOTHES COME OUT THE WHITEST WHITE

ALL over the country women are discovering that, cup for cup, the New Rinso gives over 25% more suds than the old. Even in hard water, these richer suds last nearly a third longer than ordinary suds.

Most important of all, these active suds soak clothes at least 3 shades whiter than ordinary soaps do — and get colours much brighter with perfect safety.

Clothes last longer

In tub washing, Rinso's energetic suds soak out dirt in as little as 10 minutes. Yet you can soak your clothes in Rinso suds for an hour—or overnight, if you wish—and be certain that everything is safe. This gentle "no-scrub" way to wash clothes makes them last 2 or 3 times longer.

Rinso is recommended by the makers of 26 famous Canadian washers. It's grand for dishes and all cleaning. Its creamy suds soak off grease in a twinkle. Dishes, pots and pans come sparkling clean without a trace of greasy film on them. The New Rinso is kind as ever to hands. Try it!

TUNE IN "BIG SISTER" Rinso's famous dramatic daytime show featuring Alice Frost and Martin Gabel. Every Monday through Friday over C.B.C. Network. See your local paper for time and station.

11,000 Animals Valued At $5,000,000 Entered In Chicago Show

CHICAGO, Nov. 28 — (AP). — Groomed to perfection, more than 11,000 animals bidding for admission to the top layer of livestock's aristocracy awaited today the call to the judging arenas at the International Livestock Exposition.

They were sent to the international amphitheatre from five Canadian provinces as well as from 33 states. The exposition, 39th renewal of agriculture's biggest show, formally opens tomorrow and runs eight days.

The cash value of the show cattle, sheep, swine and horses was estimated at $5,000,000. Their owners, and other competitors, seek shares of $100,000 in cash prizes in addition opened Sunday and runs eight days.

Forty-one nations were represented in the International hay and grain show held in conjuction with the livestock exposition. Most of them submitted samples of wheat. Bolivia, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Peru, and Santo Domingo pitted their corn against the best of the Canadian and United States crop.

From farms in 45 states, Canada, Hawaii and Puerto Rico came the vanguard of 1,200 boys and girls to compete in the 17th annual 4-H club congress. Representing the pick of 1,200,000 members in the youth organization, they came to show their prowess at cooking, canning, and other home making pursuits.

Teams from 22 states competed in the non-collegiate livestock judging contests at the informal opening of the show today.

Time was when life insurance was considered "a man's affair"—now it's a women's affair, too.

If you are a woman in business, with a parent, brother or sister depending on you, there is an Imperial Life policy designed to help you.

Or if your ambition is to have an independent income to provide leisure and happiness in your later years, the Imperial Life will help you as it has many others to achieve that purpose.

As a matter of fact, building for a permanent income isn't any more complicated than buying a car or fur coat. You save for it by instalments, year by year, then receive a regular income beginning at the time you want it, and continuing as long as you live.

If financial SECURITY for yourself and your dependents means a thing to you, you'll be happier when you have an Imperial Life policy. There are many different Imperial policies to suit various needs. Have a talk with an Imperial Life representative soon.

LIGHTS ARE UP

Workmen of the Utilities Commission completed the task of stringing the wires of colored lights at the main intersections today. This is a further indication that each day brings Christmas closer, and already merchants report the buying has started.

ANOTHER EX-MOUNTIE

An employee in the C.G.E. Company reported today that Walton Quesnel, an employee in the same factory for several years was at one time in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police force which brings the total number of ex-mounties in the city up to seven.

SPORTING A SHINER

One of this city's well known business women came to her place of business this morning with one of her eyes blackened. The "shiner" may have been caused by a severe blow on the cheek rather than the eye itself as the discoloration extended well below the eye.

PLEAD GUILTY.

Entering written pleas of guilty to illegal consumption of liquor, five people who were "found in" when the premises of Arthur King were raided on Sunday, November 21, were fined $10 and 75 cents costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning. They were Mr. and Mrs. Orvil Carstead of Toronto, Bert Lee, S. Calladine, Jr., and William Godfrey.

SKI CLUB STARTS PROGRAM

Twelve members of the Peterborough Ski Club were busy at Bethany Sunday, laying out and improving ski trails in that district. Final work on the downhill and slalom runs was completed and these runs will be used for the Ontario ski championships to be held at Peterborough this winter. All of the jumping will be done at the Nassau ski jump, but the Nassau hill is not suitable for the other events.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

A Trenton man who pleaded guilty in police court this morning to a charge of stealing a spray pump and a number of automobile parts from Charles Petherick, Belmont township, last April, was allowed to go, on the Crown's suggestion, on suspended sentence. Acting Crown Attorney, F. D. Kerr, K.C., stated that the articles stolen had been left out in the open and were in bad condition and the accused said he thought the stuff had been abandoned.

VICTORY OVER EVIL

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientist, Peterborough, on Sunday. The Golden Text was "If God be for us, who can be against us?" (Romans 8:31). Selections from the Bible included the following from Romans 12:21: "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook included the following: "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good. Know theyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil."

St. James' Brothers Go To Plainville

The Brotherhood of St. James' United Church journeyed to Painsville United church on Sunday afternoon to conduct divine service.

Rev. F. W. Craik addressed the gathering with a moving sermon based on "In His Steps." A duet was sung by H. Turner and H. Lee, "Come Unto Me." The congregational singing of "Softly and Tenderly," preceded the benediction, pronounced by Rev. H. A. Mellow. Ashton Fife very ably accompanied at the organ.

After the service, felicitations were exchanged by M. Drysdale, president of the Brotherhood and W. Cole, prayer leader of the Plainsville Men's Association and the ladies of the church served a hot supper for the visitors, who thoroughly enjoyed it.

The Perilous Age

LONDON (CP)—The labor ministry's memorandum on pensions for unmarried women at 55, pointed out 45 is the perilous age for women workers as "age brings with it a dimunition of capacity and loss of qualifications."

Tangle Of Tax Arrears Before Court

Is a tax collector's certificate, declaring that an aldermanic candidate's taxes have been paid as a necessary qualification for his candidature, a valid receipts for those taxes?

This question was involved in an action brought by the city against Emmet F. Sheehy before Judge Smoke this morning, claiming from the defendant as tenant and the Toronto Savings and Loan Company as owner, $480.65 taxes for the years 1935, 1936 and 1937, and $140.93 business taxes said to be owned by Mr. Sheehy for 1936 and 1937.

The trial was the outcome of a controversy between Mr. Sheehy and the city council of the last three years. From the evidence this morning it apparently began in December 1934 when Mr. Sheehy was nominated for aldermanic office. He obtained a certificate from C. E. Curtis, tax collector at that time. In the following December he was again nominated, and on applying to Frank Adams, former city treasurer, it was found that a sum was owing by the defendant which, it is said, he paid under protest.

W. F. Huycke, K.C., city solicitor, represented the municipality in the action, Mr. Sheehy conducted his own case, and B. D. Hall appeared for the Toronto Savings and Loan Company.

E. A. Outram, assistant city clerk was the first witness called by Mr. Huycke. It transpired in later evidence that Mr. Sheehy contended he should receive credit for a sum which he felt was being compelled to pay twice.

Certificates Produced.

Mr. Outram presented two certificates given to Mr. Sheehy at the time of the municipal nominations in December, 1934, and December, 1935 affirming that he was qualified in regard to tax payments to be an aldermanic candidate.

Mr. Sheehy: "And the land referred to in those certificates was the building occupied by me in my office?"

Mr. Outram: "Yes".

The first certificate dated December 22, 1934, was signed by Frank Adams, tax collecter, and the other one, dated December 24, 1935, was signed by C. E. Curtis, tax collector.

The substance of each certificate was that there were no municipal rates due on the lands of which Mr. Sheehy was owner or tenant.

"And that means my office at Hunter and George streets?"

Mr. Outram: "Yes".

"It is supposed to be a certificate that the real and business taxes were paid according to the terms of the certificate?"

Mr. Outram: "It was a certificate given to Mr. Sheehy at the time of municipal nominations to become aldermanic candidate. To qualify, a candidate must get a certificate from the tax collector regarding tax arrears."

The certificate signed by C. E. Curtis declared that regarding the list of properties owned or tenanted by Mr. Sheehy no municipal rates were due for any previous year, and the date of the first certificate was December 22nd, 1934.

S. A. Couper, tax collector, was the next witness examined by Mr. Huycke. From the 1935 tax roll he showed that the real taxes, for that year on Mr. Sheehy's offices were $157.79. None of it was paid in that year; the penalties for the year were half of 1 per cent per month, and the interest from January 1st, 1936, was 4 per cent.

The taxes on the real property owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Company and occupied by Mr. Sheehy amounted to $165.02 in 1936 of which $55.31 was paid on July 15 of that year. Mr. Sheehy's business tax for that year was $80.22 of which $26.74 was paid.

The office taxes in 1937 were $153.14 and business tax $74.04 on which no payment was made, Mr. Couper testified.

To Mr. Sheehy, witness said cheques on the 1935 taxes were received subsequent to that year.

Mr. Sheehy—"Do you remember that I said I believed the city was charging me two or three times?"

Mr. Couper—"I believe you did."

Mr. Sheehy—"I was referring to taxes of five or six years ago now before you took office."

Judge Smoke remarked that the $157.79 was shown on the 1935 roll as unpaid.

Mr. Sheehy recalled an occasion of some months ago when he said he called at Mr. Couper's office and offered him a certain sum of money. He mentioned the amount of $580, but Mr. Couper answered that he didn't know how much was in the rubber-banded roll "because it never left your hand."

Witness continued — "You said, 'I'm going to offer you a sum of money but I don't think you'll take it.' Jokingly I said it was not the custom of the tax collector's office to refuse any money that was offered. You said you wanted a receipt in full for your taxes, and I told you I'd be glad to give you a receipt for any money you paid. You said you objected to paying penalties on your 1935 taxes. You said you didn't think I would accept the amount you were offering because it did not conform with the amount charged against you on the roll.

"Before you went out you said 'I offered you some money and you refused it,' and what I said to that was: Don't ever say you offered me any money and I refused it. I'll be glad to give you a receipt for any amount you want to pay."

Mr. Couper said that when he took over the office of tax collector he heard there was some dispute by Mr. Sheehy regarding his taxes.

Witness said he was appointed tax collector on February 25, 1936, succeeding C. E. Curtis; he did not know his predecessor, and only by hearsay did he know anything about his discharge by the city council.

Mr. Couper verified defendant's statement that all his 1934 taxes amounting to $244.59 were paid.

A receipt signed by C. E. Curtis, dated December 22, 1934, for $85.59 was credited in the city's cash book as of December 31. Mr. Couper said the posting may have been delayed by the clerical staff at that time. Another receipt dated December 23, 1935, acknowledged payment by Mr. Sheehy of his business tax for that year, $76.88, plus $3.07 penalty, a total of $79.95.

Burglars At Work On Night Jobs Evade Police By Narrow Margins

Twice during Sunday night the opportune arrival of police officers frustrated the efforts of burglars and in both cases the thieves had narrow escapes from being caught, and fled without obtaining any loot.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Sunday night Constable John Rogers surprised a thief in the shoe store of P. J. Hickey at 169 Hunter street. The front door of the place was locked and before the officer could get away around to the rear the man had fled out the back door and made his escape through the yards to Simcoe street, dropping a pair of shoes as he ran from the store. Entrance had been gained by forcing the back door. No goods were taken from the place.

Early this morning as Sergeant John Thompson and Constable Percy Sexsmith were patrolling the southern section of the city in a prowl car their attention was attracted by the fact that the usual light in the office of T. A. Rehill at 210 Wolfe street was out. They investigated and on turning a flashlight into the window of the place they saw the office safe had been overturned.

Almost simultaneously they heard a noise at the rear and were just in time to see two men climb over the fence and disappear. An investigation of the interior revealed the fact that the burglars had upset the safe and had been working on the bottom of it in an attempt to break inside whe nthey were frightened off by the arrival of the police.

Smith Farmers Draws 15 Days On Drunk Driving Charge

Pleading guilty to a charge of drunken driving, arising out of a traffic accident at the intersection of George and Rink streets shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday night, William Trude, Smith township farmer, was sentenced by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to fifteen days imprisonment in the county jail.

Magistrate Langley also suspended Trude's driving license for six months and directed the police that it was their duty to impound the accused's motor car for three months.

Acting Crown Attorney F. D. Kerr, K.C., read to the court the police report of the accident. It showed that Trude's car had collided at Rink and George streets with a taxi driven by H. Gould, 12 Crescent street, Gould claiming that Trude, coming east on Rink street, failed to stop at the "stop" sign. Nobody was injured but the taxi was damaged to the extent of $100 and it was estimated that the damage to Trude's car was around $40. Trude was arrested by Constable Archie Menzies and Provincial Traffic Officer Gordon E. Broughton.

"On Saturday nights when streets are crowded with shoppers, men who get drunk and try to drive cars are a terrible menace," commented Mr. Kerr.

"I think the best penalty is to prevent him driving again for some time," remarked Magistrate Langley in imposing sentence.

Ross Dickson who was with Trude at the time and who pleaded not guilty to being drunk was given a week's adjournment at his request.

"Treasure Seekers" Win Praise At Annual Social Evening

Quiet music greeted the "Treasure Seekers" of St. James' United Sunday School, as they gathered in large numbers for their annual social evening when Mrs. A. Wilson, Westcott street was the gracious hostess.

As the senior Bible Class in a large Sunday School the "Treasure Seekers" is one from which gaps in the teaching staff are capably filled. With Mrs. Wesley Rose, class president in the chair an exceptionally fine and varied program was enjoyed. This opened with a singsong of favorite hymns and prayer was offered by Rev. J. T. Conn.

Delightful vocal solos and duets, violin and piano solos were interspersed by brief addresses from prominent members of the class.

Vocal solo, "A Little Prayer," J. M. Arnold; vocal duet, "You Must Open the Door," Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cuff; violin solo, Master Jack Chambers; vocal solo, "Do Not Worry," Miss Geneva Sedgwick; piano solo, Miss Elsie Chambers; vocal solo, "The Story that Never Grows Old," Mrs. E. R. Frost; duet, "I've Found a Friend," Rev. F. W. and Mrs. Craik, Mrs. H. F. Doig accompanied all the vocal numbers, while Miss Chambers played for her brother's violin numbers.

Pastor Lauds Club

In a brief talk the pastor, Rev. Mr. Craik greeted the Treasure Seekers class assuring them that their loyalty to the church, the school and their pastor was thoroughly appreciated and their influence upon the younger portion of the school, was one of great and lasting good.

Mrs W. H. Buckler the beloved class teacher, paid tribute to the faithfulness of the officials of her class, speaking in particular of the spirit of co-operation which existed among them and the lay members.

E. R. Frost and A. E. Prest, the present superintendent and the first superintendent of St. James, both testified to the fine work of their teachers, and of the good work being accomplished. Mrs. Frost maintained as he lauded the faithful attendance of both teachers and scholars, that regularity in attendance solves fifty per cent of all Sunday School problems, and thanked them for sincere co-operation.

Former Teacher Speaks

J. O. Fife, also a former class was another, who spoke in praise of the whole work of the Sunday School and its influence upon the younger generation.

A Biblical contest was greatly enjoyed while it sharpened the wits of the Bible students present. The group which included Mrs. Prest, Miss Collins, Mrs. E. M. Davis, Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Milliken won the prize for their knowledge of the scriptures.

A sincere expression of thanks to the hostess for gracious hospitality, to the efficient committees, and to all contributing to the success of the evening by Mrs. Woodley, was endorsed by every one, who in saying goodnight joined in singing "Blest be the tie that binds."

Mrs. W. Rose, class president, was convener of the program committee, while Mrs. A. Emery convened the social committee which served the dainty refreshments, assisted by Mesdames Dinsdale, Meredith, Roode, Sedgwick.

Choir Aid Singers At Y.M.C.A. Clubs

The Y.M.C.A.'s Friendly Hour Song Service held one of its most successful meetings last night when the choir of St. James United church assisted. The choir assisted in three special numbers, a mixed trio, a ladies' quartette, and one selection by the full choir under the leadership of Cecil Lapp. Rev. F. W. Craik spoke briefly.

The meeting was held under the chairmanship of Elmer Trethewey, who was elected to the post for the coming year. Miss Phyllis Rome was elected secretary; Cameron Gorrie, song leader; George Nicholls, pianist. Arrangements were made for the Christmas carol service on December 18 in the Collegiate auditorium.

HELP SANTA

HALIFAX — (CP). — More than 750,000 Christmas trees are expected to be exported from Nova Scotia before December 17. One representative of a United States firm said he had 1,500 farmers under contract to cut trees.

Military Attache

Col. Carlos Sanchez, the first military attache to the Venzuelan legation in Washington, is pictured here as he arrived in New York en route to his new duties. The appointment of Col. Sanchez is believed to be the result of President Roosevelt's announced policy of unified military defence of the western hemisphere.

The Rambling REPORTERS

KEEPING HIMSELF AWAKE

The local reporter for a Toronto daily made the mistake of telling his friends he had received an electric shock from a short circuit in a metal desk lamp and now his friends claim it is a new device for keeping him awake.

The reporter is one who labors long after the respectable element have retired to their beds, and often after a strenuous day his head rests on the desk for a few moments and he dozes. He has a habit of taking off his shoes and placing his stockinged feet against a steam radiator behind the desk. The desk lamp is equipped with a metal shade and is so placed that if the reported dozes his head rests on the shade. This was his undoing. His feet were grounded to the radiator and when the head touched the short-circuited lamp he was almost thrown out of the chair, besides being thoroughly awakened. Strange to relate this happened twice and after the second jolt the scribe decided the place for his feet was on the floor, not hooked into the metal radiator. —McG.

Aged Man Lost His Organ In Forest Fire

Forest fires which raged through the Fort Francis district last month spared the life of an aged Englishman, but robbed him of his most cherished possession, an old organ.

The story of his miraculous escape and the grief over the loss of the instrument was told as a sidelight to the tragic tale of death and destruction at the meeting of the Red Cross Friday by N. R. Vinton, field secretary of the Ontario division of the Red Cross.

The Englishman, according to Mr. Vinton, is a sort of mystery man. He is an Oxford graduate and obviously a man of culture and settled in the district a few years ago. He is about 65 years of age and a bachelor. In his humble cabin he had an old organ, which he played daily.

On Thanksgiving when the disastrous forest fire swept the district, the Englishman's cabin lay in the path of the flames. He made an effort to carry the organ to safety, labored until the wall of fire was close. Realizing the futility of his task, he sought to escape, but he has a heart condition and dropped after running about a hundred yards. Strange to relate the fire swept past him, flattened the humble cabin, destroying the contents and rescue workers found the man lying in the clearing, unconscious but untouched by the fire.

Cabin Rebuilt.

His grief over the loss of the organ was touching, and although Red Cross workers rebuilt his cabin and set him up in comparative comfort once again, he nevertheless has continued to lament over the absence of the musical instrument.

One other settler had the same loss, and this man claims to have played the organ before the King.

Red Cross officials are making an appeal in the hope that some person who owns an old organ will donate it to one of these men and give them happiness again.

It was mentioned at the meeting that there must be hundreds of these organs in homes, where they are cluttering up space required for other furniture. An organ may be shipped freight free until December 1st and if any person has an organ they will donate, they are asked to telephone Mrs. Reg. Turner, at 501 or any other member of the local branch of the Red Cross.

Quick Profits

ERSKINE, Alta.—(CP)—It didn't take long f.- Paul Gabriel to get his money back after he bought a half section of land. Last fall it cost him $1,350 at a tax sale. This year it returned 2,500 bushels of wheat which netted Gabriel $1,500.

Rev. Dr. Young Advocates Canada Should Open Door To Jews; Settle Them On Farms In West

That the Canadian government should open up the tremendous agricultural areas of the west for Jewish refugees from Germany was advocated last night by Rev. Dr. E. W. Young in a special evening service at St. Andrew's United church.

Jacob Low, prominent member of the Jewish community making his appearance at a Christian service of worship, read the Scripture lesson from Exodus. He told the congregation that the Jewish people of Canada are prepared to raise funds amongst themselves to care for the needs of the refugees of their race, just as soon as the Canadian government opens this country to their admission.

Dr. Young spoke on the Jew as "a tragic figure in history" reviewing the history of the race with emphasis on the persecution they have faced throughout the ages. He stressed the great contribution the race had made to the culture of the world, and the important part members have played in the world's finance and politics.

Credit To Country.

In advocating that the Canadian government should open the doors of this country to the refugee Jew from Europe Dr. Young claimed the race would do great credit to Canada with their peculiar capacity for intellectual attainment. He stressed that while the Jews live mainly in industrial centres they are still good farmers offered in proof the work they have done in the Holy Land. He pleaded for a bridging of the gap between Jew and Gentile, and thought Canada should face the problem of Jewish need in a true spirit of Christian brotherhood.

He introduced Jacob Low as "a representative of the persecuted race of the world." Mr. Low acknowledged the invitation extended to him by the pastor and congregation of St. Andrew's and said, "the present situation affects not only my own people but the people of all the democratic nations of the world." It was then that he announced Jews in this country would raise funds necessary to care for refugees admitted to Canada.

OBITUARY

MARGARET JEAN SINCLAIR

Margaret Jean Sinclair, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sinclair, 612 Walkerfield avenue, died at her home on Saturday afternoon. She is a granddaughter of Alderman Herb. McCannan.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons, at 1 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt officiated.

MRS. DAVID KERNEGHAN

Death claimed one of the city's old and highly respected residents on Saturday when Mrs. David Kerneghan, 212 Antrim street, died at her home following a brief illness.

Mrs. Kerneghan was formerly Hilda Annis Mann, daughter of the late Stephen Mann and Sarah McKee. She was born in Smith township, 78 years ago and spent the past 56 years of her life in this city. Surviving are her husband, and two sons, Stanley and Max, both of Peterborough. One sister, Mrs. H. Dunford, Vancouver, and two brothers, William and Sam of San Francisco, California, also survive.

The funeral will be held from the funeral home of A. Comstock and Sons, on Tuesday afternoon, November 29th at 2 o'clock. Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church will officiate. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. CHARLES NEEDHAM

Mrs. Charles Needham, 47 Lafayette avenue, passed away at her home early Monday morning, after an illness lasting three years.

Her maiden name was Sarah Jane Clampit and she was born in Ellacome, England, 86 years ago. For the past thirty years she has resided in Peterborough. Her husband is the only survivor.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon, November 29th at two o'clock from the Nisbett funeral home. Rev. J. D. Paterson of All Saints Anglican Church will officiate. Interment will be in Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. MICHAEL FLOOD.

The death occurred in St. Joseph's Hospital, Edmonton, on Monday, Nov. 7, of Mrs. Michael Flood, the former Catherine Holland, who was born in Peterborough, Ont., of one of its oldest families, in 1868, and married in September, 1890, to Michael Flood, who still survives. In 1913 with their three remaining daughters — one having died in Peterborough—they came to Edmonton and took up residence on the South Side where they lived up until the death of the late-lamented deceased, after a brief illness.

Her funeral Mass, celebrated on November 9, at 10 a.m., in St. Antony's Pro-Cathedral by the pastor, Rt. Rev. W. B. Carleton, was largely attended by her many relatives and friends who thus paid fitting tribute to the high esteem and admiration in which she was held by all. Present in the sanctuary, besides the Rt. Rev. celebrant, were: Rev. P. McQuaid of Leduc, Rev. J. Malone of St. Joseph's Cathedral, Rev. D. Murphy of Vegreville, and Rev. R. Merchant of St. Anthony's who also attended the funeral cortege to the parish cemetery, and there in God's Acre, committed her mortal remains to their last resting place. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her loving husband, three daughters, Mrs. M. A. McMillan, of Gadsby, Alta.; Mrs. R. O. Hughes of Glendale, Calif., and Mrs. O. Kennaley of Peterborough, Ont; two sisters, Rev. Mother Schoastica of Peterborough, Ont.; and Mrs. Margaret Kelly of Guelph, Ont; two brothers, Thomas Holland of Peterborough, Ont., and Jas. Holland, Port Hope, Ont.; also four grand-children, Laurie and Marie McMillan, Gadsby, Alta., and Jack and Frank Kennaley of Peterborough, Ont.

N.H.L. RACE TIGHTLY JAMMED AFTER FIVE WEEK-END PUCK TILTS

Hawks End Slump, Nip Rangers 1-0; Leafs And Canadiens Beat Wings; Bruins Down Amerks

By mixing the handy elements of surprise, rugged collectivism and grim shinny Chicago Black Hawks are likely to avoid hitting the skids for long in this National league hockey season.

The selectors would have had you think the fluttering Hawks were in a swoop toward the league depths when they failed to win in four recent starts, but the Stanley Cup holders ended their fall last night with a 1-0 victory over the Rangers at New York. A typical last-minute stroke sent them scudding upward into a first-place tie.

Americans, after trimming the Hawks 6-4 Saturday night at New York, could have stepped ahead alone, but Bruins knocked them down with an 8-2 walloping last night at Boston. Toronto Maple Leafs advanced into what became a tie with Rangers, just a point behind the co-leaders, by shutting out Detroit Red Wings 5-0 at Toronto Saturday. And Montreal Canadiens, to complicate things more, beat Detroit 3-1.

Of the three teams which played twice, none was able to win both games. But Chicago came back from the valley of a thorough beating at Americans' hands to score one of the most important victories of the campaign.

Gottselig Does It

It was accomplished by the accustomed Hawk practice of checking and checking some more, then swiftly taking advantage of a break. Gottselig sped in from left wing with Dizzy Desilets' pass and spoiled the first-plac ambitions of the club that had beaten Hawks 1-0 in their first meeting at Chicago.

The rallying abilities of the Chicagoans were evident at New York Saturday, when they scored three late goals after trailing 6-1 when five minutes of the final period had passed. The night was Americans', though, and they avenged the 6-1 beating they took in Chicago on opening night. Lorne Carr led their assault with two goals and Eddie Wiseman, Johnny Sorrell, Tommy Anderson and Nels Stewart got the others. Desilets, Paul Thompson, Doc Romnes and Mush March scored for Chicago and Gottselig picked up two assists.

Boston, which has a virtual lead if not an actual one, having recorded only one loss to two each for Hawks and Americans, were full value for the decision over the spangled shirts.

Dit Clapper scored two first-period goals and Ray Getliffe another and Bill Cowley made Bruins' advantage 4-0 in the second.

Then Americans took to five-man dashes and Mel Hill and Gordie Pettinger broke away for goals. Nels Stewart and Hooley Smith rallied New York hopes by scoring in quick succession, but Getliffe and Cooney Weiland dashed them again by finishing off the Boston Total.

Thompson Sold

Detroit's pair of wallopings was answered today with the announcement at Boston that goalie Tiny Thompson of the Bruins had been sold to the Red Wings. The great veteran will fill the place of Harvey Teno, who stepped in when Normie Smith stepped out under suspension last week. His coming likely means, too, that Smith's announced retirement will stick.

But Teno wasn't at fault in the lambasting at Toronto, Gus Marker tricked the Detroit defence out of position for one pretty goal and Syl Apps slipped right through for another. Bingo Kampman blasted the first score from the blue line and Pep Kelly and Jimmy Fowler got the others from in close on breakaways.

Kampman, coming along fast as a bumping, rushing defenceman, bowled over Detroit attackers, was a constant threat on the offence and got mixed up with Ebbie Goodfellow to start a fight that led to another and in the end to eight penalties, four of them majors.

It was Canadiens' desperation and the racing skates of George Mantha that won at Detroit. Eddie Wares gave the Wings an early lead and scored again after Toe Blake and Mantha had put the Habitants ahead. But Mantha, the flying farmer from Ste. Rose, Que., combined with Rod Lorrain and George Brown to spank a 10-foot shot past Teno with less than eight minutes to play.

SAMMY LUFTSPRING

When hardly given a tumble by his own Toronto folk, Sammy Luftspring went on a ring campaign through the States. He came back recently after a successful tour and showed his home fans a greatly improved boxer. Sammy now holds the pro welter title in his native heath.

Peter Bidwell Steps Mile In Near Record

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Peter Bidwell came within half a second of the track record Saturday by pacing the mile in 2:08¾ to win the second heat of the second race on the Toronto Driving Club's program of harness races at Dufferin Park Saturday.

After finishing fourth in the previous heat, the Eli-owned horse found its stride in the second heat and came like the wind in the stretch to decision Troxie R. The time of the race stands as the fastest of the current season.

Some good times were turned in all down the line Saturday as the horses found the hard, fast track in perfect shape. John B. Napoleon did the mile in 2:11 for a notable performance in the second heat of the third race.

The Lambeth Trot, feature event of the day, attracted a field of 10 diagonal-gaited performers, and the three heats raced provided a different winner in each. Richard Hall, Saki and Joe Patch were the respective winners and the final heat will be raced today.

Two heats were held over in each of the second and third races, and they will be cleaned up today. One heat of the fourth race was run, with Ginger Direct scoring over Gilbert Grattan and Betty Boop. The remaining three heats will be contested this afternoon.

Two heats carried over from last Wednesday's races were run off Saturday, with Kay Harvester and Lou Worthy proving the winners.

Long shots came down in front in practically every heat Saturday and some good payoffs were the order.

MUSSING UP THE MAPLES

Some fancy hitting at 5 pins was shown by men and girls when five mixed leagues bowled their weekly scheduled games on Friday and Saturday evenings. Three of the men lined up in the 700 class, Ivan Pearson with 744, Fred Scates 718 and Gord Caird with 700. Four girls also stood out with big scores, Miss Mary Parkes, Miss Spencley and Miss E. Brooks of the Brinton league chalking up 651, 611 and 602, while Miss C. Long of the city Hall group trundled off 512. Pearson's count beat "Tim" Watson's 717 of 5 weeks ago for a new high in the A.Y.P.A. League.

The first act on Friday night was put on by the City Hall, Ed. Outram again came through, this time for 682, Miss Long with 612 led Miss Whaley with 471, Miss Vincent 425, Miss McDonald 433 and Miss Thompson 403. Traffic Officer McClure side-swiped 589.

In the Examiner loop besides Scates 718, Bob Baker hit 600 ,Miss Donaghue 509, Miss Stalter 470, Miss Rodney 446, Miss Wyllie 444 and Miss Spriggs 438.

For Johnson motors B. Payne hit 648, E. McKinstry 640, G. Webb 638, W. Milliken 618 and Peter McArthur 615, Miss B. Castle 507, Miss Payne 479, and Miss D. Moscrop 456.

The big Brinton league shot out Caird's 700, W. Firth 679, J. Kitchen 676, J. Baschiano 649, S. Laing 617, H. Jones 604, Miss Parks 651, Miss Spencley 611 (222), Miss Brooks 602, L. Glaum 552, D. Pringle 524, A. Pilling 518, E. Jones, 514, C. Patterson 512, Mrs. L. Monk, 508, B. Fitzgerald 503, E. Hodson 494, Mrs. D. Fuller 467, and M. Ayotte 466.

In the A.Y.P.A. league with Pearson 744, Floyd Curtis got in another big game, 303, to total 667, A. Watson 651, L. Galley 635, F. Ford 631, R. Mason 625, W. Hewitt 621, Miss Long 554, Miss Sisson 544, Miss Spencley 470, Miss Sims 467, Miss Britnell 497, Miss Alcock 443, while Miss Krant, Miss Gynane and Miss Downes had 247, 233, and 213 singles.

Ladies' Hockey Splits Senior

(By Bobbie Rosenfeld)

For the first time since its inception some fifteen years ago, the Ladies' Ontario Hockey Association in annual conclave Saturday at the King Edward Hotel, found it necessary to divide its senior section into A and B groupings.

It was deemed the only thing to do if the L.O.H.A. hoped to increase its number of affiliated teams, and was done in answer to the cry from centres throughout Ontario which claimed that the Preston power had become too potent to cope with. In preference to stacking up against the Rivulettes and taking an almost certain beating, teams preferred playing exhibition games with other teams more equal to their strength.

The B grouping will include first-year teams, and teams, which in the opinion of the L.O.H.A. executive do not measure up to senior A standard. In this new grouping will probably be found Markdale, Meaford, Collingwood, Hanover and Thornbury, along with other teams who enter before the Jan. 7 deadline. Preston, Stratford, Toronto and possibly Hamilton will round out the A section.

May Playoff

The B group will have the privilege of playing off with A group for the Ontario title. It was also ruled that the winners of the B group automatically move up to A group the following year, provided they retained four or more members of their championship team.

Another contentious question was the wholesale move of virtually a full team of players from Hamilton to play in Toronto with the Soyomalt team. The meeting felt that if it was a fact that seven players were available for ice duty they should be made play in Hamilton as a team. In any event they could not come to Toronto because of a constitutional ruling which permits players to play with their nearest centre, if their home town does not operate, and in this case the nearest centre is Preston. Preston suggested that it might waive the rights to these players if they cared to be taken up by some smaller centre, for instance, Port Dover, but would certainly not be in favor of such a wholesale move to a large centre like Toronto.

A team in Hamilton would clear up the whole situation, and that is what probably will happen, as Olive Hewitt, last year's organizer, promised to go back home and try and round up the hockey forces again.

An Ottawa request that in case only two teams operate in the Ottawa Independent League, each team be allowed to affiliate direct with the L.O.H.A., play exhibition games throughout Ontario and Quebec, in preference to tying themselves down to a regular schedule was granted. Later in the season the two teams will play a series of games to decide which team will represent Ottawa in the Ontario playdowns.

The treasurer's report showed: Receipts, $100.32; disbursements, $85.05; balance, $15.27.

Officers elected were: Honorary president, Hon. N. O. Hipel; president, Fanny Rosenfeld; first vice-president, M. Shmuck, second vice-president, H. Carefoot; secretary-treasurer, E. Mahood. The executive board to include a representative from each affiliated team.

BENEFIT WAS SUCCESS

MANCHESTER, England—(CP).—Leonard Hopwood, 35-year-old Lancashire cricketer, netted $5,236 from his benefit match when Surrey played at Old Trafford last summer, it is announced.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THERE IS THE CHANCE that the Petes' senior "B" lacrosse champs this year — who are being feted by the Council tomorrow e'en—may have a brand new playing coach next semester. One of the best in the business, at least so far as playing ability goes. We refer to Butch Boettger of Orillia, who was seen in Peterborough with the Terriers twice in exhibition jousts. We get this from the Orillia News-Letter: "Terriers may lose the servicee of Gordon (Butch) Boettger, veteran centre and defenceman. He has, it has just been disclosed, an offer to sign on as playing coach of the Petes' senior squad for next lacrosse season. 'I haven't decided just what to do yet, but I am definitely interested,' said the veteran lacrossist, who has played with the Terriers for the past six seasons, when questioned. He said he intended to remain in Orillia till next spring at anyrate.

* * * * *

"A VETERAN PLAYER of many years' experience, Boettger is considered to have good possibilities as a coach. He showed promise in such a job when managing the Orillia Owls' intermediates in the Tri-County League a few seasons ago. If Boettger goes to Peterborough, he will become the leader of two players who formerly played under him on the Owls. The pair are Jack Westonfelt, rugged defence youngster, and Walt Reid, diminutive centre. Both played for Peterborough last season and, although returned to Orillia for the winter, expect to go back to the Liftlock City next spring." Such a playing coach might be okay, but we'd have a heck of a time pronouncing and spelling his bloomin' name!

Getting Lined Up

ROLLIE GLOVER and Bill Jackson represented Peterborough at the annual O.H.A. meeting in Toronto on Saturday. It takes Secretary Hewitt a few days after entries are in to arrange possible groupings, so nothing official will be out for a short time. With Trenton Fliers and Kingston not represented at the session, not much could be learned of a senior "B" grouping for the Petes, though both clubs will no doubt operate. It is in the hands of the O.H.A. secretary. However, there is a very fair possibility of an eight-team Central Ontario junior grouping, tossing the junior "B" and "C" teams in together in one complete schedule, with all games counting. Three "B" teams and five "C" squads, top two teams—regardless of how they finish in the schedule—playing off. Let us explain.

* * * * *

OSHAWA, Whitby and our Colts are "B" entries while our Monarchs, Lindsay, Cobourg, Bowmanville and Port Hope are "C" teams. No matter where the three "B" teams finished in the standing, the top two of these "B" crews would playoff, winner going into "B" playdowns. No matter where the five "C" clubs ended the schedule, the top two of them would playoff and the winner hit into "C" playdowns. Thus, we'd have eight teams—and don't let that "B" and "C" calibre fool you too much, as they'd be closely matched—seen here this winter. Instead of three junior teams in a runty schedule as was the case the last two years. The junior games might well steal the fans' interest from the grown-up Petes! It's not official yet, but quite possible as most of the clubs interviewed agreed whole-heartedly to the idea. A district meeting may be held in a few days to iron out a few details. For instance, Bowmanville would have to play home gams away—having no rink.

* * * * *

Just a Coupla Tips

TWO THOUGHTS smacked us at once—and put a terrific pressure on the think-tank—regarding our junior "C" Monarchs. So we slip 'em these as warnings or merely reminders. One is that the Monarchs cannot have more than two players over 18 by Jan. 1st, and the other is that the junior "B" Colts must all be signed up for the 1939 season before any of the Monarchs are signed. We do not wish to toss aqua pura of a frigid temperature on the new club, as we're strong for 'em, but these two facts stick out like a boil on your nose and cannot be ignored. They are the law, insofar as the new "C" club here are concerned. First one was an O.H.A. rule last year in cities where a "B" tea mis operated, and second is a legal agreement signed by the Hockey Club and the Monarchs. But there should still be no trouble icing two good junior teams in the O.H.A. here this cold spell, since the Junior City Puck Loop has folded like a tent in a typhoon.

* * * * *

JUST RECENTLY we queried Coach Bill Jackson of the Colts on his prospects and he seemed quite pleased with 'em. Said he had some two dozen prominent Junior City Loop and other local boys worth considering, with lots of other Peterborough kids who might show something in tryouts. And McWilliams of Toronto moved here with his family—having played for Runneymede. A Cobourg puckist lives here now, while the district offers such lads as Earl Hoffman of Havelock, Lumsden of Norwood and two goalie, and a couple of good Lakefield lads. He looks for a good squad, and one that is plenty hefty.

* * * * *

Lots Of Loop-Holes

O.H.A. SESSION in Toronto, of course, okayed the new C.A.H.A. rules and put in the new officers as per schedule. With Sandy Burrows of Belleville on the executive. There are now several clauses whereby a player may enter a town after the Oct. 15 deadline and still play hockey. A new rule calls for a guy in a centre where there is no O.H.A. team to play for the nearest O.H.A. team of his class, except when that team waives on him—when he may go to the next nearest. And so on. No minor penalties against a goalie now, just penalty shots. In other words, the goalie cannot be put off for slashing, tripping, etc.; just for fighting or something serious. But a penalty shot may be awarded his rivals on minor ofefnces by the net guardian. Nor can the goalie hold the puck more than three seconds, or he'll have to stop a penalty shot. And so it goes—anything to speed up the game.

SARNIA IMPS knocked Montreal out of the O.R.F.U. finals with a 15-0 swish Saturday in Sarnia and now meet Argos in the Eastern Canada final. The perennial champs—who lost only to Orfuns this year—took the title by a 24-5 score in a final rough fracas. Prexy DeGruchy even addressed theboys on the field at one time to tame the tilt, but they were playing for keeps and season feuds flared anew ere the end. Bummer Stirling was put off for slugging and the Imps were just about held scoreless after the One-Man Gang left. Ike Norris and Bill Davies put a period on their pugilistic season in a wild flurry of fists, while Burns and Golab came out of the mess looking like they had run into a battleship in the dark. Barely 3,000 fans saw the scrap, which won't make the locals much richer on their pooled piece of the gate. It was the Imps' eighth straight title, but we'd call Argos to beat them next week-end

Gun Shot May Close Stratton Career

DALLAS, Nov. 28. — (AP). — Chance, which zoomed Monty Stratton from semi-professional baseball to major league stardom in four years, to-day apparently doomed him to the sidelines with the accidental discharge of his pistol.

The leg was shattered yesterday when a pistol accidentally discharged in a holster at the right-hander's side while he was hunting rabbits on his mother's farm near Greenville. The bullet cut into his leg, severing a large blood vessel behind his knee.

Monty, 25, crawled almost to the farm house before one of his brothers found him.

It Wasn't Blood

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 28—(AP).—Fireman William J. Denney yesterday was rushed, "bleeding to death," to a doctor's office by colleagues fighting a filling station fire. The doctor wiped Denny's face with a towel and sent him back to his fire fighting. A ca nof red paint had exploded in the fireman's face.

Juvenile Body Votes Changes In '39 Rules

The annual meeting of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association, which was held at the King Edward Hotel Saturday, was very successful and attracted the largest attendance since the inception of this association.

Several changes were made in the executive. The new president for the coming season is John Lauman, Kitchener, who was formerly first vice-president, Jack Roxburgh, Simcoe, who has held the office of president for the past two years, resigned to make room for Lauman. Dr. Roger Matchett, who has been secretary for several years, has resigned due to business pressure. J. H. Stafford, who was assistant to Dr. Matchett last year, takes over the duties of the secretary-treasurer for the ensuing year.

Several new men have been added to the active executive. William Marsden, London, well - known hockey coach; Clarke McGlashan, Niagara Falls; William Hughes, the well-known rugby coach; A. A. McIntosh, Midland, and Dr. Ken Cooke, Hamilton, are the new men on the active executive. Ted Gregory and Harold Luke are also back again.

Two Changes.

Two important changes were made in the by-laws.

First, it was decided at this meeting that groups would be formed and conveners appointed and schedules drawn up; the teams to commence playing as soon as the ice was ready, and play out their schedules and declare a winner to proceed to the playdowns. This is a big change from former years, as this association only took entries from winners of local groups.

Second, the restriction on using O.H.A. players in towns of 5,000 and under was lifted, and they can now play a maximum of three O.H.A. players, providing, of course, that they comply with the residence rules, age limit and all other regulations of the association. This change was effected to bolster the playing strength of teams in smaller towns.

The following is the list of executive members elected: Honorary executive—P. J. Mulqueen, Toronto; W. A. Fry, Dunnville; S. R. Manson, Hamilton; Fred Waghorne Sr., Toronto; R. Kinchsular, Sudbury; James Douglas, Brantford. Life member—Dr. R. W. Matchett. Honorary press representatives — Fred Jackson, Thomas Munns, A. J. Morganson. Officers: President, J. H. Lauman, Kitchener; immediate past president, J. M. Roxburgh, Simcoe; first vice-president, Dr. Deans Taylor, Tillsonburg; second vice-president, Dr. Leon Hopwell, Toronto; secretary-treasurer, J. H. Stafford, Toronto. Active executive —Harold Luke, Oshawa; Ted Gregory, Toronto; William Marsden, London; William Hughes, Belleville; Dr. Ken Cooke, Hamilton; Clarke McGlashan, Niagara Falls; A. A. McIntosh, Midland.

All entries for this coming season must be in the hands of the secretary by December 21.

Intermediate A Squads Are Barred Playing For Allan Cup; Residence Rule Exceptions Made

TORONTO, Nov. 28. —(CP). — Teams competing in the Intermediate "A" division of the Ontario Hockey Association this season will do so with the knowledge the winner may not play for the Allan Cup, emblem of National senior supremacy.

The 49th annual meeting of the O.H.A. here Saturday rescinded the privilege of the Intermediate "A" champions to enter the Senior playdowns because of lack of time. The Association executive was granted the power to place teams in whatever series or grouping it considers best, with winning clubs in Junior and Intermediate series eligible to compete in the series above them the following season.

Affiliation between the O.H.A. and the Northern Ontario Hockey Association continued with addition of a clause requiring six months' notice by either party in case of dissolution.

It was also decided that the executives of the two associations would choose arbiters for north-south playoffs, and that junior playoffs between the two bodies would be on a best-of-three-game series, unless otherwise arranged by mutual consent.

Formerly the rules called for the O.H.A. to choose playoff officials and for a best-of-five junior playoff series.

N.O.H.A. delegates withdrew an amendment calling for the Northern Senior winners to meet the Senior "A" O.H.A. titlists in the playdowns. The Northern champions will continue to meet the South Senior "B" winners, with the winner to meet the "A" champions.

Residence Rule.

Most important of the amendments was the residence rule, in which it was decided that players in certain classifications would be considered exceptions and allowed to play even if they changed residence after the Oct. 15 deadline of the playing years, with the provision that no player may perform for more than one C.A.H.A. club in the same season.

Players conceded the privilege are those whose parents and family change their residence and the player continues to reside with his family; those graduated from a recognized university or college at the conclusion of the term just past; bona-fide students at any recognized preparatory school, university or college.

Others privileged are players connected with the Permanent Militia forces or with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who are moved in the course of their duty, provided they have had six months' continuour service immediately prior to the residence date with the aforesaid bodies; employees with six months' service immediately prior to residence date, who are moved by their employers.

Also eligible after the closing date are players, other than juniors, who have not previously been registered with any branch of the C.A.H.A.

The rule changes include a clause that penalty shots will be called against goalkeepers instead of minor penalties. Frank Farrell of Niagara Falls argued to no avail that this might tend towards abuses by netminders, such as tripping of opposing players.

A "waiver" system was adopted whereby a player, whose place of residence had no team, did not have to play with the O.H.A. club nearest his residence, as in former years. By the new ruling, a player may perform with any club in the district, providing clubs nearer his place of residence waive claims to his services. The waivers must be renewed annually.

120-Pound Wolf

PENELON FALLS, Ont., Nov. 28, —(CP).—A wolf shot here apparently had found the hunting to his liking. One of the largest killed in this district, the wolf measured six feet, three inches, was 32 inches high at the shoulders and weighed 120 pounds.

Galloping Ghosts Are Too Strong For Sarnia Team

COBOURG, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Cobourg's "Galloping Ghosts" showed more foot than Sarnia Wanderers here Saturday to walk off with the title in the Ontario Rugby Football Union's intermediate "A" series.

The Ghosts came from behind to win, 11-7, in a sudden-death game for the championship. Once they found traction on the frozen gridiron, the Easterners rode on to victory without so much as a misstep.

Chuck Peck, former Queen's University stalwart, and Mike Meikle, ace booter, led the Cobourg squad to its second championship in two years. Last year the Ghosts won the "B" honors.

A nice run by Dick Jackson, followed by a pass to Len Rutter, netted Sarnia a touchdown in the first quarter, which, along with two singles, gave the Wanderers a 7-point margin at the end of the first quarter.

Meikle booted two placements and two singles in the next session, however, to place his team in front—a position Cobourg never relinquished.

Meikle hoisted another ball through the uprights from placement in the third quarter, and added a single to complete the scoring.

Ken Cooper, Alex Colville, Chuck Henderson and Charlie Schrumm played good ball for the winners, while best for Sarnia were Lee Perry, George Fordyce and Jackson.

SARNIA AND ARGOS CAPTURE TWO BIG SENIOR RUGBY TITLES

Imperials Defeated Nationals To Win Round 24-5, While Argos Eke Out 5-3 Win

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

The Eastern football situation was down today to a two-team affair as Toronto Argonauts, the National champions, and Sarnia Imperials left to decide the section's champion and representative in the Canadian final against Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Old-time rivals, they will meet in Toronto this Saturday for the third time in six years to decide the Eastern championship. So far the feud has been in Argos' favor, Imperials bowing out by a single point when they clashed in Sarnia five years ago and by four points in Toronto last season.

Imperials and Argos qualified for the Eastern final Saturday by overthrowing Montreal Nationals and Ottawa Rough Riders, respectively. It was Sarnia's eight straight Ontario Union championship and Argos second successive Big Four crown.

Impressively, Imperials downed Nationals 15-0 in Sarnia to win the round 24-5 and Argos eked out a decision over Rough Riders at Ottawa, taking the round 14-4. The game in Sarnia proved Imperials a great team with or without Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, their ace punter, passer and plunger.

Ruled out of the game early in the second quarter for slugging a National, Stirling sat on Sarnia's bench and watched his mates protect and add to the 13-point lead he helped build in 21 minutes jammed full of football thrills. Imperials were a great team on the day, outplaying Nationals in every department.

Took Kickoff 80 Yards

Stirling took the opening kickoff 80 yards to give 3,000 fans their first thrill and Imperials their first point. The Bummer lateralled to Fat Parsons on Montreal's 28, but he dropped the ball near the goal-line and Johnny Atcheson booted it to the deadline. The Bummer kicked another point before the first quarter ended, after Nationals lost their only scoring opportunity by fumbling on Sarnia's one-yard line.

In the space of three minutes in the second quarter, Imperials recovered two National fumbles and converted them into touchdowns. In possession 17 yards out, Imperials sent Tony Golab over in two line plays. Then Ike Norris picked up the ball and scampered 35 yards for the second try. Stirling's banishment and outstanding work by Golab and Mike Hedgewick featured the remainder of the game.

Arnie McWatters, despite an injured knee, was a capable substitute for Stirling. He kicked well, getting better as the game lengthened. Golab was the brightest of an all-star Imperial lineup while Johnny Ferraro, Ed Barnabee, Fred Brocklehurst and Tommy Burns stood out for Montreal.

Argos, victors 9-1 in the first game of the Big Four series, outsteadied the fumbling Riders to increase the margin. For three quarters they held Riders scoreless while Annis Stukus got three of the four first quarter points with a placement field goal. Bob Isbister kicked the other two points.

Never In Doubt

The champions were not forced to the defensive until the last quarter when Ottawa's offensive finally rolled at full speed. Dave Sprague blocked a kick and Rick Perley dribbled it across the goal-line. But Stukus fell on the ball and Riders got only a single.

Soon afterwards Art West tossed over his line after picking up a bounding ball, giving Riders a safety touch.

There never was any doubt that Argos could protect the eight-point lead gained in Toronto. On the granite-like field, with the temperature 10 above and a numbing wind blowing all afternoon, they held command easily.

Frank Stukus suffered the only serious injury of the day, receiving a fractured rib in the second quarter when he collided with a Rider. Numerous fumbles kept a crowd of 13,000 on edge until Argos' victory was beyond question in the second half.

Remember When—

Georges Vezina, one of the greatest goalkeepers of all time, played the last game of his career at Montreal 13 years ago tonight. Fifteen years with Montreal Canadiens, Vezina took his position despite a high temperature and retired after the first period. He died March 28, 1926.

Ramblers Tack 2 Overtime Wins To String

The amazing Philadelphia Ramblers, with the International-American Hockey League season still in its infancy, have a record that is almost too good to be true.

The Ramblers have played nine games, eight of which they have won and already they have scored 54 goals. Their total is almost double that of any two other teams in the eight-team league.

Ramblers added an even dozen goals during the week-end by defeating New Haven Eagles 6-2 on Saturday night and Springfield Indians 6-5 last night. Both victories came in overtime contests.

Hershey Bears have been the only team to defeat Ramblers this season, taking a 3-1 decision over the New York Ranger farm team on November 17 at Hershey.

The Reds were the only other team to succeed in taking two victories during the week-end, stopping Pittsburgh Hornets 3-2 on Saturday night and Hershey 4-1 last night. The Bears took a 3-1 victory in their first week-end contest over Syracuse Stars, who won 4-3 last night against Cleveland Barons.

Cleveland suffered two losses, dropping a 2-0 decision on Saturday night at Cleveland to Springfield. It was the first home loss of the season for the Barons, who dropped only one contest on home ice during the while of the 1937-38 schedule. New Haven scored their second victory of the season by turning back Pittsburgh 5-2 last night.

Four in Overtime.

Eagles held the Ramblers to two goals for three periods in their Saturday contest, but four goals in overtime gave Ramblers victory. Joe Krol got two tallies in the extra session, while Lloyd Roubell and Bill Carse scored the others. Hugh Gustafson and Butch Keeling were the Philadelphia marksmen in the regular time.

Carse scored the overtime winner against the Indians, Cliff Barton scored two for Ramblers, while Roubell, Thompson and Tapin had one apiece. Tommy Filmore, Joe Lamb, McIneley, McGoldrick, and Corrigan got the Springfield goals.

Third-period goals by Ron Hudson and Doggie Kuhn, after Johnny Shewchuk scored in the second, gave Reds their victory over Pittsburgh. Roy Giesebrecht and Bush scored for Pittsburgh. Against Hershey, McReavy, Giroux, Starr and Kuhn did the scoring for Providence, while the lone Bears' tally went to Drouillard.

Dede Klein, Shannon and Steele scored the markers in Hershey's victory over Stars on Saturday night, while Doran got the only Syracuse counter. Jack Markle, Eddie Convey, Murray Armstrong, and Normie Mann were the Syracuse scorers in victory over Cleveland. Patterson had two and Phil Hergesheimer one for the Barons.

Italy's shipyards are busy on domestic and foreign orders.

Interested in Skiing?

With the rugby season nearing the end can skiing be far behind? The answer, of course, is no. The pigskin toters won't be off the gridirons long before the Scandinavian sport's devotees will be cluttering up the hills as they whisk hither and yon o'er our fair Canadian countryside. This is a certain Miss Betty Nutter, preparing to get in some early-season work where the mantle of King Winter has already fallen in sufficient quantities.

Duke, Texas, Army Football Squads Feature Saturday's U.S. Football Closing Battles

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP). — With Duke, Texas Christian and Army contributing the outstanding performances of 1938 United States' College football's last big Saturday, the game was ready today to be delivered into the hands of the Chambers of Commerce that back post-season contests in a string of bowls stretching from Pasadena, Calif., to Miami, Fla.

All unbeaten major elevens except Notre Dame, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Texas Tech have completed their regular schedules. Those four, favored to win their closing games next Saturday from Southern California, Mississippi, Washington State and Centenary, respectively, rate consideration as bowl material be it Rose, Sugar, Cotton, Orange or Sun.

Candidates, too, are Duke, 7-0 winner over Pittsburgh and first ranking team since the Colgate crew of 1932 to finish unbeaten, untied and unscored on; Texas Christian, Southwest Conference champion which already has been tendered a bid to the Cotton Bowl; Villanova, tied only by South Carolina and undefeated in its last 20 games; Georgetown, lone major Eastern eleven to go through its schedule without defeat or tie, and Western Reserve.

The Duke Blue Devils had the defensive strength to make the touchdown enough to beat Pitt.

Tennessee, on Thanksgiving Day, boomed its Bowl stock with a 46-0 rout of Kentucky that clinched the South-eastern Conference championship and leaves the Volunteers with only Mississippi to pass for a perfect season.

The Christian Win.

Texas Christian's title-winning south-west defeat of Southern Methodist by 20-7 again proved the Horned Frogs' versatility. They called on Davis O'Brien's passes sparingly and used a pulverizing ground attack for their 10th straight triumph.

Neither Army nor Navy will be considered for post-season engagements. Yet their battle at Philadelphia Saturday, which the Cadets won 14-7 before the season's biggest crowd, 102,000 spectators, was one of the most exciting in the long history of their series. Army emerged with fresh laurels through an 81-yard third period touchdown march after being sadly outplayed for most of the first half.

Besides T.C.U. and Duke, two other all-winning teams came through again Saturday. Texas Tech walloped Marquette by 21-1, and Oklahoma knocked off Oklahoma A.A. and M. 19-0.

Two other teams that may receive post-season consideration, Holy Cross and Fordham, wound up their campaigns with convincing demonstrations. Holy Cross, their only defeat a one-pointer by Carnegie Tech, rolled over Boston College, previously unbeaten but twice tied, 29-7, and Fordham smothered New York University 25-0.

Week-End Scores

(By The Canadian Press)

George Mantha, Canadiens, scored two goals as the Montrealers defeated Detroit Red Wings 3-2 Sunday for their first victory of the season.

Turk Broda, Toronto, marked up his third shutout Saturday night as Maple Leafs blanked Detroit 5-0.

Johnny Gottselig and Mike Karakas, Chicago, the former tallied only goal and the latter played shutout hockey as the Black Hawks topped New York Rangers 1-0 last night.

Lorne Carr, Americans, picked up two goals in 6-4 victory for the New Yorkers over Chicago.

Dit Clapper and Roy Getliffe, Boston, both scored twice and picked up an assist as the Bruins swamped Americans 8-2.

GUEST IN HOSPITAL

CHELTENHAM, England—(CP).—Friends gave a dinner for Gerry Wilson, champion steeplechase jockey for the 1937-38 season, but Wilson wasn't present. He was injured earlier in the day and was in hospital.

Tiny Thompson Is Sold To Detroit Team

BOSTON, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Sale of Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, Boston Bruins goalie, to eDtroit Red Wings for $15,000 cash and an unnamed player was announced to-day by Manager Art Ross of the Bruins.

Thompson, the only goalie to win the Georges Vezina Trophy four times, will be replaced in the Boston cage by 23-year-old Frank Brimsek, now on loan to the Providence International-American League club. Brimsek played in the Bruins' first two games in the National Hockey League this season, against Toronto and Detroit, while Thompson was nursing a gashed forehead.

Star for Ten Years.

Thompson, now 34, has been a star since he joined the Bruins 10 years ago after a year of professional experience with Minneapolis in the American Hockey Association. The Bruins won the Stanley Cup his first season in their net and the American Division championship five times in his next nine seasons with them.

"We regret that we are forced to dispose of 'Tiny,' but we realize it is to his advantage," Ross said. "He's good for at least five more seasons with Detroit, where I am sure he will be very happy. If he remained with us I fear it would be only two years at the most before we would be forced to replace him with the younger Brimsek."

Thompson, whose home is in Vancouver, B.C., started his hockey career with the Canmore seniors in Alberta's Rocky Mountain Park League in 1920. He joined the Belone seniors in the Crowe's Nest Pass League in 1922 and signed up with Duluth in the United States Amateur Hockey Association in 1924.

The next three seasons were spent with Minneapolis, which became a professional club in 1927.

When Thompson discarded his amateur status, Ralph (Cooney) Weiland, then his teammate, followed his example. Ross purchased both, sight unseen, in 1928 and both have been Boston regulars ever since. Weiland's service with the Bruins was interrupted in 1932 when he was sold to Ottawa but Ross repurchased him from Detroit in 1936 and he now is serving as an extra forward and assistant manager.

Thompson will report to Manager Jack Adams immediatel yand probably will relieve Rookie Harvey Teno in the Detroit strings Thursday night against the championship Chicago Blackhawks. Ross said that young Brimsek would join his club that same night against Canadiens in Montreal.

SPORT SPICE

(By SID FEDER)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (A.P.). — Those Duke footballers really have it, in case you haven't heard.... Undefeated, untied, unscored upon, and unrecognized until they put Pitt in mothballs....This corner could got for a "Bowl" lineup like this: Notre Dame vs. Texas Christian, Duke vs. Oklahoma, Tennessee vs. Villanova, Texas Tech. vs. Georgetown, and a Carnegie-Holy Cross rematch.

Ceferino Garcia had to take 2¼ pounds off in three hours before the weigh-in for the Armstrong fight on Friday....Scaled 149¼ at 9 a.m., and had a warm session in the turkish baths....The grapevine reports Bill Terry will send Hank Leiber to Brooklyn fr Buddy Hassett to cure New York Giants' first base blues ....The howl is on to give Georgie Pace, classy Cleveland bantam, a crack at Sixto Escobar for the title.

They're all set for the biggest winter sport season ever in New York State and New England Mountain sections....Moon Mullins, Loyola of New Orleans coach, goes Bo McMillan one better in that suggestion to have coaches call plays on the field....Why not have the Alumni do it, says Moon, then the wolves couldn't howl so much.... Good idea at that.

This town wnast college footballers on its police force....Then will sign Jock Sutherland to block out those hold-upers on end sweeps, no doubt....Wonder how come Mike Jacobs was giving all us boys that song and dance about a $100,000 sellout for Armstrong-Garcia....When he must have suspected all along it wasn't even going to be close.

Bombers To Train At Oakville

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28. — (CP).—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Western Canada football champions, will train for the Dominion final at Oakville, Ont., instead of at St. Catharines as originally planned, Manager Joe Ryan announced last night.

Bombers, who will meet either Toronto Argonauts or Sarnia Imperials for the Grey Cup Dec. 10, decided the Appleby College grounds at Oakville would be more satisfactory for their training purposes than the Ridley College facilities at St. Catharines, Ryan said. All practises will be secret.

The western champions will leave Saturday for the East and start drills Monday at Oakville. Ryan, Coach Reg Threfall, Captain Art Stevenson and Line Coach Red Kabat will leave Thursday night, however, to see the Toronto-Sarnia Eastern final in Toronto Saturday.

HAS HIGH AIMS

MANCHESTER, England—(CP)—Miss Megan Taylor, 18-year-old world amateur figure-skating champion for women, will not turn professional, her present ambition being to win the 1940 Olympic title.

Barrie Wins Junior Title

BARRIE, Nov. 28.—Barrie Collegiate Institute won the junior rugby championship of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association by defeating Oshawa Collegiate and Vocational Institute by 14 to 2 here Saturday afternoon on a snow-covered field. There was very little fumbling. It was Barrie's first C.O.S.S.A. title. The locals had previously won the Georgian Bay group.

Saturday's match was a replay of a 3 to 3 tie game played between the same teams in Toronto the previous Saturday.

With The Boy Scouts

The St. Andrew's troop are still showing progress, and the following boys have passed various tests during the past week: Bruce Embro completed his tests on the Union Jack; Bill Crowe, Max Florence and Allan Johnson passed 2nd class first aid and signalling, while Allan also passed cooking.

First aid was the main factor of the last meeting in both drills and games. It was decided to hold parents' night on December 15, and would suggest that Dad and Mother make that reservation right now on the engagement list.

St. Paul's troop are again in the news. The patrol competition is going along strong with the Beavers in the lead wit hthe Wolves and Bulldogs trailing in order named. Floor hockey and other games filled the evening, and plans are going ahead for a troop orchestra and some hikes.

Two more boys have been invested into our great brotherhood, when Tommy Douglas and Ronald Naish made their cub promise in St. George's cub pack. Both of the youngsters are advancing in their 1st star work. Next week several proficiency and second star badges will be presented.

A.S.M. Siddall took the St. George's troop in first aid instruction. Mr. Siddall, being a member of St. John Ambulance Brigade, is an able teacher in this line.

At St. John's a going-up ceremony was held, George Gray and Lawrence Shannon leaving the pack and entering the troop, to continue the scout work and we wish them good scouting.

Somersaults, leap frog, ball throwing and first aid instruction was carried out.

Although two boys were lost to the troop, three new chums were accepted into the pack. James Swanston, Kenneth Simmons and Jack Murphy are the lucky three. Circle Tage and Three Deep were among the games played.

Every cub is asked to bring a toy next Friday; these toys will be taken to the fire hall to the firemen's Christmas toy shop.

The meeting will be short to give every cub a chance to witness the Santa Claus parade.

In the St. John's troop another of the Brown boys took another step forward when little Jimmy Brown was invested as patrol leader of the Otter patrol; some Otter says we.

The Scouter took semaphore instruction, and Troop Leader Ken told of first aid; this being needed after his exercises.

The troop is looking for a gym. mat, and any kind friend who has one locked away in his cellar would do the troop a good turn by donating same.

All Saints' have slid off the map this week. Gord White, their genial reporter, must have got lost in the snow.

Attention, All Scout Officers:

A cordial invitation is extended to you from Sacred Heart group; this group is holding its annual anniversary in the basement of the Sacred Heart church to-night, Monday, November 28, at 7.30 sharp. A good program is ready and the ladies will be on hand with refreshments afterwards. There will be a silver colection at the door as you enter, but don't let that keen you away. Just loosen up some of those silver dollars you have tucked away. The boys just want to meet the expenses of the evening. So let us all be at the Sacred Heart to-night; don't forget, 7.30 sharp.

The Tartan squad from the north end held a parents' night in the local association headquarters, and a nice crowd was there. One noticed the Bael trophy on the chairman's table; whether or not it was a challenge for the Dads to run for it or not was not reported. The chairman was Troop Committeeman N. L. Paterson, and a good job he made of it.

Being a little uncommon for this part of the country the Rattlesnake patrol rattled off with the honor flag for the past month.

Mr. Munroe, around whom the troop was first formed, gave a brief talk and stated that the reasons he believed in scouting were ten; they were the ten scout laws. Mr. Munroe then had the troop repeat each law for the benefit of their parents.

The most pleasant task of the evening fell to Mr. Douglas, assisted by Mr. Lyon, when they presented the troop with the Union Jack and Scout colors, mounted on poles. Mr. Douglas made the presentation on behalf of the group committee and parents, and said "In days of old the knights always carried their colors before them to lead them to victory and a remainder of their ideals."

We hope that these flags will assist the 11th troop in their aim and advancement in scouting."

Scouter Alex Chivas accepted the flags for the troop with a trust that the troop would go ahead with renewed effort as a sign of their sincere appreciation of the interest shown and the honor of the British flag, the standard of our Empire, and the Scout flag the standard of a living brotherhood.

After camp fire, refreshments were served by Mrs. N. L. Paterson and her committee.

The meeting of the 5th All Saints troop was held at 7.30 on Friday night. A half-hour study period as well as knot relays and handball games and the usual inspection was held. A court of honor meeting was held after the meeting. The Beaver patrol is duty patrol for next week and will all the boys of that patrol be out at 7.15.—The Skipper.

Reeve, Council All Brand New In Tweed Council

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 28.—A new reeve and council were placed in office in the village of Tweed for the new year by acclamation, as follows:

Reeve—C. H. Kerr.

Council—Edgar W. Jones, Joseph Fobert, Arthur McCarey, S. B. Rollins.

Utilities Commission — A. J. Maynes.

None of the former councillors or reeves contested the public offices this fall, and as a result there has been a complete change over none of the former council members running this year. However, one of the former councillors and reeve for many years, S. B. Rollins, has returned to the council, and will assist greatly in adding the experience of an old hand to the new councillors on the board.

No opposition was presented on the Utilities Commission, A. J. Maynes being the only nominee.

Local Swimmers Race In Toronto

Led by Stan McBride, Alex Carlisle and Al Marshall, local "Y" swimmers made a fine showing Saturday afternoon against the starry Toronto West End Y Club, the latter winning 28-17.

In the 40 yds free style event Stan McBride finished half a body length ahead of West End's Bill Marshall and Ollie Greenwood in the fast time of 20 1-5 secs.

McBride also came from behind to place second in the 100 yds. free.

Al Marshall, local breast-stroker, had things all his own way to win the 40 yds. breast stroke event and Rollie Rennie was just a touch behind Dick Lough and Art Owen in the back stroke event.

Exhibitions of diving by Warren Northey and George Burleigh were studied closely by Gerald Corbett and Stan McBride and should prove very helpful.

Feature Event.

A feature event however, was the 440 yds, free style in which Alex Carlisle took 24 seconds off his best time for the distance and finished second to Fred Sansom, one of Canada's leading distance swimmers. Carlisle overcame a 5 yd. lead to finish in front of Harold James who was third. Sansom's time was 5 mins. 41 secs. and Carlisle's 5 mins. 51 secs., 4 seconds faster than James.

Gord Minty, local coach, is quite pleased with the results of the meet and is endeavoring to arrange a return meet in the near future.

Among those making the trip were Gerald Corbett, Ed Prete, Stan McBride, Wilf Jones, Ed Holland, Eric Edmondson, Rollie Rennie, Paul Hickey, Gord Thomson, Alex Carlisle, Al Marshall, Walter Ferris and Gord Minty.

Complete results were as follows.

440 Free Style—1 Fred Sansom, Toronto. Time 5.41; 2 Alex Carlisle, Peterborough; 3 Harold James, Toronto.

40 Free Style—1 Stan McBride, Peterborough. Time 20 1-5 secs.; 2 Bill Marshall, Toronto; 3 Olie Greenwood, Toronto.

40 Breast Stroke—1 Al Marshall, Peterborough. Time 26 2-5 secs; 2 Jack Cook, Toronto; 3 Henry Greer, Toronto.

40 Back Stroke—1 Dick Lough, Toronto. Time 26 secs.; 2 Art Owen, Toronto; 3 Rollie Rennie, Peterborough.

100 Free—1 Bill Marshall, Toronto; Time 63 secs; 2 Stan McBride, Peterborough; 3 Doug Brownridge, Toronto.

Pays $5 For Car Then Finds Driver Not Owner

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Chandos, Nov. 28.

ON THURSDAY, a car travelling towards Apsley sustained a blowout which resulted in a collision with a telephone pole about five miles south of the village. The car was so badly wrecked that the driver sold it forthright to a local resident for $5, and now it is being reported the car, a Buick, was not the property of the seller. None of the occupants was injured.

Catholic Women Will Make Christmas Cake

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 28.—The regular monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League, was held on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Dan Shannon with an attendance of forty. The president, Miss Gertrude Moloney, occupied the chair.

The meeting opened with prayer and the league's hymn, "Come Holy Ghost." The minutes of the last meeting having been adopted, the president gave a brief account of the Diocesan convention held in Kingston. A "Quiz" contest was conducted by Miss G. Quigley. Rev. Father H. J. Farrell then addressed the gathering, thanking the members for their co-operation in the recent bazaar. Father Farrell then contributed a solo, "Oft in the Stilly Night," in his pleasing tenor voice accompanied by Mrs. H. A. McNally at the piano. Miss Anna V. Foley was the winner at the euchre contest which followed. A delicious lunch was served, after which Mrs. James Black contributed a comic recitation, "Bridget." It was decided that a large Christmas cake would be made and each member would dispose of ten tickets. The drawing to take place on Christmas Eve. A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess and the gathering then dispersed.

Mrs. F. M. Ryan Dies In Asphodel

A resident of Asphodel township for more than half a century and one of the most highly respected citizens in the district, Mrs. Frances Ryan, widow of the late Michael Ryan, died Sunday morning in her 84th year. She had been ill only a short time and death occurred at her home at lot 13, concession 2, Asphodel.

She was born in Otonabee township, daughter of the late John Maguire and Ellen Lehane and moved to Asphodel 56 years ago. Her husband predeceased her three years ago. She was a devout member of St. Paul's Church, Norwood and took an active part in all affairs of the church.

She is survived by one son and three daughters, Anthony Ryan at home; Mrs. Jeremiah Moloney, Asphodel; Rev. Sister Mary Eileen, Mildmay, Ont.; and Mrs. John Towns, Douro. Two sisters and five brothers also survive. They are Misses Kathleen and Mary Maguire, Chicago; Senator W. H. Maguire, Toronto; Louis, Martin, Andrew and Sarsfield Maguire, all of Chicago, Illinois.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning, November 30th, from the late residence in Asphodel township to St. Paul's Church, Norwood, for requiem mass at nine o'clock. Interment will be in St. Paul's Cemetery, Norwood.

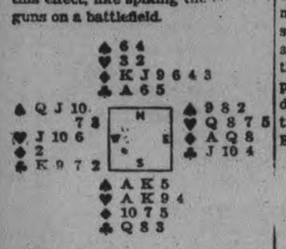
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

SPIKING THE GUNS

INSTEAD OF WORKING on your own side's suit, it is sometimes better to concentrate on crippling the declarer's. Knocking out the dummy's single side entry can have this effect, like spiking the enemy's guns on a battlefield.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

South bid 1-Heart on this deal, North 2-Diamonds, South 2-No Trump and North 3-No Trump.

The spade Q was led by West and won with South's K. The diamond 10 was finessed and lost. East returned the spade 9. Declarer ducked this lead but won the next with the spade A. Then the diamond J was played and won by East, who returned the heart 5. South won and cashed his four remaining diamonds and the club A.

East had a chance to set the contract by postponing the return of his partner's suit until he had knocked the club A out of the dummy, while he retained the diamond A. Then when declarer led the second round of diamonds, East should have refused to win. Taking the third round would then have prevented declarer from cashing the diamonds and obtaining sufficient tricks to make his contract, which East's play allowed him to do.

Mackenzie Robertson New Head Hastings Liberal Association

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 28.— The annual meeting of West Hastings Liberal Association was held in Marmora town hall on Friday afternoon, the spacious building being filled to the doors with a large and enthusiastic gathering. Delegates were present from all parts of the riding.

After initial business had been transacted, memorials were read for the late Thomas E. Laycock and John Bapty, the audience standing for two minutes of silence.

Harold Carr, M.P., Northumberland, then gave a discourse on the economic situation of Ontario due to the courage of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn. He spoke of the great reduction in interest on the provincial debt when Mr. Hepburn called for tenders on issue of bonds and struck a blow to the bankers which resulted in great savings to the province. Mr. Carr also spoke of the mothers' allowance, old age pensions and blind pensions, and principles of economy pursued by Mr. Hepburn and his cabinet in relieving municipalities of any cost in this connection. He also discussed the subsidy on taxes to municipalities and the reduction of auto licenses, also how counties had been relieved in the building of highways and a road subsidy to townships had been increased from forty to fifty per cent. He spoke of the economy practised in the Attorney-General's Department where Crown Prosecutors took the place of special committees in the past at a great saving to the province. Mr. Carr told of the great saving on the revision of the Hydro contracts.

At this point Mr. B. O. Lott came to the platform and made the statement that Conservatives were holding down some of the best positions in the riding in Hydro and other capacities and it was his opinion that West Hastings was the most abused riding in the province in this respect.

Delegates from different townships gave reports on conditions in their respective townships. Mr. Hugh Moloney, president of Marmora Liberal Association, made a strong plea for a continuation of No. 14 highway through Marmora and Lake townships to Coe Hill, stressing the great resources of timber and tourist attractions in Lake township.

Time To Organize.

Mr. Rork Ferguson, M.P., was then called and gave a short discourse comparing conditions at present under the Hepburn government and previous to 1934. He spoke of the reduction in taxes and also in car licenses and the great amount of employment now furnished by the government. Mr. Ferguson said it was a great calamity for West Hastings when Hon. J. A. Faulkner was defeated in the last election, which was due to lack of organization, and it was up to the Liberals of West Hastings to get together and work together and elect a member for this riding.

Mr. A. B. Collins, secretary, briefly addressed the meeting, after which election of officers took place, as follows:

President, Mackenzie Robertson, Belleville; 1st Vice-Pres., Norman Gilroy, Coe Hill; 2nd Vice-Pres., Mrs. Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro; 3rd Vice-Pres., Roger Meiklejohn, Stirling; Treasurer, Ed Kellaway, Belleville; Secretary, A. B. Collins, K.C.

Right Hon. Mackenzie King, Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn and Rork Ferguson, M.P., were named Honorary Presidents.

Resolutions of grateful appreciation and confidence in Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, and Hon. Mitchell Hepburn were read by Ormond Butler, also a vote of thanks to Marmora District Liberal Association, Marmora Municipal Council and Chief of Police and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Japs Bomb Town On Borders Of Hong Kong

Hong Kong, Nov. 28 (AP)

JAPANESE AIRCRAFT today bombed the town of Shumchun, on the border of the British crown colony, adding to the number of wounded Chinese soldiers and civilian refugees seeking to enter the colony.

Japanese troops were reported only half a mile from the frontier. At least 1,000 Chinese soldiers already have crossed into British territory and now are interned.

While real warfare goes on only a short distance from the colony, Hong Kong's naval forces are engaged in manoeuvres in which the colony is being defended against imaginary invaders.

Urge Cheesemakers To Use School

CORNWALL, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Eastern Ontario cheesemakers in convention here Saturday were assured by M. C. McPhail, principal of Kemptville Agricultural School, that facilities of the school's extension department would at all times be at their service.

Mr. McPhail, addressing delegates at this morning's sessions of the two-day Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers' Association convention, said members of the Kemptville School staff are expected to conduct extension work in livestock, field crops, poultry, horticulture, drainage and soil work. Upon request, speakers would be sent out to various sections of the eastern part of the province to assist those in the cheese industry in overcoming problems.

"Our school is there for you to make use of, and my hope is that when confronted with problems you will contact us and every possible assistance will be rendered," he said.

Other speakers included Claude Flood, past president of the Eastern Ontario Cheesemakers Association; George A. Thimens, cheese grader; L. E. Singleton, associate director of marketing service, dairy products division, Ottawa; and Dr. A. L. Gibson, superintendent eastern dairy school, Kemptville.

A paper dealing with the Dominion cheese industry was read in French by Mr. Thimens. Mr. Singleton gave a presentation of a paper on "Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom." Dr. Gibson gave an address on the subject, "Introspection of Our Cheesemaking Conditions.'"

The convention closed yesterday afternoon after members heard an address by C. E. Lackner, provincial director of dairying. After discussing and voting on resolution placed before the convention Thursday, following recording of the vote, election of the association officers for 1939 took place.

Belmont Pioneer Celebrates Birthday

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 28.—Receiving congratulations from a host of friends in this district, Mrs. James Woods, Belmont township pioneer, is to-day celebrating her 92nd birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. Nicholson, in Havelock. All her children, three daughters and five sons, were present for the occasion.

Mrs. Woods was born at Healy Falls, near Campbellford, on November 28, 1846. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Munroe, her maiden name being Salinda Munroe.

When she was 17 years of age she moved to Oak Lake district, in Belmont township, where she remained a resident until she came to Havelock a few years ago to live with her daughter. At 19 she married James Woods, who with her parents were the first settlers near Oak Lake. The log house which her husband built at this time is now owned by her son, John Woods, who still lives on the family homestead. Her husband died in 1932.

Her family includes three daughters, Mrs. A. Nicholson of Havelock; Mrs. R. Althouse, Deer Lake; Mrs. A. Althouse, Healy Falls; and five sons, James of Havelock; Daniel, Deer Lake; John, Herbert and Howard, all of Oak Lake.

With the exception of her hearing, Mrs. Woods has retained full use of her faculties and spends much of her time knitting, her favorite pastime. She has never undergone an operation of any kind, nor suffered any sickness during her lifetime.

She recalls that when she first moved to Oak Lake with her parents, the only mode of travel between there and Healy Falls was walking. A few years later oxen were used for this journey, which took over a day and a half to cover. They would travel from Healy Falls to Round Lake, a distance of 18 miles the first day, camp there overnight, and then cover the remaining six miles the next day.

She remembers quite clearly also that Indians frequently were seen near their homestead at Oak Lake. During her earleir years she used to make the material for their own clothes, picking, carding, spinning and weaving the wool into cloth.

Mrs. Woods has been very busy yesterday and to-day happily receiving many of her friends who called to extend their birthday greetings at her home.

Ramsay MacDonald Said Traitor In Book By Former Secretary

LONDON, Nov. 28 (CP).—Traitor to the principles he expounded, ready to sacrifice a cause, party, or even a friend to achieve personal aggrandisement and power—such is the indictment levelled against Ramsay MacDonald, Britain's "forgotten" Prime Mniister, in a book written by his former Parliamentary Private Secretary.

The book, "The Tragedy of Ramsay MacDonald," written by L. McNeill Weir, Labor member of Parliament for Stirling, has provoked a mild furore in England.

The author, who was private secretary to Britain's first Socialist Premier from 1924 to 1931, declares the biography was written shortly after he parted company with his chief, as an exposure of what he considered a great apostasy. He says he found publication "a difficult and dangerous adventure." Several attempts were made to suppress the book.

The late Prime Minister is accused of "flagrant hypocrisy" throughout his political career. This, the author contends, had been revealed by his conduct during the bitter conflict over the Zinoviev letter, at the time of the 1926 general strike and finally in the launching of the National Government.

Mr. Weir accuses MacDonald of deliberate falsehood in his negotiations which preceded formation of the Union administration in 1931 and that he secretly planned the fusion, with himself as Premier, months before the economic crisis. On the day the National Government was formed the author says he urged MacDonald to explain his actions to the Parliamentary Labor Party the next day.

Didn't Want to Be Shot.

"Do you think I am going there to be shot at by those fellows?" MacDonald is quoted as having asked.

The author declares MacDonald was a Conservative by nature who "never acted precipitately and had always a hundred reasons for not acting at all." He had few friends and trusted nobody.

Features of MacDonald's character, Mr. Weir says, were his love of luxury, his worship of wealth, fondness for display, and his social ambition.

He had a feminine avidity for scandal, and, with characteristic disloyalty would listen to any aspersions or disparagements of his ministers and colleagues....

"From morning till night on most days he spent his time listening luxuriously to the tinsel clink of compliment. In surfeit of sycophancy the most precious hours of the day were passed. The evenings, too, were often spent in the role of society lion in the salons of Mayfair."

All the time he had affected the pose of the "weary Titan slaving on," although he had 10 secretaries.

Mr. Weir caustically observes that Gladstone got by with three and that even during the war the Prime Minister had no more than six.

Anticipating possible criticism of his book, Mr. Weir has this to say in a foreword:

"I was told that I must not publish an attack on MacDonald while he was Prime Minister as it was in the national interest that confidence in the Premier be maintained.

"I was told when MacDonald left the Government that it was not fair to kick a man when he was down. I was told when MacDonald died that it was not right to attack a man when he was dead."

Later he adds: "It can be seen now that he never could at heart believe in the principles of brotherhood and self-denial which are the bases of Socialism. Just for a handful of silver he left us. Just for a ribbon to stick in his coat he turned on those who had befriended him and sought to drive deeper into the slough of poverty the people who had helped him out of it."

Ballyduff Congregation Honors Rev. H. V. Walker And Family

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BALLYDUFF, Nov. 28.—On Wednesday evening a large number of the Ballyduff congregation and other friends of Rev. H. V. Walker, pastor of the church assembled at the church to spend a social evening previous to the departure of Rev. Walker for his new field of service after having ministered to the Ballyduff friends for the exceptionally long period of twenty-one years.

Friends were present from Cavan, Lifford, Bethany, Pontypool, Lotus and Yelverton as well as Ballyduff.

Among the guests were the first couple married by Mr. Walker during his ministry here, Mr. and Mrs. David White of Cavan. The bride was Miss Ella Rowan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Rowan, who were connected with the Presbyterian Church at Bethany which has been demolished.

Mr. Henry Ward, an active church worker was chairman for the evening and spoke appropriately for the occasion. A brief program of music and readings was enjoyed and an address expressive of deep appreciation of the congregation and friends of the untiring efforts of their pastor in promoting the best interests of the church and community, of the warm hospitality always extended by Rev. Walker and his capable helpmate and two sons at the manse.

Beautiful gifts were then presented including a handsome tea wagon for Mrs. Walker, a travelling brief case artistically designed and arranged for utility in every detail for Rev. Walker and two accessory sets including belts, tie clips etc. for the Walker boys.

New Supreme Court Building In '40 After 62 Years In Carpenter Shop

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—(CP).—After more than six decades in a dilapidated former carpenter shop, the Supreme Court of Canada in a year and a half will be moved to a palatial new $2,500,000 building being constructed west of Parliament Hill on a cliff overlooking the Ottawa River.

For 62 years the highest court in the land has been housed in a small, rodent-infested structure at the foot of the Hill. Million-dollar government buildings have sprung up around it. Across the street is the huge confederation block and down Wellington street are the justice building and the gleaming-white Bank of Canada building. Behind it is the West block and the $13,000,000 Centre block.

But by the spring of 1940 the Supreme Court will have a home comparable to any court on the continent. Excavation has already started and the Public Works Department today disclosed details of the new courthouse.

In the five-storey building devoted exclusively to the higher courts, there will be suites for the seven Supreme Court judges and the two justices of the exchequer court. There will be a lunchroom, a lounge, a conference room and a private reception chamber for the chief justice.

The valuable Supreme Court library with its thousands of legal tomes and original statutes, now gathering dust and being chewed by mice and rats in the old building, will be placed in fire-proof stacks with a capacity for more than 250,000 volumes.

Scene of Greatest Cases

The courtroom itself on the first floor will be reached by a monumental staircase from the main hall on the ground floor and in this court will be argued the great Canadian legal cases. At present counsel are heard in a musty, little courtroom in the attic of the workshop used by carpenters building Canada's first House of Commons—into which the court moved in 1876 on a temporary basis until better accommodation could be found.

The building will harmonize with the grey-stone, semi-gothic architecture of the justice and confederation blocks nearby. An 80-foot wide terrace will surround it and under the terrace will be a parking space for 165 automobiles. The building itself will be 239 feet long and 209 feet wide.

The exchequer court will be on the ground floor, the supreme court, 44 feet by 55 feet, on the first along with anterooms, judges' chambers, waiting rooms and even a press room—an unheard of luxury in the present building.

On the second floor will be the judges' private offices, a conference room, 10 judges' suites and the chief justice's reception room. The third floor will include the private lunch room, a lounge, a private library and a storage for records. Attic space will provide more storage room.

Two basements will include garage space for the judges' cars and storage for records and old books. The contract calls for the work to be completed by April 7, 1940, and the court will move to the new quarters as soon as possible after that date. The present building will be demolished.

Fourteen Named Tweed Nominations

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 28. — The annual village nominations for Tweed were held in the Township Hall on Thursday evening, where a large attendance was gathered. What promised to be a fiery session, however, did not materialize, as under the able chairmanship of Dr. W. A. Paul, a very orderly meeting was held.

The following were nominated:

For Reeve—Reeve W. H. Sayers, Charles H. Kerr. For Councillors (four to be elected)—Arthur McCarey, S. B. Rollins, Samuel B. Mcgee, S. R. Curry, A. J. Maynes, Tracey J. Quinn, T. E. Moffatt, E. Myles, W. A. Beatty, E. W. Jones, John W. Kingston, Napoleon King, Joseph Fobert, and Charles E. Way. For Public Utilities Commissioner—A. J. Maynes.

Messrs. Tracey Quinn, Arthur McCarey, S. B. McGee, S. R. Curry, T. E. Moffatt, and N. King withdrew their names while the members of the former Council, with the exception of Mr. Quinn, stated their intention of contesting their seats. Undecided as to whether they would run were Messrs. E. W. Jones, A. J. Maynes, and W. A. Beatty, John W. Kingston, and Joseph Fobert.

Arrested in Tweed.

Fred Jeffrey, 55, giving Roblin as his home address, was arrested in Tweed early on Saturday on charges of obtaining clothing and money under false pretences. Chief J. C. Hayes effected the arrest of Jeffrey after he had allegedly obtained money and clothing from residents of Tweed after relating emotional tales regarding his home having burned and his family being destitute, Chief Hayes revealed following the arrest.

Jeffrey appeared before C. H. Kerr, Tweed, Justice of the Peace, and was remanded to the custody of the County Jail until December 1. On Saturday Chief Hayes found a quantity of old clothing, said to have been given to the accused man, cached in a barn on the outskirts of Tweed.

Sermon Criticisms Start Pastor Off On "Silence Strike"

MONTREAL, Nov. 28 — (CP). — Stirred by criticism of his preachings, Rev. C. E. Combe to-day was on a "silence strike" from the pulpit of St. Jude's Anglican Church here.

The clergyman, for 14 years rector of the church on Vinet Street, said last night he expected to preserve his self-imposed silence until Christmas as a riposte to those of his congregation who criticized the views he expressed in sermons taking their moral from the recent Czechoslovakan crisis.

The element in his congregation hostile to the ideas he preached constituted a minority, Mr. Combe said. From some of them, he said, he already had received apologies and explanations.

While he asserted his intention of remaining away from the pulpit, he made it clear he was not giving up his other pastoral duties. They will be carried on as usual during the sermon-less period.

The minister said his "silence" had been in effect since the Sunday following Armistice Day, November 13. He told his congregation he was stopping his sermons, declaring the symbolic two minutes silence of Armistice Day was "the first finest expression of feeling when you are deeply stirred."

Though one Sunday has passed since then, the pulpit of St. Jude's has not yet been vacant at a service. A clergyman from Verdun filled in for the pastor last Sunday.

But this coming Sunday, he declared, there will be no one to preach the sermon when the congregation assembles for the service.

In disclosing his strike, Mr. Combe made it clear he had taken the step without consultation with his superiors in the church. He arrived at the decision following a week's reflection, he said.

THE MISERY OF HIS COLD BEGINS TO GO

When you just do this:

Massage VapoRub on the throat, chest, and back. Then spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. (No dosing, no stomach upsets.)

VapoRub's poultice-and-vapor action goes right to work—direct through the skin like a poultice, while its medicated vapors released by the body warmth are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This two-way action (inhalation and stimulation) loosens phlegm—clears the air-passages—checks tendency to cough—eases muscular soreness or tightness—relieves local congestion—and he soon feels comfortable again.

Long after he relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working. And often by morning the worst of his cold is over. No wonder so many mothers put faith in VapoRub whenever anyone in the family has a cold!

Daladier Prepares For Trouble If Strike Breaks

PARIS, Nov. 29—(AP).—Premier Daladier, warning that "the fate of the regime and the nation may be at stake," marched troops to vital centres to-day and placed all public services under military control in an effort to break the scheduled general strike.

Posters announcing decrees which transferred public service workers from civil to military control were put up this morning on walls all over the capital.

Army detachments rode into Paris by truck and rail to swell the ranks of 25,000 soldiers already garrisoned in the capital district, while thousands of mobile guards and gendarmes were massed in labor centres ready for duty.

The 24-hour strike, called by the General Confederation of Labor, is to start at 4 a.m. tomorrow.

In a report to President Albert Lebrun, Daladier said:

"Harmful propaganda, of which the Government knows both the hidden goal and the inspiration, is attempting by rising against the laws of the republic to create in the country a state of agitation which threatens not only to compromise public order but to influence the external situation of France in a most dangerous way.

Be No Failure.

"The government, which will let none of the rights it holds by law be limited and which will fail in none of its duties toward the republic, will be able to take all necessary measures to face events."

The moderate press published urgent appeals for a last minute compromise between the Cabinet and leaders of the strike which many feared might lead to civil fighting.

The newspaper La Republique said "history teaches that it is generally like this that revolutions begin."

"Let us have good will from both sides," pleaded L'Ordre, "before barricades are raised."

L'Oeuvre said: "Men of good will must seek a compromise up to the last minute. History tells us in bloody characters what happens when the republic goes into battle against the masses of the working people."

The order to the army came after the Premier had rejected attempts by war veterans and political parties to mediate between the government and the labor unions.

THE AUNT AND UNCLE of young Herschel Grynszpan, whose assassination of Ernst Vom Rath brought down the Nazi wrath on the Jews in Germany, today were sentenced to four months' imprisonment and fined 100 francs ($2.60) each in a Paris police court.

The elderly couple, Abraham and Chana Grynszpan, were convicted of having given asylum to their 17-year-old nephew in their small tailor shop after he had been ordered expelled from France as an undesirable alien.

Quints To Give Up Fair Offer Over $500,000

TORONTO, November 29—(CP)—Guardians of the Dionne quintuplets have decided the 1939 World's Fair at New York will have to get along without the famous children as a feature attraction.

Premier Hepburn, in a statement last night, said he agreed with Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, the country doctor who brought the children into the world 4½ years ago, and Oliva Dionne, father of the five babies, that they should not be placed on exhibition at the Fair. Judge J. A. Valin, another guardian, said he was "absolutely opposed" to exhibition of the children under any circumstances.

"It was never given consideration by us at any time," he said.

The Premier said Dr. Dafoe told him he was "definitely opposed" to the idea, and that Dionne objected to the scheme both as father and guardian of the children.

"I heartily concur in the attitude taken by these two gentlemen. As far as the Government of Ontario is concerned, that ends the matter," he said.

At North Bay, Dr. Dafoe said he always had been opposed to exhibiting the children at the Fair. He had lunched in New York with Grover Whalen, Fair chairman, whom he told that so far as he was concerned the plan was an impossibility, and that any negotiations would have to be conducted through Mr. Hepburn.

Dr. Dafoe said the amount offered was "considerably larger" than $500,000. He added the proposal never was discussed formally.

MORE HORSES

TRURO, N.S.—(CP).—Livestock census for 1938 showed Nova Scotia's horse population at June 1 was 42,540 compared with 42,470 at the same time in 1937. Colts and fillies numbered 5,160 compared with 4,350 the previous year.

Grand Jury Expenses Are Debated

Unanimous Objection To Costs Of Juries Is Taken By Council

Unanimous objection to the cost of grand juries featured the opening session of the County Council at the court house Monday afternoon. The members while not objecting to the existence of grand juries said the county institutions had been inspected four times within the past year by jurymen along with the regular government inspection.

Warden Ernie McDonald said all of the hospital and other institutions are under the supervision and management of a competent board and inspection once a year would be sufficient. "I objected to this continuous round of inspection when the Council sat last Spring. At that time the buildings had been inspected three times within twelve months and now I find they are inspected again." He was of the opinion such expense was unwarranted.

Miss Jennie Batten said the grand jury at last session of Supreme Court presided over by Mr. Justice Urquhart was told both by her and by the sheriff that the buildings had been inspected three times.

"They were most stubborn about the whole thing, she added, and they spent four days going over the buildings minutely. In the past it was the custom to hire two cars, with seven men riding in one and six in the other but the last grand jury ordered three cars.

Inspectors Do Good Job

Reeve Coughlin of Douro suggested that the government inspectors did a very thorough job, and he felt one inspection was sufficient.

Reeve Gifford of Ennismore while voicing opposition to any unwarranted spending of money said possibly the wording of the judge's charge made grand jurymen believe it was imperative that they inspect the county institutions. "I understand sometimes the Judge orders they be inspected and at other times it is left to the discretion of the jury. Could the question not be left with the presidingjudge and we could see to it he was notified before he sat of the previous inspection.

"Nine of those 13 men were from the City of Peterborough, and they are urging a new hospital," said Reeve Tanner of Lakefield. "If they are so keen on a new hospital let them head off the subscription list with the amounts they drew while serving on the grand jury. That would impress the county council."

"Those inspections are costing too much money and I for one do not feel they are warranted. It is time the public was informed of the exact

Ocean No Longer Protection Mackenzie Reveals

New War Planes Able To Cross From Europe Bomb Canada, Return Without Halt

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 (CP).—Defence Minister Mackenzie said here last night that Canada has a problem of national defence and the "historic barricades of water and ice no longer protect us."

In a speech carried over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Minister said advances in aeronautical science had altered geography and annihilated distance.

"Not long ago intrepid Russian flyers took off in the heart of Europe and flew across the Arctic wastes down through Canada to California without a stop.

"A few days ago, two British planes flew from Egypt to Australia, a distance greater than that from a point in the heart of Europe to Montreal and back again. The lesson is that an air fleet could start from Europe, cross the sea, bomb Canadian cities, and return home without landing.

"I need not remind you that the world in which these changes in military science have taken place is also a very disturbed world. We have all seen the growth of ruthless dictatorships, rattling their swashbuckling sabres and clamoring for expansion. The pendulum has swung back and again as in her pioneer days. Canada has a problem of national defence."

The speech was one of a series in which various ministers and high government officials are outlining the work of the departments.

Ottawa's Plans

Mr. Mackenzie said that when parliament voted more than $35,000,000 for national defence at each of the past two sessions the beginning of the Dominion's national defence system was launched.

Near Starvation In Stellarton

STELLARTON, N.S., Nov. 29—(CP). — Conditions among unemployed men's families in Stellarton were such that children were living in semi-starvation, report of a survey by Stellarton local, United Mine Workers, said to-day. The report was forwarded to the Nova Scotia Government in the form of a brief.

Salient facts of the brief were that statements had been taken from 80 families, covering 621 persons, declaring the average earnings of the families in the last nine months had been $8 a week. From this, food, clothing, milk, medicine, electric lights and dental care had to be provided.

Eighty per cent of the children did not know the taste of cow's milk, the brief said. Milk in any form was a luxury in "the most of the homes." People were trying to live on 19 cents a day "which is below the rate allowed to maintain inmates of any prison or industrial home in the Dominion of Canada."

The brief concluded with an appeal to the Government to forward enough money to provide for the children.

The Government's reply suggested the U.M.W. refer the matter to the Town of Stellarton, so assistance could be given "through regular municipal channels."

Santa Thumbs Ride As His Deer Falls, Breaks Leg

Steubenville, Ont., Nov. 29 (CP)

SANTA CLAUS ran into difficulty when he came to this village. One of the deer pulling his sleigh fell and broke a leg; the stranded Santa "thumbed" a ride with the first vehicle that came along. He finished the parade on the running board of an ambulance.

Insurance Firms To Balk On Nazi Claims

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—(AP)—German insurance companies presented claims today to foreign underwriters for damages done Jewish property during the anti-semitic violence Nov. 10. Thus the question of who is to pay for the burned synagogues, smashed windows and looted stores became international.

Jews themselves have been ordered to repair the damages but the government has seized all insurance claims, to be applied to a $400,000,000 punitive levy on Jews for the slaying of the diplomat Ernst von Rath by a Jewish boy in Paris, and is forcing insurance companies to pay.

Nearly all large German insurance companies carry foreign reinsurance and therefore presented claims to British and other foreign companies which had this re-insurance. The claims were based on the grounds that "civil commotion" occurred in mid-November in Germany.

A secret police order forbade Jews to appear publicly on the "day of National Solidarity" Dec. 3, when government and Nazi party officials collect money on streets for the winter relief fund.

It was learned some foreign companies planned to refuse to pay the re-insurance claims because the "civil commotion" clause was struck out of contracts by Germans themselves, who had argued such developments were impossible in an authoritarian state.

'New Depression In 40-Cent Wheat'-Bracken

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 (C.P.).—Premier John Bracken of Manitoba today called for a definite national policy regarding the increasingly grave world wheat situation.

The question vital to the national welfare was how Canada was to continue to find markets for two-thirds of her wheat in the face of steadily shrinking world markets.

"Factors outside our own control have reduced from 760,000,000 to 540,000,000 bushels the world demand in the last 8 or 10 years, and the world is producing as much as in the past," Premier Bracken said. "What is to be the national policy under these conditions?" If we had known 60 years ago of this situation, we would not have developed more than half the acreage we have. If the situation we actually have can't be saved, let us start to back up. Let the railway deficit become greater, and a quarter of a million farmers go on relief.

Germany, Italy, France and even Great Britain were growing more wheat each year.

Result of all this was that the carryover of wheat next spring would be almost as much as eight years ago, which was responsible for seven years of low prices.

Begin at Home.

"The sound thing is to try to get back to international trading. Let us begin with ourselves. Have we done the right thing by just trading with ourselves?

"If the world won't take the wheat thus being grown, the one thing left is to try to set a planned arrangement between the Argentine, Australia, the United States and Canada, to limit production. The alternative is to go on fighting each other for the little market there is."

With continued "40-cent wheat," what would happen to the Western farmer? How long could those provinces continue to give their people a minimum of services. How long could 290,000 farmers be kept on 290,000 farms?

"If we have to limit production by one-third, how are we to keep those people on the farms? What will happen to the railway deficit?"

Premier Bracken said a conference had been called for Winnipeg for the middle of next month to try to bring together all the pertinent facts regarding Canada's relation to the world wheat problems, all the facts regarding this cloud seen on the horizon by the West.

"There can only be a solution by better understanding between nations," he said. "We understand that the Canadian people don't understand this problem.

Marooned Hunters Dig Out In Maine

AURORA, Me., Nov. 29 (AP). — Only a few remote hunting camps remained isolated by snow drifts today as rescue crews opened up most of a 50-square mile area where 100 men and women were imprisoned over the weekend.

Police Lieutenant Colby Wardwell estimated a majority of the marooned already had returned to their homes. Many were critically short of food until relief reached them.

Many of the rescuers were close to exhaustion after 36 hours' work. One unit ploughing the Bangor-Calais road ran short of food, and state police rushed supplies from Bangor.

The state pressed airplanes into service to drop food to the imprisoned hunters yesterday at the height of the emergency.

Nazis Mobilizing To Attack Poland, Hungary Says London Press

Six Divisions Ready, Other 3 By End Of Week, All Leaves Cancelled In 3 Corps; Claim Hitler Just Waiting Excuse

LONDON, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas).—The News Chronicle (Liberal) today charged Germany is mobilizing three army corps for armed action against Poland and Hungary.

"Six divisions are already completely mobilized," the newspaper said. "The three remaining divisions will be ready, it is estimated, by the end of this week. The army corps affected are the Eighth, stationed at Breslau, the 17th at Vienna, and one other believed to be the 14th."

The newspaper said all leaves had been cancelled for officers whose regiments are in the nine divisions making up the three army corps.

"The speed with which the mobilization has been carried out has dislocated the goods traffic between Berlin and Vienna on the direct line which runs through Prague," the News Chronicle said.

"It is believed that these unusual preparations are the reply of Germany to the persistent interest of Hungary and Poland in Ruthenia. In well-informed circles it is suspected that Chancellor Hitler wishes to hold his hand until some particularly flagrant incident on the eastern frontier of Czechoslovakia prompts the pro-German elements in the Czechoslovak or Ruthenian governments to call for armed support from Germany."

(Since the partition of Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary have carried on a campaign for session of the Carpathian Ukraine (Ruthenia) to Hungary and the resulting creation of a common frontier between Hungary and Poland).

1,060,000 Under Arms

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP) — The newspaper Lokalanzeiger disclosed today that German armed forces have increased from 14 to 18 army corps since the annexation of Austria and Sudetenland.

There are now six army group commands, instead of three, located at Berlin, Frankfort-on-Main, Dresden, Leipzig, Vienna, and Hanover, the paper said.

Official figures on manpower were lacking but reliable estimates placed the standing army at 1,060,000.

Brand Report Lie

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (CP-Havas)—A British press report that Germany had mobilized three army corps along the Czechoslovak border was termed a "perfidious lie" by the newspaper Lokalanzeiger today.

The newspaper seized the occasion to attack freedom of the press in Great Britain, charging the report was destined to sabotage the "work of peace" in central Europe.

Two Of 7 Escape As Mild Seas Wreck Airliner

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29—(AP).—United States coast guard headquarters here reported today two persons escaped when a United Air Lines plane carrying seven persons, 3 of a crew and 4 passengers, was wrecked near Point Reyes. The men were Pilot Charles Stead and Isadore R. Edelstein, Los Angeles, a passenger.

The luxury airliner was smashed to pieces on a rocky ocean beach after it had fought an 84-mile-an-hour wind en route from Seattle to Oakland. It was forced down on rough sea when its fuel tanks ran dry. Huge waves had carried the craft rapidly to the rocky shore.

Other passengers aboard the twin-engined plane were H. L. Shonts, San Jose, Calif., J. B. Hefelbower, San Francisco and Philip Hart, Portland, Ore.

The co-pilot was Lloyd Jones, Seattle, and the stewardess was Frona "Bobbie" Clay of Alameda, Calif.

H. J. Tsleghaar, Point Reyes lighthouse keeper, said the waves bore the big plane onto the rocky beach and smashed it to pieces.

"It's a total wreck," he said.

The wreckage was wedged among rocks at the base of a cliff which towered nearly 700 feet. Coast guardsmen, unable to approach the spot by boat, rigged lines and started down the cliff.

Pilot Stead, a veteran war time flier who at one time was a sensational barnstorming aviator, took off from Seattle at 8.30 last night.

United Airlines reported the plane had lost its radio beam, presumably because of weather conditions, and was unable to find the Oakland or San Francisco airports

Ontario's Long Lake Power Project To Become Just A Timber Run

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—(CP)—Planned as a hydro-electric power project, as well as an aid to the lumber industry in northwestern Ontario, the diversion of the waters of Long Lake will serve now only as a timber run.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn said last night that, because of federal government opposition, the Ontario government and the provincial hydro-electric power commission had abandoned plans for employing the "Kenogami-Long Lac" diversion to manufacture power. It will be filled with water in December, but only to float logs from Lake Superior for milling and export purposes and for requirements of the pulpwood supply company, which will begin construction of a $3,000,000 plant next year.

The diversion would have allowed engineers to turn a terrific stream of water from Long Lake into Lake Superior at will by operation of two dams on the Kenogamisis River. Normally, water from the lake flows down the Kenogamisis and Albany rivers into James Bay. Cut through a height of land, the new artificial river would have flowed at a rate of 1,250 feet a second.

Cheap Power

Premier Hepburn explained that the water, besides carrying lumber, could have been utilized "for a cheap power diversion that would have been of immeasurable value to

Driver Badly Hurt As Train Hits Car

STOUFFVILLE, Ont., Nov. 29 (CP)—Edgar Storry, 45, of Stouffville, was seriously injured today when his motor car was struck by a west-bound Canadian National Railways train at a level-crossing here.

Storry's car stalled on the crossing and, while he managed to get out before it was struck, the wreckage of the machine pinned him beside the tracks. He was injured internally and it was feared one arm would have to be amputated.

Stouffville is 25 miles northeast of Toronto.

Farmer Assessed $27 For Sheep His Dog Killed

Tweed, Nov. 29.

MEMBERS of the council of the Township of Faraday are notifying Robert Robertson of that township that the council demand from him a total of $27 for sheep which have allegedly been killed by his dog on the property of W. E. Kelusky on October 19th, this year.

This move by council is believed the first ever made in Hastings County in which damage to sheep by dogs has been assessed against the owner of the animal.

Full-Time Personnel

OTTAWA, Nov. 29 (CP)—Appointment of full-time personnel officers in each department of the federal civil service was recommended by the legislation committee of the professional institute of the civil service of Canada at the annual meeting here last night.

The report, approved by the national meeting, suggested that representations be made to deputy minister that they keep the civil service commission informed of regulations and procedure of their departments and that qualified officers be kept in each department who would have full knowledge of regulations affecting personnel.

U.S. Christians, Jews Raise $2,000,000 Relief For German Refugees In Two Weeks

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (AP)—In one of the most remarkable responses ever made to appeals for the aid of a people in need, American Christians and Jews in a little more than two weeks have showered at least $2,000,000 on agencies for relief of German refugees.

The estimate was made today by responsible officials of various drives on the basis of results in leading cities. The bulk of the donations have gone to the American joint distribution committee, which has a record of 20 years experience in Jewish relief activities in Europe. It is also the chief contributor to the national co-ordinating committee for aid of German refugees, an affiliation of 24 Jewish, Catholic and Protestant relief organizations.

$100,000 Fire Razes Storage Wing Of Bowmanville Factory

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Nov. 29—Firemen today started pulling down the charred walls of the east wing of the Davis Hoult plant, destroyed by fire last night.

Firemen placed damage at about $100,000. For more than four hours Bowmanville firemen assisted by a pumper and crew from Oshawa under Fire Chief W. R. Elliott, fought the blaze. They were successful in saving the main wing of the plant.

It was not believed any men would be thrown out of employment as a result of the blaze. The wing was used mainly as a storeroom and firemen were successful in saving the main section of the plant, in operation at the time of the fire. About 42 men were employed.

The factory, one of the largest in town, was also one of the oldest in this section of the province, being formerly the Bowmanville organ factory.

Fire Chief W. R. Elliott of Oshawa today assisted in directing operations in tearing down the walls.

It was learned today that the building was owned by the corporation having been taken over two years ago for taxes. The present holders were leasing the plant.

Friend Of 5 Judges Has Trouble Getting a Trial

Salt Lake City, Nov. 29 (AP)

CLAUDE A. ENGBERG, 31, was arrested for reckless driving, his trial set for hearing before Police Judge Rva Bosone.

Judge Bosone, declining to preside because of a distant marital relationship, preferred the case to City Judge Bryan Leverich.

Judge Leverich, declining because of a personal friendship, referred the case to presiding City Judge Albert Ellett.

Judge Ellett, also declining because of friendship, referred the case to Judge Bosone.

Britain To Extend Borrowing Powers

LONDON, Nov. 29—(CP Cable).—The Government will introduce legislation at this session of Parliament to extend its borrowing powers to carry on the vest defence program, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer announced to-day in the House of Commons.

Sir John, with his usual secrecy about budget plans, did not give a hint whether taxpayers would have a heavier burden to bear next year. Britons already pay a 27½ per cent income tax and high taxes on necessities.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer told the House that by the end of the financial year, in March, the Government will have borrowed approximately £180,000,000 ($900,000,000) of the £400,000,000 authorized for rearmament, which is being financed partly by borrowing and partly from taxation.

Japs To Keep Yangtse Closed To All Shipping Except Own, Till China Conquered

SHANGHAI, Nov. 29 (AP)—Japan's armed forces tonight served notice that the great Yangtse river, China's main trade artery, would remain closed to all but Japanese shipping until China is conquered and reconstructed under Japanese control.

A joint army and navy communique indicated that protests of foreign powers, chiefly Great Britain, the United States and France, against the closing of the river to their commerce would be unavailing.

The fighting services said this situation would be continued until the government of General Chiang Kai-Shek is destroyed and peace and order restored in China in accordance with Japan's plans for the new order in the far east.

The Yangtse has been closed to foreign merchant shipping since the Japanese drive up the river began more than a year ago. The Japanese hold the river to a point above Hankow, some 600 miles from the sea.

Hepburn Attack On Croll Peps Campaign

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 29 (C.P.).—Windsor's 1938 civic election campaign, a bitter personal feud between two candidates for the Mayoralty making it one of the liveliest in years, fairly boiled last night as Premier Hepburn of Ontario swung his influence against David A. Croll.

The Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Windsor-Walkerville, opposing 79-year-old Mayor E. S. Wigle for the Mayoralty, "is not deserving the support of the voters which he seeks," the Premier said in a letter published as an advertisement in the Windsor Star yesterday. The full-page ad was inserted by Mayor Wigle's supporters.

Roy C. Haight, an auditor, also is a candidate for the post, but decision of the voters next Monday is expected to lie between Croll and Wigle. Croll is campaigning for a five-cent street railway and bus fair. Wigle has supported statements of the Sandwich, Windsor and Amherstburg Railway Company that the present 10-cent fares cannot be reduced.

Blaze At Alton Costs $18,000

ALTON, Ont., Nov. 29 (C.P.). — Four stores, two apartments, a blacksmith shop, and a house were destroyed early to-day when a fire of unknown origin started in the business section of the village.

Loss, partly covered by insurance, was estimated at $18,000.

The fire was discovered when youths noticed flames in Wilson's restaurant.

By shouting and knocking on the walls they were able to awaken Gordon and Douglas Wilson, aged 18 and 19, sleeping in the apartment above the store. The lads jumped from a window to the frozen ground 20 feet below. Families living over the stores fled in night attire. Other buildings were threatened and the fire smouldered for hours after being brought under control.

A volunteer bucket brigade fought the flames, augmented by a pump from Orangeville, six miles north of here. Alton is about 40 miles northwest of Toronto.

because of overcast skies. It had circled north of the bay area cities until its gasoline supply was nearly gone.

Pilot Charles Stead radioed he had tried to make Crissy Field, old-time flying field at San Francisco, but didn't have enough gas.

"Boys," came his terse message, "I haven't enough gas to make old Crissy Field." The last heard from Stead, he was about to put the ship down on the ocean.

Attendants at the Point Reyes lighthouse reported they saw the airliner alight about 1,000 yards offshore. N. F. McNabb, one of the attendants, said they could see the craft's lights for about eight minutes. Then they blinked and disappeared.

McNabb said the plane was at the foot of a cliff along the ocean front, and the only way to reach it was by perilous descent of the cliff.

Skid On Curve Fatal To Three

MONTREAL, Nov. 29 (CP)—A skidding automobile that left the highway and crashed into a power line post brought death to three persons and injuries to a fourth at the boundary line between Montreal North and Ville St. Michel last night.

Mrs. Louis Laforce, 33, Miss Yvonne Menard, 40, and Jean Chounard, 40, were killed and William Paul Aubichon, 34-year-old driver of the vehicle suffered cuts and bruises and severe shock.

"We were not travelling fast when we hit the pole," said Aubichon. "I cannot understand why I missed that curve."

Eye-witnesses said the car appeared to skid as it swept around the curve on Pie Ix Boulevard. The right front bumper struck the post, and the back of the car swung around to wrap itself about the wooden pole. The power line support carried the sign marking the boundary line between Montreal North and Ville St. Michel.

Carelessness Started Bad Fire

Three Riot Squads Fail To Block Storming Of Silvershirt League

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—(AP).—Police riot squads arrested nine men after a fight late last night at a meeting of the silvershirt legion. At least four persons were injured, one seriously.

Police said more than 100 men were in a west side hall listening to speakers of the organization when nearly the same number of persons stormed the place.

Some of the invaders were armed with baseball bats, police were informed. Opponents of the organization charged it was avowed pro-Nazi and anti-semetic.

The hall is located in a neighborhood which has a large Jewish population.

Three police squads were swept aside as the protestors stormed the meeting and the fight was no quelled until 20 additional policemen arrived. Clarence Sutherland, 44, identified by police as a commercial photographer, suffered a possible skull fracture.

Says E. J. HARTNETT, General Manager, W. R. McRAE & CO., Wholesale and Retail Distributors in Kingston for 85 Years—1853 to 1938

For over 85 years the firm of W. R. McRae & Company have been catering to Kingston and district as wholesale distributors for groceries, confectionery and tobacco, with salesmen covering the entire district. During this time we have watched the steady increase in sales of merchandise supported by national advertising in the local newspaper. Keeping pace with changing times, new methods for service and new lines have been added, and the retail store, "The Golden Lion Food Market", has been completely renovated into an up-to-date self-serve food market.

We realize that our steady growth would not have been possible without a planned advertising schedule in the local daily to tell the people of the community our store news, and also where to obtain the products that are nationally advertised in the local daily.

Advertising in the Local Daily newspaper is the best medium for us and for the manufacturers because it is read with interest by the buying public in the community.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 29 (C.P.). — A 500,000-bushel export business provided the thread which held Winnipeg wheat prices aloft to-day in another drab session. Values held fairly steady all day and the close was ¼ to ½ higher, December at 58⅞, May 61⅝ to ⅞, and July 62½ to ⅝ cents.

Intermarket spreading appeared for the first time in several sessions and involved purchases of Winnipeg May future against Chicago May, and sales of Winnipeg December against Chicago December.

Sale of 500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat to-day marked the second consecutive day the half million figure has been reached.

Bridge, Euchre Assist Library

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Nov. 29.—Sponsored by Marmora Women's Institute, a most successful travelling bridge and euchre contest was held in various homes of members on Thursday evening, thirty-three tables altogether being in play.

At bridge Joseph Murray and Miss Rita Deacon carried off the honors, while at euchre Richard Moloney and Mrs. Henry Melville were successful.

Adjournment was made to the White Hall at conclusion of play where bingo was enjoyed and a delicious lunch was served.

The event was staged to supplement the grant already made by the Institute to Marmora Public Library.

Cemetery Situation Order Sifted

TORONTO, Nov. 29 (C.P.). — Investigation of cemeteries which may be operating as "purely commercial enterprises" was ordered to-day by Attorney-General Gordon Conant.

Complaints that control of some cemeteries was interlocked with the medical and undertaking professions and that the public have been defrauded by high pressure salesmanship promotions prompted Mr. Conant to instruct the Ontario Securities Commissioner, R. B. Whitehead, K.C., to undertake the inquiry.

Mr. Whitehead has also been asked generally to "sift" the whole cemetery situation and to determine whether "some of these private or commercial enterprises are against the public interest as at present operated and controlled."

The Attorney-General's order is the result of preliminary inquiries made by Eric Silk, chief law clerk of the Legislature. The Securities Commissioner was only given his instructions to-day and has not determined whether to proceed by way of a public hearing or private investigation. Mr. Conant assured Mr. Whitehead that he would have placed at his disposal any officer of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the Provincial Police as he might require.

Man Fractures Bones In Both His Feet

Arthur Blodgett, of South Monaghan, a former resident of Peterborough, was very painfully injured in an unusual accident on Monday while finishing a well on the farm of J. A. Wilson of Otonabee township.

Blodgett, who is a brother of Clarence Blodgett, the local dog catcher, was putting a pipe in position in the well when it slipped causing him to lose his balance on the windlass and jump backwards to the ground. He lit on his feet but so heavily that he broke the bones in both heels and as a result will be laid up for at least three months, it is estimated. Both feet were placed in casts and the injured man was taken to his home in South Monaghan.

School Commencement

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29. — The annual High School commencement will be held here on December 14 and 15, it was officially announced by Principal E. H. Greig to-day. Although it has been the custom in the past to hold this event on a Thursday and Friday evening, it was announced that owing to the number of other functions slated for that week it was impossible to do so this year.

Old Kentucky CIGARETTES

Slasher Keeping Streets Clear At Night

HALIFAX, England, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Scotland Yard entered the search today for a flat-nosed, black-tooth slasher whose furtive attacks on women have spread terror through this industrial city.

The detectives joined with 5,000 town volunteers, who armed themselves with pokers, heavy sticks and Indian clubs for poking into likely hiding places during the night.

For a week the Phantom has crept upon victims in dark streets, stabbed quickly with a gleaming instrument, and fled. He has made 13 attacks, perhaps starting to retrace his course by attacking Mary Sutcliffe yesterday for the second time. She was his first victim a week ago and is in the hospital with wounds in the chest. Her wrists were slashed last week. None of the assaults have been fatal.

Halifax, with a population of 98,000 employed largely in woollen and carpet mills, is deserted after nightfall except for the roving bands of volunteers and police.

A Tense Moment In An International Football Match

Millbrook Ladies Plan Cooking Sale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 29.—The Ladies' Aid of Grace Presbyterian Church met at the Manse for its November meeting on Thursday at 3 p.m., the hostess being Mrs. (Rev.) H. R. Williams.

Mrs. H. A. Kerr, vice-president, was in the chair in the absence of Mrs. J. R. Thompson, and the treasurer, Miss Jean Syer, reported total receipts from the recent fowl supper at $228.85. At this point, Mrs. Kerr, on behalf of the president, extended hearty thanks to all those who had worked so hard to make the annual dinner a success; thirty-five geese had been purchased and cooked, the five left over having been sold on the night of the supper.

It was decided to have a sale of home baking instead of the annual hot supper planned for December 10, those in charge to be Mrs. H. A. Kerr, Mrs. S. E. Eakins and Mrs. E. L. Armstrong. Looking after the sale table of fancy work will be M. Kinsman, Mrs. R. J. McMahon, and Miss Agnes Johnston. Miss Jean Syer will act as cashier. The fish pond was left with Mrs. Williams, with Miss Ruth Thorndyke as her assistant, and the endeavor will be to have this a really worthwhile feature of the bazaar. Misses Syer and Thorndyke were appointed to make posters advertising the sale.

The group leaders, Mrs. R. J. McKnight, Mrs. Suttle Pritchard, Mrs. H. Seton, Mrs. N. Belch, and Miss Mina Gibson, were asked to see that all their members are fully informed about the bazaar. Mrs. Kerr's invitation to hold the annual meeting at her home on January 4, was accepted. There will be no meeting in December.

LAKEHURST

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Shearer have returned from Simcoe, where they spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. William Smith.

The Lakehurst rink is being put in shape for the skating season. Many improvements have been made and a well attended basket social was held on Saturday night. Several young ladies from the Wesley young people staged a very entertaining play. Others taking part on the program were Miss Grace Hunt and Mr. Fred Agnew, the Misses Beatrice and June Barcroft, Mrs. Fred Clarkson and Mr. Harry Pluard and Miss Helen Smith and Mr. Carl Northey.

A number of Lakehurst people journeyed to Wesley United church on Monday evening, Nov. 12, where they heard a very closely contested debate, "Resolved, that entertainments, suppers and bazaars to raise church funds should be abolished." Those taking part were Messrs. G. Davidson and K. Hunt for the affirmative and the Misses V. Wilkinson and V. Harris for the negative. Those in on the affirmative were victorious and they will now debate the young people of Fairview United church, at Lakehurst, on Monday, Dec. 5, the topic being, "Resolved, that the pen is mightier than the sword."

Miss Elizabeth Thompson, who has been ill for some time, has resumed her duties at Rockcroft school.

Mr. Donald Smith of Simcoe, Ont., is visiting with friends in Lakehurst.

Miss Grace Hunt and Edgar Hunt, who are attending school in Peterborough, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hunt, and were accompanied by Mr. Fred Agnew.

Mrs. W. T. Elliott has returned to her home at Hall's Bridge after spending the summer with friends in Vancouver.

Night Coughs

Terribly wearing on the system is the cough that comes on at night and prevents sleep.

Sometimes it is the constant cough, cough that will not be quieted. Sometimes it is a choked-up, stuffed-up feeling that makes breathing difficult.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the remedy you need to give you relief, for the reason that this preparation contains the healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with which is combined wild cherry bark, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent balsams, barks and herbs.

OBITUARY

DANIEL KETCHESON.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 29.—The funeral of Daniel Ketcheson took place on Saturday afternoon from his late residence in Foxboro to the United church in that village, where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. E. M. Cook, who conducted also the service at the graveside in the Ketcheson family burial ground in the 5th Concession of Sidney township.

The late Mr. Ketcheson was a member of A.F. & A.M. No. 123, and the last rites of the Order were conducted in the home by Wor. Master L. A. Kells, assisted by Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clark and at the graveside the Masonic rites were conducted by Wor. Master L. A. Kells, Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke and Wor. Bro. J. Noakes.

The bearers were Messrs. C. Hamilton, E. Fairman, C. Crosby, D. Collett, C. Ketcheson and Col. R. Vanderwater.

MRS. STELLA M. McBRIDE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 29.— Mrs. Stella May McBride, wife of Mr. Samuel McBride, Belleville, passed away in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, after an illness of two months duration.

The late Mrs. McBride, who was in her 31st year, was born in Madoc township, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. William J. Bateman. For some years she resided in the Township of Sidney, and for the last two years in Belleville. In religion, she was a member of the United church.

Surviving are her husband, two daughters, Gwen and Margaret, two sons, Vernon and Clayton, all at home; two sisters, Mrs. B. Hamilton, Marmora, and Miss Cassie Bateman, Toronto; three brothers, Mr. Harold Bateman of Verona; Mr. Ernest Bateman and Mr. George Bateman, both of Marmora.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon.

MRS. MARY J. HAWLEY.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Nov. 29. — Mrs. Mary Jane Hawley, widow of Charles J. Hawley, passed away at her late residence in the County of Prince Edward on Sunday.

The late Mrs. Hawley, who was in her 88th year, was born in the Township of Ameliasburg, and resided there all her life. Her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Simonds. She was a highly respected citizen of the township. In religion she was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are three daughters, Mrs. Gertrude Darling, Ameliasburg, Miss Hattie Hawley, Newmarket, Ont., and Mrs. Arthur Parliament, Ameliasburg; two brothers, Edward Simonds and Joseph Simonds of Massasaga.

Woman Photographer Snaps Wildfowl

WINNIPEG, Nov. 29 -(CP)- Miss Lorono Squire, one of the foremost wildfoul and game photographers in Canada and the United States, is back in Harper, Kas., after another summer of camera shooting in Canada's northern regions.

Miss Squire studied in University of Kansas, majoring in dramatics, but turned to photographing after graduation in 1932. She says she does not make sufficient money at her photographing to call it a profession but spends far too much time at it to call it a hobby.

Miss Squire went into the northland in June. She travelled by plane and whaleboat and a trip from Churchill, Man., to Baffin Land via the S. S. Nascopie was included. The 34-year-old, slightly-built woman said she loved life in the north and planned to return next summer.

Banana trees planted in Jutland have yielded their first harvest.

From Our Canadian Acres

Let us turn for the moment from the question of a loss of $65,000,000 on our Western wheat crop to something else which has come out of the same West. Wheat and oats.

The International Grain and Hay Show in Chicago is the biggest thing on the continent. It is the place where championships are decided; a place where growers from all over the continent take the best they have produced. The man who wins there is a champion beyond dispute; he has to come to the top ahead of tens of thousands of potential competitors in the growing season.

This year F. Rigby of Wembley, Alberta, exhibited Reward wheat and judges said they could not recall having seen anything finer in red hard spring wheat. When it was weighed it went 67.5 pounds to the bushel, and the legal and recognized weight for wheat is 60 pounds. So F. Rigby is "Wheat King" and he is 23 years of age.

While that was going on his brother, W. Justyn Rigby 22 years old, was attending to the oats, and he exhibited the Victory variety, and there was nothing in the Chicago exhibit the equal of that exhibited by the younger brother. The recognized weight of a bushel of oats is 34 pounds, but the Rigby exhibit kept the scales working until they registered a full 48.8 pounds.

And that weight is 43 1-2 per cent. over and above what a bushel of oats needs to weigh.

In the last 19 years of this competition Canadian wheat has won 16 times. These brothers work with their father and operate a 320-acre farm, and both these boys gained experience in the grain business by starting as members of boys' farm clubs.

Probably all the grain grown by such folk never goes near an elevator, and it may be the 80 cents per bushel price means nothing at all, as they would probably be in the business of selling choice seed grain.

But it does seem that a country which can produce such grain should be nearing the place where more of its output could be sold on the basis of quality. The remarkable showing we make at these international exhibitions should in some way be reflected in the demand for and the price paid for our grain.

Better Make Sure

Harry Veiner, prominent Jewish resident of Medicine Hat, Alberta, conducts farming operations on an extensive scale, and plans to bring 10,000 Jewish refugees to his district. No government assistance will be sought and the necessary funds will be raised by Jewish residents of Canada. It will of course be necessary for Ottawa to sanction such an incursion.

The plan is to have 10,000 people settle in a district where there are 250,000 acres open for settlement.

There is something rather fine about knowing that the Jewish people themselves would be willing to finance such a scheme of settlement, but it becomes necessary to apply some rather practical methods to determine whether success would attend the venture. What sort of land is there in a tract of 250,000 acres near Medicine Hat? If it is good and has the capacity for annual crops then it is likely it would have been taken up long ago.

The Jewish people, it must be remembered, are not agriculturists. Centuries ago they were but they were driven from their lands and turned to trade and commerce and then to the professions. We have so few Jewish farmers in Canada that they can be said to be virtually non-existent.

As we understand it the Jewish people who are now seeking new homes are not people who are coming from the land. For the most part they are from cities or less populous centres where they have been in business and professional life: they have been salesmen and shop keepers and so on. Granting the man in Medicine Hat has the best of motives we are moved to doubt if his solution is one which would work.

Keeping Up Appearances

We learn from sources which seem reliable enough that the debutante business in New York is not what it used to be. When a family with sufficient money and social standing has a daughter of 18 years it is time something must be done about it. She must be formally introduced to society in order that "she may meet the right people." And the "right people" actually means the young men of other families who have money and social standing. So when one sifts it down a little it means that being a debutante is another way of giving notice that the young lady is nearing the point where she will consider the business of marriage.

Parents in New York will spend about $8,000,000 on this sort of business, and that does not include the cost of the wardrobe, and if the daughter is to be shoved off to a good start that item will cost about $3,000.

To revert to a rather old phrase there is a fly in the ointment this year, and it seems to be rather a formidable fly. Just this—there is a decided shortage of eligible young men. Most of those available are just college graduates, while others are in that class known as unemployed. In either case the young fellows have not yet made a start; they have little income or none at all apart from the family purse.

It looks a good deal as though there was insistence on dragging an old custom of other days into a time when the thing does not fit in. It ignores entirely the fact that young men even if they do come from socially prominent families are not able to step out and be off in the business of the world as their fathers did. Likewise it is an effort to keep alive the belief that a great show at the start is the one sure way to bring about a happy marriage.

No one will have any objection if parents spend $8,000,000 on parties for debutantes and $3,000 for a wardrobe. That will put money in circulation. But the reason for doing it is defective and lame, and it seems somewhat like an anachronism to find it going on in a country where according to the written constitution all men are born free and equal.

Better Leave Him Alone

The writers of books in Britain are making it dangerous for any man to occupy high position in the state, in the army or navy. The man who writes a book will sooner or later take him to pieces, and he generally waits until the subject has departed before doing so. The number of leaders in the World War who suffered from book writers was large, and now has come the turn of the late Ramsay MacDonald, referred to as "the forgotten premier" of Great Britain. The book writer this time is L. MacNeil Weir, Labor member of parliament, and formerly private secretary to MacDonald.

The late Premier is spoken of as a man who loved luxury, who had few friends and who trusted nobody. He worshipped wealth and had social ambitions which knew no bounds. He loved to pose as the weary and broken man who had so much to do that his strength was not equal to the demands made upon it although at times MacDonald had as many as ten secretaries at his command.

Other writers have pictured Ramsay MacDonald in his later years as being incapable of coherent utterance when making an important statement, and it was often enough stated his mind refused to respond according to schedule or expectation.

But even so, what is the purpose of taking the man to pieces now that he has gone? Ramsay MacDonald came into the picture and did his work during times when there was sufficient trouble. He did not foist himself upon the people because when he came into parliament he was an elected member. In his earlier experiences when he was not wanted there he was turned out—by the people.

The only reason we can see for publishing such a book is to sell many copies of the thing and make a good amount of cash from the sales, and raking pounds, shillings and pence from the ashes of the dead past is not a particularly sporting idea.

The Spare Room On The Tenth

Beats all the number of things members of the Women's Institute find to discuss. We notice where at the next meeting the subject up for treatment is going to be "Making the Spare Room More Homelike." Whether all country homes are now armed and provided with spare rooms is something on which we have no information but it was always considered proper and right to have a spare room. At least it was so on the Tenth Concession.

The spare room there was at the front of the house and directly above the parlor. It had carpet all over the floor, and regularly the carpet was swept (with some tea leaves to keep the dust down) and it also had its turn on the line for a beating at time of house cleaning. An enlarged crayon portrait of grandfather had a place on the wall because grandfather never liked the picture and insisted that it go where it would not often be seen. On the washstand was a large bowl and pitcher and flowers and birds and scenery in general made it gay. On the back of the stand was a little rack which would hold three clean towels, and it was one of the articles of good housekeeping on the Tenth that those towels had always to look as though they had never been used.

The spare bedroom was one place in the house which never had a tick filled with straw. It had springs and a mattress. One window looked out on the lane with the milk stand at the edge of the road, and the front window looked right square out through the apple orchard on the Tenth. The big problem was getting some heat in the spare room. The trouble was that heat was available there only when the stove in the parlor was in operation, which was only when necessary. The stove pipe from the parlor stove ran through the spare room and up there was a drum on the pipe which made it look like a good intention any way in the interests of heat.

In the winter time the spare room never did get used a great deal, but there were occasions when it was. There was one winter when there was a vacancy in the pulpit of the church at the corner of the Tenth and the Broken Front Road, and it took some little time before the pulpit committee to make up its mind. They were trying out a number of preachers and in between there were students from a theological college who would come and fill in. Folk used to take turns putting them up. It was necessary to drive eight miles to the village and meet the preacher and then drive eight miles to put him on the train again. The regular preachers generally sat downstairs until late in the evening and then went straight to bed. The drum in the stove pipe would sometimes be working hard enough in cold weather to take the frost off the nearest window, and we dare say an active and fairly fast moving preacher would be able to pop into bed without much damage being done. The old earthen footwarmer had been put in the bed in advance so he'd be all right.

Some of the student preachers though were different. They said they'd like to go to the room early in order to do a little more preparation. It was more comfortable sitting around the kitchen range but the location was not inducive to deep thought or the presentation of the one, two, three and in conclusion of a well-built sermon. Like as not grandfather would want to entertain the preacher by telling about horse trading or explaining how he dealt with weanling pigs when they started showing brown spots on the hide. When the student preacher got taken off upstairs it was generally a sign for some person to carry in a few good sticks of hardwood and fire up in the parlor stove for a while longer.

When the student preacher came down on a Sunday morning he was generally early enough and that meant he'd been up before the parlor stove started business. If the weather was good and cold it probably indicated that before he washed he might have had to tap the water in the fancy pitcher with the handle of the hair brush to knock off a thin layer of ice. If he'd wanted to look out and see what sort of a day it was going to be for the assembling of a congregation then he would have had to blow hard on the front window to make a little place where he could see through the frosted window. Those student preachers rose quite a good deal in our estimation, for when they came down in the morning they would always say they had enjoyed their rest and had been very comfortable. Perhaps they were used to spare rooms and may be they had been brought up in homes where frost sat thick on the bedroom windows. But we liked them because of their cheerful outlook and decided they were not softies. It was generally noticed though that when they started doing some preparing for the evening service they decided to sit beside the kitchen range.

So that's why we were interested in knowing how to make the spare room more homelike. If spare rooms exist today like they did along the Tenth Concession then the Women's Institute have a real field in which to operate. We wouldn't hesitate about saying that it was quite equal to a spell of home missionary effort.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We learn the Spanish war has been held up for a while due to bad weather. The lads who deliver your paper to you each day do better than that.

The Fergus News-Record refers to the receipt of $14 from a western subscriber as heartening. We'd have called it impossible.

"Fitting youth to its work" reads an editorial heading. The problem, however, really seems to be to find work for which youth can be fitted.

THE BOSS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I used to think the boss's job, was just like lying on the sod, upon a sunny day; and things would run on much the same, no matter if he went or came, or if he'd go or stay.

¶ His work was not like what I'd do, he jumped not when the whistle blew, he just sat there in state; no person ever bawled him out, if he forgot his way about, or landed in quite late.

¶ But when the business wasn't good, and things weren't going like what they should, they made the boss the goat; and lots of days I had a hunch, that he just went and skipped his lunch, and he took off his coat.

¶ Financial men would gather there, and wear a grave and ponderous air, 'twas long before 'twas through; and then the boss would lock the door, and start his planning going once more, to see what he would do.

¶ And when I passed there late at night, inside his window 'twould be light, his job was plain to see; they'd piled a load square on his back, and he would meet them crack for crack, that's how it looked to me.

¶ He saved the place I've heard it said, and got it going right straight ahead, he stuck and saw it through; so I don't criticize for one, I rather liked the thing he'd done—'twas more than I could do

Bostonian Was Through It All

(Letter to The Christian Science Monitor)

IT IS PERHAPS as well that Alfred Edwards, M.P., should turn to the columns of the Monitor in order to gain enlightenment to the facts relating to his own country, and the action of its Government in the recent crisis, although as a member of the opposition party in Parliament, he really ought to know these things. As he refers to himself as a "poor wayfaring man," it is possible that he was not in London during the crisis, and consequently never really sensed the situation there.

As one who was in London during the crisis, I will tell him what Mr. Chamberlain did that was heroic and how he prevented war.

Mr. Chamberlain, faithful at his post in that most menacing hour since August, 1914, girded up his loins like a man and took effective action at a time when practically every other sane person in or out of Parliament had come to believe that war was inevitable. I was there, and my memory is quite clear.

The issue lay between reason and armed force. Armed force believed there was not the slightest reason for it to submit to dictation from any quarter.

The overrunning of Czechoslovakia, even though it involved a certain amount of armed resistance, was the certain and avowed intention of armed force. Thus the fait accompli would once more be presented to the nations, and as usual nothing more would be done about it, or there would be a world war.

Mr. Chamberlain knew that the latter was almost certain, and he knew that it must be prevented. This could only be done through the processes of reason, "the most active human faculty."

The League of Nations having completely failed to function in this most critical hour, was it not heroic to go forth to face this Goliath (armed force), alone, armed only with the sling of reason? And did he surrender, as Mr. Edwards suggests? Certainly not. As the result of his efforts armed force was forced to forego a war that it wanted and that would inevitably have resulted in world chaos. This is not to say that great hardship was not inflicted upon Czechoslovakia. Yet Czechoslovakia was saved from annihilation and has become a more homogeneous nation with some prospects of working out a stable and democratic form of government, even though now drawn within the German orbit. The demobilization of the German Army was begun.

Mr. Chamberlain would not claim the entire credit for this achievement. He is not that kind of man. The President of the United States also played a heroic part in that dark moment. Nevertheless, but for Mr. Chamberlain's courage, initiative, and singleness of purpose the victory of reason could not have been achieved.

Had Mr. Edwards been in England he would have seen, what we all saw—the heavens opening and a ray of light piercing the gloom. True it quickly closed again and the stone-throwers began putting their heads together to see what could be done to belittle this wonderful thing—the triumph of reason over force.

INDIAN BARBERS.

(Calcutta Statesman)

THE SAFETY RAZOR — boon of millions—is the bane of barbers. So think 600 members of this fraternity who met in conference in Calcutta.

The conference eagerly adopted a resolution that the safety razor was the cause of their plight. Another urged the public to stop their use on the score—rare discernment—of nationalism and of encouraging the members of the community to pursue an avocation allotted by a hallowed past.

Another resolution urged the Government to give barbers adequate representation in the legislature while another drew the attention both of the Government and the corporation to the necessity for providing free education to barbers' children.

Yet another resolution urged the necessity for having uniform charges in all shaving saloons in the city so that to their already precarious trade might be added the uncertainties that come with fluctuating prices.

NOISES OF THE HOME.

(Kitchener Record)

SOME NOISES are attributable to impoliteness, lack of consideration for others, and unmannerliness, but the well conducted home is usually spared the nerve-wracking screech of a mishandled fork or the slamming of a door. Yet sometimes we are caught unawares by a sudden draft slamming a door when we open a window, which noise upsets the nerves of the members of the household as much as it annoys us.

Worse than this is the thoughtlessness of the late homecomer, who thinks nothing of drawing a bath five minutes before midnight or tuning in on a radio program before he retires.

MOSQUITO CONTROL.

(New York Times)

A LIVELY CONTROVERSY is raging in Orange County, N. J., over the suspension of mosquito control by the W.P.A. and the C.C.C. Mosquito haters blame the suspension on local duck lovers, who, they say, have pulled strings in Washington to end attacks on the insects. Eradication, it is pointed out, tends to drive ducks away as the birds thrive on the larvae. There are no neutrals in Ocean County, but old-timers deprecate the entire controversy as silly and not established on solid premises. While both are in the air, they assert, it is impossible to tell the mosquitoes from the ducks, the latter being only slightly bigger. Consequently, it is going too far to assume the ducks are disappearing. The only infallible test between the two is when you are bitten. You can be reasonably sure it was not done by a duck.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

CONFESSION

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I want to tell you of something which shows that you are right—at least now and then. Some time ago I read in your paper that the best way to draw attention to a poor or rotten book or piece of literature was to get some person to make an attack on it and name it as not being fit to read. Get that kind of report in circulation about a book, a picture or a play and the success of the venture was certain.

I read in your paper the other day that the November issue of the magazine Cosmopolitan, a Hearst affair, was being banned in London and that action was likely to be taken against the magazine and the writer of an article about Barbara Hutton.

I can tell you honestly that as a rule I never buy the Cosmopolitan magazine because it does not appeal to me as being the sort of thing I like to read. I prefer the digest type of magazines as they are generally filled with something informative and cover a fairly wide range of material.

But what did I do? When I read that the issue of Cosmopolitan was going to be or actually had been banned in London, I went right down town and bought one and the first thing I turned to was the article about Barbara Hutton. It was just what I expected, a lot of tripe, putting a lot of old straw through the mill once more and gassing away about her various husbands and what not. I actually thought I was proof against that sort of thing, until I recalled the article of some time ago in your paper saying that a banned book is the one which people will go out and purchase. I admit that is exactly the way it worked on me and sorry for it. If you want my copy now you can have it for five cents although I paid a good quarter for it.

I DID IT.

Peterborough, Nov. 28.

WHISTLES AND HORNS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—In answer to G. N. Gordon's letter of 24th, would like to state a few facts which he overlooked. It was not my contention that the engineer should blow three blasts at every crossing; one medium or two short would be a protection, and would not kill any one with the noise as nearly all trains travels in the day time here and as trains keeping people from sleeping, how many go to bed before ten or ten-thirty in the summer months, and no trains except C.P.R. midnight after that time.

Mr. Gordon says every modern city is passing bylaws similar to the one here; blowing whistles is unnecessary. What city in Canada has as many level crossings as we have here without some protection? We know as times are at present the city cannot go to the expense of installing wig-wags on all level crossings. Stop signs would cost considerable but protection the city and people must have.

Protection costs the city nothing with a light whistle warning from the locomotive. Do not wait for some one to be killed and then act, like the accident, north a few weeks ago.

Engineers have nerves as well as any one else and it is certainly a strain on them at every crossing being able to give no warning. Mr. Gordon says I broke the law by not looking and listening. Can he tell anybody who drives a car they don't look and listen. Now there were ten eyes and ten ears in that car and not one of them seen or heard anything in time to avert the accident.

Mr. Gordon also states that forty thousand pound loaded trucks run under our windows day and night—22 tons say—that is some load. I thought 10 ton was the limit—that the government allowed. Perhaps I am wrong but if not, Mr. Gordon is breaking the law, not reporting it to the minister of highways. No doubt there are a few blowing motor horns unnecessary, but to avoid an accident, run your battery down, if necessary. As to weddings it is the happiest moment of their life, so why not let them blow their horns and enjoy themselves. It happens perhaps only once. To fine them does not seem human. The people who object to horn blowing at weddings never enjoyed the married state or if they did, made a mess of it.

What does Mr. Gordon mean by no serious accidents on Romaine and George Sts. For several years there has been 7 or 8 accidents there with broken limbs, cut faces, broken ribs. Busted cars means nothing to him. So we just stop whistles and see what happens.

J. E. HAGGART.

TOO MUCH OF IT

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I have been reading with interest the comments of some of our good citizens regarding the anti-noise bylaw for the city of Peterborough.

I am a resident of North Monaghan, living only a quarter-mile from the city boundary.

The residents of that part of North Monaghan immediately south of the exhibition grounds believe it would be a good idea if Ald. Gordon suggested something along the same lines to the North Monaghan township council as there is an over supply of noise in this district which could stand plenty of quieting.

It is true that we also listen to train whistles, factory whistles and automobile horns but when a dance hall orchestra is thrown in at the rate of 3 to 5 nights a week until midnight it really gives you something to listen to. During the summer months this orchestra plays on standard time while the city is on daylight saving time. This means that the residents actually listen to it until 1 o'clock in the morning as they have to go to work by daylight time.

Since the matter of noise has been brought up I feel this is an opportune time to express the views of the residents of this locality who have been listening to this for years.

Whether the people of Peterborough are right or wrong regarding this condition remains to be seen but I believe that those in this locality will agree with me when I say we have good cause for complaint.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for this valuable space in your paper, I beg to remain.

MRS. C. WILSON.

St. Thomas Times-Journal: Ireland is just a step ahead of Ontario. Drivers of old automobiles delaying traffic in that country are to be fined.

CAUSTIC COMMENT

Kingston Whig-Standard: The most caustic comment to date on the Peace of Munich was the pointed award of the Nobel Peace Prize to the Nansen Committee which aids refugees.

• Looking For Something Better

FOR AN OLDER Canadian (volunteer, South African) war veteran, particularly if he happens to be, as well, one of Canada's hundreds of thousands of part-time employed or unemployed, Armistice Day's returning simply emphasizes and spotlights the astounding picture of the futility and propaganda "buck" passing of man and his leaders when in a corner with backs to the wall. In Canada, says a Huntsville man "Dad" in the Globe and Mail, it is just as bad under the name Democracy as in Germany, Italy or Russia under the names of Nazism, Fascism or Communism.

Twenty years ago at Versailles a criminal marriage was engineered by the old school diplomats. Strutting, still untamed, still unregenerate, destructive "War" became the husband of a bedraggled woman named Depression. Eleven years later, in the fall of 1929, the legitimate offspring of that marriage, abandoned children, with the multiple name "Unemployment," were left on the doorsteps of the warring nations of 1914-1918—Canada included.

In the intervening eight years (1930-1938) the care of Canada's doorstep child "Unemployment" has cost the Canadian taxpayer approximately, in direct "relief" taxation—to be paid for by the employed Canadian taxpayer (of today and the distant future)—seven hundred million dollars.

There is an "unemployment" devil loose in Canada, but he doesn't come from Russia, Germany, Italy or Japan. He is to be found in the hearts and minds of Canada's people—Canada's leaders. His name is "Defeatism." His emotional and mental make-up can best be described, whether in religion, business or politics, by four words—doubt, greed, fear, ignorance. That "devil" is not foreign-made—he's just a home-made Canadian devil.

But there is a God—presently in eclipse—to be found in the hearts and minds of every Canadian leader, every Canadian citizen—when they are ready, willing and honestly anxious to find Him. His name is "Righteousness." His emotional and mental make-up can also be described in four words—faith, unselfishness, courage, creative thought.

Were Canada's leaders and people willing to play a national "team" game, the only rules to be faith, unselfishness, courage, creative thought, they could in the next five years create and construct a Canada that would voluntarily (not by conscription, dictation or autocracy) provide 100 per cent employment for every employable Canadian citizen, at just rates of pay and under humane, decent and happy living conditions.

After eight years of "muddling through" it seems that we can no longer hope that our Canadian leaders, with good faith, will undertake to use unselfishly and courageously creative thought and constructive statesmanship in putting Canada's unemployed back on the road of "self-support" and "self-respect."

Perhaps one of Canada's forgotten unemployed, if given a chance, might be able to prove to Canada's leaders that such a thing is possible, that there is a way, a plan profitably to employ Canada's unemployed in the constructive development of a new, a greater Canada—fit for a new and better world.

"Dad."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

BUT if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them.

For all things are for your sakes, that the abundant grace might through the thanksgiving of many rebound to the glory of God. For which cause we faint not; but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal.—II Cor. iv: 3, 4, 15-18.

THE NOVICE DRIVER.

(Calgary Albertan)

A CERTAIN automobile club which service to members includes the teaching of novice drivers— and a very good and necessary service too, if you ask us—attaches a sign beside the license plate bearing the words, "New Driver; Please Show Courtesy." The driver is permitted to keep the sign on his car for a short time after he has finished his course of instruction.

This is believed to be the first instance in which novice drivers have been identified in the interest of traffic safety and courtesy and this action places a burden upon older drivers on the streets and highways.

WHO OWNS WARM SPOT?

(From Readers Digest)

DIVORCE NEWS from San Francisco: To whom does the warm spot in the bed belong on a cold night—the wife who first climbed between the icy sheets or the husband who comes home later and demands the coveted place as lord of the household? Superior Judge Van Nostrand has the perplexing problem to decide in the divorce suit of Mrs. Anna Weisinger of Buchanan street and Jack Weisinger. The testimony was that the police were called to the Weisinger home to quiet a war that started when Weisinger ordered his wife to move over and she insisted on remaining in the spot she had warmed up.

A Bit of Nonsense

All The Time

"Do you know where Andrew MacTavish lives?" a visitor asked a Scot.

"Na, I havna heard tell o' him," the native replied, "but if ye ask at the village somebody'll tell ye."

One hour passed. Then the visitor met the native again.

"I can't find him," the visitor explained.

"M'm, that's queer," the Scotsman mused. "Hasna he a nickname o' any sort?"

"Well, I believe he's called Cocky Mac."

"Weel, why did ye no say so?" the Scotsman replied. "That's me."

Miss R. Coughlin Receives Habit Of Novice Sister

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, Nov. 29. — Mr. and Mrs. Martin Coughlin, Clarence and Martin, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Brien, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Brien, all of Douro, also Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doherty and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Collins of Peterborough were guests at the Precious Blood Monastery on Monday when Rose Coughlin received her habit as a novice in the Sisterhood of the Precious Blood She will be known in religion as Sister M. St. Joseph. The altar, chapel, etc., were beautifully decorated for the occasion, and dinner was served to the guests. His Lordship Bishop O'Connor officiated at the ceremony. Other clergy present were Dean O'Sullivan, Father Begley, Father J. Walsh, and Rev. V. Corkery.

James Torpey of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Torpey.

Mrs. W. Fox of Hastings was called to Douro on account of the illness of her brother, John Smith.

Needlecraft Course Proves Popular

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Nov. 28.—An instructive 5-day short course in needlecraft was successfully completed last week by the members of the Havelock Branch Women's Institute.

Nineteen ladies attended the course which was conducted by Miss Evelyn Frisch, of Toronto, and all were more than satisfied with the results of the week's training. The course included the study of new ideas and appreciation, the educational study of color, rhythm, balance, proportion, design, original patterns and historic phases of needlecraft. The following techniques were emphasized, variety of hems, with ornamental stitcher, Madeira, Toleda and cutwork, open and drawn work, Swedish weaving hemstitching, faggoting, smocking variation of cross stitches, crewel work and needlepoint. At the conclusion of the classes afternoon tea was served by the president, Mrs. J. Armstrong, and Mrs. A. Anderson. Among those who took advantage of the course were: Mrs. Robt. McCutcheon, Mrs. Geo. Iles, Mrs. Freeman, Mrs. R. Jones. Mrs. J. Little, Mrs. H. Wing, Mrs. R. Williams, Mrs. A. Mathison, Mrs. F. Wrightly, Mrs. W. Duncan, Mrs. W. W. Hill, Mrs. Clare Price and Misses I. Morrison, E. Wright, A. McArthur, Helen Smith, Minnie Williams, Edna Haig, Muriel Seabrook and Ruth Hagerman.

Hunter Chases Wolf For 10 Miles To Get $15 Bounty

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 29. IT COST Consie Levo a smashed rifle stock and a 10-mile chase to collect the $15 bounty on a wolf. He wounded it with his first shot—his only bullet—then chased it for three hours. He killed it with a blow of his rifle butt.

Bankers Robbed Chained To Car

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 29—(CP).—Police examined a stolen automobile for fingerprints today and compared meagre descriptions furnished by two victims and two eye-witnesses in an effort to identify a group of bandits who escaped after robbing two Canadian Bank of Commerce employees of $7,400.

The twilight robbery occurred yesterday at the Ambassador bridge bank branch in the western section of Windsor. Three masked men, youthful-appearing and armed with revolvers, snatched envelopes containing the money from bank manager J. H. Drake and clerk E. A. Hutnick as they stepped from the bank preparatory to taking the money to the clearing house.

The thugs handcuffed the employees to the front bumper of a parked car, then leaped into another car, containing one or two accomplices, and sped towards downtown Windsor. The car was found later a mile from the scene. It was stolen from Julia Houf, Windsor, Sunday and license plates had been exchanged for stolen ones.

A police dragnet has been extended throughout Western Ontario. Points of entrance into the United States, such as Sarnia, Windsor, Niagara Falls and Fort Erie, are being watched.

Handcuffs used by the bandits were also examined. They were said to be a type used by Provincial Police and stolen from a police car here several days ago. The bank employees, semi-recumbent on the icy roadway, were freed with a hacksaw when city police were unable to unlock the fetters.

Eye-witnesses were Faith Bethune, 12, and Florence Baillargeon, 13, who live across the street from the bank. They noticed the three youths standing outside the bank for some time before the holdup and said that as Drake and Hutnick passed, the bandits covered their faces with masks.

Faith telephoned police when she noticed a revolver in the hands of one of the men. The girls said the three robbers were about 16, 19 and 21. Police said they believed they were about 27.

Hutnick said he reached for his revolver as the bandits came up to him but one of them grabbed it from his hand. Drake said one of the bandits said "this is a stickup."

Nazi Oration At Rites of Diplomat

While Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and other dignitaries of the Nazi party listened, Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, and the Nazi's No. 1 hater of Great Britain, is shown as he delivered the funeral oration at the memorial services in Dusseldorf for Ernst von Rath, Reich diplomat who was shot to death in Paris by a Polish Jew. Von Ribbentrop used the occasion to hurl fresh Nazi defiance at the world.

Fenelon Falls In Splendid Shape Gives Council Acclamation

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Nov. 29.—The village of Fenelon Falls will have no municipal contest this year. Reeve Tiers and the other members of the council have been returned to office for another year, as well as the members of the board of education and the light and power commission. The affairs of the village are in a very healthy condition, and the members of the municipal boards came in for well deserved tributes for careful management during the past year.

In Carden township Patrick McNamee was elected reeve by acclamation. Eleven are in the field for councillors. Reeve C. Benson of Eldon, and the entire council, was elected unopposed. In Somerville township Reeve N. Wilson received an acclamation. Seven candidates will run for council.

Beaver are said to be unusually plentiful in the north country this year and many of the animals have established colonies quite close to the settlements. It is reported that a colony has been established within a mile of Haliburton village. They have constructed a dam across a pond, and trees have been felled six inches across. The dam has been constructed so as not to stop the continuous stream, and the site chosen is a rocky forge. Those who have seen the dam state the structure has been solidly built.

H. C. Rickaby, Deputy Minister of Mines for the Province of Ontario, was the guest speaker at the local Kiwanis Club luncheon Monday. In the course of an interesting address he pointed out that $407,000,000 worth of minerals were produced in the Dominion last year, and of this amount Ontario produced fifty per cent. Ninety million dollars worth of gold was produced, and this is expected to reach the hundred million mark this year. The Sudbury area produced ninety precent of all the nickel in the world and sixty per cent of the platinum.

Alex McGahey, who resides at Millersmith, Emily township, suffered a serious loss from fire on Saturday afternoon. A lantern hanging in the root bin of the barn is thought to have exploded, resulting in the destruction of the barn and stable. All of the stock was saved. The loss is heavy and is partly covered by insurance.

Hartley Stevenson, of Minden, who spent nearly a year in the Hospital in Lindsay and also the General Hospital in Toronto, returned to his home during the weekend. Last December while working on the Hydro line between Kinmount and Hartley he was the victim of a premature blast from which he lost his eyesight and also suffered serious body injuries.

A pioneer resident of Fenelon township, in the person of Mrs. John Rutherford, passed away in Toronto on Sunday in her seventy-first year. She was very highly respected in the district. Interment takes place at Fenelon Falls on Wednesday.

The funeral took place Monday of Thomas Byron Moynes, another old resident of the township who was in his seventy-fifth year. He passed away in Lindsay at the weekend.

Six Counterfeiters?

Jewellers' Code In Saskatchewan

SASKATOON, Nov. 29. -(CP)- A code of wages and hours, and a schedule of standard prices for watch repairing for Saskatoon and district have been set up in the jewelry industry under the Industrial Standards act. It is the first set up in the jewelry industry in Saskatchewan under the act.

A working week of 47 hours is to apply from April to August inclusive, and of 51 hours from September to March inclusive.

Minimum rate of pay for an employee with five years' bench experience or more is $18 a week with 50 cents an hour for all overtime, Sundays and holidays. Apprentice rates under the new code range from $5 a week for the first year to $12 a week in the fifth year.

Minimum price charges for work range from 50 cents for fitting hands on watches to $3 for cleaning and adjusting railway timepieces.

Chase Burns Barns

SEAFORTH, Ont., Nov. 29.—(CP).—Cat-and-dog enmity resulted in the destruction by fire of two barns on Thomas Livingston's farm. A dog chased a cat through the barn. The dog struck a lighted lantern which exploded, setting the barn afire.

Lambeth Trot Is Won By Joe Patch

THE LAMBETH TROT
(With Apologies)
Every time you're Dufferin way
You can hear the horses neigh.
But you should see 'em
Doin' the Lambeth Trot.

That parody on the Lambeth Walk seems only natural when the up-to-the-minute officials of the Toronto Driving Club are modern enough to tab one of their feature events "The Lambeth Trot."

Harness race followers tell you there's nothing more thrilling than to see the diagonal-gaited or square trotters pounding down the stretch. Saturday ten trotters answered the starter's call for the Lambeth Trot and of the three heats completed a different winner showed in each one.

In Front All the Way

The fourth heat, along with the unfinished heats in the three other races carded Saturday, were carried over to Monday. And yesterday it was Joe Patch, winner of the third heat Saturday, who came down in front in the concluding heat to the joy of the betting gentry. The Wellwood-owned horse was the favorite and took the lead early, retaining it throughout.

Another large attendance was on hand for yesterday's racing, possibly looking for some more lucrative long-shots to come home in front, as they did with such consistency Saturday. However, it was a day when the favorites more than held their own on the hard-frozen track.

Only one heat of the fourth race was contested Saturday, with Ginger Direct proving the winner. Yesterday the same horse featured, winning two of the remaining three heats, and placing second to Gilbert Grattan in the other.

John B. Napoleon Wins

John B. Napoleon, winner of two straight heats in the third race Saturday, failed to take the classified pace in straight heats, finishing second to Lee Henley in the third heat yesterday. But the Miles-owned horse came back to decision Lee Henley in the final heat.

Peter Bidwell, which just missed the Dufferin track record of 2.08½ by a half-second Saturday was installed as favorite in the third heat of the free-for-all yesterday, but could do no better than place, and finished fourth in the final heat. Troxie R. won the third heat, and Carroll Direct the fourth.

The next racing program will be held next Saturday under the auspices of the Dufferin Driving Club.

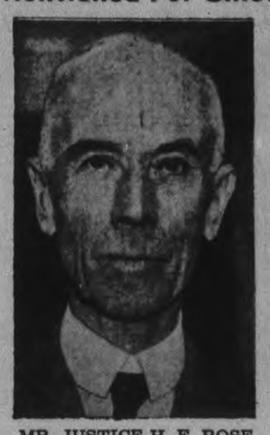
Mentioned For Chief Justiceship



MR. JUSTICE H. E. ROSE

R. S. ROBERTSON, K.C.

Following the resignation of Hon. Newton Rowell as Chief Justice of Ontario, two names have been mentioned as the probable successor. Mr. Justice Rose, whose name was mentioned for the Chief Justice's post shortly before the appointment of Mr. Rowell two years ago, is again mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Rowell. R. S. Robertson, K.C., of Toronto, regarded as one of the most eminent legal authorities in the Dominion, has also been mentioned for the post. He represented the Canadian government when Prime Minister Mackenzie King submitted the Bennett "Reform Bills" to the Privy Council two years ago.

Percy Couple Hosts To Hundred Guests

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. James Beamish observed the fifteenth anniversary of their wedding day at their home in Percy township on Friday evening.

More than one hundred guests were present including relatives and friends from Norwood, Warkworth, Dartford and the surrounding country. Mr and Mrs Beamish, who were married in Western Canada, came to Ontario over a year ago and this was the first occasion so many relatives had the opportunity of meeting together with the honored ones who were the recipients of lovely gifts including a beautiful complete tea set in china.

The midnight hour proved an enjoyable time after cards and dancing as many dainty refreshments were served. The gathering broke up in the early hours of morn, each guest extending Mr. and Mrs. Beamish best wishes for many more happy years of married life.

Guests from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs Thomas Newcombe, Mr. Harry Wade, Mr. and Mrs Charles Raycraft, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Raycraft, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Raycraft, Messrs. Garnet and Harry Raycraft of Warkworth, Mr and Mrs Gordon Jewell and Miss Ruth Morrow of Dartford, Mr. and Mrs Samuel Buck, Wilfred and Reta of Norwood.

Euchre And Dance A Decided Success

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Nov. 29. — The progressive euchre and dance sponsored by the members of L.O.L No 458 and held in the Orange Hall on Friday evening was a decided success. Eight tables of euchre were played and the prizes were presented as follows: Ladies' first, Mrs. Wm. Post; ladies' second, Miss Mae Warner of Peterborough; gentlemen's first, Mr. Earl Clark; gentlemen's second, Mr. Gordon McGee. Lucky chair prize, Mrs. Wm. Post.

CIGARETTE CAUSES FIRE

Traffic was held up for an hour at one of the busiest corners of Manchester, England, by fire from a cigarette thrown into a litter box.

APSLEY

The local branch of the Apsley Red Cross held their monthly meeting in the hospital on Friday evening with about ten members present. Mr. N. Lean was i nthe chair. The main item of business was selection of a delegate to the executive council held in Toronto. Rev. C. A. G. Spence was chosen. Lunch was served by the nurse in charge, Miss Grover, and a social half hour was spent.

Mrs. Norman James, Chandos, is on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Vincent Junkin, of Bobcaygeon.

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC PAINS—ACHES

It takes more than "just a salve" to bring relief. It takes a "counter-irritant" like good old Musterole—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in quickly overcoming the local congestion and pain when rubbed on the aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly.

Better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster, Musterole has been used by millions for 30 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Made in Canada, in three strengths: Regular, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. All druggists, 40¢ each.

Canada Manufactures War Airplanes

The "Stranraer" twin-engined long distance patrol flying boat was designed and developed originally by the famous Supermarine Aircraft Works in England, builders of the Schneider Cup racers. Ten of these huge ships are now being delivered to the Royal Canadian Air Force from the factory of Canadian Vickers, Ltd., in Montreal. Completion of this order will leave the Vickers factory in a position to participate in any British government orders which may be offered. The aircraft industry of Canada is working together through a central administrative and sales office. It is anticipated that a sizable order will be placed for the new Handley-Page Hampden day bombers.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

SINCE the Czechs were merely mutilated, and not annihilated, by the Munich pact, goose feathers from that country are saved for posterity and badminton players. Especially the badminton players. Let us deal for a space with badminton. This hitherto snooty game is now one for the masses (no relation to Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground) and how they go for it. A most invigorating sight to see the muscular guys leaping high in a hot volley, and the speedy play of the shapely lasses in shorts. More particularly that! They play it in the Armouries, in the Market Hall, in gyms, in rooms and incognito. Hundreds and hundreds from mid-fall to mid-spring, which also describes in part the action of this speedy, colorful and quite hectic sport.

* * * * * *

IT IS PLAYED over a net, though pioneers are said to have used a clothes-line full of the Monday wash with almost equal success. The ball is a light affair with feathers on it and the tendency to start out like a racing car but to slow down just over the net with four-wheel brakes applied. Most disconcerting, and we nearly knocked our left ear off with the racquet—much like a lanky fly-swatter—the only time we tried. Poor judgment of distances (particularly in our gym shorts which exposed bumpy knees) proved our downfall. We might add that there are gees right in this town now playing the game, and in shorts, too, who had better listen to the public mutterings and seek a mirror or long pants ere it is too late. After all, long trousers cover a multitude of shins, many of which should certainly be borne to blush unseen. Or are we mixed up?

Too Large For Home

AS FOR THE DIMENSIONS, we dug 'em out of a Windsor sheet, so sue them if we're wrong. Seems the court is 44 by 20 feet and hence it is not suitable to play at home unless the furniture can be shifted to the kitchen and the old organ, which is broken anyway, given to charity. The net is some 5 feet high with the service lines drawn on either side. As someone points out, the line must be drawn somewhere! The shuttlecock is five inches and scales a quarter of an ounce, even during moulting season. A lighter one has been used at times but is most susceptible to a sneeze in the audience. What audience? Well, sometimes, the boy friends or relatives drop around. The racquet may weigh five ounces, which is hardly half that of a pocket flask. As for the rules of the game, we don't know 'em yet—but may learn and let you in on the secret shortly.

YE GALLOPING GHOSTS of Cobourg, erstwhile opponents on the grid of our Orfuns, deserve plenty of credit for copping the O.R.F.U. intermediate "A" championship this year, one year after winning "B" honors. To Prexy Dufton goes much of the credit, but also plenty to Coach Chuck Peck and the swell squad of gridders on the Rapid Wraiths' team. They beat a good team on Saturday in the final, the Sarnia Wanderers being no setup. Incidentally, Perry and Jackson—two Sarnia backfielders, weighing around 170—would like to play for Peterbcrough next fall. So they said. The Ghosts are putting on a big hop this Friday p.m. in the high school there and invite local football followers—at $1.50 a couple. We'll pass it up as big Meikle is liable to step on our foot in the dance jam and hoof us into a wheelchair!

Didn't Sarnia Win?

SEEMS QUITE A FEW rugby fans here want to know the all-star team picked by Sarnia Imps, who were most unimpressed by the Can. Press mythical menagerie. Here 'tis: Flying wing, Hempey; halves, Ferraro, Sward, Thompson; quarter, Box; snap, Hendrie; insides, Reid, McGarry; middles, Burns, Casson; ends, Reynolds, Burton. They lean heavily on Beaches and, foolishly enough, omit all Sarnia players; and at least four rate a spot. What about Stirling? They cut Nats from six to three. Imps had a high respect for Hendrie of the locals.

LOCAL HOCKEY CLUB OFFICERS have decided to run a puck program this winter and Bill Morrison is now soliciting advertising, having been appointed by Prexy R. M. Glover of the club. Merchants who have been putting out regularly on sports' programs will be passed up this time—unless they ask for the space, since there is no desire on the part of the puck ossifers to work a hardship on these good sportsmen. Needing dough for equipment to enter two squads in O.H.A. competition, it was decided that a program would aid considerably. Hence the recent decision.

Yassuh, Aheadin' South

TWO MORE good hockey players in this burg are pulling out, Jim Ellis and Mick Magee having caught on with the Havana Cubans of the new Florida amateur hockey circuit. They've been trying out with the team—coached by Bullet Joe Simpson—in Port Colborne the past week or so, and have been signed up to play defence. They smacked rivals around so hard in workouts that Simpson couldn't pass 'em up! This pair leave for Port Colborne tomorrow and start south on Saturday. Four teams in the loop, with games in a new artificial ice arena in Miami. Boyoboyoboy, isn't that the life of the whole Reilly clan! Our best wishes to Jim and Mick; we hope they click okay in the south, and we don t see why they shouldn't. Both are good defencemen, with Ellis being a sweet skater and stickhandler and Mick a game bouncing defenceman of the Bucko McDonald type. The latter local lad is also well-known for his rugby and lacrosse, while Ellis is a swell softball player. They will be missed locally, in hockey and otherwise. Wonder if the Cubans could use a clean-cut publicity man with a pleasing personality!

PREXY LLOYD PARNALL is calling the annual Church Hockey League meeting for Dec. 12th at seven p.m. in the 'Y'. He hopes to have all 13 churches represented in the various divisions, though entries may come in later. Older players of the loop often have to work nights coming on Xmas and the younger lads frequently lack equipment till Santa Claus time, so the loop can't do much till late in December. Though the 16 teams entered in this circuit last year was only an average entry, Peterborough still had the largest Church League per capita of any city in the province. The loop had 23 teams in the 1933-34 season when at its peak. Probably some 18 or more will be lined up this winter—especially as the junior section should be revived with the folding of the Junior City Puck Loop.

Cricket Notes

In a recent issue of the Examiner appeared an account of cricket activities here thirty years ago which stated that in 1910 the local club expired and that cricket was not played here again until after the war. Further investigation shows that this was not quite accurate. With a season's break the club was again operating and a photograph of the 1913 team shows the club with a very useful lot of players. This twenty-five-year-old photograph forms an interesting link between past and present. In it are two players who are still playing the game, John Lawrence, now vice-captain of the Peterborough Club, and Sam Yaxley, now one of the stalwarts of the Toronto Yorkshire C.C. While F. M. Dela Fosse, vice-captain and Miles Hamilton, vice-president are still interested though not actively. Of the two other vice-presidents who appear in the picture, C. H. Pennefather, manager of the then-existent Union Bank here and Major Cooper was manager of the National Hotel, now the Empress. He met with a tragic death from a blood-poisoned hand incurred from the simple act of can opening. Frank Whitehouse, the captain, was afterwards a city alderman; Beresford M. Hamilton, now of Ottawa, is eldest brother of Archie Hamilton, well-known Whitaker player of today, while H. Foster is still a resident in the city.

There was a strong representation from the C.G.E. in the team, Messers. H. Foster, T. S. Rose, J. A. Cummings, J. H. Thompson (secretary-treasurer), C. Levy S. Yaxley and W. Brown all being in the company's services and G. B. Stokes was a bank clerk. With the outbreak of the war the club automatically ceased to exist and the players J. H. Thompson and J. V. Boone made the supreme sacrifice.

The club, as now, played at the Oval and it is interesting to note that this ground was laid out in 1894 for purposes of recreation, having been purchased for that purpose with moneys bequeathed by Mrs. Nicholls.

Duke To Battle California In Rose Bowl

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—(AP).—It's Duke, the rock of the Southern Football Conference, and Southern California, survivor of a bitter grid campaign along the Pacific, in the Rose Bowl battle January 2.

Concluding in six hours negotiations that usually take a week or more, Southern California last night invited the Blue Devils of Durham, N.C., to play its Trojan warriors in Pasadena's annual post-season game. Duke lost no time accepting.

There is joy in the hills of North Carolina today for never before in the 23-year-old history of the Far West classic has one of its teams played in the rose-bordered bowl in the Arroyo Secco.

But just as there is celebrating in North Carolina, so is there gloom in Texas and a wail echoing over the rolling countryside of Tennessee, for Texas and Tennessee had unbeaten, untied Rose Bowl candidates, too, in Texas Christian and the University of Tennessee.

Duke's supporters in Southern California were legion, however, and no one could criticize its 1938 team or its record of nine straight victories with never a touchdown, never a point, surrendered.

Students Celebrate

DURHAM, N.C., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The thermometer showed it was nearly freezing, but the fragrance of roses mingles with football enthusiasm in this tobacco-manufacturing town today.

Until late into the night, Duke students, led by the 60-piece Blue Devil band, paraded from the University campus through the downtown streets, and the cry was, "On To Pasadena" or "California, Here I Come!"

Hunter Discovers Muzzle Loader Is Good For Deer

Titusville, Pa. Nov. 29 (AP)

BIG GAME HUNTER Jack Sterner found a new trial with an old weapon. Sterner wearied of modern rifles after he brought down a bear and seven deer. Before the season opened this year, he bought a massive long-barreled muzzle loader of Civil War vintage for $12. It failed to fire the first three times he pulled the trigger. The fourth time it delivered — by knocking over his eighth deer.

Play Defense In Florida Amateur League

Sitting on a southern beach and picking up a sun-tan in the afternoons, and skating on artificial ice and picking a corner of the net in the evening, sounds like an ideal life for a hockey player. And that's what two Peterborough pucksters will be doing this winter in Miami, Florida. They are Jim Ellis and Mick Magee, who played defence last winter for the local Bees in O.H.A. intermediate company.

This pair will play defence for the Havana Cubans of the new Florida amateur hockey league, a four-team circuit consisting of Miami, the Cubans, Miami Beach and Bermuda. A fine artificial ice arena has been built in Miami, where all games are played. There is some talk, if the game goes over in Florida, of putting on a short season in Buenos Aires, South America, by the same clubs. Bullet Joe Simpson, former Amerks' N.H.L. star, is coach of the Cubans, while LePage of Montreal, Goodman of Wichita and Stan Jackson, former referee, are other coaches in the loop.

Made Berths

Ellis and Magee went up to Port Colborne a week or so ago to try out with the gang battling for berths on the Florida squad. They were uninvited but stepped right in and went after a spot. Being early arrivals and putting on a torrid display of body-checking from the beginning, the Peterborough huskies caught the fancy of Coach Simpson, who signed them up. It was a rather narrow rink and some of the rival players were young and forgot to keep their heads up coming in on defence, so Ellis and Magee claim, and the latter two banged them hard and often in a fine showing. With their bumping experience last year in O.H.A. games, the Magee-Ellis duo should continue to look good on defence. Jimmy is also a fine rusher. They leave tomorrow for Port Colborne and on Saturday for the south.

Ellis has long been considered a fine puck prospect around these parts and could have played with the senior "B" Petes last winter but decided to stick with the intermediate Bees. He is also tops as a softball player. Magee is a rugged defenceman in fine shape at all times and with a battling spirit which drives him continually. A good-natured chap, he bumps his hardest but takes plenty with a grin. Besides hockey, he is a starry gridiron backfielder and an ace forward in lacrosse, playing senior in both the past year. Both players will be missed here this winter, but good wishes of the sporting fraternity will follow them south.

In fact, no Packard owner has ever awakened one morning, full of pride in his still-new car, only to discover that radical style changes have branded it an "out-of-date model."

Does this mean that Packard opposes style changes? Of course not—for change is the essence of progress. But Packard believes that style can, and should be, used in the best interests of the car owner, rather than against them.

So, again for 1939, you will find Packards re-styled, more beautiful than ever. But you will also find them unmistakably Packards—no one has to guess what they are.

And, again, you will find new advances in Packard design and construction—new evidences of the quality that contributes a long mechanical life to match Packard enduring identity.

See your Packard dealer today. Discover that a Packard—the car that is built to last longer and look well longer—is surprisingly easy to buy, own and run. It costs nothing to get the facts.

We'll deliver a new 1939 Packard Six 5-Passenger Sedan to your door, with standard equipment for only . . . . $ 1525

Your present car, if of average value, will probably cover the small down payment of only . . . . . $ 510

PUCK IMPORTS FIND O.H.A. RESIDENCE RULE IS LOOSENED UP

New Clauses Allow Transfers After October 15 Deadline As Association Relaxes Rule

The O. H. A. residence rule—once the tightest of any amateur sports organization in the country—is now nearly wide-open. It has been loosened gradually in recent years and at present has many loop-holes for clubs importing players, whether early or late. Following a 1938 C. A. H. A. rule, the Ontario Hockey Association permits almost unrestricted moves of players within the branch up to Oct. 15th of the current season. However, when the number exceeds more than four players on a senior club or two on a junior team, a three-quarter vote by the O. H. A. executive committee is required. Intermediate and junior "C" teams are still permitted but two imports.

But the point was brought out this year at the annual O. H. A. meeting that a number of exceptions to the residence date clause are recognized. No less than seven, which should make it easy for any club. And these exceptions not only allow any number of imports, but permits them to move into a town after the Oct. 15th deadline and still play hockey for that town.

The Loop-holes

Following are the clauses which permit players to move after Oct. 15th: (a) Players whose parents and family change their residence and the player continues to reside with his family; (b) players who have graduated from a recognized university or college at the conclusion of the term just past; (c) players who are bona-fide students in attendance at any recognized preparatory school, university or college; (d) players connected with the permanent militia forces or with the R. C. M. P. who are moved in the course of their duty, provided they have had six months' continuous service immediately prior to the residence date with the aforesaid bodies; (e) players who are employees with six months' service immediately prior to residence date, who are moved by their employees; (f) players other than juniors who have not previously been registered with any branch of the C. A. H. A.; (g) players other than juniors who have not participated in any scheduled games with any club affiliated with any branch of the C. A. H. A. during the preceding season; Exceptions to (f) and (g); shall not be deemed to apply to players who have been transferred from any other country. It is understood than no player may play for more than one club in any season.

Rinkless Ones

There is still another angle which appears in the following new O.H.A. rule; In case of a player residing in a rural district, village or police village, or in a town where there is no rink, or in which the rink does not meet the requirements of the O. H. A., he must play for the O. H. A. club nearest to his residence having a team entered in the series for which he is eligible to play, except where such player's services are waived by such club, and every other club in the same series nearer his place of residence than the club for which he wishes to play, by Jan. 1st, and all such waivers filed with the O. H. A. secretary. Such waivers must be renewed annually, and shall not be construed as having altered the original residence of the player. It is understood that a junior player has a privilege of playing in the nearest place to his residence which has a junior O.H.A. team. The manner of determining the distance is to be computed by the milage over a road which is at all times maintained for motor traffic.

Hence it can be seen by a club wishing to import early or late that a perusal of the rules and reasonable adherence to them will disclose various avenues which are now opened by the O. H. A. to aid the players and clubs in this organization.

Oshawa Is Beaten By Smoke Eaters

OSHAWA, Nov. 29.—Playing like champions throughout, Trail Smoke Eaters gave an impressive display here last night as they trounced Oshawa G-men 9 to 5 in a thrilling exhibition game. The Allan Cup holders piled up to 4 to 1 lead in the first period by virtue of a smooth passing attack that generally ended with a dangerous try on goal, while their backchecking and defensive tactics left little to be desired. In the last two periods the locals made a much better showing as the result of adopting aggresive tactics, but by that time the result was never in doubt. Although an exhibition game, play was rugged throughout, with fifteeen penalties being meted out by Referee Army Armstrong.

Cronie and Cliff Maundrell paced their respective teams with a trio of counters as both turned in grand efforts.

The only outburst of ill feeling came in the last period, when Doug Maundrell and Joe Benoit went off after a short flurry of fists. The visitors proved to be one of the fastest skating addregations seen here in some time, while their ability to kill time when short-handed left nothing to be desired.

Uncle Mike Sounds Out McLarnin As Material For Armstrong

Remember When—

Albert (Frenchy) Belanger defeated Frankie Genaro of New York over 10 rounds at Toronto 11 years ago tonight. Genaro, former flyweight boxing champion made it close but the Toronto battler was given the verdict unanimously. Both fighters now are inactive.

By Alan Randal
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (C.P.). — Just when everybody suspected Henry Armstrong had outstripped all ring competition, Promoter Mike Jacobs confirmed such ideas to-day by announcing that Jimmy McLarnin is high on the list of probable opponents for Henry the Hammerer.

Uncle Mike bracketed Lou Ambers with the Vancouver Biffer as opponents for the little brown man who last Friday defended his welterweight title against Ceferino Garcia and disposed of the last ranking contender.

That left Lou Ambers, who lost his lightweight laurels to Armstrong last summer, as the only active puncher against whom Henry might draw a sizeable set of customers. Jacobs has hopes of an Armstrong-Ambers welter title bout in February if Larruping Lou, a natural lightweight, will step out of his class.

After that one, and banking of course on Armstrong to pass Ambers again, the wily boxing czar has his mind on an outdoor match next June between McLarnin, the one-time, one-punch welter king, and Hurricane Hank.

"Why, it should draw $250,000," said Jacobs. "The fans haven't seen Jimmy in a long time and McLarnin always draw them."

Shekels to Get Him.

Jacobs doesn't care much who wins so long as the turnstiles click regularly and with that in mind he sounded out McLarnine and his old manager, Pop Foster, during a recent Pacific Coast trip. Mike reported Jimmy would fight Armstrong if there was enough money in it.

"Jimmy said he'd like to try a comeback, but wanted a month or two to work out and see how he shaped up before making a decision," said Bill Farnsworth, Jacobs' Man Friday. "Jimmy said he weighed 155 pounds."

To most of the fight mob, the thought that Jimmy, now crowding the 32-year-old mark, could come back after two years in retirement and beat Armstrong was not to be considered seriously. Barney Ross gave McLarnin quite a lacing in 1935 when he regained the welter crown that he previously won from and lost to Jimmy in 1934. And only last spring Armstrong polished off Ross.

Tiger Jack Fox To Meet Gainer

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (A.P.). — Tiger Jack Fox and Al Gainer, two negroes who have been trailing the light heavyweight championship for the past two years, get together to-night at Bronx Coliseum in the first of two 15-round elimination bouts to decide the champion.

The winner of to-night's brawl will meet Mello Bettina, the Bacon, N.Y., southpaw, for the title vacated by John Henry Lewis when he overlooked a match with Tiger Jack.

Lead Retained By Gottselig N.H.L. Scoring

MONTREAL, Nov. 29—(CP)—Lean Johnny Gottselig, the stick-handling magician of Chicago Black Hawks, is still the top point-getter of the National Hockey League at the end of three weeks of play according to the league's official statistics issued last night.

The slippery Hawk forward picked off one goal and gained three assists during the last week to stay at the head of the standings in the league records, with a total of six and five for eleven points. But greatest point-getting feat of the week was the officially-credited five goals and one assist that boosted Tommy Anderson of New York Americans just a point behind Gottselig with 6-4-10.

(Unofficial summaries of the week's games gave Anderson an additional assist, which would have put him in a tie with the Chicagoan.)

One point behind Anderson in the N.H.L. figures are two of his teammates, Eddie Wiseman and the veteran Nels Stewart, and Bill Cowley of Boston Bruins. Wiseman has three and six; Stewart four and five, and Cowley two and seven.

(Wiseman is credited in unofficial figures with three goals and seven assists for a total of 10.

The statistics place Alex Levinsky Chicago rearguard, at the head of the penalty list. He is credited with 22 minutes on the bench, one more than Bingo Kampman of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Leafs Almost Ready For Big Drive With Boll And Drillon Fast On Road To Recovery

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Nov. 29.—(CP).—Almost over the hump of a run of injuries now, Toronto Maple Leafs will have to be counted in for a big out of National Hockey League spoils when Gordon Drillon and Buzz Boll return to the lineup.

Leafs have had the heaviest early footing of any entry, yet they've come up to this stage only a point out of first place. They rest all this week, play twice next weekend, then take another five days' rest. After that, watch for a beautifully balanced team.

Boll suffered a charley-horse in the first game of the season; Drillon went out two days later with a broken thumb. Any club could have been excused if the bottom had fallen out of its game with the loss of two right wings.

But Manager Conny Smythe and Coach Dick Irvin found ways to patch the team, and after a brief period of uncertainty Leafs pushed rapidly ahead. Defeating Detroit 5-0 here Saturday night, they looked as if the addition of a couple of forwards like Drillon and Boll would put them right up at the head of the class.

Some Fine Material.

Turk Broda has been one of the two or three goal-tending stars of the season. Gus Marker, bought from the defunct Montreal Maroons to replace Drillon, has gone better than any one of the Maroon players who were picked up before he was. Rudolph (Bingo) Kampman, whom no one was quite sure about, has ended the Leafs' prayers for a high-riding, give-and-take defenceman.

Captain Red Horner has supplanted the inspirational forces of other days, like King Clancy, while Syl Apps, without Drillon beside him, has done brilliant individual work. Murph Chamberlain has mixed brains with the freshman speed and stick-handling ability he showed last winter.

Perhaps the Leafs have been playing over their heads because they were called on to give something extra. On the other hand, they may be only fulfilling the promise they showed in the past two winters, when most of them were only gaining their big-league legs.

Normie Mann and Murray Armstrong were sent down to Syracuse, Toronto's International-American League farm, during the week-end after helping out in the emergency. Drillon practised yesterday without the cast on his hand and may get into next week-end's games. Boll might be ready, too.

Dizzy Dean has been putting around $200 on the bankroll for every one of those stops on his mid-west speaking tour . . . Mike Jacobs is offering Babe Ruth $15,000 to manage Mike's Jai Alai business in the Hippodrome for six months....And the Babe is thinking it over, even though it isn't a major league job....Here's wishing those Spokane Clippers of the Pacific Coast Hockey League a pile of luck....When Art Rud failed to sell the outfit, the players took over themselves, took a 50 per cent pay

Offers 1,000 Guineas To Get Empire Games

CARDIFF, Nov. 29 (C.P.). — Lord Glanely has offered 1,000 guineas towards the £10,000 guarantee fund suggested as being necessary for Wales to stage the 1946 Empire Games.

Suggestion the Games should be held in Wales was made by Sir Robert Webber, managing director of the Western Mail. He suggested Cardiff might be the most suitable centre if the Games come to the principality.

Lord Aberdare, chairman of the National Fitness Council, has promised his co-operation in the effort to bring the Games to Wales. He said there was ample time to get the necessary guarantee fun as the venue for the 1946 Games would not be decided until 1942.

Counsel Plays Dual Role In Tax Case

Emmet F. Sheehy in the dual role of witness and counsel in his own behalf provided an unusual circumstance in the county court action Monday afternoon in which he was a defendant charged by the city with being in arrears of taxes on his office over Bond's drug store. Evidence concluded before His Honor Judge Smoke, who arranged to receive written arguments from counsel during the next fifteen days.

The case was not concluded until 5.30 o.'clock, leaving insufficient time to hear the three lawyers engaged in the trial, W. F. Huycke, K.C., for the city, Mr. Sheehy in his own defense and B. D. Hall for the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, owners of the building.

The dispute between Mr. Sheehy and the city council extends back to the Decembers of 1934 and 1935 when he was a candidate for the council, and in obtaining certificates of qualification from the tax collector of that time, C. E. Curtis, paid two amounts of arrears for which Mr. Sheehy contended he was not credited. While he was being cross-examined on the stand by Mr. Huycke, the dual position of witness and client led Mr. Sheehy into occasional arguments with the City solicitor.

"If I want to make objections who am I to appeal to," he asked at one stage.

"Make your objections to me, not to Mr. Huycke," Judge Smoke advised.

During an interruption when Mr. Sheehy left the stand to get some document from his table Mr. Huycke said, "Now Mr. Sheehy if you will go back to the stand and just answer the questions I ask you."

Defendant Called

At the continuation of the case Monday afternoon, Mr. Sheehy said he had applied to the clerk of the peace for a certificate of the conviction of C. E. Curtis, former tax collector, but Mr. McElderry was out of the city. He requested that right be reserved to him to file the certificate as soon as it could be obtained.

Judge Smoke—"I can't see yet what bearing it has on the matter."

Mr. Sheehy—"My whole argument was I paid money to Mr. Curtis, and—"

Judge Smoke—It is a matter of evidence not argument.

Mr. Sheehy said he might succeed in shifting responsibility to the city by showing that its books were not correct, and that the man in charge of them at that time was convicted of conversion of money not recorded in those books. "The fact that no entry is in the books could not be used as prima facie evidence against me that I did not make payment."

Mr. Sheehy said his position also was that taxes paid in 1935 and 1936 were improperly applied to earlier taxes which already had been paid.

Judge Smoke said there was a cheque for $111 which was the only evidence of a tax payment having been made in the year subsequent to the year to which it should apply.

Was Willing to Pay

Mr. Sheehy stated he was willing to pay the city a substantial amount but he asked to be credited with all money paid by him since December 21, 1934, on the taxes accruing after that date. "If they do that I'm still losing $85.90. I wanted that credit on the following year because I paid it twice." He added that his nomination certificate showed he was all paid up on January 1, 1935, and any money paid after Christmas 1934 should be credited to the taxes of 1935, 6 and 7. The sum of $111 he paid in 1935, he said, was credited by the city to taxes of 1933, which he declared were paid in 1934.

Referring to a statement he received from Morris and Laurie who were engaged by the city as special accountants in 1935, Mr. Sheehy said it informed him the balance he owed was $31.33, "but two or three years late I was asked to pay $300 or $400 more."

That was on September 21, but on June 15 of that year a notice from Mr. Curtis said the amount then owing was $35.09.

Defendant submitted a letter written by him on January 24, 1936, "three weeks after I had made a second payment under protest. Mr. Sheehy said that when he became a candidate in 1934 he was told some of his taxes were in arrears.

"Mr. Curtis told me he recollected my having paid my taxes, but I would have to pay $85.59 to get the certificate for nomination, and if I produced my receipt the money would be refunded to me. Having paid the taxes twice I was told by Mr. Curtis there were no taxes left on the books. The same thing happened when I was a candidate in December, 1935. The special auditors informed me Mr. Curtis did not credit me with the payment."

Mr. Sheehy said he then took the position he wouldn't pay the 1935 taxes until he was allowed for the overcharge he had paid. The amount in December 1935 he had paid to get a certificate was $111.

"The fact that the books kept by Mr. Curtis were not in shape was the reason for me being charged $200 or $300 of this amount charged against me."

Mr. Sheehy said his protests went to the council and he was told a refund of tax payments could not be made, and if legal action was taken some arrangement could be made by way of costs.

"Then Mr. Gordon became chairman of the legal committee and there was a right about face, and that's the only reason I'm in court today.

Mr. Huycke objected to that allegation and asked that the statement be stricken from the evidence.

"Two or three successive chairmen of the finance committee agreed with me," Mr. Sheehy said, and Mr. Huycke suggested they be called as witnesses if Mr. Sheehy wished to present evidence from them.

In cross-examination Mr. Huycke reviewed with the defendant a series of cheques. The first one dated July 9, 1931, had no "paid" stamp by the bank, and Mr. Huycke suggested the cheque was later redeemed in cash. Later he said—"I don't agree with your sheet at all. It only shows the payments you admit."

The 1932 payments were all covered by receipt, but the third installment for 1933 was not shown by receipt.

Mr. Huycke referred to a cheque of September 23, 1934, which bore no direction as to how the money was to be allocated. Mr. Sheehy said he had perhaps mailed it. Mr. Huycke said apparently $127 of that cheque was credited to taxes on the home of defendant's mother.

Defendant contended he had paid all the 1934 taxes, and $85 for his nomination certificate, which he said he paid under protest. Mr. Huycke pointed out that there was no "paid under protest" notation on the receipts. Mr. Sheehy said a mark meant he would get a refund if he could produce a tax receipt for that amount.

A Long Way Back

"You thought in December 1934 the payment of $111 and the certificate you got showed you were paid up back to—" Mr. Huycke was saying and Mr. Sheehy interfered.

"Back to the French revolution for that matter."

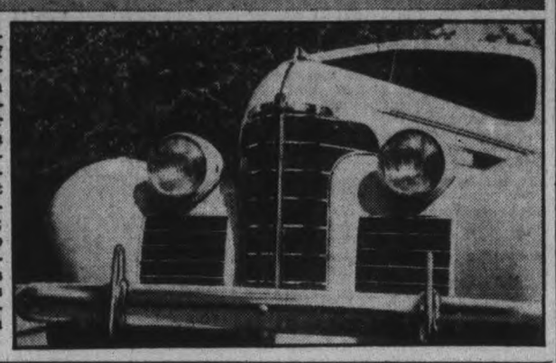
"Then in December 1935," Mr. Huycke said, "it was discovered some of your 1933 taxes were not paid?"

"No. It was discovered Curtis had lied to protect himself."

"And you maintain the certificate you got was in the nature of a receipt?"

"That's for the court to say, but I consider it was proof I had paid up to that time. It was sufficient to stop at that time any examination of Curtis' books, because he knew I was paid up."

THE NEW OLDSMOBILE SIX AND EIGHT



An entirely new and revolutionary "Rhythmic Ride" is a feature of the 1939 Oldsmobile, which is offered to the Canadian public in both eight cylinder model (upper picture) and six cylinder line (lower picture). The many innovations in the new series include: dual centre-control steering; all-silent syncro-mesh transmission and handi-shift gear control mounted on the steering column; advanced knee-action; and many other refinements. To achieve the "Rhythmic Ride", Oldsmobile engineers in the 1939 models have made use of four frictionless coil springs to attain what is described as perfect balance between front and rear springing.

New Uses For Nepheline Syenite Discovered By Research Men

That research workers have discovered new uses for nepheline syenite and that the Rochester subsidiary plant has received its first commercial order for pottery grade material was an important piece of information given members of the Peterborough Rotary club at their weekly luncheon Monday by John Duncan, secretary of Canadian Nepheline, Limited, who was the guest speaker.

"They tell us," Mr. Duncan stated, "that nepheline syenite has untold possibilities in its own field."

Guests of honor today were members of Peterborough county junior livestock judging teams who were introduced by Rotarian Frank C. Paterson, Ontario agricultural representative. They included Gordon Stalker and Braden Mann, members of the foal club judging team which finished in first place in the inter-county judging competition at Guelph, winning a silver trophy; Jack Bolin and Keith Pimmett, Peterborough county's beef calf club judging team which took fifth place in the inter-county contest and the Royal Winter Fair stock judging team which won third place in the big competition at Toronto; Gordon Stalker, Jim Moore and Harold Donaldson. Jim Moore was unable to be present and his father, Charles E. Moore, of Smith township, represented him.

A telegram was received from former Rotarian Art Runions at Kemptville, congratulating the boys upon their exploits in judging this season.

Only One in World

The speaker, Mr. Duncan, was introduced by Rotarian T. A. MacKay, and began by pointing out that the nepheline syenite turned out from the Blue Mountain quarry was not only the purest and most uniform but that the Peterborough county development was the only commercial development in the world, although there were deposits in Russia, India and in some parts of the United States.

Explaining that nepheline syenie was made up of six minerals, Mr. Duncan showed the advantage it had in the manufacture of glass as compared to potash or sodium feldspar. It added, he said, brilliancy, durability and tensible strength and in addition its low fusion point was a distinct advantage.

The speaker explained in detail the operations at the Blue Mountain quarry and at the Lakefield plant, describing each step of the process. It had been estimated that the whole Blue Mountain, he said, contained vast quantities of nepheline.

The discovery of the mineral was not new, the speaker said. It was found first in 1910 by Adams and Barlow who, examining the district on behalf of the Dominion government, reported rich deposits there. In 1916 the government endeavored to develop the findings as an agricultural product because of the rich potash contents reported, but that effort was soon abandoned.

In the early thirties, the possibility of using this supply of nepheline in glass-making was broached but because a way had not then been discovered of eliminating the mineral impurities the plan was dropped. The present company was launched in 1935 and after many trials had been developed on a large scale, the total finished product increasing from 10,422 tons last year to 15,240 for the first ten months of 1938.

While up to the present Canadian nepheline had been only shipping its product to glass-makers, research workers were discovering new uses in the field of enamels and ceramics and only last week the Rochester plant received its first order for pottery grade material.

The thanks of Rotary were extended Mr. Duncan on motion of Rotarian R. M. Glover.

Rhumba Club Fails

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (A.P.). — Broadway wrote as epitaph to-day over La Conga, night club temple of the rhumba, "Victim of a New Rhythm." The West 57th Street cabaret, one of the most successful hot spots last season, has filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy. Mushroomed into popularity with the "wee hour" elite on the heels of the rhumba craze, the club apparently died in the wake of the Lambeth Walk and Jitterbug Swing.

Harwood Girl Lucky Winner

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH Nov. 28.—Miss Jean Shearer of Harwood was the holder of the lucky ticket, entitling her to the Women's Institute hope chest when the tickets were drawn on Friday night. The W.I. members have been selling tickets on the chest for the past month, and on Friday night at a progressive euchre party sponsored by the society. The lucky ticket was picked from a box by little Miss Merna Pacey of New Liskeard, granddaughter of vice-president, Mrs. J. W. Pacey. Two other holders of lucky tickets entitling them to lesser prizes were: Mrs. Barton Thackeray, president, and Harvey Eddy.

Eighteen tables of euchre were in play. C. W. Varcoe ran up a high score in the men's play and won the prize. The ladies' prize was won by Miss Mary Braithwaite.

Croll made no direct reference to the advertisement last night when he addressed a campaign meeting.

"If you want Government by remote control from Toronto, from the trust companies and from the mortgage companies, do not vote for me," he said. "I have said before that Wigle is the representative of the big interests, of the Chamber of Commerce, and the industrial firms of the city. To-night you have conclusive evidence that he is the front man for the big interests."

Croll said that if some people did not like his attacks on Furlong he did not like "some of the things" Furlong had said about him.

"I know that baby and some of his playboy companions," he added. "You are paying your debts like any other municipality and you have the right to self-government. the mining development of the district."

"We are filling the canal with water merely as a matter of engineering policy" the Premier said. "Th Government has no intention whatever of maintaining a continuous flow."

Last March 21 there was tabled in the House of Commons correspondence between the Dominion Government and the United States Government on the diversion of the waters of Long Lake and the waters of the Ogoki River into Lake Superior. The Canadian Government declared in its note it was ready to approve the province's application for diversion of the lake waters. Under the Navigable Water Protection Act any diversion to international waters must be approved by the Governments of the two countries.

Ontario wanted to retain the water as property of the province for development of power at Sault Ste. Marie, Niagara Falls, and in the St. Lawrence River. But Washington disagreed and offered instead to enter into negotiations for an agreement on "problems of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin."

Roosevelt Hoped.

President Roosevelt, speaking at the opening of an international bridge at Ivy Lea, Ont., last summer, expressed hope that the two countries could reach an agreement on the St. Lawrence Waterway scheme.

Last night Mr. Hepburn said: "Finding that we could get no co-operation or support from Ottawa, we abandoned any thought of the power project, also the proposed Ogoki diversion."

Timber-cutting in the area will yield the province $400,000 to $500,000 a year, the Premier said. The Pulpwood Supply Company has a long-term plan for harvesting nearly 5,000,000 cords in 75 years.

The logs will be floated down the channel, cut a depth of 14 feet, then through the Aguasabon River to Lake Superior at Schreiber. The southern tip of Long Lake is 32 miles Schreiber.

The three leaders and their aides would be prosecuted on charges of inciting to strike.

It was decided that Miss Batten would place the figures for the last grand jury sitting before the council for their consideration.

Deremo-Williams Romance

The Deremo-Williams romance ha dan echo in the meeting Monday which brought more chuckles from the members and Miss Batten, reading the grand jury report had difficulty continuing as the comments were made by the councillors.

The excerpt from the report of the grand jury which caused the merriment was the comment on the House of Refuge at Lakefield which lauded the fine work of Mr. and Mrs. Fry then said "It is little wonder we found the inmates contented and happy."

"We could keep them happy if we could keep the pestiverous Dan Cupid out of the institution, interjected Reeve Charles Tanner of Lakefield and chairman of the House of Refuge Board.

"I can see John Deremo was not a member of that grand jury," was the comment of Reeve Gifford.

Miss Batten then read a letter from Emmett F. Sheehy, acting for his client Mrs. Storms at whose house the old couple were married. The letter referred to the House of Refuge committee.

Message of Condolence

Dep.-Reeve Melville Johnson of North Monaghan moved that Miss Batten send a letter to Reeve Wm. Anderson of Otonabee, extending the sympathy of the council on the death of his mother. He voiced regret that many members were unaware of Mrs. Anderson's death and did not attend the funeral. The motion was seconded by Reeve J. Milby.

Warden MacDonald urged that the council give consideration in legislative committee to a letter from V. Eastwood, Indian Agent. The letter sets forth that Indians living on Trent Canal property at Burleigh Falls do not come within his jurisdiction. It also says the law does not compel Indians to live on reservations, that they are as free as any other British subject.

With a system of advanced air bases, naval patrols and coast fortification works which will be virtually completed within a year, Victoria, the key to our Pacific coast defensive scheme, will be one of the half dozen best fortified places in the world.

"On the Atlantic coast the planning has been done of an equally comprehensive scheme and the beginning has been made with naval defence works at Halifax and a chain of air stations across Nova Scotia."

Priority was given the air force in the defence setup because of the vast territory to be protected, the minister continued.

"By next summer the Royal Canadian Air Force will have approximately 80 first line service aircraft, practically all of them made in Canada. The first of these was delivered just a few weeks ago.

"It has taken time—we knew it would—but it was considered to be the first essential of air defence that we must be able to produce in Canada our own requirements of aircraft. In addition to these service craft we have acquired 160 training types for the permanent and non-permanent forces.

Campbellford Cheese Board Ends Season This Saturday

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29. — Factories in the Campbellford district will board cheese on the Belleville Board next Saturday, it was stated at what was said to be the last meeting of the Campbellford Cheese Board this year. The factories which will sell cheese next week provided buyers with a list of their offerings which they agreed to sell at the price prevailing on the Belleville Board.

George S. VanVolkenburg, president of the Northumberland Cheese Producers' Association, told members of the Board that the executive of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association passed a resolution at their meeting held in Toronto requesting that the Federal Government grant a bonus of one cent a pound on all cheese that scored 93 or over. He stated the executive also favored a reduction in the spread of price for second grade cheese from one cent to half a cent. Purchasing milk cans for cheese patrons was another subject which came up for discussion. If cans could be purchased in quantity by the factory, latter to be sold to the producer and the cost deducted from his cheques, it would result in a saving of up to two dollars on a thirty-gallon can. This matter will come up for further discussion at the annual meeting of the executive.

Young People Hold Crokinole Party

(Examiner Correspondence.)

FRASERVILLE, Nov. 29. — The Young people's Union sponsored a crokinole tournament in the hall on Friday evening. Miss Jean Holden was in charge of the tables. Five tables of crokinole were played, the winners being Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Syer. A delicious lunch was served, this bringing a happy evening to a close.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"Butcher, Baker, Dressmaker, Hairdresser, Grocer, Druggist, Doctor, ... and Friends!"

Mrs. Watson is merely naming the important people she reaches by telephone — some of them every day—saving endless delays, needless risks and many tiresome journeys. And her case is typical of thousands of households. The telephone is so much a part of the daily routine that its importance is often overlooked—until, like Mrs. Watson, you actually start to check up on what it does for you.

The rates for residence telephone service are surprisingly low—only a few cents a day. You really cannot afford to be without a telephone.

Will Not Visit Canada

LONDON. — Anthony Eden, who has accepted a speaking engagement in New York for December 9, today said his itinerary does not include a visit to Canada. The former Foreign Secretary added, however, that he may change his mind at the conclusion of his United States visit.

Man Robbed Of $360

TIMMINS.—John Burns, a visitor to Timmins, reported to police today he had been robbed of $360 while on a party with another man and two women. He said he and the others spent most of yesterday in a beverage room. He fell asleep in an hotel room and when he awoke the money—and his companions—was missing.

Scottish Rite Reunion Is Held In City

Canada needs leadership to-day and there is no group of men as qualified to give that leadership as the members of the Scottish Rite which was the theme of speakers at a banquet at the Empress Hotel that concluded a re-union meeting of the Peterborough Valley of the Peterborough Lodge of Perfection.

Charles Hamilton of Toronto, 33rd degree Mason, responding to a toast to the Supreme Council, dwelt on current events at some length. "We have come through troublesome times in the past and we can do it again," he said. He urged that members of the Scottish Rite give the leadership that Canada needs, a leadership that would assure this country of advancing along right lines into true prosperity.

Spike Pessimistic Rumors.

He did not view occurrences in Europe with too much distress, pointed to the fact that the many pessimistic rumors abroad of what is to happen in the world in the near future should be spiked with knowledge that facilities for intercommunication are so vast now, events are reported with such speed from any part of the world, that an exaggerated picture of the whole is received. Events were often as serious in the past, but there was not the same facilities for communicating them to the wide world that there are to-day, yet they passed off without real danger, he said. C. S. Browne proposed the toast.

The banquet followed an all-day session at which twelve candidates were given their 14th degrees.

Need For Leadership.

Every speaker who followed Mr. Hamilton stressed the need for leadership in this country and the ability of members of the lodge to give it. Toast to the absent brethren was proposed by Rev. Dr. A. T. Bell. Masonry leaves its mark on those who are its members, makes them finer citizens, more qualified to carry on the work of this world, more suited to go on to the next, he said.

Toast to the visitors was proposed by W. R. Breyfogle, who said that the men from Toronto were visitors to Peterborough Valley only in name, that they were much at home here. He told of the formation of Peterborough Valley under the parentage of Toronto Valley, said the impetus from the inspiration received at that time was still carrying Peterborough Valley ahead.

George H. Ross of Toronto, gave a brilliant address in which he quoted poetry to describe to members what the Scottish Rite should mean to them, what it could do to inspire a man's life. He was followed by W. H. Drummond of Toronto. Another visitor from Toronto was Dr. H. Crouch. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe proposed the toast to the new class of twelve and H. L. Garner responded.

The banquet was under chairmanship of Dr. H. M. Yelland, T.P.G.M. Interspersed throughout the program was the singing of a septette of Ed. Humpage, Maurice Park, Doug Carlisle, R. F. Downey, John Vernor, S. J. Graham, and C. S. Browne. They were directed by Fred Mann.

Child Suffers Minor Injuries

Struck down by a motor car when he darted out on the road on Park Hill Road, 5-year-old Ronnie Murphy, 8 Auburn street, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital shortly after one o'clock this afternoon. His injuries are said not to be serious.

Ronnie was walking east on Park Hill Road with his sister Josephine, aged 10, when the accident occurred. Josephine said she had been holding his hand but that he had jerked away and darted out on the road away from her when he was struck by a car driven by Floyd Curtis, Armour Road. Curtis attempted to swerve away from the child and struck inverlea bridge on the left hand side of the road. His car was damaged to some extent. The youngster was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by Clancy Collins of Magee's Garage, a passer-by. The child's physician said he was suffering from cuts about the face but that he did not believe his condition to be serious.

OBITUARY

WALTER HARRON

The death of Walter Harron, 84½ Hunter street west, occurred on Monday night in St. Joseph's Hospital. He was in his 62nd year. In failing health for the past ten years, he had been seriously ill for about a year and a half.

He operated a second hand store near the Hunter street bridge for many years, had been a resident of this city for the past half century. He was born in Caesarea, Ontario, son of the late Ed. Harron and Regina V. May.

Surviving are one son, John P. Harron of Peterborough, and three brothers, Arthur of Walkerville, Edward of Bridgenorth, and Andrew of Peterborough; also one sister, Mrs. John Dugan of Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the D. Belleghem and Sons' Funeral Home, Rev. E. W. Rowland of Mark Street United Church officiating. Interment will be at Little Lake Cemetery.

Counsel Protest Adjourning Case

Despite protests from defence counsel, charges against Charles Westlake, Smith Township, of stealing a hound dog from Arthur T. Johnston and against Earl Mills of the same township of receiving the dog, knowing it to be stolen, were adjourned again in police court this morning when the cases were called before Magistrate E. A. Gee.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., said that the Crown would be unable to proceed today owing to the absence of a material witness. He produced a medical certificate showing that Arthur T. Johnston was ill and would be unable to appear in court for a week or ten days..

"I am all ready to proceed," said Alex. Elliott, K.C., counsel for Westlake. "I have about twelve witnesses here who have come from various parts of the country. I made some inquiries a few days ago and understood that Mr. Johnston would be able to appear today. Anyway I cannot see that he is a material witness."

"He is the owner of the dog," said the Crown Attorney. "The alleged owner of the dog," retorted the counsel for the defence.

"The ownership of the dog is an important matter," said Mr. McElderry," and "This was the man who bred the dog."

"I understand my learned friend is speaking from instructions," remarked Mr. Elliott, "but that is a ridiculous statement."

"I have no doubt statements made by defence lawyers often seem ridiculous to the Crown, too," commented Magistrate Gee.

R. N. Ruddy, of Whitby, who appeared for Mills, also added his protest against an adjournment.

"I have come from Whitby to appear here today," he remarked, "and I would like to go on. It seems to me unfair that a charge like this should be hanging over the head of my client."

It was finally decided to adjourn the cases until Monday, December 12.

CAMPBELLFORD

Badge Is Presented Past President

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29.—Rotarian C. H. Davidson was presented with the past president's badge by members of the Campbellford Club at their luncheon here Monday. Rotarian Bruce Longmore, M.D. spoke with warm praise of the generous work and many outstanding contributions Mr. Davidson had made both as president and member of the club. "There has never been anything done by the club that he hasn't been willing and ready to do." Rotarian Harold N. Carr officially placed the pin on Charlie's lapel and following he received the congratulations of the other members.

A vote was taken and disclosed the club would unanimously support the nominations of Owen J. Herity, Belleville's nominee for District Governor.

Invitations will be sent to members of all clubs within a radius of 100 miles to attend the tenth anniversary celebration of the Campbellford club. Although the date of the anniversary actually falls in December it was felt that affair to which both members and their wives would be invited should be held in the early spring when weather conditions were more favorable.

Three new Rotary signs have been made and donated to the club by A. H. McKeel. It was announced the signs would be put in place this week.

14 Traffic Bylaws Passed Since 1916 By Council Are Being Consolidated

Fourteen traffic bylaws passed by the City Council since 1916 are being consolidated by the legal committee of the council, bringing them into conformity with the present Highway Traffic Act. The committee spent more than two hours Monday night sifting the original bylaw and its thirteen amendments for regulations that should be retained in the new bylaw which will embody all their essentials.

One of the decisions of the committee was to stop traffic on Reid Street at either side of Hunter Street, west of St. Peter's Cathedral. Accepting Reid as a through street, motorists zoom up and down the hill, a swirl of pedestrian traffic especially during the noon hour with the coming and going of the children from two nearby schools.

The by-law will confirm George, Water, Reid, Aylmer and Park Streets as through streets, except in the case of intersections with more important streets; others across town in the same group are Charlotte, Hunter, McDonnel and Park Hill Road.

City Engineer Parsons is to obtain prices on a flash or intermittent signal for slowing down traffic, and if the cost is not too high this type of signal may be placed at McDonnel and George Streets, Hunter and Aylmer, and probably Charlotte and Aylmer. It was also suggested that some stop sign be placed at the King Street corner of Water Street.

Restricted space at hydrants is to be increased from six to ten feet conforming with the Traffic Act, and vehicular traffic will be required to pull to the right and to the side of a street on the approach of fire apparatus.

ADDRESS POSTPONED.

The address by I. C. Marritt on "Forestry" at the Keene short course Wednesday has been postponed until December 13 owing to the death of a relative of Mr. Marritt. C. A. Davies of Toronto will give a talk Wednesday on cream grading and testing.

FENDER TORN.

As Edward Hotston, 368 George street, was driving his car east on Charlotte street it came into collision with a Sunshine Dairy truck, driven by J. O'Brien, that was coming out of a laneway near the Louis Cafe to turn east. A fender on Hotston's car was torn.

TEMPORARY PARKING ORDER

For the safety of the public Chief Newhall has decided that cars should not be parked on the streets around Victoria Park from 6.30 p.m. until after the Santa Claus parade Friday, December 2. This order will include Water street from Brock to Murray street.

RED CROSS FLAGS FLYING.

Red Cross flags are flying from masts on several buildings in the city to mark the drive for funds by that organization. The drive started last Friday and will continue all this week. The objective set by the local branch of the Red Cross is $2,500.

TEN FORMER MOUNTIES.

Thomas Dixon Dodds, manager of Braund's store at King and Park Streets; Thomas Ball and Jack Lynch, both of Canada Packers, Limited, names can be added to those living in this city who were former members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. These three bring the total up to ten.

CLOCK STILL MISSING

No member of the County Council could throw any light on the mysterious disappearance of the clock from the county council chambers some time ago. The chambers are still minus a timepiece, and because of this theft the chambers are likely to be kept locked in the future. A letter was received from Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., seeking to have the room left unlocked, and his letter will be considered later this week.

SAFETY MEASURE.

Stout posts have been placed in the ground at the top of Victoria Park in front of the County Court House, and cables will be stretched on the post to provide a barried of safety. The work is done by order of the county property committee to prevent careless motorists or parked cars from driving over the lip of the hill and down through the park.

A DANGER SPOT.

Bus drivers are complaining that it is extremely difficult to pilot a bus past the intersection of Douro and Rogers streets without a mishap. Trucks parked too close to Rogers street on the south side of Douro force the bus drivers and others to swing wide, and when this is done, cars parked on the opposite side make it impossible for the bus to get through. The aid of the police will be sought to correct the trouble.

Grand Jury Cost County $197.00

Costs of the grand jury at the last session of the Supreme court presided over by Mr. Justice Urquhart were $197.00 according to figures produced at this morning's session of the County council by Miss Jennie Batten, county treasurer.

Miss Batten said costs such as the foregoing usually occur when Supreme Court judges are sitting and that local judges invariably enquire as to how many times inspections have been made before charging the grand jury.

Council members were unanimous steps should be taken immediately if it were within the power of the Council to have this expenditure reduced as much as possible. On motion of Reeve Gifford, Warden Macdonald appointed a committee consisting of Reeves Gifford, Seeney and Griffiths to confer with the solicitor for the county and to send a resolution of protest over the cost to the Attorney General and to both local members.

Miss Batten told the members that the Attorney-General's department had been asking for grand jury costs for the past five years following similar complaints from the county council some time ago. Recently however there had been no communication from the department to show that any particular action had been taken, or decision reached.

Power Of Prayer Is Neglected Minister Claims

The Peterborough Presbytery of the United Church of Canada opened an all-day session in George Street United Church this morning, with a good representation on hand. Rev. M. C. Parr, president of the Presbytery, was in the chair.

Feature of the morning session was the delivering of reports on the recent meeting of the Church's General Council in Toronto, by Rev. M. I. Robinson of Norwood and Rev. G. S. Easton of Trinity United Church. Mr. Robinson read a detailed report prepared by H. Keefer of Norwood, while Mr. Easton gave impressions retained from the conference with no account of individual meetings. Mr. Easton and Mr. Keefer had been elected commissioners to attend the Council on behalf of the Peterborough Presbytery.

Relating that the Council had met during the trying crisis in Europe, with threats of war hovering throughout, Mr. Easton reported that there were times when the entire Council was called into session to pray for peace. All over the world, he said, church men and women had prayed for peace, and he believed that too much emphasis has been placed on the human agencies that brought about peace, and not enough on the divine. The power of the prayers that were uttered are too much neglected in the general accounting of the resultant peace, he believed. Only so long as people live a Christian life behind those prayers will peace be permanent, he said.

The church must be first of all a place of worship, he said, relating that time and again in Council meetings this need arose. The difficulty with the large church is that it too easily becomes materialistic, catering to too many organizations, having too little emphasis on the divine.

He urged the need of strict attendance to their churches by the ministers of the United Church, cited one case of a minister who had been absent from his church for thirteen consecutive weeks. No organization can prosper under such guidance, he said.

He urged the need for a confession of faith that is simple, is far away from philosophical phraseology—a catechism that any child may understand.

High School Board Is Advised New Teacher Urgently Needed

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Nov. 29. — Either the High School time table must be changed or additional teachers should be engaged at once, School Inspector H. Randall reported to the members of the Internal Committee during his inspection. Members of the Board were informed that any change in the time-table would seriously penalize a large number of students. Some would be forced to drop subjects which they have been studying during the fall term.

"We have already advertised for a new teacher, male preferred, and received seven applications, stated the chairman of the Internal Committee, W. Roy Loucks. Two of these we have already eliminated and the remainder were eliminated by the Inspector."

"I think that the committee had no authority to go ahead and advertize for a teacher and so in order to avoid complications I would suggest that the Board pass a motion endorsing this action," said Dr. H. O. Richardson. The motion was put before the members, who passed it unamimously.

"The matter must be settled within the next two or three days, and I for one favor the hiring of a teacher who is not already engaged since it is our hope that the position will not be a permanent addition to the staff," continued Mr. Loucks.

A new mimeograph has been purchased for use in the Public School at a cost of $90.00.

Purchase of Books.

The purchase of a complete set of geography and history text books was authorized for use in the High School and the matter was left with the Internal Committee to act in conjunction with Principal E. H. Greig.

"There is such a demand for these books which are being used in conjunction with the new course of study that they are very slow in coming through," said Mr. Greig.

Chairman of the Property Committee George Free was authorized to take immediate steps to have windows in the High School gymnasium corrected so they could be opened without climbing a ladder. More adequate facilities for both boys and girls changing into P.T. clothes will also be provided.

Despite the protest of W. R. Loucks members of the Board voted to pay the final premium on the Public Liability policy carried on the schools. Mr. Loucks' contention that the company lacked in co-operation and in willingness to make settlements in the case of claims the other members of the Board were of the impression the policy offered a protection they could not afford to be without.

New Clock Is Purchased For The County

A thin thread of humour that at times dominated the entire pattern of the County council sessions enlivened today's proceedings as the Deremo-Williams romance and the mystery of the missing clock continued to pop up from time to time.

The question of the clock was finally settled when Reeve Milby was authorized to purchase a new one, and he immediately absented himself to return shortly with a new timepiece. Before the noon the friendly tick, tock, pervaded the room and the business of the Council proceeded apace.

"G. N. Gordon offered to give us an alarm clock, but I figured we should hold out for an electric chime, said Reeve Milby.

You are not insinuating that we need something like that to keep us awake, are you," interjected Reeve Gifford of Ennismore.

"That new one looks to me as if it is the old model, streamlined," was Reeve Tanner's comment, and Warden McDonald finished the discussion when he said, "We had better not advertise this too freely or the person who took the first one will relieve us of this one also."

House of Refuge Problem

Deputy Reeve Harry Reid of Otonabee occupied the chair when the council went into committee on the house of refuge. He produced a letter from Emmett F. Sheehy, counsel for Mrs. Storms, a resident of this city which asked that Mrs. Storms be relieved of an order committing her to the responsibility of giving proper care to Miss Hattie Williams, now Mrs. John Deremo. The letter set forth that Mrs. Storms signed it under duress and with police officers present as it was the only means by which Miss Williams might obtain her discharge from the house of refuge. The council decided to hand over the order as it had no strength following recent developments and the ruling of the Department of Public Welfare that the Board had no power to detain Miss Williams against her will.

Warden Ernie McDonald gave a resume of all the events leading up to the Deremo-Williams nuptials. "We don't mind the people and the newspapers having their fun, it was a humorous escapade from start to finish, but I want to state at this time that the County Council and the house of refuge board acted as they thought best, and within the law. When Reeve Tanner learned we had no right to detain this woman she was released.

Question Straightened Out.

We owe it to succeeding councils to straighten this question out at once. Under existing legislation a person who is a nuisance or a burden on any township may be taken into the house of refuge. When the person is cleaned up, made healthy again, put on their feet in every way, they can pick up their baggage and leave. Then within a few months they can be back and the work and expense starts all over again. We are financing this institution and we should have more control over the people who are admitted."

I would recommend that a committee be appointed to sift the question from start to finish and do all in their power to have legislation passed which would strengthen the hands of the house of refuge boards. We owe this to boards and members of this council who are to follow us.

Reeve McDonald pointed out grand juries are privileged to inspect all houses of refuge in the county and if there is any one in the institution being detained against their will and possibly feel they are being persecuted, they may tell their story to the grand jury and thus obtain satisfactory adjustment.

Chairman Harry Reid reported that the house had been completely painted, that a new cement cover had been put on the well and cement steps built into the furnace room. A complete report he said would be given as usual at the January sittings of the council.

A motion was moved by Reeve Gifford seconded by Reeve Griffiths of Belmont that a resolution be drawn up with the purpose of strengthening the authority of the House of Refuge Board, and the motion passed.

County Will Not Appeal

The members on advice of their counsel decided they would not appeal a recent court decision making the county liable for the costs of a young girl who is an indigent. On motion of Reeve Milby and Reeve Thompson of Norwood the Council decided to take action to recover any expense from the father of this girl.

Alderman Opposes Traffic Change

Alderman M. McIntyre told the Examiner this morning he is opposed to a change in the traffic bylaw that would restrict parking of cars in the space extending thirty feet from a street intersection where parking laws apply.

"It would leave a considerable blank space at those corners and visiting motorists would naturally park there," Ald. McIntyre said. "That would mean they would be breaking the laws and no doubt they would draw police tickets. I think it would be better to leave well enough alone, try to make parking as friendly as we can for visitors, and avoid requiring the police to become what a lot of people would regard as being too officious."

W. Brown Heads Cavan Tories

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Nov. 29. — The Cavan Township Conservative Association held its annual meeting in the Town Hall on Saturday evening, when the following slate of officers was elected for the ensuing year:

President, W. W. Brown; vice-presidents, L. W. Smith and Ira Lowe; secretary, I. W. Larmer; treasurer, James H. Paul.

The idea of a social evening when the ladies would effect their organization, was freely discussed, and the following appointed in the various wards to make a personal canvass and interest all the women in the matter: Convener, Mrs. Ira Lowe:

Ward 1—Mrs. D. L. Armstrong, Miss May Earle, Mrs. Reg. Armstrong.

Ward 2—Mrs. J. Thompson, Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, Mrs. L. Larmer.

Ward 3—Mrs. H. A. Fallis, Mrs. Roy Ferren, Mrs. I. W. Larmer.

Ward 4—Mrs. J. H. Paul, Mrs. H. Seenye, Mrs. H McArthur, Mrs. Russell Earle.

Ward 5—Mrs. Ira Lowe, Mrs. Robert McCamus, Mrs. Fred Hootan.

The possibility of securing Senator Iva Fallis as an organizer on the evening the ladies have their meeting, or at least to contact her and ask for an efficient substitute, was brought forward. Probably the use of the new community waiting-room, being presented to the municipality by F. C. Scott, will be secured for the business and social evening. No charge is made for the use of this large room, which is heated and lighted and furnished with tables, seats, etc., a caretaker being in charge.

Ex-Warden G. H. Hootan, who is the Cavan delegate to the convention in Toronto when a new leader for the Conservative Party is chosen, addressed the gathering, stressing the need of a stable and capable man at the present time, for this important position, and asked the feeling of the meeting as to whom he should support. A number spoke on this matter, and the general consensus of opinion appeared to favor Col. George Drew.

On motion, the meeting adjourned, the executive of the men's association to work with Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Paul in arranging for the evening meeting when the women will organize, with power to add to their numbers, after the ladies mentioned in the several wards have been contacted.

Two Young Men Are Facing Liquor Charge

Eddie O'Toole, 132 Sophia Street, and J. Allen, 581 Rogers Street, were charged before Magistrate E. A. Gee in Police Court this morning with illegally supplying liquor to two young North Monaghan girls, 15 and 17 years of age. The offence is alleged to have taken place last Friday night.

The charge was laid on the complaint of the father of the girls after, it is stated, the two were brought home early on Saturday morning in a state of intoxication. Warrants for the arrest of the two accused were obtained by Provincial Constable David Silvester.

When the cases were called Allen asked for adjournment to give him an opportunity to consult a lawyer, and O'Toole was also willing to have his case go over.

Both cases were adjourned until Monday of next week.

Harvey Council Disputing Hospital Bill

Court action over payment of the hospital bill for an Indian boy named Gerald Johnson in Nicholls Hospital may be the key that will open the lock and solve the question of what to do with the problem colony of Indians, half breeds and squatters at Burleigh Falls.

This information was revealed at this morning's session of county council when Reeve Shearer of Harvey township would fight payment of this bill which now exceeds one thousand dollars.

The boy, an Indian is suffering from a type of blood poison which has caused doctors to amputate one leg. He is showing little progress.

Some time ago this small boy was showered with gifts when the late Grey Owl, friend of all Indians, paid him a visit and a reported from the Examiner wrote the story of their conversation, and the words of encouragement which Grey Owl spoke at that time.

Reeve Shearer said the Indian boy was from the colony which occupies property at Burleigh Falls owned by the Department of Transport. A. L. Killaly established this colony in 1928 in our township and we intend to refuse payment of this hospital bill and fight it in the courts if necessary. We can't assess the property and the huts would not bring anything at a tax sale. Moreover it may seem strange but Mr. Killaly seems to want them there.

Miss Batten reported that Vincent Eastwood, Indian Agent had said the settlers were not Indians but half breeds and therefore did not come within his jurisdiction as Indian Agent.

Reeve Gifford said he felt it a wise plan to leave the question in the hands of a small committee but expressed regret at the lack of co-operation which has been evident between the different parties since the agitation began. The committee consists of Reeves Clarke, Brown, Shearer and Warden McDonald.

"I believe we should invite Mr. Eastwood and Mr. Killaly up here and as them to explain their stand, stand.

It was therefore decided that both Mr. Eastwood and Killaly would be asked to appear before the council this afternoon.

Fire Sufferers Need More Aid

While the Peterborough canvassers are right in the midst of the annual campaign for funds for the Red Cross Society, word has been received from N. R. Vinton, field secretary, that the need among Northern Ontario's fire victims will be much greater than was expected. Mr. Vinton while here last week told of the work that the Red Cross was doing in re-establishing the victims of Thanksgiving Day's terrible fire in Kenora district. He returned there over the week-end, and in a letter to Mrs. R. H. Turner he said that much more money was going to be needed to finance the re-establishing than was expected. He urged the Peterborough workers and citizens to make every effort possible to put the local campaign over the top.

MAY NEED THIRD TEACHER

Cordova Public School with ninety-two pupils on roll has expanded to the extent that a third teacher may have to be engaged. At present there are fifty-two pupils in the junior room and forty in the senior. Cameron Vance is the principal who, in addition to teaching the senior class, is conducting high school work for six students. This school is reported to be making good progress. Its large attendance is largely accounted for by the mining operations.

ROMANCE INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

Read This First:

Sara Sue Davis, attractive young widow, creates a furore on the campus of Rice Institute, in Texas, when she erects a sign in front of her cottage announcing "COUNSEL IN ROMANCE". Her plan is to help guide 100 student "members" in their social and love-affairs for a small fee. Bob Towne, campus football hero, attracted by Sara Sue, is the first to enroll. This enrages Peaches Pomeroy, a senior, who regarded herself as "Bob's girl" the previous year. Worthington Gurley unprepossessing freshman, provides another interesting problem for Sara Sue. But the climax in her Cottage Plan occurs when Dr. Thornton Holgate, new member of the faculty, begs Sara Sue to help him....then confides he has fallen in love with Peaches Pomeroy. Gurley obtains a date with Sara Sue for the freshman ball, which displeases Towne; but Bob accepts it gracefully. Sara Sue finds her affairs growing complicated, but feels much better after confiding her troubles to a close friend, Roxy Powell. At a meeting of the college faculty, it is evident that Sara Sue Davis, Inc., is playing a prominent part in campus life. Dr. Holgate receives his first lessons in "how to become more human", and begins to mix with some of the students at Sara Sue's house.

(Now Go On With The Story)

SARA SUE DAVIS, however, had not been asleep.

"No no, my dear," she interrupted at once. "Thorny Holgate asked me 10 minutes ago for the next dance. You can't cheat me out of it."

She smiled at the girl, and the girl drifted away, smiling in return. This was all informal. Nobody cared what happened.

"Just walk, slow short steps," Sara Sue whispered in Thornton's ear. "Don't look down. And smile, even if it kills you!"

She hummed gaily herself, wisecracked at one of the other boys, clung closely to Thornton as if she were enjoying her dance immensely. Actually she was guiding his stiff form, and stepping fast to avoid tripping. Nobody noticed feet in an impromptu dance like that, however.

In a minute or so she had him at least walking in rhythm with the music. She kept him crowded in with the others, maintained constant chatter and laughing, covered up his embarrassment and confusion. Then all at once the music stopped.

"Thank me for it," whispered Sara Sue, unobserved.

"I—I—thank you, madam," said Dr. Holgate, bowing, formally, red as a tomato.

"Oh, at it again!" she was still acting. "He's been teasing me for two days, calling me madam. Can I help being an old decrepit widow?"

The others all laughed with her, and so did not see Thornton's expression of surprise and confusion. She grabbed his hand as the others drifted to chairs. "Come in the office a minute, Thorny; I have those books I promised to show you."

Sheep-like, he followed her in. He was so grateful to hear the door close behind him that he sat down, trembling slightly. Sara Sue felt a sudden deep sympathy for him.

"Wonderful!" she lied, like a lady. "You're doing fine, Dr. Holgate. You are learning to mix with people. That's what you need, if you are going to run around with Geraldine Pomeroy. Peaches goes places, you know. Now you hustle right down and get at the dance lessons—you have a very good natural rhythm, by the way—and drop in here as often as you possibly can."

"Oh! Oh, I shall be eternally grateful, my dear Mrs. Davis. I shall—"

"My name, hereafter, is Sara Sue! Never call any woman madam, Thorny. Especially any young woman."

"But—"

"No buts! I'm the teacher hear, now. You teach in the Rice mathematics halls, but I'm running the romance department, sir!" She smiled engagingly at him. "Now tell me, didn't you enjoy yourself just a little teeny bit today?"

"Yes! Yes, indeed. Oh, gracious!"

She stared intently at him for a moment, analyzing him, a sparkle in her eyes. Finally she spoke again.

"Thorny, did you ever say—damn?"

"I beg pardon?"

"Listen, Thorny. You are a nice man, really. You are educated. You have traveled some. But you act like a sissy. I mean it—a sissy! . . . Don't look so shocked. Remember, I am your teacher. Now you must listen, and mind me. You are under contract with me, you know. And I say you act like a sissy. I don't want you to be mean, or vulgar ever. But—Thorny, don't say 'gracious'. Say something mannish, can't you? Anything. Don't curse, but—'damn' isn't so bad. And don't bow to people, Thorny. Just say 'How do you do?' or 'Hello' and smile at them as if you mean it, and talk a lot about nothing in particular. You know what always will open a happy conversation? You know what people always like to talk about most?"

"Why, ah—"

"That's true, I have observed it."

"Sure you have. Now you go out and study it, and apply it. Don't talk shop. And practice leaving off that long guizzical expression of yours. You have a—why, your eyes are very pretty, as a matter of fact—and you have a—"

She stopped abruptly.

"That's enough chiding for today,"she smiled sweetly at him. "But you are making progress. Now I want you to sit right here and do an important thing. I want you to call Peaches Pomeroy and ask if you may take her to the freshman ball."

He did not answer. He just nodded.

"It's the Pomeroy on Calumet drive," she explained. "Here's the phone directory. You met her at the reception, you said. Well, that's all the 'in' you need. Call her up and kid her along, and casually ask her if you can take her to the dance."

Sara Sue left the room then, and closed the door to give him privacy.

She discovered that most of the collegians had departed. It was past the supper hour, she observed. They always left towards 6 o'clock, and drifted back about 7:30, a come-and-go group constantly changing.

Sara Sue was especially happy to have collected such congenial customers. She had tried to be tactful in admitting them to membership, carefully avoiding a few she felt would not be socially compatible. Two of her young men customers had turned out to be rather "unrefined", as she told her mother-in-law, and she had quietly but firmly returned their money and had done with them. But there had been very little unpleasantness, on the whole.

Dinner in the dormitories could hardly have been over before Bob Towne came in, munching an apple. He was beaming as usual, full of talk about the afternoon's football practice. He had just 10 minutes to stay, he declared, because coach wanted them back for skull practice before study time. He kidded her a lot and shouted at Calculus Jones, who poked a grinning face out of the kitchen door.

"I'd invite you to supper, Bob, but I'm afraid you'd accept and I don't want you," Sara Sue declared. "Cleo is making chicken dumpling. Ought to be about ready, I imagine. Go on away, can't you?"

"Not for five minutes! You can't bulldoze me. I've got to hang around. That freshman is trying to beat my time!"

"Silly! He's a nice enough boy. But neither of you have any 'time', as you call it."

"Listen, Sara Sue, I'm serious. Honey, I'd do anything for you!"

"So I hear. So the whole campus hears, in fact."

"Aw now, Sara Sue! Don't be like that. You gave Slime Gurley that date just to make me mad. Didn't you?"

"I said yes when he asked me first to go to the freshman ball. I was an old widow. I was afraid nobody else would ask me. Anyhow, I like Mr. Gurley."

"Phooey," said Bob Towne. He wasn't making any progress with Sara Sue. He got up to leave. And at that instant Dr. Thornton Holgate came out of Sara Sue's private office.

The two men stared at each other for a long moment. And for once Sara Sue, biting her lips, felt herself confused. She had to think fast.

"Bob, this is Dr. Holgate. Bob Towne."

Both men spoke politely.

"Dr. Holgate wanted to use my office for a telephone call, long distance," she explained, then blushed at the story. Why must she feel obligated to explain anything, she asked herself in some anger.

But Bob did not observe her confusion, and since he was already heading for the door he bade them good-by and went on out. Sara Sue was grateful for that. She turned to Thornton Holgate.

"Well?" she smiled. "Must have had quite a talk. You were closeted with her for 20 minutes."

"Yes! I—I had some difficulty making her understand who I was She meets quite a few people, no doubt. Perhaps I should have arranged to speak with her somewhere else, before telephoning."

"Then you didn't get the date."

"Not exactly. She—she postponed any commitment. I am to call her again, the night before the dance."

"Oh," said Sara Sue. Um-huhum. I think I understand."

She did understand, although she did not explain to Dr. Holgate.

Peaches Pomeroy was waiting, Sara Sue knew, until she was absolutely sure Bob Towne would not call for a date. Then, if nothing else presented, she could always accept this Dr. Holgate, whoever he was.
